Inspectors Saved Important Event, House Owner Says

GARY, INDIANA—"For nearly a year, we had been having trouble with our public address system at the Palace Theatre here," said V. U. Young, president of the Theatrical Managers, Inc. Circuit, "and we were particularly concerned about its functioning properly during a style show for which we had enlisted large community interest and support.

"Our Altec Inspector R. C. Gray, and D. A. Swanagan, from the Altec Chicago office, cheerfully put in long hours working under high tension on the problem, and never gave up until our troubles were licked. Our style show was a complete success.

"It is that kind of work by Altec field men that reminds theatre operators of the value of Altec service and forcibly reminds them of how great a protection Altec service is to owner and manager alike."

OBSERVATIONS

of the editor

OBSOLESCENCE AND MODERN SEATING • • ALSO A NOTE ON AIR-CONDITIONING SELLING

WHEN one observes how great has been the change in auditorium seating during merely the last couple of years, one appreciates what a factor is this thing called obsolescence. We move fast these days—changes come thick and fast—and cost us money. All through the period of the depression (and how are you doing right now?) change was imposing more charges upon most classes of commercial establishments than it had for a decade. Modern treatment of store, hotel and restaurant did not get going until the slim years of the early thirties. But those businesses had to accept it, and pay for it—or else!

And so it is with theatres, if not more so. Indeed, the modernization that has rapidly taken place in other businesses, and that is so clamorously and glamorously reflected in our magazines, makes the old-fashioned theatre stand out like a sick chicken on a pheasant farm, and that doesn't add any conviction to the claims of the motion picture as the modern medium of theatrical entertainment.

Except for the new tricks in lighting and for the new uses of glass and phenolics in architecture, we can't think of anything connected with the theatre so representative of swift change from an old period to a new one as today's auditorium chair. And we can't think of anything in the theatre which can stamp it as a relic of the past or lift it out of obvious obsolescence so immediately as its seating.

Not only has the chair itself been radically changed in style, and importantly improved in construction, but the seating plan is being substantially modified in the interests of better vision and better traffic conditions. We don't want to encroach upon the domain of Mr. Schlanger, who goes into these matters elsewhere, but we would like to remark that the exhibitor who regards it sufficient to keep within the law prescribing 32-inch row spacing is manifesting more faith in law-makers than showmanship. Spacing only 32 inches back-to-back was never compatible with the continuous performance even with veneer chairs, and now, with relatively thick padded backs and deep spring back cushions, placed at considerably more of a tilt than backs used to be, such spacing is simply out of the question, code sanction or no. With padded backs, 33 inches should be the minimum, and 34 inches would be highly appreciated by the people who ultimately own our business. With spring backs, spacing should not be less than 35 inches. There are those who regard 36 inches as a reasonable minimum, and we have heard 37 inches recommended. However, there are reasonable maximums as well as minimums. They can be tested out. When purchasing auditorium seating, have the dealer put two chairs in front of each other, space them so that you can step between them as you'd like to do if you were Gus Public, then measure the distance from back to back. You'll put your own finger, we believe, about the 34-inch mark with padded-back chairs, and the 35-inch mark with spring-back chairs. Those are reasonable distances all around, from the point of view of both today's public and today's theatre operator.

The other day we went over to the National Screen Service offices in New York to meet Prof. Whizz. The gentleman, we found, was merely an idea. But he's a good one. So far he is only a name on a trailer which asks such questions as, "What will be the coolest spot in town this summer?" and gives the answer, which of course exploits the air-conditioning facilities of the theatre using the trailer.

It's a good idea—a good beginning. We were particularly pleased that none of the copy (and there are about a dozen kinds) over-emphasized cooling. But we have long had a notion that the exploitation of air-conditioning equipment could be shrewdly worked out to make the public fully appreciate what the theatre seeks to provide when, at considerable expense, it installs and operates an air-conditioning system. A series of trailers, with copy changing each week through the spring, could do the job effectively, we believe.

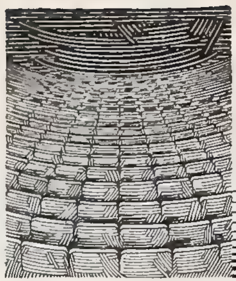
". . . no theatre can be better than its seating."



Avoiding Auditorium Floor Repair and Loosened Chairs

ANCHOR BOLTS obtainable today are of design and materials to make the anchoring of auditorium seating as permanent as one may desire, but this can only be so when the floor itself has been properly laid.

Both seating manufacturers and theatre architects recommend a floor of monolithic type, with the finished floor poured before the slab has dried out. Composition of the slab itself should be not less than 4 inches thick, while the top flooring should have a thickness of not less than 1 inch, and if the slab is of cinder concrete, the finished floor should be 2 inches.

Composition of the slab usually recommended is one part Portland cement to two and a half parts sand and four parts broken stone; and of the layer above, cement mortar in proportions of one part Portland cement to two parts sand.

The following specifications are also used: For the main floor—one part Portland cement, two and a half part sand, and four parts ½-inch broken stone, with a granolithic (fine hard stone added) finish on top, making a total thickness of 4 inches; and for balconies—one part Portland cement, two parts sand, and three parts ½-inch broken stone, also having a granolithic finish.

In cases where the top layer cannot be laid immediately after the slab has been poured, the finished floor should not be laid until the slab has been thoroughly cleaned, made wet, and brushed a rich mixture of pure cement; otherwise a firm bond between the two layers is questionable. The finished floor should of course be smooth so that the chairs can be installed in perfect alignment.

In anchoring, it is pointed out by the Chicago Expansion Bolt Company, a manufacturer whose anchor bolts are widely used in the installation of auditorium seating, that care should be taken when setting the bolts to make sure that the head of the bolt is well seated at the bottom of the hole before heavy blows are struck. It is recommended that after the bolt has been pushed, with the hands, as low as it will go, the setting tool be tapped gently with a hammer several times before driving the bolt solidly into place. The recommended diameter for the hole is ½-inch.

This company's expansion bolt with conical steel cup at the head is regarded as especially useful in re-anchoring chairs that were originally anchored with some other type of bolt and have a hole slightly oversized. The steel cup increases the size of the head of the bolt considerably so as to allow for the oversizing.

New Standards and Protective Features

FOUR NEW end standard patterns have been added to the medium-price group in the Heywood-Wakefield line of auditorium seating. Construction employed in these models, two of which are illustrated here, is the same as for the highest-quality chairs in the line; however, with the development of these models bottom board and back panel design has been refined. The steel back panel is curved at the edge to form its own protective "moulding" around the upholstery fabric, while the steel bottom panel is similarly turned upward to form a rounded rim to protect both fabric and garments, especially women's stockings.

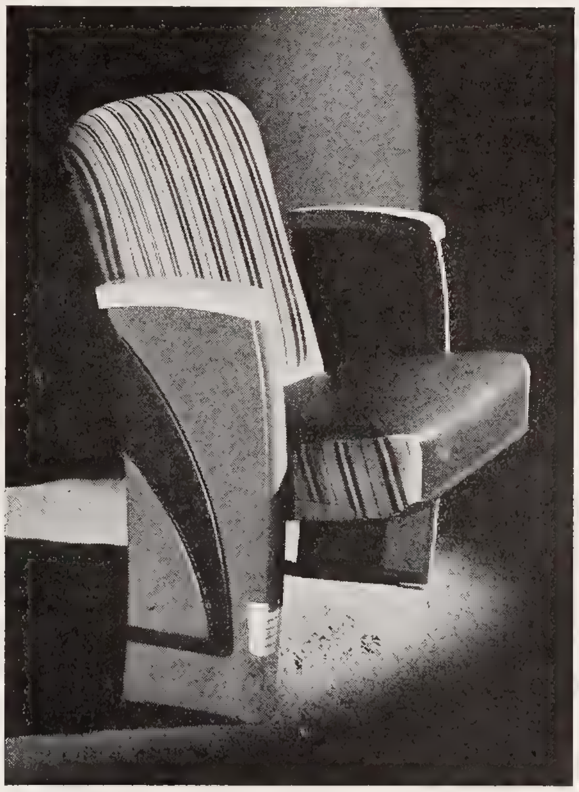
All of the end standard patterns are definitely modern both in shape and ornamentation, as the two styles illustrated indicate. They are of cast iron, with ornamental forms and aisle light louvres part of the casting. Aisle lights, incidentally, are placed low and within the curvature of the forward corner of the standard, with the louvres directing the light to the floor. Hinges are of the Heywood-Wakefield standard all-steel, self-aligning roller bearing type. Arm rests are wood in natural finish.

Backs and seats are available for these models in all types, including seats with no-sag and coil springs in combination—the coils resting upon no-sag wires, which absorb much of the initial shock imposed on the coils when a patron sits down.



In both chairs illustrated, one of which has the seat cushion covered entirely in a soft fabric, while the other seat combines leather with velour, French turned-in seams are employed.

New Mohair Fabric In Ribbed Pattern

A NEW STYLE in mohair upholstery material has been added to the Velmo line of L. C. Chase & Company, of New York. The novel material is called Silvanaire, and is of alternating pile rib and flat fabric type—that is, the mohair pile itself is sheared to form mohair ribs against its backing.

In the Silvanaire style, which is of medium pile, the mohair ribs repeat in groups of varying widths, forming a definite pattern, and the flat portion contains synthetic yarn introduced to give the backing a silvery appearance—whence the name Silvanaire. It may of course be obtained in any color.

Selecting Fabrics For Auditorium Chair Upholstery

THE CHOICE of the upholstery material to be used for auditorium seating is an important item in the selection of chairs for reseating or new theatres. Without going into actual figures of manufacturing costs, it is fair to assume that the fabric represents a substantial part of the total cost of the new chair (one-third is the usual percentage). A great many factors, of course, affect this percentage but whatever it is, it is sufficiently high to justify a sincere interest on the part of all concerned, from the theatre chair manufacturer to the theatre owner.

To judge the charactertistics of the various fabrics that are offered by the textile mills it is important first to know the difference in types of fibres from which fabrics are made.

Types of Upholstery Fabrics

There are three distinct types of fibres: vegetable, animal and synthetic. Among the vegetable types are linen, ramie and cotton, which is the most widely used. The animal type consists of wool, alpaca, silk and mohair, which is the most widely used in the upholstering trade. In the synthetic type we have rayon, which is the only one not derived directly from nature.

From these various fibres, yarn or thread is spun. This yarn then becomes the base for all fabrics. The yarn may be composed of individual fibres such as cotton, mohair, silk, etc., or a combination of fibres spun together to form blends such as wool and mohair, cotton and wool or mohair and rayon, etc.

There are two basic methods of weaving the cloth from this yarn and the practical importance of the type of weave cannot be overestimated. Flat weaves are two sets of threads woven, or interlaced at right angles to each other. These are commonly called two-dimensional fabrics. Denims, Brocatelles, Damasks, Ducks and many more are examples of such construction.

It might be well to say that the so-called imitation leathers are based on this type of weave, having a base of a drill or duck cloth with an impregnated coating of various chemical compositions, this coating forming a protection against the wear occurring directly on the basic cloth.

Selection Factors

Pile weaves employ the same flat weave construction for a base, but to this is added a third set of threads woven at right angles to the plane of the base and it forms what is commonly called a third dimension. In this type of weave we have the following familiar fabrics: mohair velvet, frisé, cotton and rayon velvet, moquettes, corduroy.

In general, it may be said that a pile fabric will outlast a flat fabric made of the same fibres, as the wear comes on these upright fibres, called the cushion of the pile. These must be worn down flat before the basic fabric is reached and affected by wear.

In general, a short pile closely woven fabric is ideal for theatre chairs as it assures maximum wear, and is easy to clean. One should always be very careful to avoid cheap loosely woven fabrics with high spots that can be picked, or that will receive the brunt of the surface wear—those fabrics that have raised patterns are very often made up of soft large threads which wear through easily.

Avoid too bright colors—they show soil easily; avoid too loud a pattern—it's not easy to match and is soon out of style—this is true also of "fad" fabrics.

Avoid "specials" or "odd lots" except when offered by a legitimate manufacturer.

The fabric should wear well, and by wear well is not meant a fabric to last forever, but one which, as it wears, still retains a clean-cut, pleasing appearance.

Imitation leathers have been greatly improved within the last few years. They do their best work on flat surfaces—not when folded and flexed, as at the sides of the seat cushion.

Avoid the cheap in fabrics; demand fabrics that are theatre materials. There is available a sufficiently large selection of fabrics made primarily for theatre seating by mills who know theatre needs.

New Model Chair of Simplified Design

A NEW MODEL auditorium chair has been added to the Irwin line distributed by the National Theatre Supply Company. As pictured above, this model is of simple modern design with construction similar to Irwin standard types; it has been introduced into this group, however, as a model of lower price. General construction, including the hinge, is of cast iron. The back panel, however, is a metal stamping and has a fabric protecting rim of aluminum.

The end standard, as shown above, can be supplied in any coloration, and aisle lights are mounted in the position desired. This model is also available with box-spring, spring-edge, or deep-cushion specially tied coil spring seat. The back is padded, arm rests are of wood "streamlined" with the standard design. A ball-bearing, compensating hinge is used.

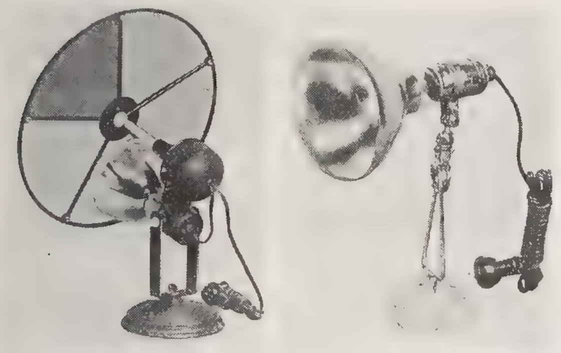
75-Foot Traveller Span

WHAT IS PROBABLY one of the widest traveller curtain installations ever made is part of the stage equipment in the General Motors building at the New York World's Fair. The curtain track and control equipment is by Vallen, Inc., of Akron, Ohio, and the stage opening calls for a 75-foot span of noiseless steel track, each half of the span with reverse curve and twin synchronized motor controls, which operate simultaneously, yet each separately.

The motors are equipped with Vallen push-button stop, start and reverse controls, special speed indicator dial, and speed control for curtain movement from 50 to 100 feet per minute. Similar equipment, though not on so large a scale, has been installed by Vallen in the buildings of the United States Government, Russia, and the American Tobacco Company.



Four new lamp holders developed by the Best Devices Company of Cleveland, for General Electric Par-38 and R-40 lamps. Above, at left, is an automatic color wheel unit, equipped with 13-inch color wheel for five colors and automatically driven. The unit has a cast-iron base with U-bracket yoke permitting easy positioning, the unit being mountable anywhere. Finish is black crinkle. At right, above, is a clip-up unit for R-40 lamps. Below, right, is a single lamp holder for R-40 lamps. It has color medium and color holder, and the lamp socket has full swivel action. The other unit is a twin holder for R-40 lamps, providing for two lamps on one base, with sockets having independent swivel action. It is equipped with two sets of holders, each for five colors.

LIGHT FOR VISION DECORATION AND SELLING

"... light is the first tool of showmanship."

Avoiding the Hidden Waste of Inefficient Lighting

IN NO OPERATION in the theatre, probably, can large sums of money be wasted more easily and inconspicuously as in lighting improperly handled. The causes of inefficiency are obscure, they are numerous, and some of them need renewed attention every few days. Waste resulting from neglect adds up not to small but to large fractions of both the lamping cost and the electric bill.

Mere casual attention when the subject happens to come to mind can never produce satisfactory results. The complexity of the problem requires routine and organized procedure. It will be seen from figures cited below that every reasonable effort along such lines is amply justified by the savings that can be effected.

Quite a few primary causes of inefficiency can be listed, each requiring definitely organized attack. These are: lamps mis-matched to voltage, lamps mis-matched to reflectors, dirt, delayed replacement, inefficient lamps, improper location of light sources and damage to lighting fixtures.

The illumination obtained from an incandescent bulb drops three percent when the voltage drops only one percent. It is voltage at the individual socket that counts, of course; and if a fixture carrying many bulbs is located at a distance from the meter, with a substantial voltage drop in the connecting line, a few months' time may show remarkable profit on the cost of installing heavier wire. At only 10% voltage deficiency, one-fifth of the electric bill represents pure waste. Socket voltages throughout the house should be checked with a portable meter.

Regardless of the light produced by the lamp, the lamp must match its reflector. Eight per cent loss of efficiency results if a standard RLM reflector made for a 200-watt bulb is lamped with a 150-watt bulb. Carelessness of porters in re-lamping can produce losses of that type throughout the theatre, to be prevented only by a routine of checking up.

Light Absorption by Dirt

Accumulation of dirt on reflector and lamp surfaces creates a greater loss. The average deposit of dust collecting on a bulb in the course of about one month absorbs 15% of light. Lamps and reflectors should accordingly be fitted into the theatre's standard cleaning routine. Cleaning costs are estimated by competent authority to average only about 4% of the total charge for operating the lighting installation. Neglected dirt on inner reflecting surfaces has been found to produce as much as 30% loss when a light meter was used before and after cleaning. For the glass portions of lighting fixtures alcohol-and-water is preferred by some authorities, but others favor soap or ammonia solutions, with oxalic acid for very obstinate deposits.

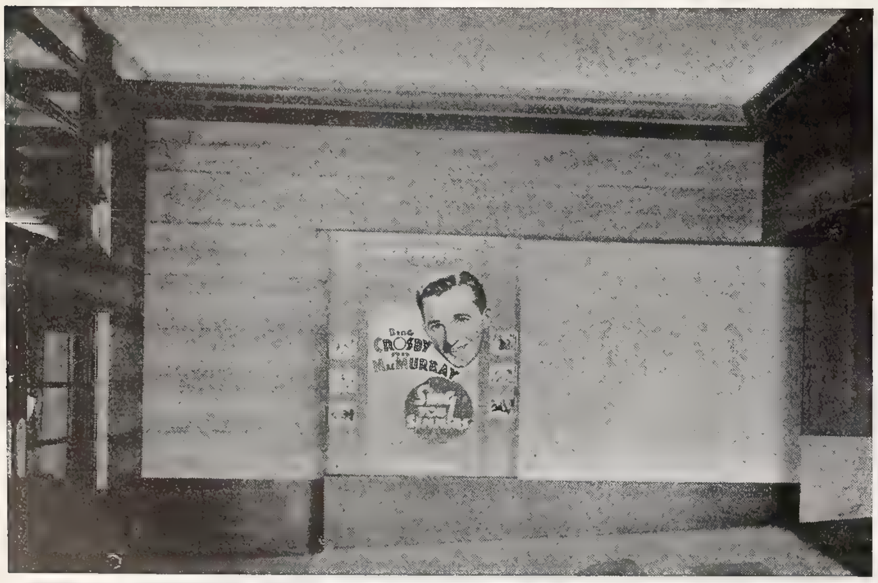
Prompt Replacement

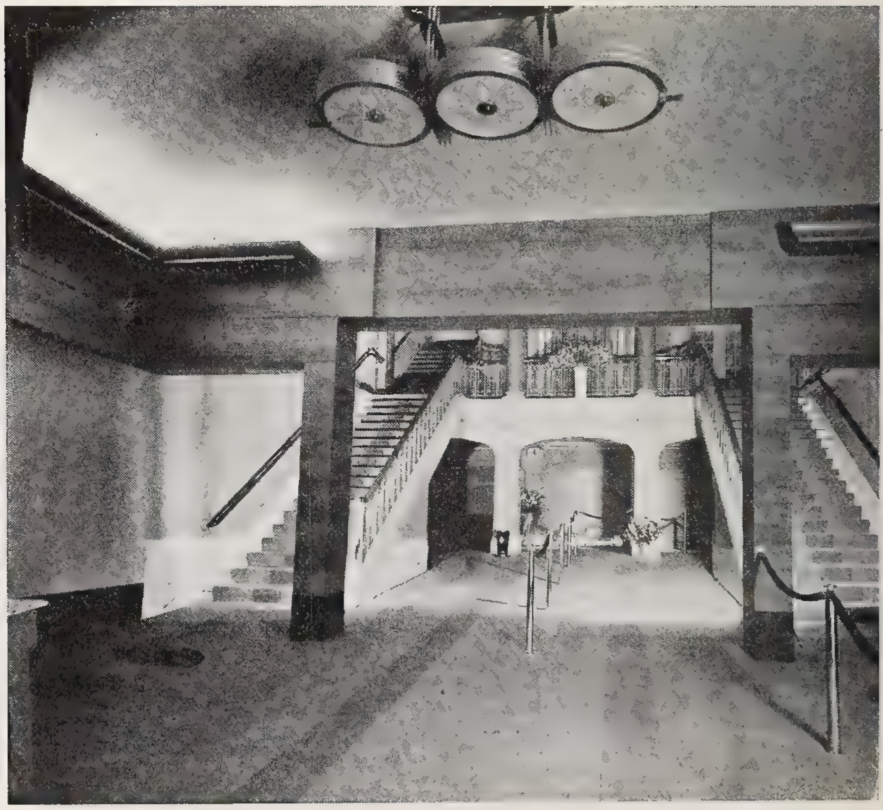
Delayed replacement is a source of waste less subject to definite figures because lamps vary somewhat in the matter of internal blackening. Some bulbs burn out before they ever cause serious trouble in this way, but others have been known to lose 90% of their efficiency while still seeming to the casual eye to be doing their duty. In other words, the manager, as purchaser of lumens of light, received 90% short weight. A light meter is needed to detect slight discoloration losses, but blackening that is truly serious can be seen by anyone who is looking for it. For such losses an inspection routine is all that is required.

An incandescent bulb which is inherently inefficient to the extent of 10% wastes more electricity in the course of its life than a new bulb would cost. If one has a lamp of that kind the most economical thing to do with it is to discard it.

Also less subject to definite figures, but no less important, is the location of light sources. How much light is wasted by being distributed to areas where it serves no useful function is a matter that must be checked against each individual fixture, and a thorough re-survey of the theatre in this connection has been known to produce corrections that meant substantial savings.

DIRECTIONAL COVES FROM VESTIBULE THROUGH LOBBY





Lobby of a period style theatre, the Palace, Fort Wayne, Ind., operated by Quimby Theatres, as remodeled throughout its entrance in rosewood, zebra-wood, and satin flexwood, laid in wall panels bordering display cases with concealed lighting, and forming cornice light coves. The coves contribute to a directional effect, which is also created by the inlaid carpeting. The coves begin in the vestibule (see view above) and continue into the lobby. Augmenting this directional lighting is a glass-and-metal ceiling fixture of triple-drum type. The architect was A. M. Strauss of Fort Wayne.

"Effective Temperature"—Measure of Breathing Comfort

¶ The second of a series of "plain talks" on what we really are after in the air-conditioning of theatres

IN THE FIRST of these "talks" (April 29th issue), we saw, by an examination of how the body tries to give itself "breathing comfort," that a figure for sensible-heat temperature—the figure given by an ordinary household (dry bulb) thermometer—is meaningless when considered by itself as an indication of comfortable or uncomfortable atmospheric conditions. It was pointed out that what we seek to produce in the air supply system of the theatre is an Effective Temperature at which the human body is most efficient.

All this may be summarized in the statement: The function of theatre air-conditioning, including distribution of the conditioned air, is to produce an Effective Temperature at which the normal human body at rest is most efficient. And of course this is true for every month of the year.

Among remarks sometimes made that indicate confused notions as to what comfort air-conditioning is all about, are those to the effect that a good deal of how people react to atmospheric conditions is mental—which is to say, psychological instead of physiological. As was indicated in the description of body action in the first article, nothing could be farther from the truth. One of the most alert reflex-responses we human beings have is to heat and cold (the scientists call it vasomotor control). The nervous system, even when we are asleep, will cause our hands to pull up bed covers should a cool breeze come up during the night. No woman ever drew her coat around her shoulders in a theatre because of a whim. The response is not psychological, but a natural muscular obedience to nervous instructions from the skin, which (as we saw in the first article) normally has a certain external temperature (average 88°) that the body must maintain in order to function efficiently.

It should be pointed out, in passing, that there are some persons who, though not sick enough to be "out of circulation," are yet in a state of health requiring air conditions different from those desired by people we call normal. Aged people are in a similar classification. But so far as practical theatre operation is concerned, such persons may be regarded as too few for consideration.

Medical investigators also see grounds for believing that women respond a little differently from men to temperature levels (this is aside from the tendency of at least some women to wear no more clothes than the law requires). However, the difference in temperature is so slight (probably no more than 2° higher) that it may be ignored for normal people; or at any rate, it lends itself to an easily accomplished compromise.

Adjustment to Body Needs

Now, the body (as we saw in the previous article) seeks to adjust itself to atmospheric conditions by (a) giving off its own surplus heat, and (b) cooling the skin by the evaporation of the water on it. It can give off surplus heat when the air around the skin is cooler than the skin is. It can cool the skin by evaporation when the air is dryer than the skin.

There is yet the additional factor, particularly with reference to evaporation, and that is air-motion. When the air around the skin is absolutely still, even though it is initially dryer, evaporation soon becomes insufficient because the air itself becomes saturated with water evaporated from the skin. Therefore we must have some movement of the air (though obviously there is a definite maximum in any specific instance).

These fundamental characteristics of the air which determine "breathing comfort," may be called Air-Heat, Air-Moisture, and Air-Motion.

By controlling the values of each in relation to each other—by adjusting the amounts of each in a practical way—we obtain some specific kind of condition which gives the body a chance to run its own conditioning apparatus as it sees fit. If the air is considerably hotter than the skin should be, we cool it. If the air is about as moist as the skin is, we take some of the water out. If we can't get the amount of heat in the air down to the amount we want, we take more water out of the air so that it can absorb more water (sweat) from the body, perhaps stepping up the amount of movement of the air to speed up evaporation of the sweat. If we can't get the amount of water down to the level we want, then we must cool the air still more, and here too an increase in the amount of movement of the air would probably be advisable (it should be pointed out with respect to air motion, however, that there are certain limits to the amount that can be allowed, as well as to the amount that can be practically achieved).

"Effective Temperature"

The above procedures are, of course, merely illustrative. What we actually can do about it depends upon our equipment. However, they do explain what is meant by adjustment of air-heat, air-moisture, and air-motion to each other so that a certain overall condition of the air around the body is achieved. Now, air-conditioning engineers have adopted a measurement of this overall condition, which is stated in degrees. It is to this measurement of the overall condition effected by adjusting air-heat, air-moisture and air-motion to each other that is given the name Effective Temperature.

Effective Temperature is the only temperature that means anything with respect to "breathing comfort."

Economists speak of real wages. All of us are familiar with the relationships it refers to, if not with the term itself. In any one period a man earning $50 a week in New York may not be any better off financially than a man in Podunk receiving $20 a week. The buying effectiveness of the income-conditions of both men may be the same. The economists relate their actual wages to a certain dollar purchasing power and find that each gets a certain real, or effective, wage which may be quite different from the actual wage. Lower a man's taxes, and without changing his income, you increase his real, or effective, wage. There is nothing complicated about this; similarly, there is nothing abstruse, "deep," and overly tech-ni-cal about the term Effective, or real, Temperature. It merely refers (in practical comfort air-conditioning) to what the body is really getting to "breathe" with. If it can't be given enough air-coolness, then it can't be taxed with as much air-moisture. Just like any politician, you can fool it with mere air-motion, but just as in politics, there are definite limits to this trickery. . . . However, it would be safer not to press this analogy with economics any further.

Now, assuming that it is clear what Effective Temperature means, what Effective Temperature do we want in our theatres? The American Society of Heat and Ventilating Engineers, as well as medical men, physicists and engineers on the staffs of leading air-conditioning equipment manufacturers, have done a great amount of fruitful work to answer that question, and later in this article a list of Effective Temperatures is offered in an effort to provide some immediate guidance in summer air-conditioning. But first we ought to go a bit into the matter of air-moisture.

Air-Moisture

In beginning the previous article, we suggested consideration of a man in Boston on a day at which the temperature was 92°, and a man in Dallas on the same day, but with the temperature there 102°.

Now, air in Boston in summer characteristically contains a great deal more water than in Dallas (Government Mean Relative Humidity figures for July noon, based on a thirteen-year average: Boston 65% to 70%; Texas, 40% to 50%). The air-heat in Boston, rising to 92°, results in excess body heat (the body is generating more heat than it needs for activity and normal warmth). The same thing occurs in Dallas at 102°—theoretically, more rapidly. In both cases, heat disposal by radiation from the body slows up. Ultimately (time and amount depending upon type and quantity of clothing, and upon type and amount of activity), the only means of heat disposal available to the body is evaporation of skin moisture (perspiration). Here is where our Dallas man gets a big break—he can sweat some of the heat out of himself, whereas our chap in Boston is in air that cannot absorb so much perspiration. A substantial breeze (air-motion) will of course help both of them—but the Dallas man considerably more.

The term Relative Humidity has not been used so far in these talks except to cite the Government figures above. It is not necessary to define it here. The term air-moisture is sufficient for our purposes so long as it always be understood as a factor related to air-heat (regular thermometer—dry bulb—temperature) and air-motion, and with air-conditioning, adjustable for the attainment of a certain Effective Temperature.

Summer Comfort

Now, in preparing charts and guides for the operation of equipment designed to create comfort conditions, general conditions have to be assumed, and accordingly a 50% Relative Humidity may be taken to indicate the average evaporating power of the air. On this basis, and also assuming air-motion not to exceed 30 feet per minute, John R. Parsons, New York consulting physicist who has conducted considerable research in comfort air-conditioning, closely in association with medical men, suggests the following Effective Temperatures for theatres in the United States during the summer months:

June, 76°; July, 78°; August 77° to 78°; September 1 to 15, 76°; September 15 to 30, 75°; October (in Southern areas), 74°.

The reason higher temperatures are suggested for July and August, normally the warmest months, is that people then are wearing lighter clothes, eating less food, especially foods of high heat-producing characteristics; and in general have become accustomed to a greater heat.

These Effective Temperatures, as explained, are at 50% Relative Humidity, and 30 feet per minute Air-Motion. For each 8% increase in air-moisture over 50%, add one degree to the above suggested Effective Temperature; similarly for each 8% decrease in air-moisture, deduct one degree. Additionally, for each increase in air-motion of 75 feet, deduct one degree from the suggested Effective Temperature.

Air-motion will receive more intensive attention in the next article.

New Carrier Districts

NEW DISTRICT office arrangements have been made by the Carrier Corporation. Seven districts have been set to facilitate distribution of Carrier air-conditioning equipment. District headquarters named now include New York, under Russell T. Free, with Boston as a branch; Philadelphia, under A. P. Shanklin, with branch at Atlanta; Chicago, with branches in St. Louis and Kansas City, under H. G. Strong; Cleveland, under L. C. Powers, with branch offices at Detroit and Cincinnati; Dallas, with a branch at New Orleans, under O. W. Bynum; and Los Angeles, under Herbert Peacock, with a branch at San Francisco. The headquarters of the company at Syracuse, N. Y., includes a district office under the management of N. E. Sheldon.

Sound Service Extended

THEATRES OF the Minnesota Amusement Company, in Wisconsin, Minnesota and both Dakotas, will be serviced by Altec under terms of a new contract recently signed. Nine theatres operated by Milton Arthur in California have also contracted for Altec servicing, which now further includes sound devices at the Chrysler Motors and National Biscuit Company exhibits at the New York World's Fair.

Increased business in the Middle Atlantic states has led to creation of a new Altec service territory comprising Delaware, Virginia and the Eastern Shore of Maryland, to be serviced under the supervision of W. M. Schubert, operating from headquarters in Dover, Del. Neighborhood Theatre Circuit, Inc., of Richmond, Va., has retained Altec to service 21 theatres, and the Rome circuit of Baltimore has added 14 additional houses.

Cleaning System Catalog

THE STATIONARY central plant vacuum cleaning systems of the Spencer Turbine Company of Hartford, Conn., are described in a new catalog. A wide variety of cleaning tools suited to chairs, drapes and various kinds of carpeted and uncarpeted floors is illustrated.

Chain Drive, Single Sprocket Used in Revised WE Head

THE REDESIGNED Western Electric sound reproducing system demonstrated May 15 in New York and other principal cities throughout the world, incorporates, among other features, design characteristics directed particularly toward stable operation under all climatic conditions. One feature is built around the use of a new fluid, in place of oil, in the kinetic scanner mechanism. The stability of film motion is maintained, as in previous scanners, by rotation of a drum which is moved by the film itself, and is steadied by a flywheel to which it is coupled only through a microscopically thin film of fluid—in other words, a "friction clutch" coupling.

Main amplifier, emphasizing accessibility.

The new fluid is said to give greater protection against flutter at extreme temperatures. Waste is eliminated by the fact that the new scanner mechanism is hermetically and permanently sealed; thus the small quantity of fluid originally introduced (enough to produce a film 1/10,000th of an inch in thickness) remains, it is said, indefinitely.

In the amplifier, resistors and other parts subject to temperature and moisture deterioration have been selected or impregnated for maximum immunity to extreme climatic conditions.

Other design changes include use in the soundhead of a single large-diameter driving sprocket (on the principle used in cameras and recorders) in place of two sprockets of standard projector diameter. The larger sprocket engages a proportionately greater length of film and number of sprocket holes, while permitting simplification of the gear train.

Projector drive is effected through a silent link-chain, further eliminating gears and facilitating mounting and dismounting of projector mechanisms, since a chain is more readily aligned. An adjustable idler keeps the chain taut under all conditions, and this feature, plus provision of an improved mounting plate, is said to permit replacement of a projector, with perfect alignment, in a few minutes—between reels if necessary.

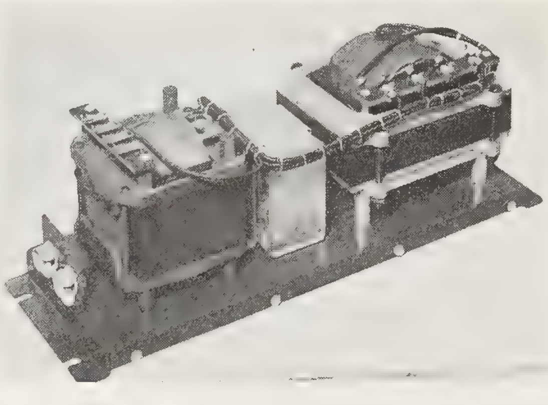
The drive motor is mounted at the side, and not in front of the soundhead, thus keeping its armature level at all projection angles and eliminating wear in thrust bearings. A circuit-breaker protects the motor against extreme variations of line voltage.

Photoelectric cells are coupled by coaxial cables to a three-tube pre-amplifier which, with volume control and changeover included, is mounted on the front wall. The output of this amplifier is wired to the main amplifier located elsewhere in the projection room, which has an output of 15 watts at 2% distortion. For additional power a Mirrophonic 87 amplifier can be added.

The new amplifier construction features maximum accessibility of all parts and connections for rapid servicing. Frequency control circuits, dividing sound between high- and low-frequency loud speakers, are prominently exposed for ready modification of system response. Amplifier gain has been made sufficient to give full brilliance of reproduction to recordings embodying increased volume range anticipated for the near future.

Protection with Voltage Regulators

PROTECTION OF sound equipment against premature deterioration, as well as against breakdown, is afforded by automatic line voltage regulators developed by the Raytheon Manufacturing Company of Waltham, Mass. Inserted between the power line and the power input to the sound system, the regulator accepts an input that may vary between 95 and 130 volts, and delivers an output held, according to the maker's data, between the limits 113.85-116.15 volts.

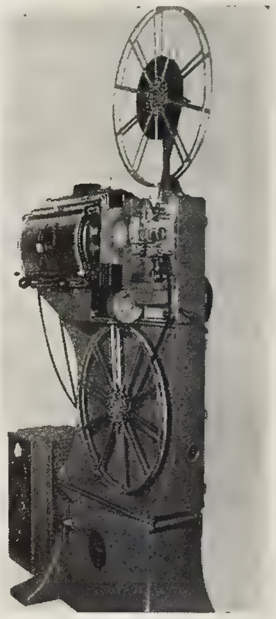


The regulation results from the interaction of two linked power transformers with suitably designed cores, and requires no manipulation. Output voltage remains constant under changes from no load to full load, making the device especially useful with Class B sound amplifiers.

Each regulator is adjusted at the factory, either at no charge or at nominal charge, to meet the power factor and other requirements of the apparatus with which it is to be associated.

16mm. Projector with Geneva Movement

A STANDARD Geneva type intermittent movement, and a high-intensity arc are features of a new 16-mm. projector developed by Herman A. DeVry, Inc., Chicago, for heavy-duty theatre service. The complete unit comprises a fully enclosed pedestal, combination projector and soundhead, two 4,000-foot reels for 16-mm. film, lamphouse, and arc supply rectifier. With the rear shutter is incorporated aperture ventilation, and the aperture is also equipped with copper cooling plates.



The drive system incorporates the silent chain method used also in the DeVry 35-mm. projector, and a total of four gears. The aperture assembly is instantly removable for cleaning. Dual exciter lamps are provided. Carbon feed is fully automatic.

The 4,000-foot 16-mm. reel affords one and three-quarter hours of continuous playing time. Manufacturer's specifications rate the new projector as suited to a 20'x24' screen with a throw of 125'.

Light Bulb Perfumer

FOR PUBLIC areas of some theatres, where ventilation is poor (particularly the smaller, more modest houses), a new perfume receptacle and its accompanying aromatic pellets should at least occasionally come in handy. The receptacle is of aluminum, about 1¾-inch wide, and just deep enough to hold ten or fifteen tiny perfumed pellets. Attached to the container are two wire rings like those of a small lamps shade, by which the receptacle is placed on an ordinary incandescent lamp. The heat of lamp renders the pellets decidedly aromatic, and the fragrance issues through holes in the container.

Making an Opera House Built in 1892 into a 1939 Motion Picture Theatre

¶ Describing the remodeling of Fox Midwest's Illinois Theatre in Jacksonville, Ill.

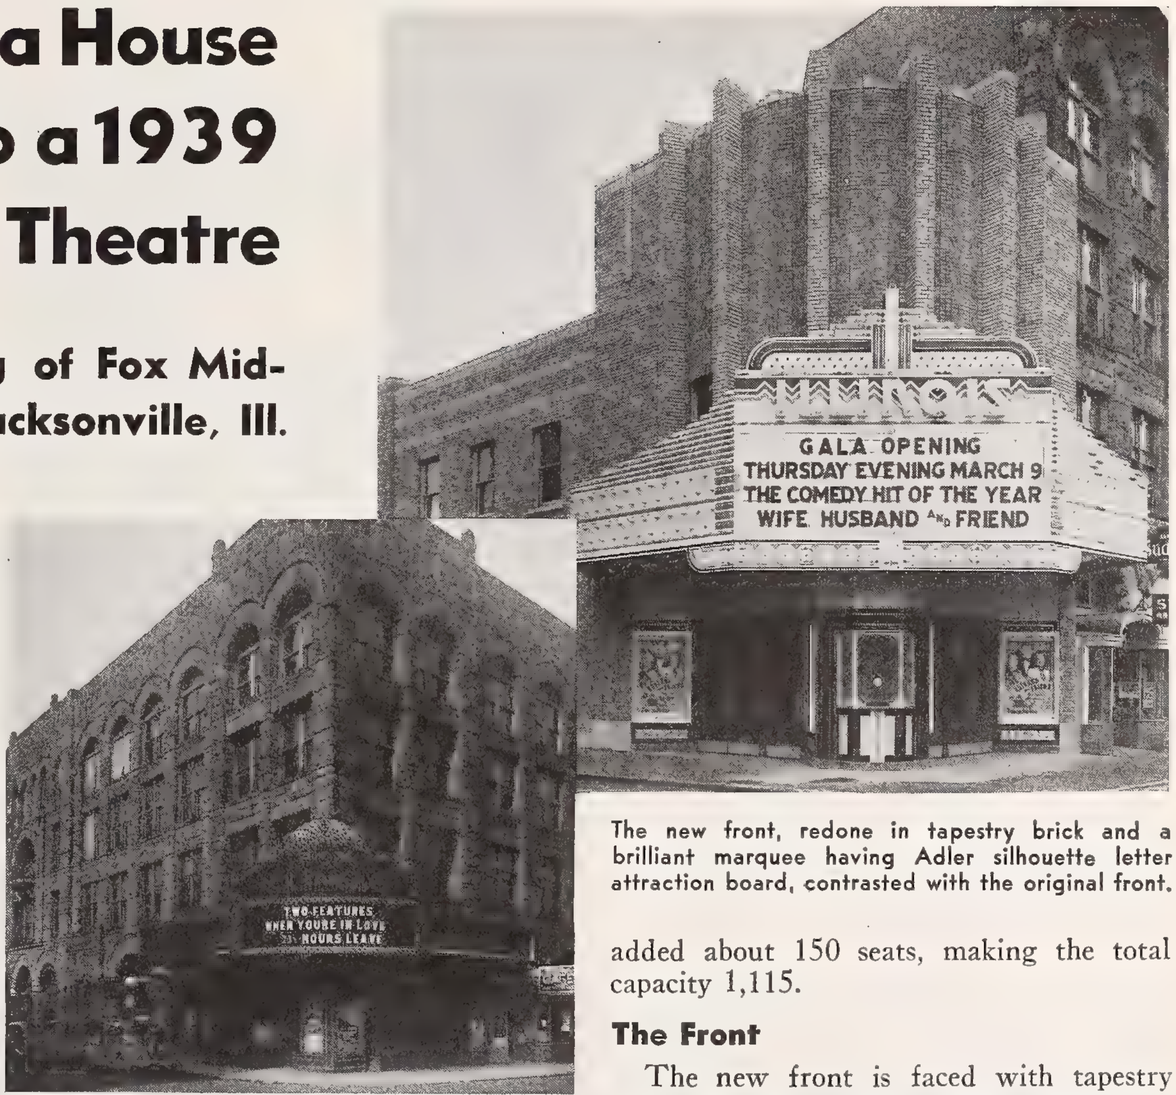
AN OLD opera house which has performed noble service to both the stage and the screen has been severed completely from its past in the modernization of the Illinois theatre in Jacksonville, Ill. Built in 1892, the Grand Opera House, as it was originally called, presented "moving pictures" under the name "motograph" as early as 1896; a generation later the motion picture claimed it entirely.

Owned and operated by Fox Midwest, the venerable playhouse has now been subjected to a comprehensive transformation from plans and a modernized interpretation Mediterranean styling by Robert Boller, prominent theatre architect of Kansas City. It is located on a busy intersection in the main business district of Jacksonville, which lies in a rich farming area and has a population of nearly 18,000 importantly made up of workers in clothing, shoe and steel plants—including the only factory in the world producing Ferris Wheels—and of students of three colleges.

Plan and Construction

The plot necessitates an irregular plan, the building occupying an area extending in a general diagonal direction across the plot with entrance and lobby extending from one corner along the left side of the building, the foyer cutting across at right angles to the rear of the auditorium, and the auditorium covering inner area on the right side of the plot, with the rear wall of the building abutting an alley.

The building formerly included a hotel and was entirely faced in stone; in the reconstruction the hotel was razed and in its place was built an addition of steel, concrete and brick construction to house the lobby and foyer, men's and women's lounges, manager's offices, a shop and exit passages. The new construction also included reduction of the auditorium ceiling height from 45 to 32 feet, and the stage depth from 34 to 20 feet. The latter change added about 150 seats, making the total capacity 1,115.



The new front, redone in tapestry brick and a brilliant marquee having Adler silhouette letter attraction board, contrasted with the original front.

The Front

The new front is faced with tapestry brick in five shades of buff ornamented with cast stone. Surmounting the entrance, a corner tower is finished in matched shades of buff tapestry brick in vertical pilasters with intervening rounded panels. Extending around the corner is a marquee of modern pattern with fluorescent neon tubing, animated neon, and incandescent lamps combined in the lighting, and Adler four-line multi-deck attraction boards employing silhouette changeable letters. The box office in the corner vestibule is of etched glass and maroon tile construction with trim in cream and rose set off by insets of turquoise blue. Glass of the entrance doors is etched in the same design used for the box office windows. Cast aluminum and stainless steel display frames in the vestibute are lighted from above by concealed lumiline lamps.

The Lobby

Lobby walls are divided into panels by wide pilasters outlined with bronze mouldings in angular designs, with horizontal mouldings lining the panels between pilasters. The walls are painted four tones of blue, shading from a dark blue at the bottom to a lighter blue near the ceiling. All trim and doors are dark blue, set off by bronze mouldings. The lobby ceiling has wide shallow beams of old gold color, with the area between the beams decorated in a lighter shade of gold.

The lobby is lighted with lumiline lamps in semi-indirect fixtures, and the ceiling has two metal and frosted glass fixtures containing incandescent lamps in three colors. Four similar fixtures are on the pilasters.

The Foyer

The foyer, which is 20 feet wide and 60 feet long, is divided by two half-round arches, with corresponding arches at each end of the room, to match. The foyer ceiling is of old gold stucco with bronze highlighting and has stepped side panels of cream texture plaster (Italian texture). Walls are in Chinese red swirled plaster, with highlights in gold bronze. Carpeting here as well as in the balcony and main floor aisles is Alexander Smith Crestwood Velvet in a distinctly modern square and circle pattern in gold, red, rust and tan.

The lounges are at one side of the foyer, one above the other—five steps up to the women's lounge, fourteen steps down to the men's.

Three metal and glass semi-indirect ceiling fixtures and two similar fixtures attached to the balcony stair buttresses illuminate the foyer. These use incandescent lamps on three color circuits.

The women's lounge walls are finished in texture plaster painted baby-blue, while the ceiling is finished in cream-colored Italian texture stucco. Draperies are blue, and the carpeting is dark blue broadloom (the adjoining toilet room is finished in varied shades of blue tile). Furniture is of walnut-finish wood in the simple Colonial designs being used increasingly today in homes.

The Auditorium

The auditorium side walls are finished in shell pink acoustical plaster, with a large sunburst painted on either side wall. Wide corbeled pilasters at each side of the stage lead up to heavy beams overhead to form the proscenium opening. The main ceiling is finished in a cream Italian texture plaster, with stepped panels at the sides. The rear wall has U. S. Gypsum acoustic tile.

The auditorium, excepting over the rear of the balcony, where there are ceiling fixtures, is lighted by large pendent side wall fixtures on the side wall pilasters. These contain lamps on three color circuits.

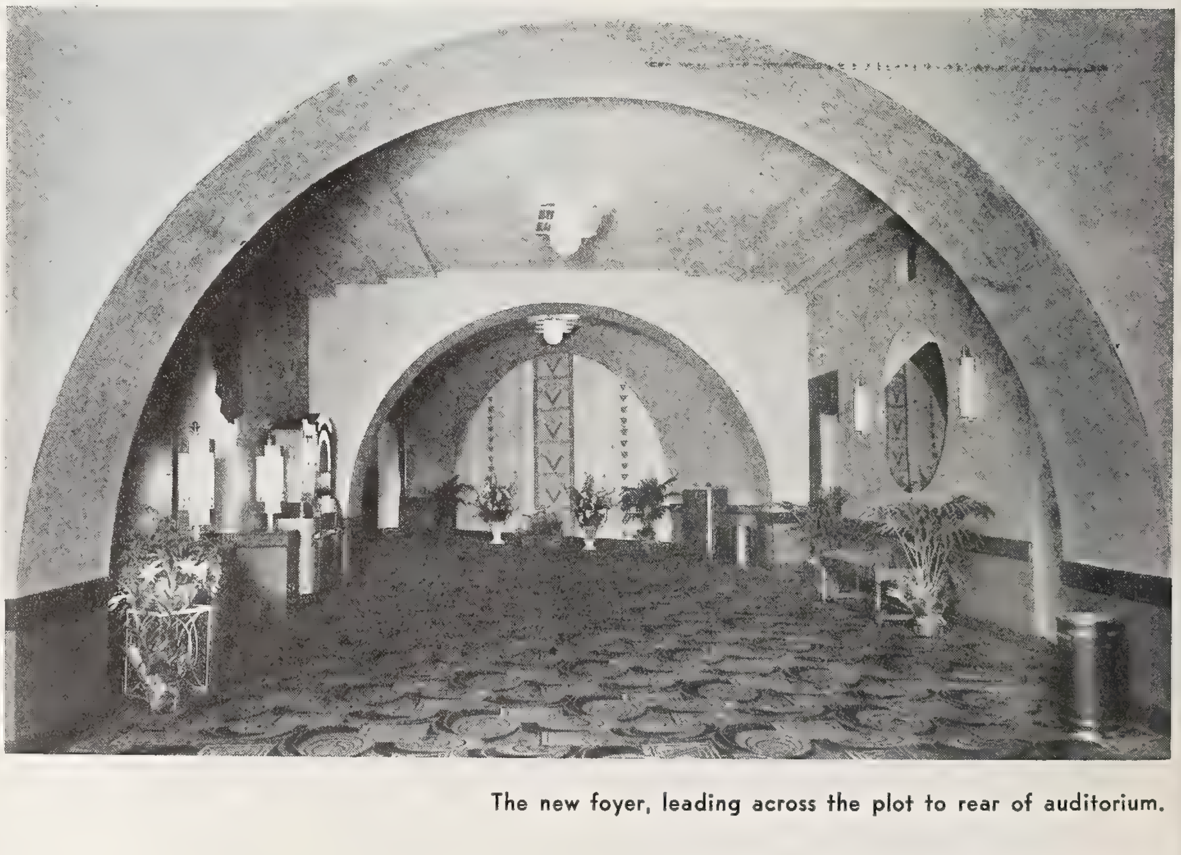
The main floor seats 775, the balcony 340. Chairs are 20 inches wide, and rows are spaced 32 inches back-to-back. Distance from the last row to the screen is 95 feet. All chairs are of the American Seating Company's new "Bodiform" type with backs upholstered in shell pink mohair and seats in Cavalon leatherette with mohair sides. End standards are coral and cream.

Projection and Air Supply

The projection equipment includes two Super-Simplex projectors with Peerless Magnarc lamps and Mirrophonic soundheads mounted on Super-Simplex bases. Rectification, housed in a room adjoining the projection room, consists in Hertner motor-generators, which also serve a spotlight. The entire sound system is Mirrophonic. The screen image is 16 feet wide.

The new theatre is completely air-conditioned, employing a cooling tower, with Vilter refrigeration equipment and Trane coils. Heating is by steam coils served by a coal-fired boiler.

All equipment and furnishings were selected and installed under the supervision of L. E. Pope. The theatre is managed by Ralph Q. Bartlett.



The new foyer, leading across the plot to rear of auditorium.

Full Value in Color

¶ How to avoid loss of design and decorative effect by matching carpet coloration to location

By NORMAN
PATTERSON

"AT NIGHT all cats are gray." In the artificially illuminated motion picture theatre all carpets are apt to appear "gray" or muddy if their colors are too soft or recessive. It is a wise exhibitor who takes this into consideration when selecting the proper colors for the carpeting in his theatre. The darkened auditorium, a softly lighted standee area or inner foyer or mezzanine, a well lighted main foyer, each in their turn render tremendously different visual interpretations, in tint and shade, of identically colored carpet pattern running throughout the house.

In sunlight, a richly colored carpet, luxurious in appearance through a subtle shading of hues, is a thing of beauty. In a large foyer, though it may be brightly lighted, the fabric loses part of its effect as the more delicate tints become submerged under artificial illumination. In the subdued areas, entire shades of the pattern vanish and only the strong positive colors in the design assert themselves—the background of the carpet becomes dark or neutral in color. The design itself almost vanishes in the auditorium proper with only dim aisle lights at intervals.

The writer, for one, appreciates fully the fact that the house is exhibiting motion pictures and not flooring fabrics; however, at one and the same price for your carpeting, there is no reason why you should not co-ordinate the colors effectively with the rest of the theatre. The following few elementary suggestions may prove helpful in making the proper choice of colors for your carpets.

Many owners, with real justification, cling to the principle of identical carpeting throughout the entire house in order to give the effect of a continuous whole. Under these circumstances it is well to remember that no single carpet pattern, dyed in a given set of colors, can maintain an equal effectiveness under several definitely varying lighting conditions. Select the flooring fabric design and colors to conform with the interior style in the area in which the carpet will be most effectively apparent. For example, should the main foyer area be large, while there is also a small standee foyer, naturally the large main foyer gives you the basis for carpet selection. If you have a small inner lobby that is carpeted, and a foyer continuous with the rear of the auditorium, and this area is relatively large, reverse the procedure. In some instances the writer has seen a large mezzanine lounge that should have been the starting point in color choice in view of the fact that it was the largest area, in point of visible decorative effect, in the entire house.

Some theatre operators prefer to identify and localize definitely the various public rooms and passages through individual decorative schemes, yet proceed to neutralize these individual effects through the use of identical carpeting. The cost of employing smaller quantities but more varieties of carpeting may not be any more than that of placing one pattern throughout the house, and could be even less. In any case, there commonly is substantial loss in effect in making one style and coloration of carpeting do the whole job.

¶ Effect of Light

The theatre owner's preference for the brighter shades of red was no mere accident, but the result of practical experience. These reds are not only exciting and intense in their emotional appeal, but at the same time are not readily affected by dirt. However, public taste now demands more subtlety in color expression.

Unfortunately the demands of projection and the necessity of conditioning the patron's eyes on his way to the darkened auditorium advise an illumination in the theatre which makes the selection of the more subtle color combinations a bit tricky. Here we are usually advised to use "good taste." But good taste is a rational realization of the limitations of the materials you are working with. Brilliant reds, oranges, yellows and blues will not necessarily brighten up your theatre. Neither will sombre grays and violets lend an air of class distinction through the medium of the carpet alone. Under-accentuation in color harmonies is just as bad as over-accentuation. The whole point is, do they belong where they are?

Your architect or theatre interior decorator understands color values and does not select your carpets merely by means of a mystic "feel" for pattern and color, but through the application of judgment based on known color values in relation to

It is well to remember that the darker the area to be covered, the greater the reliance on strong, sharp contrasts in the coloration of the design. The lighter the area, the more you can employ shades, tints and harmonies that would appear muddy without good illumination. Carpets with receding backgrounds and bold figure designs brought out through proper color contrasts, seem to work out under the lighting conditions prevalent in most theatres today.

Figures 1, 2 and 3 are excellent illustrations of this principle. In areas where there is sufficient lighting, differences in shading become visible and a varied and interesting effect is produced. In the darker portions of the house these shades disappear, but the design as a whole still is able to assert itself with telling decorative results.

This method also offers some measure of protection against the changes in color reflection intensities occasioned by the use of the widely variant kinds of illumination available for the theatre today. Under an amber light, for example, an ordinary red becomes brick red or rust in appearance! grey-greens turn into lavender or grey; tinted blues may tend to become greyish.

Where the lighting is good and of constant intensity, the carpets shown in Figures 4, 5 and 6 can be employed to advantage. Under reasonable illumination the carpet colors and designs appear warm and vibrant due to the rich hues and luxuriant tinting and shading effects. A balance is achieved which renders the design itself just one of many factors in the decorative impression created.

¶ Local Factors

Although in the past the theatre owner was probably justified to a certain extent in selecting his carpet colors and design with a view toward an immediate and striking impression on the patron, modern refinements in theatre operation with an eye toward neighbhorhood patronage indicate a reexamination of this method of selection. In a theatre serving areas where the more delicate touches in taste go unappreciated, an elementary forcefulness in design and color intensity is practicable from a showman's point of view. Houses with a preponderance of transients in their clientele can also use bold colors in viogrous designs—this makes a strong impression quickly. Neighborhood theatres with a patronage that repeats week after week, on the other hand, would do well to select their colors and patterns with an eye toward harmonies that are restful and subtle enough not to grow tiresome.

Toning-Down Effect of Dust

There is yet the color factor present in the amount of atmospheric dust that comes into the theatre. Local conditions (such as industrial plants) may lessen or increase the importance of this factor. Aside from the ordinary traffic dirt that is removed by daily applications of the vacuum cleaner, this atmospheric dust, suspended in the air and brought in through doors and ventilating system (especially if the ventilating system is not properly equipped with filters), tones down the colors noticeably—to such a degree, in fact, that even a light blue may come to appear, in the course of six months or so, a powder blue. The effect is not so much to change the color itself, as to reduce its luster, and just as a gloss and dull finish of the same paint appear different in color, so the colors of carpeting ultimately appear, through the action of atmospheric dust, different from their original shade. For this reason, it is best to select colors that are a trifle stronger—more brilliant or vivid—than those really desired.

¶ Time for Selection

There exists an unfortunate tendency to make carpeting "the football" in equipping and furnishing the theatre. Naturally, the carpet should be the last thing installed during the process of remodeling, if only to protect it from the materials and traffic of the work. But although it is last to go in, and the exhibitor knows that carpet suppliers can furnish a stock pattern in many instances almost overnight there is no reason why he should make the carpeting absorb all the shortcomings of his budget estimates. Why handicap and undermine much of the good work you or your architect has done?

Carpet selection should be begun at least six or eight weeks before opening date. All necessary specifications in quality, design and shades of color can be referred to the mills for comparison with available fabrics. Changes in shades, or slight revisions in design, may be in order, or the manufacturers may have something that they are contemplating putting into production. There could and should be some study devoted to the results that will be obtained under your lighting arrangements. Actively considering these factors will prove to be your best insurance that you will get the right carpet within the right time for your house.

Above all, after you have selected the carpet that fits your theatre, please remember that in most cases any transfer of the same colors and designs to fabric of lower quality will prove to be false economy, because yarn quality, pile height and density are the primary factors in bringing out beauty and richness in pattern.

THE WELL PLANNED STAGE

3. COUNTERWEIGHT REQUIREMENTS

- The third article of a series on the construction and layout of the motion picture theatre stage to meet all regular or occasional stage show needs

By C. E. TOMPKINS

ROPE SETS came into use years ago with the advent of flying scenery. When proscenium openings were not more than 20 to 25 feet wide, with drops and scenery in proportion, a good husky stage hand could fly anything used. The tendency, however, to build wider prosceniums with proportionately larger drops and scenery, made it impossible to raise and lower the sets without some other assistance and this ushered in the use of standbags attached to the lines as a partial counterbalance. The sandbag method, however, never proved too practical as the bags occupied too much space and were always more or less out of control except in unusual cases where methods of guiding were provided.

Counterweight Method

With wider proscenium openings ranging from 40 to 100 feet, the requirements for stronger equipment had to be met. The demand for better lighting produced larger and heavier borderlights, heavy sound system horns came into use, as well as light bridges, heavier paint frames, etc., the weight of which must be equally counterweighted so that they can be raised and lowered smoothly, and particularly so they can always be kept under perfect control, especially when being lowered. Modern counterweight equipment, when built with proper bearings and precision workmanship, has met all of these requirements and makes it possible to balance a set so accurately that one man can operate and control a heavy piece of equipment that ten men could not handle with rope sets. Since it is accurately counterweighted, he can stop or start it at will, and there is no chance of its getting out of control to result in an accident or damage to property. Through the wide development in the engineering of these systems, there is counterweight equipment adapted to stages of all sizes.

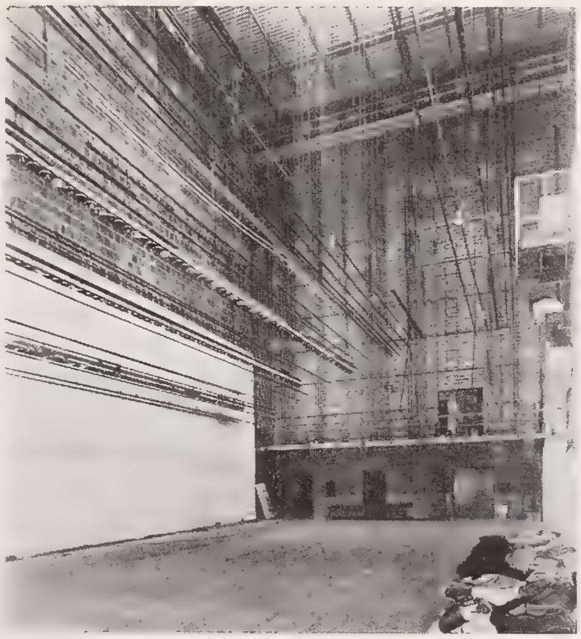
Types of Counterweight Systems

Heavy duty counterweight equipment, called "Upright Type T-Bar Guide" in which the counterweight carriages are guided up and down with steel bars attached to the prompt-side side wall. This equipment is used on large stages and in conjunction with large diameter head and loft blocks and heavy steel cable and where loads above 1,200 pounds are to be lifted.

For the average stage there is the "Upright Type Wire Guide" in which the counterweight carriages are guided up and down on steel strand cable. Frequently, single strand soft annealed wire is used, as it is slightly cheaper, but this practice is not followed by competent riggers since the single strand wire, when drawn taut, becomes noisy, having a disagreeable singing sound that, in many cases, can be heard by the audience. This is avoided when strand cable is used. Upright type wire guide equipment when properly built and installed will carry loads up to 1,200 pounds, plus a satisfactory safety factor. This type of equipment is therefore practicable for all ordinary stages.

Where it is impossible to install an upright gridiron, the "Underhang Wire Guide Type" may be used with the blocks attached directly to the underside of single I-beams, the underhang blocks being made to clamp to the beams. This equipment may be used where the loads do not exceed 1,000 pounds, but it has a disadvantage over the upright type of equipment in that once the stage is rigged, it is next to impossible to get to the equipment to make any changes or adjustments. Also, since the installation must be made from ladders or scaffolds 30 to 40 feet, or higher, the element of danger is far greater than that of installing the upright equipment.

Theatre stages built years ago invariably had fly lofts at an elevation of 15 or 20 feet above stage floor level. Some theatre owners would like to remodel and install counterweight sets at least for their heavier equipment, but find that the fly loft interferes. Multiple speed equipment, available in either "Wire Guide" or "T-Bar Track Type," will often solve this problem since this equipment will operate in approximately two-thirds of the space required for standard counterweight sets. When properly built, it can be counterweighted to a perfect balance, the same as the standard counterweight set.



A complete stage (shown before hanging of drapes) with 30 sets of lines. Note counterweight sets elevated to clear door, also the paneled switchboard and absence of equipment from floor.

Elements of Counterweight System

A set of counterweight equipment consists of one head block, as many loft blocks as are required, a counterweight carriage, a floor block and a rope lock, a manila hand line, steel cables for the head lines, and miscellaneous small fittings. Since the head block must carry the total load of the entire set, it is imperative that it be fitted with a good bearing. Such bearing should be of tapered roller design, self-contained, to eliminate friction on either the hub or the shaft. To prevent noise from the sheave grating on the sides of the block the bearing should also provide against thrust.

The most important part of the equipment is the counterweight carriage, since this device holds several hundred pounds of loose weights high above the stage. The carriage should be made with a strong, malleable iron or steel top member not less than ¾-inch in thickness, with ¾-inch steel connecting rods fitted with well cut threads and lock nuts. The floor block need not be of strong construction, but should have a self-lubricating type bearing to make it absolutely noiseless, then the set should be provided with a standard rope lock to permit locking the set when not in use.

Batten pipes should be connected by sleeve joints and not thread couplings, for thread couplings frequently snap off and cause trouble. The manila rope or hand line used should be first-grade and free from slivers and foreign matter, and the cable should be selected on the basis of a tested breaking strength sufficient to carry the load for the particular job. All cable, cable clips, turnbuckles and fittings should be of first-grade, drop-forged material.

Regarding costs, when we take into consideration the cost of rope set equipment, plus the cost of the fly loft that is necessary to carry all of the loose rope up off the stage floor, and the cost of the required pin rail, it will be found that modern, counterweight equipment can be purchased at practically the same figure. With modern counterweight equipment the total space occupied on the stage is 21 inches along the side wall. It requires less help to operate, it enables the stage to handle heavy equipment that could not otherwise be handled, and when once trimmed, the drops stay trimmed.

Theatre PLAN & FORM

THE EXHIBITOR as a layman is not particularly interested as to whether the architecture of his theatre is inspired by the functions of its operation or by the whim of a purely superficial decorative inspiration. More likely he is interested in the impressions created by the finished product regardless of the basis of the design.

But the exhibitor should be interested in the architecture to the extent of its being able to wear well with time. Too often the architecture is seemingly satisfying in decoration, only to become outmoded.

The quality of motion picture theatre architecture could advance greatly in a comparatively short time if the exhibitor could be shown the difference between the decorative quality which comes from an honest study of the problem and the type of study which follows the least line of resistance by sugar-coating the surfaces to make a showy effect.

The motion picture theatre structure has taken on a permanent importance—it no longer serves the get-rich-quick attitude it formerly did. Evidence of its right to a greater permanency is the attention now given to air-conditioning, better seating, better projection, etc. These facts must convince the exhibitor that more thought must be given to better functional planning, planning which will form the basis of architecture that will wear well and contribute to the performance.

The basic shape of an enclosed space, the approach to this space, the relative decorative value that people lend to this space, the manner in which light appears in this space, are all far more important factors in creating decorative quality than the superficial ornamentation which is often relied upon. The more you study an architectural problem, the more you tend to simplify and make the broader masses appealing. It might be argued that simplicity means coldness, but this is not so because you will find that proper functioning will require colors, practical textures and durability of surfaces which lend warmth, especially when light is reflected pleasingly from all the surroundings.

The idea that your theatre is a finished product ready for the public only when every square foot of surface is veneered with decoration, can be disproved. Good seats, projection, sound, sight lines, and proper air attract the patron first.

Starting with the front, then dealing with the lobby, foyer, lounge and auditorium, this architectural problem will be discussed in following columns.

These columns are regular features of Better Theatres dealing with methods by which the theatre may be planned as efficiently as possible for the exhibition of motion pictures. Both Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Potwin are consultants on inquiries from readers seeking counsel on the planning of theatres.

Chair Treatment as An Acoustic Measure

QUESTIONS are received from time to time pertaining to the construction of chairs and how they best fulfill their acoustical function.

One frequent question which may be of interest to the reader relates to the value of covering the rear side of the chair back with mohair, velour, or some other type of material which might absorb sound. The slight additional absorption to be gained by such an application is not sufficient to make it practical. The diffraction of sound which occurs within a bank of upholstered seats more than offsets the need for such treatment.

Now let us consider the front face of the chair back, or the side which faces the screen. In modernization work particularly, questions frequently arise as to the desirability of re-upholstering or changing the chair bottom, but at the same time retaining a wood panel back without upholstery or covering material.

There are two important points relative to this question. First, a seat of this type has only about one-fourth the amount of sound absorption provided by one person; and, second, the cumulative effect of sound reflections originating in a bank of seats having wood panelled backs, particularly on a steep rise such as might be encountered in a balcony, has been known to produce a distinct echo. Slip covers are helpful in reducing sound reflections from wood panel backs when chairs are unoccupied, although they do not contribute in any large measure to the total absorption in the average theatre.

Questions have also arisen as to the desirability of keeping chair bottoms in the "down" position when the chairs are unoccupied. There would be a definite advantage acoustically in such a practice, because the chair would then best fulfill its acoustical function. However, from the standpoint of comfort and ease of movement between rows, a consideration of practicability arises. Perhaps the best that can be hoped for in the average case is a rather widely distributed grouping of chairs in the "down" position, throughout the seating area.

ACOUSTICS in Form & Decoration

by
C. C. POTWIN
Consultant in Acoustics

IN KEEPING with the major subject of this issue, namely, theatre seating, let us consider briefly the acoustical qualities of theatre chairs.

The decrease in general reverberation resulting from the introduction of a relatively high amount of sound absorption over the floor area becomes particularly evident in the case of a theatre having plain wooden chairs. As the audience increases, reverberation diminishes, frequently to the point where quite acceptable hearing conditions are secured when all seats are occupied.

However, this variation from a reverberant to a non-reverberant condition does not represent a desirable effect for any theatre.

The time of reverberation should be as nearly uniform as possible for all percentages of audience, and the best approximation to this condition can be achieved only when efficient upholstered chairs are used.

Theatre chairs differ in their acoustical efficiency with (1) the method of construction employed, and (2) the type of covering used for the bottom and back. A chair having an upholstered spring or rubber cushion bottom and heavily padded back has a sound absorption value equivalent to between two-thirds and three-fourths of the amount of absorption provided one person. The low-frequency absorption of such a chair is a function of the thickness and quality of upholstery and padding used. The high-frequency absorption is effected, to a large extent, by the covering material.

A leatherette covering tends to reflect the high frequencies, to a limited extent, whereas a mohair or fabric covering absorbs these frequencies readily. In balancing the frequency absorption characteristics of a theatre, it is important, therefore, that the type of covering be considered on the basis of the other types of absorption that might be needed.

For example, when the detailed form of a theatre is planned to control the sound reflections and little or no acoustical material is applied, the type of seat usually most desirable for use is one having a soft fabric covered back.

On the other hand, if the theatre is one wherein considerable acoustical material is required for either the wall or ceiling surfaces and this treatment has its maximum sound absorption in the higher range of frequencies, then seats having at least a partial leatherette covering are most desirable for balancing the frequency absorption characteristic of the theatre.

Adjusting the Sound System to the Characteristics of the Recording

● Considering the problem of variation in the quality of prints, and what the theatre manager and his projection staff may do about it themselves

By AARON NADELL

WHEN THE theatre receives a film in which the characteristics of the recording do not match the characteristics of the sound system, sound quality may be very bad in spite of the fact that both film and equiment are good in themselves, and capable of giving excellent results if properly matched. At little over a year ago Hollywood was delivering "A" and "B" prints, and those who by accident received the print that did not suit their equipment will recall how poorly it sounded.

Recordings today still vary considerably in quality, in spite of much effort directed toward creating uniformity in the products of the different studios, and of the same studios on different days. In consequence, theatres that have done their best in the way of sound equipment still are confronted, unexpectedly, with inferior reproduction, perhaps in some picture which they have exploited at unusually heavy expense. There is considerable difference of opinion as to what shall be done about that situation as it exists at present.

Some important manufacturers of sound equipment feel that the problem is not one for the theatre to solve; that the correct answer is continued effort in Hollywood until all recordings are made with absolutely uniform quality, after which it will only be necessary to adjust all theatre equipment and acoustics to the same final standard. Meanwhile (according to this view) the exhibitor who happens to receive a recording that is a lemon in his theatre will just have to put up with it, in spite of all his investment in equipment and exploition.

Education Seen Necessary

Some sound servicing organizations and theatre circuit heads come to the same conclusion for a different reason, considering that managers and projectionists have not been sufficiently educated in the processes of adjusting sound equipment frequency response, and consequently that any attempt at continual adjustment for different recordings may end by doing more harm than good.

On the other hand, however, some sound manufacturers provide their equipment with "tone controls," of one type or another, that can be adjusted merely by turning a dial, and are designed to be reset continuously according to the characteristics of the sound track in use. Some theatre circuits, also, and not a few individual theatres, make every effort to "retune" their equipment whenever the nature of the picture so requires. Such re-tuning in fact amounts practically to a rule in the occasional theatre where single pictures are run for a considerable period of time; it becomes progressively less common as pictures are changed more often.

Making Adjustments

In practice, matching the characteristics of the reproducing system with those of the individual recording involves two separate difficulties. It is necessary to know both what adjustment to make, and how to make it. The first problem can never be solved by the projectionist alone, and is not properly his responsibility, for the obvious reason that he can neither hear nor judge quality in the projection room. His monitor does not give the same results as the screen speakers, the projection room acoustics are not those of the auditorium, and the noise of his machinery masks all the finer distinctions in sound. The manager or his delegate in the auditorium must judge the sound, and advise the projectionist of the type of adjustment needed, leaving him with sole responsibility for how that adjustment is to be made. When sound system and sound track are both of good quality in themselves, but not when used together, the trouble is one of frequency response.

RECT-O-LITE

Thus, suppose that the film is "peaked" at the lower frequencies, to reproduce them at more than their proportionate volume. If the system is one that reproduces the lower frequencies at less than their proper volume, sound may be very satisfactory; but if the system is also peaked at the low end results are almost certain to be "boomy." The ideal arrangement is that in which the characteristics of film and system so compensate each other that the overall response is "flat"; where this is not the case the manager or other sound observer must decide by listening if low, middle and high frequency bands are either too strong or too weak, and roughly to what extent in each case.

The high frequencies, as most theatre men are aware, are those that give quality to the sound, making it possible to distinguish voices and instruments by their individual tones. The "s," "sh" and "ch" sounds, presence of which was a criterion of high frequency reproduction in earlier days, now fit almost into the middle band, since the total range has been increased from 6,000 up to 9,000 cycles. Emphasis on the middle band, roughly from 200 to about 4,000 cycles, make sound dull and uninteresting, like that of a poor radio. Some practice in careful listening, coupled with experimenting after show hours in the effects of frequency changes made in the projection room, can rapidly educate the sound observer in judging what is wrong with sound quality. Good ears to begin with are of course indispensable.

Equipment Variations

Half the battle is won if the projectionist can be informed accurately as to what defect exists in the quality of reproduction, and a few trial readjustments, made with the audience present, should fit the system to reproduce the true quality recorded on the track. The projectionist must of course keep a thoroughly accurate note of the original system setting, so he can return to it at any time.

The nature of the adjustments needed in the projection room vary with the type of apparatus installed. In some cases, as said, the equipment is fitted with tone control knobs of adequate flexibility and range, properly marked as to the effect produced by every change of setting. With such apparatus, the projectionist has nothing more to do than to operate the knobs for more or less high, low or medium-frequency response, as instructed from the auditorium.

In some systems switches are supplied in place of knobs, and the response characteristic is changed in a series of steps. Such switches usually are also marked, although in some cases it may be necessary to obtain further information as to the effect produced by changing switch settings; or if this is not available to determine the facts by study of the system diagrams and perhaps even by some trial runs with an output meter and test film. In still other systems jumpers take the place of switches, and in not a few the only method of adjustment provided involves changing soldered connections. But every modern system contains provisions for modifying frequency response over a considerable range, and the two types last mentioned can readily be fitted with switches of the kind that can be used during the show to take the place of jumpers or soldered contacts.

With this modification (where it is necessary) the projectionist need know only the nature, and something of the extent, of the change in frequency response that will follow each change in adjustment. He needs also, as said, to know and have on record, beyond chance of error, the correct normal setting to which his system must be restored when the difficult film is not running. And naturally he must never forget to make the proper changes in setting at the proper times.

¶ The second of two articles on maximum picture size

By F. H. RICHARDSON

UNTIL RATHER recently, color pictures were largely lacking in rendition of all except the three primary colors. But very few of the myriad shadings present in natural color, which have so very much to do with beauty in color, were visible on screens. Those shadings correspond in a way to overtones in music. Now, of course, color productions are fairly adequate in this respect. In theatres in which they are properly screened, their effect is one of beauty and realistic conviction. It therefore seems very probable that in the near future, color productions will assume a position of major importance.

Observe closely, however, the qualification "properly presented." Without proper presentation, very much of the beauty of color films is lost. At present many theatres are presenting colors at less, and some much less, than their possible attractiveness.

To be doubly certain of my position upon color projection, I checked up with an engineer dealing constantly with practical color cinematography and projection. Asking that, because of his position, his name be withheld, he prepared the following statement:

"Let us consider one frame of colored picture film, selecting Technicolor, since that at present is best known to theatre people. Let us assume it to be dyed red. Engineers engaged in production will have caused this frame (and all others) to be so timed and the dye density to be such that exactly the proper shade of red will appear on the screen, provided that (a) the screen surface be pure white, (b) the surface have high reflection co-efficient, (c) that 10 foot-candles of light be incident upon the screen at all points of its surface.

Magnification No Factor

"If these conditions be met, it makes no difference how large the screen image may be, insofar as correct color rendition be concerned, but any deviation from those conditions will be harmful; particularly any decrease in the illumination above suggested.

"In explanation of this latter, color is defined by three dimensions; namely, hue, saturation and value. Hue refers to position in the spectrum—that is to say, it is blueish, greenish, etc. Obviously this will not be in any degree altered, regardless of magnification, or put in another way, the size of the screen. Value refers to the amount of white intermixed with the color—if white be mixed with a red, the projected light would be lighter in tone or value, finally resulting, if sufficient white be added, in pink. Obviously, too, this condition will not be altered by the amount of magnification to which it be subjected.

"Saturation refers to purity of a color, or the amount of grey mixed with it. If the level of screen illumination be below 10 foot-candles, the color would become deficient in saturation, lose brilliancy and become "muddy" in appearance. But if as specified, the screen illumination be 10 foot-candles, the saturation remains constant, regardless of magnification."

Smaller Image Indicated

As all projectionists know, or should know, there is at present no projector optical system with which it is possible to distribute light of equal brightness value to all portions of a screen of theatre dimensions. We have no present daylight source capable of projecting in excess of 18 foot-candles to the center of screens of diffusive type, such as are necessary in a very large percentage of theatres, which in screens exceeding 18 feet in width, or 20 at most, would mean an average illumination, considering the surface as a whole, far below 10 foot-candles.

To theatres having a screen image 18 feet wide or less, my advice is: Experiment with color by altering amperage until the best results are obtained, this latter suggestion because relatively few would have ready means of actually measuring their screen illumination.

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

A BULLETIN THAT RAISES THE OLD MATTER OF APERTURE TENSION

THE RESEARCH COUNCIL of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has issued a bulletin, available free to all projectionists, on release print preservative tests. Film preseratives have intimately to do with projection work, hence such a report should be studied by all projectionists. It can hardly be questioned that the greater understanding projectionists have of the things they must handle and work with, the more intelligently and effectively can they perform their duties.

The bulletin in question describes results obtained from a 2,000-foot reel, made up as follows:

One 200-foot strip of unprocessed release print, which means ordinary print (film) not treated at all. The reel also contained equal lengths of the same print treated respectively with (1) consolidated edge waxing, (2) Eastman cold waxing, (3) Gage process, (4) Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer edge waxing, (5) Paramount process, (6) Peerless process, and (7) Prefexit process.

The bulletin says, "After inspection of the samples it would be rather difficult to point out any one sample as outstandingly better than the others. * * * However, the results of this one test indicate that all of the preservatives tested benefit the film, and in the opinion of this Committee there is little difference between the results obtained from any one or the other of the preservatives under consideration."

However, this merely has to do with the film itself—its protection. It does not take into consideration the fact that from the viewpoint of results on the screen, there may be a considerable difference, since certain preservatives, as projectionists know, tend to flake off, clog the sound gate aperture and raise hob in general. Complaints of this I receive regularly.

The bulletin further says, "A film preservative treatment for release prints should (1) prevent scratches on new or green emulsion, (2) thoroughly lubricate the emulsion so that it will not adhere to any part of the projector, (3) impregnate the gelatine with a fixed chemical which will not be dissipated by the intense heat of the projection lamp [meaning generated at the spot, of course], but will take the place of the moisture that is withdrawn, to thus prevent warping and buckling, (4) retain the film's pliability indefinitely."

There is considerable additional discussion of the whole matter of film preservative processing, ending with, "These tests indicate that because of the fact that a film preservative contributes to better projection, as well as longer life, all release prints should be given some treatment before being placed in service. It is further recommended that in order to obtain the full benefit from a preservative, any preservative used should be applied at the laboratory during release printing proceedure."

All of which is informative in that it adds to general information, hence has distinct value. However, it impresses my 'umble self as tending to place the horse in front of the wagon. The bulletin provides information concerning film preservatives, but devotes not one word to consideration of the refusals of the industry to take action looking toward abatement of the chief cause of the damage complained of, as well as strained and cracked sprocket holes galore—that cause being excessive tension at projector apertures.

Properly tested, it will be found that at least nine out of every ten professional projectors have more tension at the aperture than is necessary; many of them very much more; some even twice the amount required to maintain a steady image.

Why? Very simple. Projectionists have absolutely no practical means for ascertaining either the amount of tension required, or whether or no their projectors have too much.

I have laid the matter before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at its meetings. I have laid it before the Projection Practice Committee upon numerous occasions, the Committee fully agreeing that something should be done. Lots of talk, some work, and nothing of practical value actually accomplished.

A year or more ago I placed the matter before one of the major distributors, demanding that (a) experiments be made to ascertain what tension—considering, say, a month of ordinary theatre programs—is necessary to insure a steady screen image throughout, disregarding mechanically imperfect films (strained, cracked or abraded sprocket holes) and (2) that a tool sufficiently simple to be handled by any projectionist, and low enough in cost to be placed in every projection room, be made available. I have been given to understand that the difficulty encountered is in the production of a measuring device that would meet the above named specifications.

The matter finally seems to resolve itself into this: Unquestionably excessive tension at projector apertures inflicts great damage. It increases the tendency to "pick up" emulsion and excess film cement, which automatically still further increases tension, strains or perhaps even cracks sprocket holes, and abrades their edges. It may even and often does rip them entirely out. It causes heavy scratches in the emulsion, which even may under some circumstances extend into the edge of the sound track. Excessive tension causes added wear upon the entire intermittent movement, places added strain upon the driving motor, in fact, upon the entire gear train and bearings of the projector mechanism.

It seems rather unbelievable that the engineering ability of this great industry, which has solved so very many apparently far more formidable problems, cannot solve this one. Since it is impossible for any motion picture projector to function at its best, everything considered (a projector that causes preventable injury to film cannot be said to function at its best), except there be the lowest tension at its aperture compatible with insurance of steady screen image, it would seem just and reasonable to all concerned that projector manufacturers produce and supply, as a part of the equipment of each projector installation, some means by which the projectionist may adjust aperture tension to precisely the minimum requirement, which requirement has, I believe, already been established by the SMPE.

It would also seem that the Research Council might well apply its capable energies to this matter. Film preservatives help, yes. With minimum aperture tension they might even effect a complete cure.

PLANNING AND EQUIPPING THE PROJECTION ROOM

J. L. CUMMINGS of Peoria, Ill., writes, "I own considerable interest in a theatre circuit. I am not an expert in such matters, but after some study and careful investigation I have arrived at the conclusion that there is no proper method of general procedure followed, either in planning theatre projection rooms or selection of equipments with which to equip them. Planning seems to be largely a matter of available space and guessing how best to use it. Selection of equipments appears to be more a matter of familiarity with, and consequent preference for, certain apparatus, than of careful comparison and testing of those available."

It is true that every projection room has to be laid out more or less as an individual problem. This is normally the case with the projection room as it is with the rest of the theatre. Sites vary in shape as well as size, and a certain desirable site may not be adapted in size and shape to the seating capicity that the ground rent and drawing possibilities advise. There are, however, general guides that are more or less established for both the construction and the laying out of projection rooms.

The Projection Practice Committee developed standard projection room plans, including wiring, equipment locations, etc., some years ago; these were revised only last fall. Anyone can obtain them by writing the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Hotel Pennsylvania, New York. The planning of the projection room is also dealt with in detail in the Bluebook of Projection. Of course, any suggestions and standard plans thus given must be adapted to the general plan of each theatre. Some architects called upon to design a theatre are not really experienced enough in planning a building so highly specialized, and they do not always make full use of the guidance that is available to them. Really experienced theatre architects, however, can lay out a good projection room in keeping with recommended practice if the available space at all permits.

As to a standard procedure of selecting equipment, the only one I know of in any field is that of looking 'em all over, and having enough knowledge of such matters to judge for one's self, or getting someone who does have that knowledge and whom you can trust, to do it for you. Which is the better automobile—a Plymouth or a Ford? You get a hundred people to say with all assurance that the Plymouth is, and I'll get a hundred to swear by the Ford, or vice versa. Concerning projection equipment, any really competent projectionist should be able to judge for himself and his employer.

SPLICES, UNION POLICY AND OTHER MATTERS

FROM A LOUISIANA projectionist who requests that his name and location be not divulged, comes the following:

"Am a constant reader of your Comments in BETTER THEATRES, which are thoroughly enjoyed; also I find them very beneficial. After that 'boost' may I ask a few questions concerning projection procedure, first having remarked that your proposal that reels be shipped to theatres 'tails up' will represent a decided step in advance if and when it finally is adopted, as will doubtless occur, since invariably things that have value are finally adopted where opposition finally grows weary of bucking in fruitless endeavor to overthrow the right. Now for my questions:

"First, does it make any difference whether film be spliced while rewinding from leader to tail piece, or in the opposite direction? The projectionist in a large, high class theatre assured me splices should be made while rewinding from tail piece to leader. He said if this procedure be followed there was less likelihood of the splices pulling apart at loops.

"Second, do you consider it right and proper for unions to refuse to accept new members for the reason that they already have enough members to fill all available jobs?

"Third, would any harm be worked did one cover the upper portion of the Super-Simplex rear shutter guard with a sheet metal shield extending from a line level with the shutter shaft around to the right to the upper edge of the light beam? This would reduce the amount of dust and fumes drawn in by the shutter by almost one-half."

Answering the questions in order: General adoption of the tails-up method of delivery of prints to theatres will take time. As this projectionist suggests, it doubtless will come because it obviously is the better procedure. However, it usually takes a lot of time to uproot well established bad practices.

"As to making splices, as you have stated the matter, I can see no possible difference whatever, insofar as concerns results. The important points concerning splices are (a) use only good cement that has not been exposed to the air more than is absolutely necessary. (Exposure to air injures film cement by permitting it to absorb moisture therefrom, and permitting evaporation of a portion of its liquid element), (b) do not flood the splice you are making with cement, but use just enongh to cover the surface of the stub end you have scraped, (c) try and cover the surface of the stub end you have scraped with just one stroke of the brush, drawing the brush back and forth reduces the strength of the splice, (d) use a straight-edge and make a perfectly straight, clean line when you scrape, (e) scrape the stub end perfectly clean, but remove no more film stock than is necessary to that purpose, (f) scrape the non-emulsion side lightly in order to remove all oil and dirt, and slightly roughen the celluloid so that the cement may take hold (a splice is, if properly made, a weld, rather than merely glueing the film ends together), (g) make the splice neither too wide or too narrow, say, in no event exceeding 1/8-inch or less than 1/16-inch wide (in theory, less than 1/16-inch is better but in projection room practice, take 'em as they come, it most emphatically is not), (h) apply plenty of evenly distributed pressure, (i) make no "hand-made" splices—use a film splicer and a good one, too.

The point your friend probably intended to set forth is that splices should be so made that as the film passes through the projector, the advancing end at all splices shall point away from, not toward, sprocket idler rollers. That is important, since if the film end face the idler and the splice be loose, the end may and probably will butt against the idler, with consequent trouble.

As to the union matter, that depends. If the union has a thoroughly competent member to fill every available job, with enough "spares" to fill temporary vacancies caused by illness or other causes, then it is perfectly right and proper to refuse applications for membership.

As to the shield—no, do not attempt that! True, you would shut off some fumes and dust, but at the same time you would reduce the cooling effect the movement of air produces and might end up by warping some part of the mechanism.

FILM DAMAGE THAT CAN BE AVOIDED

FROM THE manager of a theatre in New York State comes a sample of film accompanied by the note, "Enclosed find an 8-inch sample of film, 904 feet of which was ruined as shown. I have been charged for this 904 feet. The run-off started at a splice which seems in perfect condition. Why does this happen? Is the projectionist to blame? Should he have been able to know of the run-off as soon as it happened? Due to a chain drive on my sound equipment, there is considerable noise in the projection room. Your advice in this matter will be highly appreciated. The splice at which the damage started was one made by the film company."

The damage consists in sprocket tooth indentations just inside the left-hand row of sprocket holes—left-hand as the film is in the projector. It is of course impossible to say just what caused the run-off without examination of the splice at which it occurred. Possibly it was a somewhat stiff splice, or the sprocket holes were not precisely matched. However, it is a pretty safe bet that the idler of one of the sprockets was not in proper adjustment.

These idlers must be approximately one and one-half times the thickness of a film from the sprocket at both ends. Failure in this respect invites damage of the sort complained of here. Of course, the run-off may not, in this case, have been due to that fault, but it probably was, particularly in view of the fact that the other side of the film remained in perfect contact with the sprocket holes.

However, my reason for answering this in print is that had the projectionist been beside the projector, attending to the business of projection, he most certainly would have detected the fault immediately. He then might have remedied it with no interruption of the show, and with but a few inches of film damaged. For when in position beside the projector, the projectionist's ear is so attuned to the rhythm of its operation, so that any change therein, however slight, is normally instantly detected—nor would the noise of a chain drive appreciably alter that condition. But if the projectionist be some distance away from the projector, he might not note it.

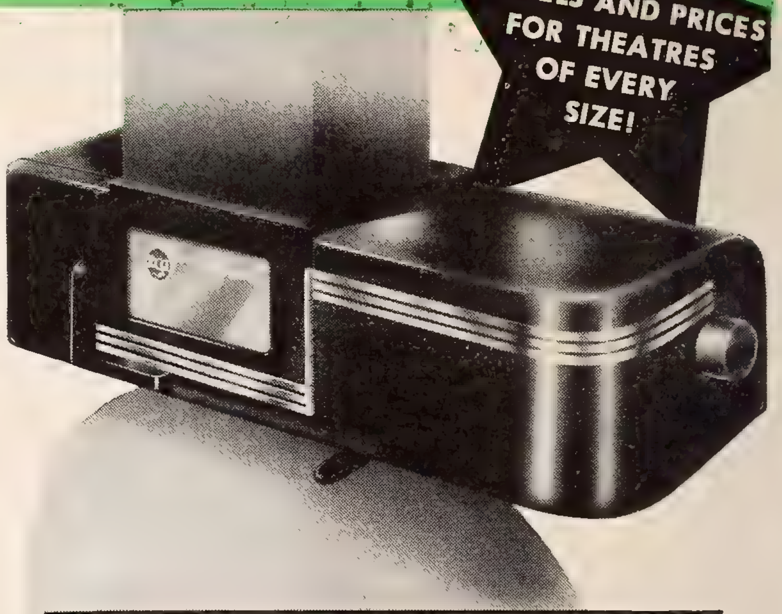
America's Movie Fans Demand Good Sound

RCA PHOTOPHONE MAGIC VOICE of the SCREEN enables you to give them the best!



MODELS AND PRICES FOR THEATRES OF EVERY SIZE!

Fine new equipment has "partner" for Rotary Stabilizer — amazing new Shock-Proof Drive!

So much emphasis has been placed on sound by Hollywood movie men that far-sighted exhibitors can no longer overlook the necessity of modern sound equipment.

Movie makers are concentrating on sound because the public demands good sound. And the public naturally patronizes the theatres that provide it.

Your theatre can offer movie-goers the world's finest sound—if you equip it with the new RCA Photophone Magic Voice of the Screen. You can do this at a price within your means. And your increased audiences will soon put that price—and more—back in your box office.

In more than 5000 theatres the Magic Voice of the Screen is proving a smart investment, hailed by exhibitors as a real money-maker. And now RCA Photophone offers you a new Magic Voice—equipment even better than its popular predecessor—a Magic Voice which offers you more important features than any other sound equipment in the world!

Better sound means better box office—and RCA tubes mean better sound. RCA Photophone's service organization has a low cost theatre service plan in which you'll be interested.

Only the New Magic Voice of the Screen Offers all These Features!

This splendid new equipment gives you full assurance of constant film speed by adding the amazing new Shock Proof Drive to the famous Rotary Stabilizer! Besides this great feature, the new Magic Voice brings you new styling, new protection, new convenience, new added reserve power and many other outstanding proofs that it's the best value you've ever seen! Ask your RCA Photophone representative for complete information.

LIBERTY and THE SCREEN

WILLY-NILLY this business of the motion picture becomes more and more entoiled with the world it serves. In its golden period of development it was an incidental, socially obscure part of the loosely knit fabric of world relations, political and economic. The screen won its way by the will of the customers in a diverse and scattered world market.

The knitting is getting rapidly much tighter, people and nations crowding and elbowing each other as populations grow with more fertility than intelligence, more contact and communication than the wit to get along with each other.

For the motion picture, for the radio, and even for the older press of the printed word, this brings, abruptly, problems of a new order—or of an old order with new intensities.

As recorded in our news pages last week the United States government through its Federal Communications Commission decides it is necessary to ordain the nature of what is to be said and presented in international broadcasts, in behalf of the good name and purposes of the nation.

In the same week Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy, an ambassador to the Court of St. James's, deplores the "average Englishman's" lack of knowledge and understanding of the United States, remarking that "a great many people in England believe that our home life, history and even legal practises, are properly typified by motion pictures." That sort of criticism of the screen has been had often enough before, but never before from so eminent a diplomat, and, one with intimate personal experience of picture making and distribution.

(Just parenthetically, speaking as Mr. Kennedy did of "legal practises," it was a tender coincidence which found his remarks reported within the day of the headlines: "Manton on trial accused of getting bribe for Thomas" and "Pendergast pleads guilty." And, within the same parentheses, it seems only the other day we were recording the determination of some bar association to see to it that lawyers were presented in a favourable light on the screen. That would include judges.)

BUT back at our world problem and the screen—the pressures which are and long have been explicit for radio are also implicit in intermittent intensities for the screen. Happily thus far official, but not very public, relations for the American industry and the world problems have been largely through a Department of State friendly to the screen, seeing it not only as an important business but also incidentally an agent of all American industry.

Now as never before the United States is concerned about what the rest of the world thinks about us.

There has been, and probably will be more, complaint that the action of the Federal Communications Commission tends toward and is censorship. Not much complaint would be made about that if we were in a state of declared war. We have had war censorships. Also there always has been a continuous military and naval censorship extending to the screen, too.

But there is now a war, a world war, in which everything is being done save to burn powder and kill men, in Europe.

Germany drives east. Japan drives west. Italy spars. Russia, France and Britain would hold what they call their own. Britain for the first time in history sends a King and Queen to the New World to cement old ties, form new ones.

A King of England pauses and poses with his queen, for the newsreel cameras—to the alarum of Scotland Yard men, who have not been so fully instructed in the public relations job as George VI has. And he must be mindful, too, that his brother as Prince of Wales on the Canadian-American tour which made his a world figure, was aided mightily and purposefully by the motion picture camera. Also that was probably the best international relations job since the coming of Lafayette.

The whimsical notion strikes one that a certain pattern of British-American relations concerning the screen is being repeated. Down the years, while Britain has but rarely sent to this country important pictures, it has unendingly sent us important players on the screen, actors to photograph. Now despite its quotas and costly efforts at the nurturing of a British screen industry it has not yet arrived at dominant national production—so again comes, on personal and photographic appearance, the best in popular personalities that Britain has to offer. Again Britain sends the players, and again we make the pictures.

OFF to South America and a Latin-American sales convention goes Mr. Sidney Kent, the first ranking picture executive to set official foot there. With pictures as diverse as "Union Pacific" and "Juarez," we are all in this industry engaged in the discovery of America and the Americas. The American newsreels have been fed with a special expeditionary flow of materials from South America, unofficially and without announcement but arranged under State Department auspices.

Plainly enough the world is trying very hard, in a great diversity of fashions, from blandishment and appeasement to saber rattling, to get along with itself. The motion picture is braided deeply in the pattern.

At home, from courts to conferences, by law suits and conventions the motion picture industry of the United States is also trying to make arrangements to get along with itself. And that's only the half of it.

The motion picture is not an isolated gadget invented by Edison. It is a product of human wishes and social forces, much concerned with the map of civilization, or the place where civilization ought to be.

Basically the broader problem of the American motion picture industry today is political, a struggle to maintain a position and status won with the rise of the screen drama here while Europe fought the First World War.

FOR a touch of perspective across today's tangled map of strifes, and causes, consider: 500,000 years ago we began with a flint ax, to use tools, 20,000 years ago to build cities, not so much more than 2,500 years ago the Greeks almost deliberately invented the doctrine of individual human liberty, 1,900 years ago hope of the life eternal for the common man, along with the elect, was born and proclaimed; about 150 years ago the power of stored heat in fuel, which is to say the steam engine, came to supplant metabolism and muscles, freeing serfs and slaves and bringing the industrial revolution;

This Week

Things to Come

Gathered imposingly in one place the product announcements for 1939-40 by eight of the ten large distributors indicate facts and trends pointing to a banner year for production and consequently for exhibition. Study of the compilation shows importantly that Class "A" pictures will be greater in number than ever before, this class benefitting from substantial increases in budgets; that biographies, war and adventure stories will predominate; that political themes will be important numerically among the 72 different types of stories to be handled.

More extensive analysis of the product futures and detailed listings of each company's offerings start on page 13.

Wrong Number

The Federal Communications Commission will moderate extensively the proposed Walker report to Congress on the telephone industry, which report had included a recommendation for a 25 per cent cut in rates.

The original investigation by the FCC, and the report and recommendation, went thoroughly into the company's participation in motion picture and motion picture equipment fields.

The report, which has been conducted over a two year period at a cost of $1,500,000, may not get to the Capitol this session. At least two of the seven Commissioners were known to oppose Walker's recommendations for strict governmental regulation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler has said that because of the lack of time he probably would not try to put through legislation at this session of Congress to overhaul the FCC.

Lincoln and Films

It was young Mr. Lincoln's Day in Springfield, Illinois, from noon to midnight on Decoration Day, for the premiere of the Twentieth Century-Fox picture built upon Lincoln's rise to eminence.

Tradewise, wrote Terry Ramsaye from the Illinois capital, the occasion was a "spectacularly competent demonstration of the new publicity technique of making the introduction of a motion picture into a national event, synchronized with national advertising campaigns and exploitation programs."

Mr. Ramsaye's article is on page 26. His review of "Young Mr. Lincoln" appears on page 36. Pictures on page 11.

Contempt Citation

George Browne, IATSE president, four of his aides and J. W. Buzzell, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council of the American Federation of Labor, were ordered on Thursday to show cause June 13th why they should not be held in contempt of court on charges of violation of a preliminary injunction prohibiting them from splitting up Studio Technicians Local 37 and revoking its charter.

After a conference with A. Brigham Rose, attorney for the deposed officers of the local, and George Breslin, attorney for the International, E. A. Wilson, judge of the Superior Court, signed the contempt citation naming Mr. Browne, Mr. Buzzell, H. V. Smith, John Gatelee, Frank Strickling and Floyd M. Billingsley, the latter an International vice-president.

The injunction was issued pending the outcome of present court actions, testimony in which is reported on page 56, together with other developments.

Copyright Change

The Shotwell Committee on Copyright, which, including representatives of the film and other industries, was expected to have its hearings on proposed changes in the Copyright Act of 1909 completed by the end of the week.

The completed draft incorporating the changes felt necessary to bring the copyright laws up to date is scheduled to go before Congress prior to its adjournment.

Exhibitors Meet

Discussion of the proposed trade practice code headed the programs of the several exhibitor meetings held this week and scheduled for the immediate future. The Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association took no definite action on the code but commended the distributors for their efforts in formulating it. The Southeastern Theatre Owners Association heard an analysis of the proposals by Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA. Meetings next week include the North and South Carolina Theatre Owners, the Oklahoma Motion Picture Theatre Owners and the Allied Theatre Owners of Oklahoma.

The meetings are reported on page 33.

Hope in Britain

Having presented a vigorous and united protest, complete with facts and figures, to the Chancellor of the Exchequer arguing that proposed new film excise tax and duties on films would mean ruin for large sections of the trade, the British industry sat back this week and waited for a final answer from the Government.

a hundred years ago came the railroad; then the telegraph; the Atlantic cable; the telephone, with its implications of sound for the screen; fifty years ago the dawn of the motion picture; about twenty years ago the radio; a dozen years ago the sound picture, and now comes television, still around the corner and making faces at us, across space and time. Trans-Atlantic mails started to fly last week.

It has been said that Greece, where liberty was born, afforded special opportunity because the peninsula was so divided by mountains and valleys. Those barriers, it has been held, gave human liberty a chance, whereas the prior civilizations rose under sweeping totalitarian rules and dictator despots in the broad regions of the Euphrates, the plains of Asia and the great Nile region. The notion has its merits. Communication then was by foot and horse.

Clearly enough the motion picture and the radio level mountains, leap the rivers, bridge the oceans—seeking the while to get along with all the peoples who seek also to get along with each other.

If, now and then, the business seems dreadfully complexed by such considerations as zoning and protection, the right to buy, and such, they pertain only to transient relations, to be affected in the large by the larger considerations.

The showman, more than all others, lives day to day. But where he is going and how, is a part of the march that leads to tomorrow. The march began as a loiter and now it is a quick step. The motion picture maybe can help to keep it from becoming a goosestep.

A SLIGHTLY cynical observer turned over the amusement page of the New York Times the other day to observe in the Cameo Theatre advertisement: "Amkino presents, 'New Horizon,' Maxim and Natasha meet again in the seething days when the Soviet Union emerged from a dream to a reality."

"So," the reader remarked, "it would appear that the Soviet and Amkino are going in rather for the 'boy meets girl' sort of thing. How bourgeois!"

Arbitration, Code

Months of effort expended by the majors in behalf of a program of self-regulation brought forth last Thursday a form of arbitration agreement for adjudicating distribution-exhibition disputes. The agreement was sent to exhibitors for acceptance, and will be followed by the text of the full program itself.

Ed. Kuykendall, MPTOA head, told exhibitor conventions that all "should enter wholeheartedly in the program."

Allied's attitude will be made known at its Minneapolis convention June 13th.

William F. Rodgers announced completion of the arbitration agreement at the open forum Thursday of New York Allied, Max Cohen, president. The convention indorsed national Allied's policies but urged continued efforts toward a trade program.

Colonel H. A. Cole, national Allied president, reviewed Allied's sponsorship of legislation and litigation and the Government suits.

Abram Myers pleaded for an "open mind" on trade problems.

Fortune magazine reported 51 per cent in a poll voted "No" to Federal supervision, 32 per cent "Yes," 17 per cent noncommittal.

Text of the arbitration agreement starts on page 48 and a report on its presentation, on page 41.

"Open War"

Open war is on in California between Warner Bros. and Fox West Coast Theatres over double billing on flat rental. Gradwell Sears, Warner sales manager, declared in Los Angeles Wednesday his company will not sell its 1939-40 product to the circuit, largest in the state, but, instead, it will be offered to independent theatres, with "the conviction," said Mr. Sears, "that Warner Brothers would get a better return selling away from Fox West Coast."

Mr. Sears added: "A policy which makes possible the dual presentation of two attractions such as 'Dodge City' and 'Alexander Graham Bell,' or 'Wuthering Heights' and 'Three Smart Girls Grow Up' is definitely destructive as far as both the public and the producers are concerned.

"The double feature policy, as practiced by Fox West Coast reduces the possibility of film rentals on deserving pictures, freezing the possibility of returns to such an extent that support of this practice makes it impossible to produce fine, big budgeted productions for a fair return.

"Certainly this policy stifles incentive on the part of producers who are just as anxious to make great box office attractions as exhibitors are to play them. After careful examination of incomes and performance of Fox West Coast over a period of years we have reached the conclusion that the handling of our product by this circuit does not contribute to our progress, and that its policy of double billing on flat rental engagements offers no opportunity for expanded income regardless of the merit of the production.

"For that reason and no other Warners has decided to offer its 1939-40 product to independent exhibitors."

Charles P. Skouras, head of Fox West Coast Theatres, said in Los Angeles Thursday night that any statement concerning the Warner Bros. situation would have to come from Spyros Skouras, president of National Theatres.

Spyros Skouras could not be reached for a statement late Thursday night at his home in Mamaroneck, N. Y.

For "Culture"

Every American individual and company operating in Japan must comply with the terms of the new control measures instituted by the Imperial Government or face the prospect of jail sentences or fines. With this development the "outlook for American motion pictures in Japan is far from bright," say distributors.

The new law, detailed translation of which has just been received by the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, requires each person and organization to obtain an operating permit, and that includes players. Producers must submit explanations of subject matter for approval before filming. Exhibitors also are subject to the decrees.

Details are on page 27.

Picture Pioneers

A new type of club, to be known as Picture Pioneers, with membership limited to men who have been a part of the motion picture industry for 25 years or more, is being launched by Jack Cohn, of Columbia Pictures. The organization, which will charge no dues, will be primarily for the purpose of meeting over the luncheon or dinner table two or three times a year, "swapping reminiscences and promoting good fellowship."

Mr. Cohn, who started his motion picture career in 1908, sent a letter descriptive of the aims of the projected organization to 100 in the industry, and reports warm response.

Because the phrase "He's in conference" has come to be a byword in motion pictures, Mr. Cohn plans that the get-togethers be known as "conferences," rather than meetings. The organization will be an informal and elastic one, with "conferences" held at no stipulated time, but as the spirit moves. It will be started soon with a "beefsteak."

Murphy on Competition

U. S. Attorney General Frank Murphy, in Los Angeles on Department of Justice business, queried as to whether the industry's new trade practice program would obviate further prosecution of the Government's New York anti-trust suit against the majors, said: "We are doing the most in our power to do the equitable thing."

"In all such matters," he added, "we are attempting to be constructive.'"

BIOGRAPHIES, WAR THEMES HIGHLIGHT 1940 PRODUCT

Action and Adventure Will Lead All in Numbers and Attention; Many Musicals; "Political" Subjects Tapped

Original Stories Provide 60% of Material for New Season

Original material leads the seven sources of 1939-40 screen material in the minimum of 400 and maximum of 412 pictures already announced by eight of the ten leading producers. An analysis of the product announced to date shows 212 originals, accounting for 60 per cent of the total, with books numbering 82 and plays 31 out of the total of 355 films definitely announced for the coming season.

	Originals	Books	Plays	Magazine Stories	Cartoon Strips	Radio Scripts	Newspaper Serials

Warner Brothers.....	22	8	4	2	..	..	..
TOTALS	212	82	31	20	7	2	1

In some cases, there is an overlapping, when the material was both a book and a play. This happened in two cases with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and in one case with United Artists.

The season 1939-1940 will bring to the screens of the country one of the widest diversifications of motion picture subject matter and promises of some of the strongest and most heavily budgeted productions ever offered by the producers of Hollywood to their exhibitor customers for the customers of the exhibitors.

A study of the large distributors' bulk product commitments, with details from all but two companies in hand, shows these facts:

Class "A" pictures promised will be greater in number than ever before, preseasonal estimates listing 250, and will benefit most from the Hollywood-estimated investment increase of from $23,000,000 to $30,000,000 on a $176,000,000 total budget.

Biographies and war or "conquest" productions occupy a new and important position; "adventure" stories will top all others.

There will be very few "costumes," very few "spectacles," many musicals but not in the over-lavish manner of a few years ago.

Major companies alone will supply 61 westerns.

"Political" themes will be important, numerically, for the first time, among the 72 different types of subject matter going into 1940 features.

Original stories will dominate as a source of supply as never before.

"Psychological" studies will be given special attention.

Eight of the ten large companies have committed themselves to a minimum of 400 and a maximum of 412 features, only a few more or less than last year. (Paramount and RKO product plans still are to come.) Of the 400 to 412, fewer than 50 features have not been identified as to story to be used or talent assignments, an unusually small number for advance announcements. Pictures promised include: Columbia, 58 (including 16 westerns); MGM, 44 to 52; Monogram, 54 (including 16 westerns, eight western reissues); Republic, 50 (including 24 westerns); United Artists, 28 to 32; Universal, 58 (including 14 westerns); Twentieth Century-Fox, 52, and Warners, 48.

Adventure Stories Lead

Of the pictures identified to date, adventure stories by far exceed in number any other group as subject source, as shown in the company-by-company designations of story source and theme type appearing in the charts accompanying this article.

There will be generous sprinklings of straight comedy, mystery stories, historical types, aviation stories, and a not too generous sprinkling of socalled "crime" productions. Public opinion has been quite militant against crime stories in recent years, due largely to supposed potential effects on children.

The "family" type series, proved so popular in the present season, will be continued in larger numbers. Again exhibitors will have at their disposal the "Blondie" series, the "Jones Family" and "Hardy Family" series, the "Higgins Family" and others. At least three more of this type are planned, including "American Newlyweds." Another type that will be pointed up strongly for the second season will be the "Father and Son" subjects.

"Old Standbys," Too

Investigation of the company analyses in adjoining pages discloses heaping portions of the "old standbys": straight romance, romance with music, adventure romance and romantic comedy; domestic farces and domestic tragedies; "human interest" types of all kinds and description.

There will be, besides, psychological mysteries, sea adventures, stories on journalism, jungle adventures, college stories, prehistoric themes and travel yarns, tropicals and topicals, imaginative fantasies, sociological studies, stories on governmental diplomacy, hospital life, army and navy life, life on the police force, life in prison, in military academies, in the secret service and in aviation, city life, small town life and Hollywood life, spy stories, sports stories, chain gangs, medicine, and even more stories on Hollywood itself "behind the scenes."

War and Conquest

Productions which are out and out war or conquest stories, or have such subjects for thematic background, constitute approximately one-third of the total number of pictures that will be released before the close of the present production season and during the 1939-40 period.

While the Paramount and RKO-Radio new season rosters of pictures have not been completed, the former has "Beau Geste" and "Geronimo" ready for release and the latter has just started "Nurse Edith Cavell." It is reasonable to assume that, keeping step with the trend, both companies will announce respectable quotas of war and conquest films.

Announcements show that Columbia has four films definitely of the type on its program in "Arizona," "Tree Of Liberty," "The Cavalier Of Tennessee" and "The Pioneers."

In the David Selznick group, everybody must know that David O. Selznick's "Gone with the Wind" has a war background. So, United Artists too, will have Alexander Korda's "Sinner," and Samuel Goldwyn's "The Real Glory" is a story of war and conquest in the Philippines. The background of Walter Wanger's forthcoming "My Personal Life" is the recent Spanish Revolution. Two future Edward Small productions, "Quantrill, The Raider" and "Kit Carson, Avenger," have war or conquest backgrounds. Naval strife is the background of Hal Roach's "Captain Caution."

American History Prominent

Five subjects on the MGM future program are definitely war or conquest: "Northwest Passage," "Thunder Afloat," "War Eagles," "Soldiers Three" and "Journey's End." The same number is noted in the 20th Century-Fox 1939-40 schedule. From this studio will come "Drums Along The Mohawk," "Red Cross Nurse," "20,000 Men A Year," "The Khyber Rifles" and "Mark of Zorro."

Warners have placed three war and conquest projects on the program, "Eyes Of The Army," "The Story Of John Paul Jones" and "The Tanks Are Coming." It may be anticipated that this trio will be expanded.

Stories of the war-conquest brand for Republic are: "The Dark Command," "Storm over India," "Bengal Border Patrol" and "Here Come the Marines."

Paramount's future production includes "Disputed Passage," which has to do with the present Sino-Japanese conflict, while both "Dr. Cyclops" and "The Light That Failed" have martial backgrounds.

Biographies

Two other developments stand out as would a carboy of Ozark Mountain moonshine on the speaker's table at a meeting of prohibitionists. There are more biographies (historicals by nature) than in an encyclopedia. Half of the remainder of "showcase" and special productions will be musicals. Anticipating that the major companies will make some 250 "A" productions, this matter of musicals reveals how changing times change conditions.

It is not so long ago, until about the time of "The Story of Louis Pasteur," that biographies were taboo. Too, it's only a short while ago that musicals were so completely taboo that, other than for scoring purposes, studios practically abolished their music departments.

One need only examine the product announcements, remembering that Paramount and RKO-Radio's have not yet been made, to note the number of both kinds of pictures included. Several of both either are presently in work or will be shortly and, unless all signs are erroneous, all so announced will eventually be made. In the field of present musicals Bing Crosby will croon again in "The Star Maker" and Rudy Vallee has come back to croon in "Second Fiddle." Pictures have been set for such singing stars as Don Ameche, Alice Faye, Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey and Miliza Korjus. Classical exponent Jascha Heifetz will vie for favor with such disciples of swing as Gene Krupa, Phil Harris and Matty Malneck. Production again has realized that good musicals are good box office.

In the biographical trend, careers to be treated will range from the lives of people long dead to others still living. Thus, no matter what the motive, producers have discovered that what nobody wanted is now in style.

New Season Work

Gradually productions destined for release on the 1939-40 programs are filtering into work. Practically all studios are in the stretch run of pictures which were designated for the present season. Thus the work finished this week as well as that which will be completed during the next several will round out the announcements made last summer. In one or two cases, productions that were started several weeks ago and were scheduled for release around this date have run into difficulties of one kind or another that will force them over into the new season. On the whole, however, studios are in better shape to start the new year with clearer decks than has been the case for some time past.

Three pictures were started at MGM. The Marx Brothers, Kenny Baker, Florence Rice, Margaret Dumont, James Burke, John Dilson, Irving Bacon, Nat Pendleton and Lee Patrick will be seen in "A Day at the Circus." Wallace Beery heads the cast of "Thunder Afloat" which also will present Chester Morris, Virginia Grey, Regis Toomey, John Qualen, Carl Esmond and Jonathan Hale. "Miracles For Sale" will feature Robert Young and Florence Rice with Frank Craven, Virginia Grey, Henry Hull, Lee Bowman and Suzanne Kaaren.

On the following page begins a detailed tabulation of titles of product for the new season as announced by those companies which have had their sales conventions. Productions of Paramount and RKO-Radio are still to be made known at their forthcoming meetings this month.

Besides the titles is given information as to the source of the story material and the type of subject. The titles are in the order given by the companies.

"The Return of Dr. X" was started at Warners. Humphrey Bogart, Lya Lys, Wayne Morris, Rosemary Lane, Dennis Morgan, John Litel, Huntz Hall and Charles Wilson are the leading players. At RKO-Radio "My Fifth Avenue Girl" went before the cameras. Ginger Rogers and James Ellison are the stars and the cast includes Walter Connolly, Verree Teasdale, Franklyn Pangborn, Ferike Boros, Kathryn Holm and Louis Calhern.

At Monogram work began on "Stunt Pilot", a "Tailspin Tommy" number. John Trent, Marjorie Reynolds, Milburn Stone, George Meeker and Pat O'Malley are principals.

Universal started "I Stole A Million" in which George Raft, Claire Trevor, Henry Armetta, George Chandler and Victor Jory will be featured. "Here I Am A Stranger" is the 20th Century-Fox contribution to the new work. Richard Green, Richard Dix, Nancy Kelly and Gladys George are the leading names.

For Columbia release, Larry Darmour started "Criminal at Large." It will feature Jack Holt, Patricia Ellis and Guinn Williams.

Completed Subjects

Two of the completed pictures are credited to Republic. "Mickey The Kid" will present Bruce Cabot, Ralph Byrd, Tommy Ryan, Zasu Pitts, Jessie Ralph and Robert Elliott. John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Raymond Hatton, Adele Pearce, Leroy Mason and Donald Barry will be seen in "Wyoming Outlaws."

Columbia also completed a pair. "A Woman Is The Judge" will present Rochelle Hudson, Otto Krueger, Frieda Inescort, Gordon Oliver, Mayo Methot and Walter Fenner. Charles Starrett and Iris Meredith are the stars of "Mounted Police No. 2 which will also offer the Sons of Pioneers, Lane Chandler, Stanley Brown, Kenneth McDonald, Eddie Cobb, Dick Curtis and others.

"Night Work" finished up at Paramount. The cast includes Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland, Donald O'Connor, John Hartley, Joyce Mathews, Billy Lee and Clem Bevans. "Torchy—Dead Or Alive" moved on to the cutting rooms at Warners. Jane Wyman and Allen Jenkins are the new character principals and Tom Kennedy, Sheila Bromley, Joe Cunningham, Bruce MacFarlane and Frank Shannon also will be seen.

With Robert Taylor and Hedy Lamarr starred, MGM finished "Lady Of The Tropics." Joseph Schildkraut, Ernest Cossart, Gloria Franklin, Mary Taylor, Paul Porcasi, Abner Bibberman, Margaret Padula and Grace Hale are in the support.

Two pictures for United Artists are in the completed list. Samuel Goldwyn's "Music School" will feature Jascha Heifetz, Joel McCrea, Walter Brennan, Andrea Leeds, Gene Reynolds, Porter Hall and Tommy Kelly. "Winter Carnival," Walter Wanger production, will feature Ann Sheridan, Richard Carlson, Helen Parrish, Robert Armstrong, James Corner, Joan Brodel, Alan Baldwin, Virginia Gilmore, Marsha Hunt, Robert Allen, Jimmy Butler, Morton Lowry and Cecil Cunningham.

Distributors Bar All Nazi Films

New York distributors of foreign films agreed Thursday to organize with the Non-Sectarian Anti Nazi League in boycotting Nazi films.

At a meeting at the Hotel Astor, Garrison Films, World Pictures, Gallic Film, Lenauer International, Filmarte Theatre, Pax Films and French Cinema Center agreed to insert a clause in their contracts "representing and warranting that the film sold or licensed" did not originate in Germany and that no part of the purchase price and/or royalties thereon shall inure to the present German regime, any citizen of the said regime, or company, or any citizen domiciled elsewhere professing allegiance to the Nazis.

The committee defined Nazi films as any made in Germany made in or bought after the Nazi regime.

The Provincial Police in Montreal Thursday rejected the demands of the German Government for the return of a print of the pro-Nazi film, "Le Merite", seized by Montreal authorities three weeks ago.

Provincial Police Premier Maurice Duplessis told the German Consul that Quebec will block all attempts at subversive propaganda.

Other developments of the week involving the Nazis and motion pictures appear on page 34.

Michigan Cooperative Plans Dropping of Double Bills

Efforts to end double featuring in more than 100 theatres associated with Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, Inc., are under way as a result of evidence that at least 60 per cent of the patrons in the area prefer single features, according to officers of the association, who were in New York this week on a buying and sightseeing trip.

In the group were Fred De Lodder, Jr., president; Carl Buermele, manager; Barney Kilbride, treasurer; William H. Kaplan, Leo Wisper and Charles A. Komer.

Mr. Komer said that Cooperative members are being polled on their attitude toward single features and that if complete accord is attained the entire organization will abandon duals. He said that business in the Michigan territory is off about 40 per cent and that conditions are equally bad throughout the central area.

Harry Tugander, formerly with Paramount News, has been named assistant to Claude Collins, in charge of newsreels and other films at the New York World's Fair.

Chile and Teatro al Dia in World's Fair Tribute to U. S. Film Industry

The Republic of Chile will pay tribute to the American motion picture industry for its contribution to the trade development of that country, on the occasion of a reception to be held on June 16th, from 2 to 6 P.M., in the Chilean Pavilion at the World's Fair in New York with the cooperation of TEATRO AL DÍA, the Quigley Pan-American publication.

His Excellency, the Ambassador of Chile to the United States, Alberto Cabero; the Commissioner General of Chile to the World's Fair, Senator Rodolfo Michel, and the Chilean Consul General in the United States, Anibal Jara Letelier, signed the invitations which are being sent to leading motion picture groups.

Alfonso Merlet, Chilean delegate to the Fair and well-known in motion pictures in Latin America, and H. Albán-Mestanza, editor of TEATRO AL DÍA, are in charge of arrangements.

A special short-wave radio program will be broadcast during the reception through the facilities of Columbia Broadcasting System and its international stations. Leading stations in Chile, Argentina, Peru, Brazil and Uruguay will re-broadcast the program, in the course of which outstanding Latin American stage, screen and radio stars will be introduced.

Special buses will be placed at the disposal of the guests, leaving nine Rockefeller Plaza, where the New York offices of the Chilean Consulate General are located, at 1:30 P.M., next Friday, driving direct to the Chilean Pavilion.

Guests will be given a special Chilean buffet-luncheon, and the motion picture industry will be toasted with native Chilean champagne.

Jury May Decide Fate of "Ecstasy"

The question of whether a New York jury shall view the revised version of "Ecstasy" rests with State Supreme Court Justice Gilbert Schenck, who reserved decision last Friday on the attempt of Eureka Productions, to secure a review of the acts of Motion Picture Director Irwin Esmond and the Board of Regents in refusing to license the picture. It would be the first time in this state that a jury so acted on a film censorship issue.

Last week's court action at Albany is predicated on the rejection, in February, 1938, by Mr. Esmond of the "toned down" picture which first caused a stir in the Customs Office at Washington several years ago and later was banned in New York State by Department of Education officials, who were sustained in their objections by the high courts.

The recent elimination of certain scenes previously objected to and superimposition of a marriage between the male and female leads have not materially changed the viewpoint of the Motion Picture Division that the film is "indecent," "immoral" and "would tend to corrupt morals." The Board of Regents, in April, sustained Mr. Esmond's position in denying an appeal by Eureka.

Henry Pearlman, New York attorney, appeared for Eureka Productions. Mr. Pearlman charged that the state defendants were "prejudiced" in their second rejection of the picture. A request that the court view the picture is being weighed by Justice Schenck.

Charles A. Brind, Jr., Law Director of the Education Department, in opposing Mr. Pearlman's motion, asserted that "Ecstasy" is much the same picture with a few minor eliminations which have not changed the theme. The Appellate Division, Mr. Brind contended, is the proper court to hear the appeal, basing his views on decisions by Supreme Court Justices Francis A. Bergan and Pierce H. Russell in the matter of "The Birth of a Baby" and "Tomorrow's Children."

Also pending is an appeal to the State Court of Appeals on "Remous" and two film cases to be docketed on the Appellate Division's next calendar, "Human Wreckage" and "Animated Diagrams of the Human Body."

Bans "Mad Youth"

Although only a comparatively few deletions are being made in a small number of leading films, the Virginia Division of Motion Picture Censorship is continuing to give no encouragement for the showing of sex pictures in Virginia. "Mad Youth," a Willis Kent production, has been rejected.

Omaha Censoring Continues

Omaha's Dan Butler, re-elected mayor, announced he is going to continue his stiff censorship over films, drama and night life here.

"I'm going to see that we have decent, clean shows and literature in Omaha," he said. "We don't want scavengers, chiselers and gamblers here."

Jack Warner Honored

Jack L. Warner received an award, on Thursday, from the American Institute of Cinematography for "achievement on the screen."

Northwest Film Club's, Seattle, third annual golf tournament will be held the latter part of June at a course yet to be selected. The committee on arrangements includes William Shartin, Roy Peacock, Jack Rosenberg, Mrs. John Hamrick, Mrs. Ben Shearer and Mrs. Guy Navarre.

Foreign Films Gain in Ontario

The treasury department of the Ontario government has reported a substantial increase in the number of films imported from foreign countries in the last fiscal year, apart from those originating in the United States and Great Britain. The total for the 12 months ending March 31 was 102, as compared with 39 foreign films for the previous corresponding period.

It is reported that a few of these pictures were obviously propaganda and 16 of the subjects were revised before approval, with one feature, from Russia, condemned in its entirety. Of the foreign films under review in the 1938-'39 year, 77 were of standard width while 25 were 16 mm.

Motion picture advertising accessories totaling 29,383 were inspected the past year; 156 were condemned and 118 were ordered changed to meet the regulations restricting nudity, gun play and scenes of extreme violence. In the previous year, 152 displays were turned down out of a total of 30,289 and 68 were revised.

Adjourn Without Approving Bills

The Pennsylvania legislature adjourned Tuesday morning, after an all-night session, without having acted finally, on a score of bills affecting the motion picture industry.

Some of the measures were: Repeal of the local option Sunday shows law, which would have resulted in reapplication of the blue laws; a ban of attendance at Sunday shows, by children under 15 years old; admittance tax of one cent on each 25 cents in cost of a theatre admission; display of the flag and singing of national anthem at each motion picture show; stricter regulation of electric devices in theatres; a requirement that a policeman be notified whenever a woman becomes ill in a theatre; employment of as many projectionists as projection booths in a theatre, and requirement that inspectors of such booths have at least ten years' experience as a projectionist; also, a ban on higher admission rates for Sundays and holidays; and a divorcement bill.

The legislature is not expected to meet, in regular session, till 1941. There may be a special session in 1940.

A luncheon meeting of the Amusement Division of the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees was held at the Hotel Edison, New York, Thursday. The sponsoring committee comprising David Bernstein, chairman; Albert Warner, Jack Cohn, Abe Schneider and Barney Balaban, outlined campaign activities. Rabbi Hillel Silver of Cleveland was guest speaker.

Mary Pickford, Buddy Rogers and E. T. Carr, United Artists joint managing director in London, sailed for Europe this week. Murray Silverstone, UA operating head, who had planned to sail, has indefinitely postponed a European trip.

BROADCASTERS DISCLOSE CODE PLAN; SCREEN GUILD SHOW NETS $220,000

Would Bar Dramatized Political Campaigns and Racial Prejudice, Require Presenting Both Sides of Argument

The long-expected voluntary code of self regulation promised by radio broadcasters will ban the dramatization of political campaigns, keep racial prejudice off the air and require the broadcasting of both sides of controversial subjects, it was disclosed this week at the biennial meeting of the National Council of Women in New York's Hotel Commodore.

Into Effect in the Fall

The eight point code, outlined by Edward M. Kirby, director of public relations of the National Association of Broadcasters, will be put into final form next week and submitted for approval at the association's convention in Atlantic City on July 11th and 12th. The code has been in preparation since last December, Mr. Kirby said, by a committee of 11 representatives of radio station operations and of National Broadcasting Company, Columbia Broadcasting System and Mutual Broadcasting System. Neville Miller, president of the broadcasters, is chairman of the code committee, and Mr. Kirby is a member.

The aim of the code, which is expected to go into effect in the fall, is to place the responsibility for "the proper use of radio squarely on the shoulders of the broadcasters."

In addition to covering religious and political presentations, the code covers children's programs, advertising and news broadcasts. Children's programs would be further studied, especially regarding advertising and features "stimulating to the imagination." Educational programs should be made more interesting, and advertising should live up to the Pure Food and Drug Act, it was noted. News broadcasts should be limited to factual reporting, although commentators, when labeled as such, should continue to give editorial opinions.

No Hidden Propaganda

Besides the fact that no hatred or racial prejudice should be allowed on the air, there should be no reprisal, criticism or intimidation of any man because of his religious belief. In public controversy, if two points of view exist, they should be broadcast on the same program. Political candidates should receive equal treatment, and political dramatizations should be eliminated, since they tend to substitute emotional appeal for logic. Also, no propaganda should be cloaked under disingenuous headings; this would include the promotion of products on a safety or education program.

It has been reported that part of the plan calls for the appointment of a "czar" or "enforcer" of the air-wave rules. Part of his job would be interpretation of the code to individual stations, networks, advertisers and others concerned.

David Sarnoff, executive of Radio Corporation of America, in recent testimony before the Federal Communications Commission, remarked: "I would say that the primary purpose of the code is threefold—first, to insure a high grade of public service; second, to minimize the possibility of a government-imposed code, which would lead to censorship ultimately, regardless of what the original objective might be, and third, to improve the standards of broadcasting."

Speaking of the difference between a voluntarily adopted code and one written into legislation, Mr. Sarnoff added: "When you write it into legislation it has the element of compulsion instead of persuasion. Then there is the danger of continuous modification and amendment, while at the same time there is no amendment to conform with the development of the art itself. It becomes a rule lacking flexibility."

CBS MAY GET MORE HOLLYWOOD SHOWS

William B. Lewis, vice-president of Columbia Broadcasting, in charge of programs, disclosed in Hollywood this week that "renewals of contracts by sponsors now presenting Hollywood shows indicate at least a similar number of programs featuring motion picture stars next fall." CBS 1939-40 plans also include a budget increase for sustaining programs emanating from Hollywood, he said.

CBS is now presenting 12 Hollywood programs a week, and it is probable that all 12, and more, will be with CBS in the fall.

The programs are: Amos 'n' Andy, Joe E. Brown, Lum 'n' Abner, Screen Actors Guild series, "It Happened in Hollywood," "Silver Theatre," the Lux "Radio Theatre," "Big Town" with Edward G. Robinson and Claire Trevor, the Dick Powell-Martha Raye series, Jimmie Fidler, Texaco "Star Theatre," and the RKO "Gateway to Hollywood."

New York First In NBC Shows

New York led other origin points of National Broadcasting Company programs, followed by Chicago, San Francisco and Hollywood, in that order, in 1938. This is the same ranking which has prevailed in the past two years.

Prior to 1934, Hollywood did not figure at all as a program origination point, and had 54 program hours in 1934, 184 in 1935, 790 in 1936, 1,402 in 1937 and 1,567 during 1938. New York had 6,974 hours, Chicago 4,366 and San Francisco 3,042 last year.

Hollywood provided eight and two-tenths per cent of all programs broadcast over the NBC networks during the year, with the overall program-hour total for the year 19,091. Sponsored shows consumed 29.6 per cent of the total broadcasting time and sustaining periods 70.4 per cent.

Rockefeller Center Newsreel Club has been formed by Major A. G. Rudd, general manager, to stimulate attendance among the Center's tenants at the newsreel house in the Associate Press Building.

Current Series of CBS Screen Guild Show Will Help to Raise $500,000 for Relief Fund Toward New Home

When the "Screen Guild Show" on the air from Hollywood completes its present series over CBS on Sunday, to return in the fall, a total of $220,000 will have been paid to the Hollywood Motion Picture Relief Fund by the Gulf oil company, sponsor of the broadcasts, toward a new home for aged and indigent picture workers.

Talent's Pay Goes to Fund

Stars, writers, directors and technicians in these programs contribute their services gratis. The broadcast money ordinarily paid to them is turned over to the fund instead, at the rate of $10,000 each week.

Actual construction and purchase of the site will not be undertaken until the fund has reached $500,000. This amount, guaranteeing perpetual upkeep of the home, is assured on completion of the new 1939-40 series, which will add $390,000 to the fund. "Guild Show" contracts, if renewed regularly, will increase the fund to more than $2,000,000.

The probable site will be in San Fernando Valley, near Hollywood. Plans call for a main building surrounded by small bungalows. Hospital sanitarium and dormitory facilities will be housed in the main building. Bungalow units will be named after donors and in memory of deceased leaders of the industry such as: "Marie Dressler Bungalow," for the actress class; "Will Rogers Bungalow" for the actors' unit, "Irving Thalberg Bungalow" for the producers' group, and so on.

535 Cases on Fund Books

The general Relief Fund provides direct help for needy, medical and dental service, a wardrobe department, and an unemployment service. Last March there were 535 cases on the Fund's books. These resulted in direct financial aid to 1,338 persons. Of the 535 cases, 228 were actors, 139 were extras, and 46, directors. In addition the fund's medical and dental service offers free professional attention and hospitalization to those actors who are destitute. Treatment in the city's best hospitals is also available.

This work is financed through the general fund. None of the $220,000 collected from the current Screen Guild radio program is used for general expenses.

Jean Hersholt, president of Fund, and Ralph Morgan, president of Screen Actors Guild, are credited with the original idea of the "Screen Guild Show," which is broadcast over the nationwide Columbia network Sundays from 7:30 to 8:00 p.m. (EDST).

Newsreel House for Chicago

The lease for a 600-seat newsreel theatre has been signed by a group which plans to give Chicago its first next year. The site is the new Capitol Building at Randolph and State Streets. The financial group interested in the house and also in establishing a national newsreel circuit includes Paul Felix Warburg, Angier Biddle Duke, Herbert Scheftel and Edwin J. Reeves. Their first newsreel house is operating in San Francisco.

"YOUNG MR. LINCOLN'S" DAY IN SPRINGFIELD

Function in Sangamon County by 20th Century-Fox Centers Wide Attention on Premiere

by TERRY RAMSAYE

in Springfield, Ill.

By the magic of the screen and the dynamics of showmanship Abraham Lincoln lived again this Decoration Day in Sangamon County, where he began the career that was to make him an immortal.

The occasion was the premiere of "Young Mr. Lincoln," the Twentieth Century-Fox production thus launched on its box office career with a function commanding national attention.

It was Young Mr. Lincoln's Day in Springfield from noon to midnight on Decoration Day, with the arrival from east and west of special trains bearing stars, showmen, celebrities and armies of the people of the press.

From Luncheon to Premiere

The official program began with a luncheon of the Midday Club and ended with the premiere showing at the Fox-Lincoln theatre, while in between were strewn teas, star receptions, excursions to the tomb of Lincoln and to the reconstructed Lincoln village of New Salem. There were bands, cheering thousands in the streets, riots of autograph seekers at every point of vantage, turnouts of civic leaders, clubwomen, politicians and the great big all-American public of this earnest little metropolis of the prairies in the heart of the hot and black soiled corn belt of Illinois.

Tradewise, the occasion was a spectacularly competent demonstration of the new publicity technique of making the introduction of a motion picture into a national event, synchronized with national advertising campaigns and exploitation programs. It is a manner of making a motion picture into news for press and radio, with a plan of "one-shot" coverage, which aims to do across the whole map, at a stroke, what the Broadway run of the days of yore did for the once legitimate stage attractions.

Eleven sequential pages in last week's Motion Picture Herald advertised the coming of the picture to the nation's showmen. Today, the press wires of the land and the Mutual Broadcasting System told the box office customers about it.

Marian Anderson Sings

News values were contributed adroitly, by including in the premiere a program of song by Marian Anderson, who by reason of certain events pertaining to the Daughters of the American Revolution and the attentions of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, has become a national figure and symbol of the race in befriending which Lincoln became known as "The Emancipator."

The radio program at the theatre to which Miss Anderson contributed the air-star values was administered and written by Earl Wingart of the 20th Century organization with a certain journalistic fluency which did not permit the air audience to discover that the requirements of the situation had made it necessary to go on the air without rehearsal. The radio coverage was over the Mutual system and was nationwide save for areas in the Southland, omitted for obvious reasons.

28 "MR. LINCOLN" DATES ARE SET

Pre-release dates for "Young Mr. Lincoln" have been set in 28 key cities by Twentieth Century-Fox. Following the world premiere of the picture at the Fox-Lincoln theatre in Springfield, Ill., on Memorial Day, the picture opened Thursday in Boston, Salt Lake City, Richmond, Va., Baltimore and Atlantic City.

In New York the Roxy shows "Young Mr. Lincoln" Friday, when 13 other cities open. They are Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Louisville, Milwaukee, Miami, Buffalo, Canton, Toledo, Erie, Reading, Wilmington and Norfolk. A week later the picture will play Los Angeles, Portland, San Francisco, Utica, Wheeling, Indianapolis, Providence, Cleveland and Akron.

The premiere was not only a promotional but a commercial occasion, with a capacity seat sale at $3.30 top, bringing to the Fox-Lincoln a record gross box office.

The Illinois State Journal, published in Springfield, issued a special edition of marked editorial sincerity, in presentation and copy, journalistically remarkable in its avoidance of the cliche characteristics typical of special editions.

One of the special guests of the opening was Emanuel Hertz, the New York attorney, who as the Lincolnian expert has written many books and has given to the world the special insight of the Herndon papers, the archives of Lincoln's law partner.

Soil Well Tilled

The ground of this publicity floration had been intensively prepared by a publicity staff working under the direction of Charles E. McCarthy, director of publicity and advertising for Twentieth Century-Fox. The staff in operation included Mr. Wingart, William Chambliss, Rodney Bush, Thomas Robinson and Roger Ferri. Much of the preliminary field work and alignment of local cooperators was handled by Mr. Bush.

At the luncheon function, Judge L. E. Stone, president, presided with so much local patriotism that he insisted events of the kind were familiar indeed to this land-of-Lincoln, and forthwith declared this occasion "phenomenal." It is possible that "phenomenal" may take a place in the nomenclature of the industry alongside of "colossal." The meeting heard from Mayor John Kapp., Jr., and a response in appreciation of the welcome, in behalf of the film corporation by Mr. McCarthy, after which Lowell Thomas introduced the attending stars, who included Binnie Barnes, Alice Brady, Eddie Collins, Cesar Romero and Arleen Whelan. The stars discreetly bowed and remained silent. Mr. McCarthy in appreciating the warmth of the welcome was thoughtful enough to avoid reference to the corn belt weather, which arrived with a record temperature for the big day.

Some 520 persons attended the Midday Club luncheon, a record to be compared only with the war days' attention given to an appearance here of David Lloyd George.

An Autograph Chase

Following the luncheon's formal program, the audience and marginal crowds outside crashed the arrangements to the utter demolition of many tables in a wild pursuit of autographs. The out-of-town guests of the 20th Century-Fox Corporation included:

JAPAN JOINS NAZIS, ITALY ON FILM CONTROL TO ADVANCE ITS 'CULTURE'

Every Company and Person in Film Business in Japan Affected by Decree; United States Position Jeopardized

A U. S. Governmental translation of the new law, made for it by the Okuyama Service, Tokyo, and forwarded from that city by Carl H. Boehringer, assistant U. S. Trade commissioner, to the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce, Washington, states that the law "shall have for its aim the hastening of the qualitative improvement of motion pictures and the promotion of the development . . . with a view to contributing toward the progress of the national culture."

Each person or company operating, or intending to operate in the film business, must obtain a permit from the minister of state, with imperial ordinance determining in all cases the scope of the industry under the decree.

Permits held by persons or companies continue in force when their business is taken over by others.

Players Require Permits

Apparently even actors and actresses and other professionals come under the law, and must have a permit—except those under 14 years of age; and, when any person registered acts so as to "debase" himself, or is recognized to be unfit, the minister of state may suspend his work or cancel his registration.

Producers shall not engage any person who is not registered, except by special permission.

Producers must submit in advance, for approval, explanations of subject matter to be filmed.

The minister of state may specially recommend those pictures considered particularly capable of contributing toward the "progress of the national culture," and may order exhibitors to show such films.

American and other foreign companies distributing in Japan may be regulated at any time "in regard to the kinds and quantities" of foreign-made motion pictures imported into Japan. This also applies to exhibitors in Japan.

May Order Films Shown

Assurance that Japan will be shown in films outside of the country in a favorable light only is intended in Article 13, which, besides ordering the censoring of all films shown in Japan, decrees that no film shall be exported to foreign countries unless it has passed official inspection, and, "the minister of state may restrict or ban the exportation of motion pictures when special circumstances such as require the restriction or ban exist."

"The minister of state may by order cause those persons who are engaged in the business of showing motion pictures to the public to show specified kinds of motion pictures which are considered as beneficial from the standpoint of the national education."

The Government may actually deliver admittedly "enlightenment" or "propaganda" pictures to exhibitors and order them to show them to their audiences, and within a specified period.

SHANGHAI CENSORS PASS AMERICAN FILMS

Recent figures show that 94 per cent of all American films pass Shanghai's censorship board without objection and that the other six per cent are permitted to be shown after minor cuts.

Besides registering and controlling the actions of all persons in exhibition, as in distribution, the Imperial Government may take measures to control the performance hours, screening method, scope of audience and other matters concerning exhibition.

A special Motion Picture Commission shall be created for the purpose of extending "counsel" to the minister of state in regard to the enforcement of the law. Special inspectors shall be created to inspect all branches of the business to ascertain compliance with the law, and these officers will order all persons and companies engaged in the business to submit reports on their enterprise or business.

The long-expected rigid control by Japan over all motion pictures and film activities, including those of American companies in that country, is now fact. Any American individual or film company violating any of the decrees under which the control was established is subject to jailing, fines, restrictions or complete suspension of business by the Imperial Government.

The control established does not necessarily eliminate Japan as a market for Hollywood films, but it certainly does jeopardize their position there, distributors in New York said. The U. S. Department of Commerce Motion Picture Division at Washington said this week that, "because of the trend toward greater government control, the outlook for American motion pictures in Japan is far from bright." Up to the outbreak of the Sino-Japanese War, some 35 per cent of the films shown in Japan were from Hollywood. In 1936, a typical year, 442 Japanese films were shown, 247 Hollywood films and 60 of foreign origin. However, Hollywood began to lose ground with the enactment of the German-Italian-Japanese "cultural" and economic pact, and eventually all Hollywood imports were barred. In October, 1938, principally because of necessity, the ban was lifted and a new plan effected, allowing the entry of 200 American films into Japan during 1939, and the transfer of Yen 3,000,000 of "frozen" funds to the United States through the Yokohama Specie Bank at San Francisco, where such funds are to be held, without interest, for three years, before passing into the hands of the major film companies.

Control of the motion picture by Japan now completes control by and in the tri-cornered German-Italian-Japanese alliance. The Nazis effected control several years ago, and Italy established a Government film monopoly January 1st.

(The New York Times reported by wireless last Friday from Rome that Felice Guarneri, Italian trade minister, had told the Senate that afternoon that the new Government film monopoly has "now victoriously overcome its difficult test." Presumably he was referring to the position in which the Italian industry found itself when all the American distributors withdrew from Italy on January 1st in their refusal to operate under the new Government monopoly.)

Under the new Japanese decree permission of the Government must be obtained in order to engage in any phase of the film industry in that country. Control of films includes not only

HISTORY OF THIS BUSINESS pre-sells ALL-TIME BIG-MONEY PICTURES!

Protests Duals of "A"s at 25c

To the Editor of the Herald

"I am only the owner of a country town 'picher show' and well know my limitations as a correspondent, but I am going to endeavor to express my views on a situation that I believe to be deplorable, and is a menace to the exhibition business.

"Enclosed please find advertisement of the Missouri Theatre in St. Louis, which was taken from yesterday's St. Louis Post Dispatch. What kind of booking is this? I can hardly believe that anybody with any degree of business sense would combine two outstanding top allocation pictures, such as UNION PACIFIC and ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE on a double program and advertise it for 25c. The Missouri is NOT a small neighborhood house, but one of the larger Grand Avenue theatres, playing 'move overs' from the key houses.

"Imagine the reaction of the city patrons when they see this combination advertised on a double bill. Getting close to home, and to my own small situation, you can readily imagine the thoughts of my customers, after having seen my advertisements of UNION PACIFIC, praising it as one of the season's outstanding attractions and then to see it advertised on a double bill with such an elaborate picture as ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE. It has ruined the possibilities of the picture doing a large gross for me, and has cheapened it in the eyes of thousands.

"I fail to understand why any distributor should permit a double bill of this kind. It certainly does not help either the exchange, the theatre playing it (maybe some, but not enough to compensate the damage done to the reputation of the pictures) and I am sure that it does much harm to the subsequent run houses and the country theatres.

"If you think this is worthy of discussion, you are at liberty to use it. Anyway, I would appreciate having your personal views on such so-called theatre management."—A. B. Jefferis, Owner, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo.

Cadman Transferred

R. J. Cadman, former United Artists branch manager in Salt Lake City, has joined the company's Seattle exchange. Tony Hartford is taking Mr. Cadman's place in Salt Lake City.

The Beacon and Bowdoin theatres, Boston, have been sold by the Mullin and Pinansky circuit to Welansky Enterprises. The purchase price was not revealed.

Five year old Michael Gubitosi, son of a Passaic, N. J., blacksmith, has been added to the "Our Gang" troupe. The short subject series is produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Sam Milner, formerly with the Republic exchange in Seattle, has joined the Universal exchange in Los Angeles. He has been replaced in Seattle by Jack Rue of Portland.

Ted Bonnet has succeeded William Hebert as publicity director for Cecil B. DeMille.

SUPER-WESTERN FOR GENE AUTRY

With its cowboy star, Gene Autry—the past two years voted by Motion Picture Herald subscriber showmen the leading western actor—riding a wave of top international box-office popularity, Republic is preparing to feature him in a super-western, supported by a super-budget, which will go into production June 17th.

"In Old Monterey," a historical story of government condemnation of ranching lands in California for army purposes, has been selected as the vehicle. Gerald Geraghty, who wrote the screen play of "Wells Fargo," is preparing the script.

The cast to support Autry will include Smiley Burnette, George Hayes, June Storey, as well as the Hoosier Hotshots, National Barn Dance radio performers. The studio also is angling for other prominent Hollywood picture and radio personalities for the picture. Autry's musical talents will be supported by two cowboy bands, one from the South, the other from the Pacific Coast.

Manager of Philadelphia Orchestra Joins Edington

Alfred Reginald Allen, who, as manager of the Philadelphia Orchestra, presented Leopold Stokowski and Eugene Ormandy to audiences from coast to coast, is resigning to join Harry Eddington of Famous Productions, which is to release through Universal starting in the 1939-'40 season. With the termination of his managership this month Mr. Allen will travel to Hollywood for two months of conferences to determine the public relations policy to be followed by Famous Productions.

Aalberg Representing Council

John Aalberg, sound director of RKO Radio studio and chairman of the Standards Committee of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, has been appointed to represent the Council on the "Sectional Committee on Motion Pictures" of the American Standards Association.

Walsh Promoted

Joseph Walsh has been promoted to be chief assistant to Leon Netter, general manager of the Paramount theatre department under Barney Balaban. Louis Notarius, film buyer, reviewer and statistician under Mr. Netter, has been transferred to the coast studio in an executive position. Mr. Walsh had been assistant to Paul Raibourne, head of the statistical department at the Paramount home office.

British Film at Fair

"Crews Courageous," British documentary film produced by Major J. H. Rutherford, which is localed in the North Sea and is a picturization of the "Drifters" (herring fishermen), is being shown in the British Pavilion at the New York World's Fair.

Doubts Menace From Television

Television is still a long way off, and swing music rapidly is losing radio favor, W. B. Lewis, Columbia Broadcasting System's vice-president in charge of programs, declared this week in Hollywood.

To the rumors that programs originating in eastern cities would supplant hours that for the past few years have been occupied by Hollywood created shows, Mr. Lewis said, "Renewals of contracts by sponsors now presenting Hollywood shows indicate at least a similar number of programs featuring motion picture stars next fall." Further evidence that Hollywood will continue as the leading broadcast center was revealed in Mr. Lewis' statement that Columbia plans an enlarged budget for sustaining features to the full network from local studios. At present, nearly all CBS sustaining features originate in the east.

"Columbia's experiment with television will be confined to New York for the present, and broadcasts from our transmitter on top of the Chrysler Building will start on or about June 15," Mr. Lewis said. "As yet we have made no definite decisions as to the type of material we will use, but it is likely that the transmissions will be confined to sketches and possibly reenactments of topical news events. We have made no bids to motion picture personalities to appear on these programs and until television has demonstrated its commercial worth to the point where advertisers find it worth sponsoring, I don't think that anyone need fear that television will be a menace of any kind to the picture business."

Commenting on program trends, Mr. Lewis expressed the belief that musical features are on the increase and that in this field the sweet type of music is replacing swing. "The success of the Guy Lombardo series and Paul Whitman's show, as contrasted to the decline in popularity of programs built to feature swing, indicates that melody rather than rhythm will be stressed in the future."

While plans for summer sustaining features, which Mr. Lewis is confident will introduce many innovations, are being held up pending decisions of CBS sponsors on renewals of their various shows, Donald W. Thornburgh, CBS vice-president in charge of Coast operations, seconded Mr. Lewis' opinion of radio broadcast ability in Hollywood by announcing that construction of two new 400-seat theatres will start within a month or two.

Davie Leaves MGM

Frank Davie, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer producer, whose contract has until 1940 to run, has asked for and received a release, planning to continue writing with his wife, Tess Schlesinger. He had been assistant to Bernard Hyman.

James Winn, midwest division manager of Grand National and formerly with Warner Brothers, has been named branch manager for Warners in Kansas City. He succeeds William Warner, who has been branch manager for several years.

Ray Frisz, formerly buyer and booker for Schine's Ohio circuit, has joined Cooperative Theatres of Ohio, in Cincinnati, where Harry Bugie, formerly with Warner Brothers, has opened an office for the Milton Mooney Cooperative organization.

L. O. Ringler, formerly Monogram franchise holder at Des Moines and Omaha, has taken over the Sunflower theatre at Peabody, Kan., from W. P. Huston of Wichita.

IT COULD HAPPEN TO YOU!

THE sole purpose of this advertisement is to open your eyes to an opportunity for making some extra money.

The picture, IT COULD HAPPEN TO YOU, based on one of The Saturday Evening Post's best short stories, has entertainment values far beyond its negative cost. It is a "sleeper". . . a surprise hit . . . the kind of down-to-earth show that every customer will tell his neighbors about.

Screened before a typical audience of young men and women, IT COULD HAPPEN TO YOU had them alternately roaring with laughter and on seat's-edge with excitement for its entire length.

A screening at your exchange will convince you that earnest, intelligent effort on your part will more than pay for itself in additional revenue — and will further reward you with a heap of customer good will. 20th's press sheet will be of great help in preparing your campaign.

Pictures like IT COULD HAPPEN TO YOU are rare! Don't let it catch you napping!

PARAMOUNT OWNERS EYE TELEVISION; NEW JURISDICTION DEADLINE IS SET

Circuit Operators Study Key City Territories for Possible Inclusion in Networks; East, West Coast Stations Planned

The inauguration of a study by Paramount theatre operators in key cities of the feasibility of establishing television transmitters in their territories; the setting of June 7th as a "deadline" by Actors' Equity for a decision from the various actors' groups regarding jurisdiction in the television field, and a prediction by New Jersey's Senator Warren Barbour that his Federal bill repealing the 27-year-old ban on the interstate transportation of fight films would be successful, marked the week in television.

Circuit operators affiliated with Paramount in such centers as Chicago, Detroit, Boston, Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas have been asked by Paramount officials to keep abreast of television developments, to survey its practical application to their territories and to consider as an ultimate objective the establishment of transmitters in their key cities.

Paramount officials have said, however, that for the present serious thought had been given only to the erection of stations in New York and Los Angeles. Paramount, through Allen B. Du Mont Television Laboratories, in which Paramount has a 50 per cent interest, has applied for a license from the Federal Communications Commission for a transmitting station in the east, but no action has been taken on the application yet. The Du Mont Laboratories will also make application to the F. C. C. for the right to erect a television transmitter on the coast.

Paramount Officials in New Group

An application has been filed at Sacramento, California, for the incorporation of Television Productions, Inc., with Paul Raburn, executive assistant to Paramount president Barney Balaban, as president. This has been explained by the Paramount studio as an anticipatory measure taken in preparation for whatever need the advance of television may develop. Y. Frank Freeman was listed as vice-president, Edith Shaffer as secretary and Walter B. Cokell as treasurer.

The Du Mont Laboratories has entered into a five-year agreement with the Majestic Radio and Television Corporation, granting the latter a non-exclusive license to make television receivers under all Du Mont patents held now, or those which may be held later. The contract provides that Du Mont, which is now in actual production of television receivers and parts, will continue to manufacture such television sets as Majestic wishes to market under its own name, on a royalty basis starting at five per cent of the net selling price.

The contract also holds that Du Mont may terminate the license if Majestic, or control of it, is sold to the Radio Corporation of America.

LOOSENS RULES FOR LITTLE THEATRES

At the annual meeting of Actors Equity, last Friday in New York, the regular ticket nominated by the nominating committee was elected as follows: third vice-president, Burgess Meredith; elected to the Council for five year terms, John Lorenz, Patricia Collinge, Dudley Digges, Augustin Duncan, Philip Loeb, Muriel Kirkland, Hiram Sherman, Jack Whiting, Mervin Williams and Harold Vermilyea; for a two year term, John Alexander, and for a one year term, George Heller and Thomas Chalmers.

Operations governing Little Theatres have been loosened by Equity, with amendments covering the changes approved by the Screen Actors Guild, the American Guild of Musical Artists and the American Federation of Radio Artists. The new rules permit Little Theatres a seating capacity of 300 instead of 200.

In a report to the 26th annual meeting of Actors' Equity at New York's Hotel Astor last Friday, Philip Loeb, member of Equity council, reported a compromise proposal on television jurisdiction now pending before the board of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America. The board has sent out a resolution urging the grant of immediate jurisdiction to Equity, and then referring the matter to the Reconstruction Committee.

At the Equity meeting, nine members were elected to the Council, an attempt to bring up the question of Sunday showings on the part of William A. Brady was tabled, plans were urged to retain the WPA theatre complement, and the annual financial report, showing that the association fared better than in the previous year, was read.

Fight Film Bill Approved

After a favorable report by a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee, Senator Barbour forecast the enactment of his bill repealing the 27-year ban on the transportation of fight films across state lines. At the recent hearings, leaders in the sporting world told members of the subcommittee that boxing matches would be among television's most popular programs. Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, said that fights would "undoubtedly" be telecast, and that the situation should be clarified before the actual event took place. Jack Dempsey, former world's heavyweight champion, said that the ban on films had cost him a "couple of millions," and that "with television coming in, it is only fair to the public to be able to see fight pictures."

With the 160th running of the English Derby at Epsom Downs, five London theatres showed the event through television, with three houses selling seats at $2.50 apiece and using the Baird screen, which measures 20 by 15 feet. The theatres were described as "jammed" by the event.

Electric Musical Industries has held previews of its large screen television apparatus, and may follow Baird in attempting to enter the American market.

Ian Javal, director of Baird, has said that the demonstration of his company's large screen system will be delayed in New York pending the arrival of a new tube, used in the Derby telecast.

It has been reported from London that a relay link enabling the transmission of Alexandra Palace programs to a wider provincial area is to be set up in the Chilterns —a range of hills in the 30-40-mile limit of London's western and northwestern horizons.

The request of the British Broadcasting Corporation for a supply of American short subjects for television use is being opposed strongly by E. T. Carr, United Artists' joint managing director in England. Mr. Carr, now in New York, said: "I am opposed to giving any aid to television which would make it a stronger competitor for London theatres than it already is." A member of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America television committee, Mr. Carr added that "If any films are made available for television they should be only those that are so old that everyone must have seen them already." He denied knowledge of arrangements by which old Walt Disney subjects were reported to have been made available to the British Broadcasting Corporation by United Artists in London.

Gilbert Seldes, television program director of the Columbia Broadcasting System, said last week that CBS will not be on the air with television until "sometime in midsummer." A setback from the June date originally given as the start, the delay was attributed to a wait for equipment. Mr. Seldes said that the televising of stage and film shows is still somewhat far off.

Addressing the Kansas and Missouri Theatre Owners Association at their convention in Kansas City last week, George Weeks, Monogram sales manager, said that "Television represents a tremendous boon to the entire motion picture industry and the introduction of sound in 1928 will appear insignificant by comparison."

New York Telecast From Schenectady

With the aid of special equipment, including a diamond-shaped antenna 300 feet wide and 600 feet long, General Electric engineers in Schenectady on Sunday succeeded in picking up the complete two-hour television program sent by the National Broadcasting Company from the Empire State Building in New York City. The airline distance between sending station and receiver was 130 miles.

Theoretically television reception is limited by the distance to the horizon, about 50 to 55 miles. A spokesman for the television department of the NBC said that the Schenectady experiment was "interesting, but not important as affecting television as a whole." He said that freak conditions sometimes permitted reception of television programs beyond the theoretical distance, even without special equipment.

SOUTHEAST AND MISSOURI EXHIBITOR UNITS MEET; CAROLINA ON MONDAY

Midwestern Group Commends Companies for Code Efforts, but Declines to Approve Draft; Cassil Is President

Conventions of organized exhibitors were held this week by the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association and the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association.

The Theatre Owners Association of North and South Carolina open their convention on Monday; directors of the Oklahoma Motion Picture Theatre Owners also meet Monday, in preparation for their annual convention of June 26th, and on Tuesday the new Allied Theatre Owners of Oklahoma hold their first general organization session.

W. A. Steffes' national Allied States convention, to be held in Minneapolis starting June 13th, will not have as guest James Roosevelt, vice-president of Samuel Goldwyn, who this week sent word to Minneapolis that he would not be a speaker.

No Code Action by Kansas-Missouri

by KENNETH FORCE

in Kansas City

The outstanding issue of the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association's 21st convention, at the Hotel President, Kansas City, Mo., last Thursday and Friday, was whether the organization should continue its present structure to include independent, circuit, and affiliated circuit exhibition interests, or should revise the organization to include independent exhibitors only.

The issue arose in connection with a general discussion of the new trade practice code, the Government's suit against distributors and producers, and other pending methods of securing relief for exhibitors from "unfair" situations.

Although there was no definite action taken, the majority opinion was that the KMTA should continue to include affiliated, circuit and independent theatres, that the code offered promise of some immediate relief, even though it does not include all that exhibitors want and contains some things they don't want.

Commends Code Efforts

The convention declined officially to approve the code. However, it did pass this resolution, "That the KMTA commends the major companies in attempting to work out a fair trade practice code, and that we urge all the companies to participate and cooperate to bring about an early commencement of the necessary mechanics to facilitate better cooperation within the industry."

O. F. Sullivan, Civic theatre, Wichita, Kans., and Louis Sosna, of the Sosna, Moberly, Mo., opposed the resolution.

"Distributors will use it as Exhibit A in their defense against the government suit," charged Mr. Sullivan.

The resolution was prepared by John Stapel, Rockport, Mo.; Mrs. C. H. Barron, Pratt, Kans., and Jay Means, Kansas City.

Frank Cassil, St. Joseph, Mo., president of the KMTA, and other exhibitors, expressed the belief that independents should accept the code for what it is worth, and get what immediate relief from it they can.

Criticism of the KMTA's policy in fighting the chain store tax bill in Kansas this spring was voiced by Mr. Sullivan. But again Mr. Sullivan and several other independents of the same opinion were in the minority at the convention. The organization will continue, as it has in the past, to leave the question of policy with respect to controversial matters, like the chain store tax, divorcement, etc., up to its board of directors for decision at the time the matters come up.

CONSTRUCTING INDIANA UNIVERSITY THEATRE

Construction of a $1,000,000 auditorium building, completely equipped for dramatics and the dance, concerts and radio, an experimental theatre and instruction in scenic and costume design, has been started at Indiana University.

Made possible by a State grant, the construction of the theatre adds to the trend stimulated by the similar building programs at other universities. At Stanford University the students taxed themselves additional student dues to make possible a building and loan fund for their theatre building, and the University of Wisconsin, where the students did the same thing, is about to open another college theatre building.

The new Dartmouth College theatre, now being planned, is to become the site of a Summer theatre festival under the auspices of the Dramatists Guild and the American National Theatre and Academy.

Edward Kuykendall, president of MPTOA, and H. M. Richey, the director of exhibitor relations for RKO Radio, expressed the conviction that the trade practice code is a step in the right direction and that it will offer immediate and material relief to exhibitors.

Both criticized film companies and selfish exhibitors alike for unfair clearance situations.

The possibility that television will prove a boon to exhibition was suggested by George W. Weeks, general sales manager of Monogram, who spoke at the convention.

Officers of the KMTA for the next year are: Frank Cassil, St. Joseph, Mo., president, and H. F. Strowig, Abilene, Kas., vice-president, both reelected; Fred Meyn, Kansas City, Kas., secretary-treasurer, to succeed George Harttmann, North Kansas City, who declined reelection. In addition to Strowig and Meyn, Kansas directors are Gus Diamond, Salina, Kas., and R. R. Biechele, Kansas City, Kas., the latter reelected. Missouri directors are John Stapel, Rockport, Mo.; Tom Edwards, Eldon, Mo., both reelections; Tom Wilhoit, Plattsburgh, and Mr. Harttmann.

Approximately 100 registered for the convention. Of this number, about 65 were exhibitors.

Southeastern Group Reelects M. C. Moore

by ARTHUR G. IVEY

in Jacksonville

Milton C. Moore, manager of the Riverside theatre in Jacksonville, was elected to head the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association as president for his fourth consecutive term at the closing session of the annual convention, Tuesday, in Jacksonville. This is the first time the president of the group has been elected for four terms. Colonel T. E. Orr, of Albertville, Ala., was named treasurer and Tom Brandon, of Titusville, secretary. Oscar Lam, of Rome, Ga., was reelected to represent the group on the board of MPTOA.

Code Is Discussed

The principal subject of discussion at the business session ending the two-day meeting, was the trade practice code, an analysis of which was made by Mr. Kuykendall, a guest at the convention, who pointed out that it offered a way for those in the industry to solve their own problems without going into the courts or seeking legislation.

Talks were also made by Colonel Orr, and Burton Clark, of the Womecto Theatre group of Miami.

Sees Washington Meddling

A warning against "the growing trend in Washington to meddle and interfere with business," was sounded by Mr. Kuykendall. "There is an appalling lack of understanding regarding the problems of business and as a result, present laws as well as proposed legislation, have big and little business scared to death," he said.

He said that more than 95 per cent of theatre owners are opposed to the Neely bill, because, he said, they realize it is the first "big step" leading to governmental regulation and control.

Roy E. Martin, of Columbus, Ga., operator of a group of theatres, declared that although he had been buying pictures for the past 30 years, he still was "being trimmed with a lot of poor pictures" and overloaded at the end of the year with pictures he had no opportunity of showing.

Sparks Is Host

The film trailer situation was discussed by Richard Kennedy, of Wilby-Kincey, who told of the experiment made by his company in making its own trailers. He stated that the cost was less than one-third.

Oscar Morgan, Eastern sales manager of Paramount, spoke on the relation of producer and exhibitor.

E. J. Sparks, head of Florida State Theatres, was host at a shore dinner at the Copper Kettle, Jacksonville Beach, with Guy A. Kenimer, district supervisor for Florida State, serving in charge of arrangements.

Carolina Meeting Opens Sunday

by D. G. SPENCER

in Charlotte

From 250 to 300 are expected at the semi-annual convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina at their meeting at Ocean Forest hotel, Myrtle Beach, S. C., June 4th-6th.

Mr. Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, is to be on hand to explain to the open meeting Monday morning how the trade practice agreement will apply in negotiating new deals. He will also give a general interpretation of the pact.

Monday afternoon will be closed session for "shop talk," for exhibitors only—whether members of the association or not. Discussions will be led by Boyd Brown, H. E. Buchanan, Roy Rosser, H. R. Berry and Roy Rowe.

Tuesday is play day, with golf and fishing.

TWO OKLAHOMA UNITS TO MEET

The committee on Recreation includes John H. Vickers, chairman, Buster Schnibben and L. C. Sipe.

The reception committee is composed of Ben Strozier, chairman; Boyd Brown, John Yandell, Charles W. Picquet and R. J. Ingram.

Two Oklahoma Units To Hold Meetings

by FREDERIC SCHOFIELD

in Oklahoma City

Five speakers have sent their acceptances to invitations to speak before the annual convention of the Oklahoma Theatre Owners, June 26th and 27th in the Biltmore Hotel, Oklahoma City, according to Morris Loewenstein, president, and operator of the Majestic theatre here in Oklahoma City.

D. R. Milstein, Tulsa, Okla., representative for ASCAP in Oklahoma, will speak on "ASCAP And the Copyright Laws." Miss Bessa Short, Dallas, booker for Interstate circuit, will speak on booking of short subjects; Robert O'Donnell, Dallas, president of the Interstate circuit, will also appear on the program. Paul Short, Dallas, sales manager for National Screen, and Mr. Kuykendall, MPTOA, will be the other speakers.

Oklahoma Allied

The organization committee of the new Allied Theatre Owners of Oklahoma will meet Tuesday in the Biltmore Hotel, Oklahoma City, to further plans for its membership drive for 200 independent exhibitors.

The association will be enlarged to embrace three states and the Texas Panhandle. Letters and circulars have been mailed out to all independent exhibitors in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kansas, and the Texas Panhandle.

The Oklahoma buying pool plan sponsored by independent exhibitors who later became an allied organization and which plan was dropped at that time, has been revived upon demand of independents in Oklahoma.

Cannot be Leased To Nazi Groups

The affixing of the signature of New York's governor, Herbert H. Lehman, to the "anti-Nazi" bill sponsored in the recent legislative session by Republican leaders Speaker Oswald D. Heck, of Schenectady, and Majority Leader Senator Joe R. Hanley, of Perry, will prohibit the renting, leasing or usage of theatre halls and places of public amusement in New York State to groups wearing uniforms similar to those of forces in any foreign country, such as the Nazis' "Bund" here.

The owner of property and manager or proprietor of public amusement halls are specifically charged with the duty of refusing such usage, with a $1,000 fine or jail term or both possible for violations.

An exemption in the bill is granted to the cast of any motion picture production characterizing the officials of a foreign nation. In this way, the new law will not hamper theatres from displaying films which show actors in the dress of armed or diplomatic forces of foreign countries, such as in Warners' "Confessions of a Nazi Spy."

The bill, admittedly aimed at the gathering of Bund groups in theatres and halls such as Madison Square Garden, was passed in the closing hours of the session May 20th, by unanimous vote in both the Assembly and Senate.

HISTORY OF THEATRE TRACED BY MODELS

Models of theatre stages, covering typical designs ranging from the beginning of the Greek theatre to those of modern Broadway and Hollywood will be a feature of the new Yale University Theatrical Museum, it has been announced.

The models, lighted in the style and custom of the originals they represent, will in many cases be mechanically controlled in order that the scene shifting devices of former times may be observed. More than 40 models have already been completed.

Kuhn vs. Warner Suit

The hearing on Fritz Kuhn's application for a temporary injunction pending trial to restrain Warner Brothers Picture Company, Inc., from exhibiting "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" has been adjourned to Friday. The suit is for an injunction and $5,000,000 damages, charging that the picture libels Mr. Kuhn and the German-American Bund.

The Bund leader was arrested last week in Pennsylvania and returned to New York where he was indicted on 12 counts of grand larceny and forgery on charges of stealing $14,548.59 of his organization's funds.

"Confessions of a Nazi Spy," which had been held for action by the British Board of Censors pending the return from sick leave of Lord Tyrrell, president, was passed this week without a single deletion.

The Polish Government has banned all newsreels showing pictures of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini, following demonstrations at Warsaw theatres.

Boris Morros will remake "The Royal Box," which was originally produced in German. The film is said to ridicule dictators. Nat Wachsberger, who was recently made a partner in Boris Morros Productions, will be associate producer.

Joe E. Brown, film comedian, told the House Immigration and Naturalization Committee in Washington this week that it would be a "simple act of humanity" to give 20,000 German refugee children a haven in the United States. Brown pleaded for enactment of a bill to permit additional immigration of children under 14 years of age, provided they would not become public charges.

Professor James H. Sheldon of Boston University was elected chairman of the board of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League at a meeting in the Hotel Astor, New York, this week. Vice-presidents are Mayor Fiorello La Guardia, Bishop Frances J. McConnell, Dr. Harold Rypins, Rabbi Leon Fram, Professor Nelson H. Mead, John Frederick Lewis, Jr., and Dr. S. William Kalb.

Greater Union and Hoyts are United

Merger of the two dominant Australian theatre circuits, Hoyts Theatres and Greater Union Theatres, was completed this week following negotiations in New York by Charles Munro, managing director of Hoyts; Norman Bede-Rydge, managing director of Greater Union, and Spyros Skouras, head of National Theatres. The deal is for 20 years. (Picture of Mr. Munro and Maurice Sloman of Hoyts on page 11.)

The deal merges approximately 145 theatres in the key cities. A new company name will be taken, and a new corporation formed. The theatres operated by Dan Carroll, the Winter Garden in Brisbane and the Prince Edward in Sydney, were expected to be included. Mr. Carroll is also in New York.

Also to be included are General Theatres, a company jointly owned by the two circuits and operating in the key cities; and the Snider-Dean theatres, grouped with National Theatres, which are jointly owned with Hoyts, and included the St. James, Brisbane; the Lyceum, Melbourne; the Mayfair, in Sydney; and two theatres in Tasmania.

In 1932 Hoyts and Greater Union combined in a buying pool which expired in 1937.

Hoyts owns approximately one hundred houses, Greater Union forty.

Mr. Carroll this week said regarding his group of theatres: "It is possible that we may have a working agreement regarding films, in certain situations, as we did previously."

He asserted that the merger of Greater Union with Hoyts would not necessarily include his theatres; that Hoyts had a shareholders' interest in some of his houses, but that that was the extent to which any merger of the other two chains would affect his own, without his consent.

He added: "Nothing that may happen will prejudice our 18-year association with Paramount Pictures."

Further Contributions to Greater New York Fund

Further contributions and pledges collected by the film division of the Greater New York Fund were reported at the meeting this week of group chairmen in the office of J. Robert Rubin, vice-president of Loew's and chairman of the film division of the fund.

Ben S. Moss, chairman of the exhibitors' group, reported cash and pledges of $9,000; Charles Casanave, chairman of the allied and accessory group, reported $3,500 and an additional $1,000 in prospect. Twentieth Century-Fox has contributed $7,500. Consolidated Amusement Enterprises, Inc., headed by Laurence S. Bolognino, contributed $725.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Cowboy Quarterback

(Warner)

Football Comedy

Some of the annual quota of football pictures are full of that "die with pleasure for dear old Alma Mater," others—and this is one of them—are wild satires. Bert Wheeler, returning to the screen, and Marie Wilson are the stars. It will be remembered that in league with his old partner, Robert Woolsey, Wheeler made a very amusing football burlesque, "Hold 'Em Jail," for RKO-Radio years ago, and exhibitors and patrons are well aware that Miss Wilson has been the able half wit of many pictures.

It will be the professional brand of football coming in for the ribbing. The quarterback here plays in a fur coat. There's a romance and that concerns Wheeler and Miss Wilson, a girl who must be boss of everything. Secondary leads will be played by Gloria Dickson and DeWolf Hopper, with Eddie Foy, Jr., another comedian of note, heading the support. Many members of next season's grid squad of the University of Southern California, as well as many professional grid stars, will be seen.

The story was prepared by Fred Niblo, Jr., who has several Columbia and a few Warner picture writing credits. It is being directed by Noel Smith, most of whose pictures have been melodramas, though he made the sport picture, "King of Hockey."

Lady of the Tropics

(MGM)

Romance and Tragedy

Robert Taylor (though married now) and Hedy Lamarr (married again) are still, without any doubt, screen personalties of interest to the girls and lads. Rescue-the-damsel-in-distress is still a quite good theatrical property. When the damsel in distress is an exotic Eurasion and the rescuer is a rich, world-wandering American and the locale is strange and fascinating French Indo-China, that part of the world where Kipling says east meets west, the interest in the doings of this noted pair is apt to become feverish.

The Eurasian wants to get out of the country, but certain men, for a very pointed reason, won't permit her departure. The American falls in love with and marries her, but no quick trip to the land of the free is in store for either. The hero, going broke, is exiled to a job in rubber plantations of the streaming interior. The Eurasion makes a deal to pay the powerful man's price if he, in turn, will help her husband.

Joseph Schildkraut, who was something of a counter nemesis to Miss Lamarr in "Algiers," will be her real menace this time. Others who will have a hand in what goes on are Ernest Gossart, newcomer from New York, Gloria Franklin, Mary Taylor, Paul Porcasi, Abner Biberman, Elsi Cavonna and Grace Hayle.

Sam Zimbalist is producing and Jack Conway directing.

Stunt Pilot

(Monogram)

Aviation Adventure

"Stunt Pilot" will be the second of Monogram's air adventure pictures based on those of Hal Forrest's "Tailspin Tommy," cartoon character. "Mystery Plane" was the first. The same trio of leads. John Trent, Marjorie Reynolds, who also has been in Jackie Cooper's "Streets of New York," and Milburn Stone again will be seen in the roles they created for the screen, as will Jason Robards. Supporting the featured players will be Pat O'Malley; George Meeker, presently in Darmour's "Hidden Power"; Wesley Barry, juvenile star of the silent screen; George Cleveland, outstanding in "Streets of New York"; Johnny Day, Charles Morton, Mary Fields and Buddy Cox. Scott Darling collaborated with Joseph West on the screen play, and George Waggner, who directed "Mystery Plans," is also the "Stunt Pilot" director.

Again thrills in the air and murder mystery melodrama in the clouds and on the ground are the motivating story's backbone.

Release date: June 29, 1939.

Bad Lands

(RKO Radio)

Adventure

RKO Radio's "Bad Lands" will use only male actors. The locale will be a water hole in the Apache Indian country of Arizona and its time about 1875. A quick understanding of the theme's strangely melodramatic character may be gained if one will remember back to "The Lost Patrol."

The occasion for the adventure, an original screen play by Clarence Young, is the trailing of an outlaw. Trapped at a waterhole by an overwhelming force of Indians, the ten men discover a rich mineral deposit. There will be riches for all if they can escape. Only one survives and he is driven mad before rescue.

All the players have been featured recently in popular pictures. Robert Barrat was in "Union Pacific," "Man of Conquest" and "Return of the Cisko Kid"; Addison Richards in "Boys Town"; Noah Beery, Jr., in "Only Angels Have Wings"; Douglas Walton in "The Story of Irene and Vernon Castle"; Paul Hurst played the amazed bartender in "Topper Takes a Trip"; Guinn Williams was in "Dodge City"; Francis MacDonald in "Union Pacific" and "If I were King," and Andy Clyde, Robert Coote and Francis Ford appeared respectively in "It's a Wonderful World," "Gunga Din" and "Stagecoach."

"Bad Lands," a Robert Sisk production, is being directed by Lew Landers, who demonstrated his forte in melodramatic material with such pictures as "Flight from Glory," "Condemned Women" and "Twelve Crowded Hours."

Release date: To be determined.

Way Down South

(RKO Radio - Lesser)

Musical Melodrama

Since he has had the youngster under his wing, Sol Lesser has been looking for the ideal story for Bob Breen. He seems to have found it in "Way Down South." Basically the yarn majors in human interest. It concerns the valiant and successful struggle of an orphan lad to preserve the traditions of his ancestors.

The time of the story is immediately before the Civil War, the main locations an historic old plantation and New Orleans. But the story is only one phase. Music has always been an adjunct of the Lesser-Breen pictures.

Mr. Lesser in earlier features has supplemented the boy's appeal with one or two other "names"; this time he has organized a supporting cast of capable and well-known name players, including Alan Mowbray, Ralph Morgan, Steffi Duna, Clarence Muse, Edwin Maxwell, Stymie Beard, Sally Blane, Robert Greig, Charles Middleton, Lillian Yarbo and the Hall Johnson Choir.

The production is based on an original story by Clarence Muse and Langston Hughes, and is being directed by Bernard Vorhaus, who did "Fisherman's Wharf." Victor Young, long with Paramount, is directing the music and, Hall Johnson, of course, is in personal charge of his own corps of vocalists.

Young Mr. Lincoln

Twentieth Century-Fox

Character Study

An astonishing adventure in showmanship is presented in "Young Mr. Lincoln," revealed at its premiere this Decoration Day evening at Springfield, out where Abraham Lincoln's career began.

The like of this picture in the nature of its story concept has never before been offered outside the art cinemas and never ventured with the greater mass public to which this pretentious and ambitious offering is addressed.

"Young Mr. Lincoln" is sincerely and accurately titled. It is a character study of Lincoln in one special and initial phase of his career, and it is substantially all devoted to the expanded and exhaustive treatment of an episode, a novice lawyer's first murder trial.

In this altogether remarkable production the makers have made the primary assumption that the audience knows the life story of Abe Lincoln and that it will find entertainment in a cross sectional examination of him as a personality in the period in which he was finding himself. On no other presumption might one understand the swift, graphic but unthreaded and almost unplotted references to Ann Rutledge, or the unwoven strands involving Stephen A. Douglas.

It is the picture's presumption that the spectator really knows all about Lincoln, and to a degree of knowing that will contribute to the implied dramatic intensity of the phases so effectively sketched under John Ford's most artful direction.

To the public not so interested in the Lincoln tradition the picture will present a pioneer story of a murder trial in the backwoods, not remarkable for suspense but richly laden with sentimental concerns, some excitement and a surprise climax.

Henry Fonda in the title role has by his performance decidedly added to his laurels and enhanced his importance to the picture stage. It may also be observed that Alice Brady in the role of Abigail Clay, mother of the boys accused of murder, develops all of the sympathetic possibilities of a considerable part.

In this picture we are given a glimpse of Mary Todd, without, however, elaboration to give her appearance and lines significance save as one has prior and detailed knowledge of her part in the life of Lincoln.

In this production one can see John Ford, director, pursuing certain specially artful aspects of his technique which began to be the more definitely discovered and proclaimed with his making of "The Informer." Here again is marked stylization, adroit symbolization, and despite the homely homespun nature of the character sketch which this picture is, there persists an undertone of sophistication. It is to be expected that that school of criticism which especially enjoys the esoteric will also have a very special enthusiasm for this latest expression of the Ford technique of direction.

While it chances that it will not be practical for many exhibitors to present this Lincoln picture along with six thousand dollars worth of songs and personal appearance of the now celebrated Marian Anderson, as was had at the premiere, there is considerable suggestion value in the idea of so programing the presentation as to give the picture special setting.

The admirably managed presentation at the Fox-Lincoln theatre in Springfield was marked by its high degree of dignity, completely in accord and tune with the day's imposing program of events honoring the memories of Lincoln and the traditions of his Illinois.

The showman happily will find in the picture abundant suggestion of exploitation treatments, and production of a calibre and quality entitling him to seek the most distinguished support and interest from cultural and educational groups in his community.

It is to be recorded with proper credit and appreciation of their contributions that Darryl Zanuck, producer in charge, had as his associate Kenneth Macgowan and that the incisively and remarkably sharp cut story and screen play came from the hand of Lamar Trotti.

The Springfield premiere was the final gala occasion of the abundant and eventful program that filled this greatest of Lincoln days in Mr. Lincoln's own home town.—TERRY RAMSAYE, in Springfield.

S.O.S. Tidal Wave

(Republic)

Imaginative Melodrama

The time setting of this melodrama is the day when television newsreel reporting shall have become as much a part of daily routine as radio news reporting is now. The hero is a sort of television Winchell whose on-the-spot reporting of the news while it's happening stops traffic and general activity while the populace crowds around receiving sets on street corners, in offices, stores and homes, to see and hear what's going on.

The villain of the piece is a gangster whose mayoral candidate is going to lose out at the polls unless he can stop the voting before bad news about him gets around. He stops it by taking over a television station and sending out as on-the-spot news coverage synthetic films showing New York razed by a tidal wave purportedly continuing its sweep inland.

This highly imaginative but melodramatically plausible sequence provides a thrilling finish to an otherwise commonplace story about crime and politics. It is strikingly produced and stimulating both as entertainment of the moment and as something to think about afterward. It is clearly the sales point of the attraction.

James Webb wrote the story upon which Maxwell Shane and Gordon Kahn based their screen play. Armand Schaefer produced and John H. Auer directed. Ralph Byrd plays the television reporter, a little stiffly, and Frank Jenks gives comedy relief.

Undercover Doctor

(Paramount)

Crime Melodrama

The second feature to be adapted from factual records contained in J. Edgar Hoover's book, "Persons in Hiding," "Undercover Doctor," though robbed by time of topical significance, nevertheless is true to life melodrama. The subject this time concerns renegade doctors, and as the story traces the brief but sensational career of "Dr. Bartley Morgan," a vivid insight is given into the lives of those unethical physicians who seek quick ways to wealth by treating wounded gangsters, failing to report their cases and otherwise shielding criminals.

Bare of any considerable comedy content, while the love interest is substantial, the picture features J. Carrol Naish in a convincing role as the title character and gives him the capable support of Janice Logan, Lloyd Nolan, Broderick Crawford, Richard Carle, Raymond Hatton, Heather Angel, Clem Bevans and a dozen others.

The story was intelligently written from Mr. Hoover's recording by Horace McCoy and William R. Lipman, and produced and directed by Edward T. Lowe and Louis King. The story builds interest at the start, makes good use of suspense and is anti-climaxed by a roaring G-Man raid on a gangster hideout.

Highjacked into performing an operation on a minor gangster, "Dr. Morgan" finds that ensuing payoffs received from mobster "Krator" enable him to establish a lucrative and respectable practice. Holding "Krator's" mob in fear, "Morgan" plans to marry socialite "Cynthia." When a young nurse, "Margaret," feels he is tossing a promising career away and "Morgan" becomes further involved with criminals, she tips the G-Men off to the clue that leads to "Krator's" arrest as "Morgan" prepares to face the court.

While the main theme is being developed the action includes two or three shooting holdups and demonstrates how G-Men take full advantage of most minute clues in tracking down their quarry. Some details parallel events in the lives of Dillinger and other notorious criminals; the raid on the hideout is a duplication of a similar incident which made headlines several years ago.

Mystery Melodrama

The approximately twenty previous "Chans" not only have established the patron market but have sounded the direct keynote for exploitation. Here there is a more complicated mystery story than usual, with the standard complement of comedy and romance, while Sidney Toler, after a couple of trial runs, ably demonstrates his ability to fill the late Warner Oland's shoes.

Complications, all as baffling as they are suspenseful, come thick and fast in this story. Death strikes speedily and mysteriously in Reno. The woman accused is the one who planned to marry the mate of the deceased. A rustic sheriff and the over-ambitious number two son, "James," snarl things to add to the fun originally generated by Eddie Collins. Then "Chan" settles down to finding the one guilty culprit out of half or dozen more suspects, each of whom had possible motives.

The basic story is quite a bit more substantial than those used previously in the series and the quality of production support is an improvement. Also the strength of the supporting cast is of higher caliber and Norman Foster's directing technique is sharper and surer. The story is much more sophisticated than has been the general rule, nevertheless the production has appeal for juvenile audiences.

The prestige already accruing to this oldest of all series pictures is the most natural showmanship value upon which to capitalize.

Previewed in the Uptown Theatre, Hollywood. The audience, long familiar with the exploits of "Chan," nevertheless found this show worthy of its applause.—G. M.

Home from Home

(British Lion)

Comedy

An uncanny understanding of the simple comedy tastes of the British masses is evident at once in this newest vehicle for the comfortable humours of the Yorkshire droll Sandy Powell, fifth in MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S Poll for 1938-39. Powell's provincial and urban following, immense as it is, increases film by film, directly follows the vogue of his gramophone records and the success of his radio and vaudeville appearances. British Lion, to which Powell is under contract, and the director Herbert Smith, mould the comedian's films to lines which bluntly ignore the more discriminating minority, aim straight for the simple tastes of the masses. "Home from Home," thanks to this attitude and thanks no less to the very agreeable and naive personality of Powell, has a constant ripple of laughter throughout, and will leave the customers with a feeling of repletion and full value for the money expended.

Few other personalities could have made such a success of a deliberately artless story like this, which is no more than the tale of Powell's dismissal from a jail he finds so comfortable and homely, and his efforts to get back there.

Powell sings but two songs, stages a curbstone cabaret by his coffee stall, and registers a burlesque Cossack dance which should stop the show. The dialogue of the comedy is certainly not of the type called "smart," but it packs a simple laugh in every passage.

Powell has solid support from Norma Varden as a patronizing but inoffensive reformer, from Wally Patch as the Cockney coffee stall owner, and others. Jack Harris's cutting, Harold Kind's sound, and the camerawork of George Stretton would shame many a larger studio. Herbert Smith has yet to make a film which is not a box office success here, and there is no indication that "Home from Home" will alter that continuity.

Tarzan Finds a Son

(MGM)

Jungle Melodrama

Tarzan, famed characterization of the fanciful Edgar Rice Burroughs, again is brought to the screen by MGM, this time with a young boy adopted by "Tarzan" and "Jane." "Tarzan Finds a Son" is replete with thrills, and while a Hollywood preview audience thought some of them were overdone, it agreed, at the end, that the film was well worth while.

The picture contains fights between wild beasts, the antics of the trained simian and his kin, a charge of elephants ridden by chimpanzees, an attack by a rhinoceros, as well as the swimming of Johnny Weissmuller, who again plays the role of "Tarzan."

"Tarzan's" mate again is enacted by Maureen O'Sullivan, and the boy is young John Sheffield, whose athletic prowess proves amazing.

Supporting are Ian Hunter, Henry Stephenson, Frieda Inescort, Henry Wilcoxon, Laraine Day and Morton Lowry.

If anything, "Tarzan Finds a Son" is perhaps the best adapted to popular appeal of both young and old of the MGM "Tarzan" series. Exhibitors playing it might do well to remember that it is a "cops 'n' robbers" melodrama laid in the African jungle.

The screenplay of Cyril Hume and the direction of Richard Thorpe take into cognizance the full appeal of all the factors. An infant, sole survivor of a plane crash in the African jungle, is rescued and adopted by "Tarzan" and "Jane." Five years later, a safari enters "Tarzan's" domain seeking possible survivors. Recognizing the lad, two of the members of the party who are the boy's cousins and heirs to a huge estate rightfully belonging to him, plot to return him to England. Going against "Tarzan's" wishes, "Jane" allows them to take the youngster, but the plotting is uncovered as cannibals capture the party. "Tarzan" comes to the rescue with his wild animal friends.

Sam Zimbalist produced the picture, making use of every opportunity for chills, thrills and humor.

Cuando Canta La Ley

(The Singing Charro)

(Faralla-Paramount)

Musical Western, in Spanish

The fourth of the Tito Guizar vehicles which Dario Faralla has produced for Paramount's Spanish market is "Cuando Canta La Ley," musical western. It is an impressive production, opening up a new vista in the ever broadening plans of Paramount and other companies cultivating Latin America and other Spanish speaking markets.

As film entertainment, "Cuando Canta La Ley" contains all the elements which have made pictures of this type popular—sufficient action to please all, daring equestrian feats, a substantial story, competent characterizations, and a number of suitable songs. Tito Guizar has the title role, that of a member of the Mexican secret service seeking a murdering bond thief. Comedy is deftly supplied by Martin Garallaga, an insurance company detective who becomes a "Sancho Panza" to Guzar's "Don Quixote."

Others in the cast are Tana, the love interest; Paul Ellis, Pilar Arcos, Jose Tortosa, Carlos Ruffino, Carlos Montalban, Raoul Lechuga, Jose Pena Pepet and Arroyito.

Faralla has given the picture a notable investiture. Richard Harlan, who directed his other productions, guided this one also, and Enrique Uhthoff wrote the Spanish screenplay. Guizar and Nenette Noriega wrote the five songs, "El Loco," "Rio Grande," Por Tus Ojos," "Huapango" and "Marcha."

"Alberto" and "Adobe" are hired by "Maria Luisa Pineda" to work on her huge ranch. Visiting her comes "Eduardo," suspected of murder. After a plot by "Montoya" to kill "Alberto," the secret service operative follows "Eduardo" and discovers the cache of stolen bonds, only to engage in a gun battle with "Montoya," the ranch foreman, and his henchmen who have come to "Eduardo's" aid. The criminal surrenders and "Alberto" is free to woo "Maria Luisa."

Racketeers of the Range

(RKO Radio)

Modernized Western

Producer Bert Gilroy, director D. Ross Lederman, story and screen play writers Bernard McConville and Oliver Drake and star George O'Brien, with a supporting cast which features Marjorie Reynolds, Chill Wills, Gay Seabrook, Robert Fiske and Monte Montague, stirred a lot of new stuff into the formula western recipe to make "Racketeers of the Range" an entertaining and exploitable outdoor action picture. Some of the things that happen are highly imaginative, but it must be remembered that the picture has been produced for a definite market. The love interest, a sort of taming of the shew affair, is interesting, and the comedy and musical interludes serve.

Modern big business racketeers, led by "Whitlock," who flimflammed "Helen," packing house owner, into joining them, use motor trucks to rustle cows. They have the ranchers at their mercy until "Barney" moves in. The ranchers have to be convinced that he has the right idea, "Helen" has to be shown the light, and the "Whitlock-Larkin" mob has to be walloped several times before the lone cowboy triumphs. This episode is full of hair-raising action aboard a cattle train, reminiscent of Dick Talmadge, Fred Thomson and Harold Lloyd in their palmiest days.

Point of View

(Spectator-Denning)

British Only

The idea inspiring this new venture is an ambitious one but probably commercial. It is to posit by screen and microphone the more popular and controversial topics of the day in Britain, to state a case for and against, and leave the audience to make up its own mind. The subjects are such as "Should Woman Make Up," "Ought We Grow Our Own Food." Opening with a suggestion of stormy debate, presided over by the debonair producer, each film melts into a pictorial and oral consideration of both sides. Camera work and editorial treatment are excellent. Some war sequences and naval passages have a punch all their own. The producer, Ivan Scott, has a good box office idea for Britain and should set them talking and thinking. The exclusively English nature of the subjects discussed and the essentially English flavor of the commentary, however, would seem to remove the series completely from the field of entertainment in the United States.

Paramount Presents Hoagy Carmichael

(Paramount)

Musical Headliner

An orchestral setup for the exploitation of the musical reputation and talent of Hoagy Carmichael, one of Hollywood's foremost tune jugglers, is offered in the Headliner group. Aided by Jack Teagarden, whose fame as a trombone specialist is as widespread as the composition skill of Mr. Carmichael, and with the assistance of Mr. Teagarden's orchestra, a repertory of outstanding Carmichael tunes from previous years is presented, including "Two Sleepy People," "Washboard Blues," "Lazy Bones," "Small Fry" and "Rockin' Chair," and, most famous of all, "Star Dust." A new offering is "That's Right, I'm Wrong." Mr. Carmichael shows a personality as pleasing as his songs.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Java Journeys

FitzPatrick Travel Talk

Another outstanding specimen of camera globe trotting brings the seat traveler to the exotic land of Java. A comparison of the country's modern modes and the primitive ways of existence is effectively done. The reporting catches the influence of the Dutch on the Orientals. Also seen are glimpses of canal transportation, the residence of the Governor-General and the lovely gardens that surround his home. The coloring and the camera angles join to make the subject pictorially beautiful and interestingly informative.—Running time, nine minutes.

Diamond Dust

(Paramount)

Grantland Rice Sportlight

Timed to the call of "batter up" is this Grantland Rice Sportlight slant on the big business of baseball. Introducing the subject with a few authoritative words is Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of baseball. Concluding the reel, Joe McCarthy, manager of the World's Champion Yankees, offers some words of praise for the diamond sport. Between the prologue and epilogue are summed up concisely and interestingly various points of the big time baseball technique from pre-seasonal training to a professional ball park debut. Demonstrators include Johnny Vander Meer, Tommy Bridges, Bill Dickey, Jimmy Foxx, Joe Cronin, Roger Kramer, Hank Greenberg and Terry Moore.—Running time, 10 minutes.

With Best Dishes

(Universal)

Mentone Brevity

With a china shop as background is presented a series of acts in vaudeville fashion. Charles Kemper, comedian, and Billy Reyes, monologist and juggler, share the spot of master of ceremonies, and introduce George Roche, specialty dancer; Toy and Wing, Chinese dancers; Lillian Roth, singer; The Pied Pipers, singing group, and The Philharmonics, a harmonica group. The comedy consists largely of considerable breakage of dishes.—Running time, 16½ minutes.

Clown Princes

(MGM)

Our Gang Cutups

The kids in their latest Our Gang effort are touched with a philanthropic point of view. When "Porky's" mother is threatened with eviction, the children decide to hold a rent party in the form of a circus. The high point is "Alfalfa's" rendition of the song, "The Man on the Flying Trapeze." A mule, connected with his perch, is being bothered by a bumble bee, and the "Man" comes flying off his trapeze. The circus business exploits the natural talents of the group and the followers of the Gang cutups will enjoy their adventures in sideshow and sawdust arena.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 63

Oddities

In this, the 63d in the "Stranger Than Fiction" series, six subjects of out-of-ordinary interest are pictured. They are a miniature roller coaster, the hobby of a boy in a Philadelphia suburb; an unusual printing press, the work of a retired minister in Tennessee; a Cleveland man's collection of antique clocks, etching on celluloid by a woman in Alabama; a dog that puts out fires, and a one-legged jitterbug in Missouri.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

Chinook's Children

Dog Raising

In New Hampshire sled dogs are bred for work in the snow covered regions. Chinook, famed Eskimo dog of the first Admiral Byrd expedition to the South Pole, has been crossed with a Newfoundland dog and a new breed developed. The use of these dogs and their exceptional strength and stamina are clearly shown. Finally there is the annual dog-sled race in which most of the dog teams of New England compete.—Running time, 10 minutes.

New Worlds for Old

(Association of School Film Libraries)

Documentary

This Paul Rotha film made in Great Britain, deals with the benefits and advantages of gas over coal and electricity to all classes of persons in England. The Association of School Film Libraries, which represents European documentary and educational film makers in this country has imported the picture. Tracing the development of the new fuel supply, the film presents an instructive diagram on how the gas is taken from the coal, along with the

Warner Net For 26 Weeks Is $1,665,889

The report of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and subsidiaries for the 26 weeks ended Feb. 25, 1939, shows a net profit of $1,665,889 after depreciation, amortization of film costs, interest, federal income taxes and minority interests, which was equivalent after dividend requirements for the 26 weeks' period on the $3.85 preferred stock (on which unpaid dividends to and including March 1, 1939, amounted to $2,778,733 or $26.95 a share) to 39 cents a share on 3,701,090 shares (par $5) of common stock, excluding 100,254 shares held by the company.

This compares with $2,824,618 or 70 cents a share on the common stock for the 26 weeks ended Feb. 26, 1938.

$1,562,085 for 13 Weeks

For the 13 weeks ended Feb. 25, last, indicated net profit (based on a comparison of company's reports for first 13 weeks of company's fiscal year and the 26 weeks' period) was $1,562,085, equal after 13 weeks' preferred dividend requirements, to 39 cents a share on common, comparing with $1,139,019 or 28 cents a common share for the 13 weeks ended Feb. 26, 1938, and $103,804 or less than one cent a common share for the 13 weeks ended Nov. 26, 1938.

Current assets, including $5,325,036 cash, amounted to $28,129,953 on Feb. 25, last, and current liabilities were $18,927,081. This compares with cash of $4,985,547, current assets of $29,947,897 and current liabilities of $21,216,827 on Feb. 26, 1938.

Gross income for the six months ending Feb. 25, 1939, from film rentals and companies' theatre admissions, totaled $50,158,428. Amortization of film costs, royalties and participation cost and operating and general expenses were $45,443,339.

Approximately $40,000 of $6,196,000 of Warners' outstanding debentures has been deposited for exchange for the new 1948 series since April 28th, when notice of redemption was given. The remainder of the original issue of $25,534,000 had previously been deposited. The outstanding debentures must be surrendered for exchange before June 28th and for payment before June 29th.

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board of Universal Pictures, on Wednesday reported a net profit for the company, before federal income taxes, of $581,587 for the 13 weeks ended April 29, of this year, as compared with a net loss of $199,487 for the similar period of last year.

For the six months ended April 29, 1939, he reported a net profit, also before federal income taxes, of $739,578, compared to the net loss of $588,285 for last year's similar period.

SEC Stock Report

Acquisition of 600 shares of Pathe common stock in March by Robert R. Young, of Jersey City, director in the company, was reported this week by the Securities and Exchange Commission in its semi-monthly summary of transactions by corporation officers and directors in the stocks of their companies. At the close of the month, Mr. Young held 20,427 shares of Pathe common.

The summary which also carried January, 1939, reports shows that Joseph A. Sisto, New York banker and director in Monogram Pictures, assigned 78,130 options for common stock, through J. A. Sisto and Company, reducing his holdings to 55,742 options, and that, through the same company, William R. Stewart, New York, also a director, acquired 5,000 options for common, representing his total holdings.

Acquisition in December, 1938, of 10 shares of first preferred Universal Picture stock, was reported by Preston Davie, New York, a director, bringing his holdings at the close of the year to 110 shares.

Disposition of 600 shares of Columbia Broadcasting System Class A stock, by gift, in December, 1938, by Jerome H. Louchheim, Philadelphia, a director in the company, was made known. At the close of the year Mr. Louchheim held 19,010 shares of Class A stock.

David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation, announced this week that a quarterly dividend on the outstanding shares of the corporation's $3.50 cumulative convertible first preferred stock, and a quarterly dividend on the outstanding shares of "B" preferred stock, were declared at the regular meeting of the board of directors.

The dividend on the first preferred stock is 87½ cents per share, and the dividend on the "B" preferred stock is $1.25 per share.

These dividends are for the period from April 1, 1939 to June 30, 1939, and will be paid on July 1, 1939 to stockholders of record at the close of business June 9, 1939.

Warner Ad Budget Raised

EXHIBITORS GET ARBITRATION PACT; COMPLETE PROGRAM WILL FOLLOW

Trade Practice Draft Awaits Revision of Two Clauses Before Printing; Rodgers at Allied "Open Forum"

Representatives of organized exhibitors this week received copies of the rules and regulations, procedure and machinery for the arbitration system formulated by the major companies to adjudicate disputes under the trade practice program for self-regulation, and within a few days will receive copies of the completed program itself, in its fourth revision, to bring both documents before their respective memberships for acceptance or rejection. (The arbitration agreement in full appears on pages 48-50).

Most Expected to Accept

Most owners are expected to accept the pact shortly as a means of governing relations between exchanges and exhibitors and among competitive exhibitors. There will be some reservations; a few organization leaders possibly will reject. The majors believe they will win adoption by individual owners, "if we have to go out personally and canvass every theatre owner," getting signatures through their sales staffs. The majors "sincerely hope Allied will join." Outright rejection either by Allied or any state organization, or failure of the Department of Justice to express approval, will not deter the distributors from going ahead.

Arbitration boards will be established in each of the 31 exchange centers.

The program as now completed is the one to be placed in operation almost immediately by the majors, without further concessions, although alterations may be had. The majors believe they have given in the document everything they can give, and stand ready to take their chances against legislation. This was disclosed last Thursday afternoon, at the "open forum" conducted at New York Allied's first annual convention, in New York's Astor Hotel. The majors' spokesman was William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and chairman of the majors' trade practice formulation committee.

Changes Discussed

Announcement by Mr. Rodgers of the completion of the arbitration agreement was the main piece of business at the Allied convention. Mr. Rodgers' announcement was accompanied by a thorough discussion of changes made in the program itself.

The trade pact and combination arbitration agreement are available to any and all individual or organized exhibitor groups and are retroactive to 1939-40 contracts signed since January.

The life of the new pact will be for two years, embracing the 1939-40 and 1941-42 seasons. The majors will consider only "reasonable suggestions" to effect a smoother operation.

On Wednesday, the majors' committee at the last minute found it necessary to return the draft to their lawyers' group, for the rewriting of two clauses. That being done, it returns to Mr. Rodgers, who will call a meeting of his committee, after which the pact will be printed.

The majors emphasize that the arbitration agreement is optional. Compulsory arbitration is illegal, under the Thacher decision of 1929. The arbitration agreement will not, therefore, become a part of the contract, but will be in addition thereto.

Abram S. Myers, general counsel for national Allied States Association, speaking at the forum on trade practices at the New York meeting.

If an exhibitor does not sign the arbitration agreement he can neither bring a complaint nor have a complaint brought against him for adjudication by a local arbitration board.

Some exhibitors have favored "conciliation," saying a basic weakness of arbitration is that the awards, if ignored by a party to a dispute in those states where arbitration enforcement laws do not prevail, could not be enforced without court action.

The MPTOA was one of the principal advocates of "friendly" conciliation. While the new agreement does not establish conciliation procedure, the plan is to recommend informal conciliation before arbitration proceedings start.

Definitely committed to the program are Columbia, MGM, Paramount, RKO Radio, Twentieth Century-Fox, Universal and Warners. United Artists is the lone member of the "Big Eight" not participating, this because of the setup of the company. Monogram and Republic appear ready to "cooperate."

Copies Sent to Washington

Copies of the arbitration agreement were forwarded last Thursday afternoon to the United States Attorney General's office at Washington.

At the beginning of negotiations the distributors were considering abandoning efforts toward self-regulation, as a result of the filing by the Government of its anti-trust suit in New York. It is held unlikely that the program will have any great effect on the suit.

Mr. Rodgers, in his appearance before New York Allied, also detailed highlights of the arbitration agreement, citing the setup of a board in each exchange territory, special arbitration boards, panels of neutral arbitrators, a permanent national arbitration board, determination of parties to disputes, oaths of arbitrators, term of office of arbitrators, removals and vacancies, jurisdiction of boards, arbitration proceedings, awards, local rules and regulations and costs of maintaining boards, all explained in the text (pages 48-50).

Mr. Rodgers told the New York Allied convention, including Colonel H. A. Cole, national Allied president, and Abram F. Myers, national counsel, guests; "Some from within your ranks, through the statements they issue, are doing everything humanly possible to depreciate us in the eyes of the trade and the business world in general. There seems to be resentment (in the bulletins issued by various Allied units) on the part of some that we are successful. The fact that our success insures your success seems immaterial, so long as the destructive attacks can be maintained. . . . We are not going to be deterred from our path by insidious attacks launched by those who seek only to obstruct progress and harmony."

Mr. Rodgers gave full credit to the "many theatre owners, who, with their fortunes invested, are just as anxious as we are to see a more harmonious relationship." He took to task, too, those who have been "decidedly destructive."

A statement attributed to Allied that the distributors were throwing but "a few crumbs" to exhibitors was called "bad faith" by Mr. Rodgers. "The crumbs that are referred to run to the millions of dollars per year," he declared, "and the only chance whatever that producers or distributors have to recoup is in the production of pictures that will attract more attendance to theatres."

Consulted at Outset

He explained to Allied's members that their national leaders were consulted at the outset of the program, "so that they would feel that they were invited just as early as any other exhibitor unit," also, "at the time of the first conference it was definitely stated (by the majors) that the negotiations could be conducted only on a basis of establishing a trade practice code for the guidance and that theatre divorcement had no place whatever in these negotiations." Regardless, he continued, divorcement "is a pet idea of a minority who believe its prosecution can be used as a smoke screen to justify the continuation of attacks that can only cause dissention between the two branches of an industry absolutely dependent upon each other."

He referred to the Government's New York trust suit against the majors, which, he said, "will in due time be tried," but, he added, "until it is tried, we are at least entitled to a fair and impartial consideration. In the interim we expressed a willingness, and do so now express it, to set up the machinery where certain practices claimed to be unjust or unreasonable can be arbitrated."

He declared that the program, "which all clear-thinking people in this business hold necessary," should be tried, "and in doing so understood that all things desired cannot be had at the first attempt. Through experience we can profit by and correct such irregularities that may now for the first time be brought to light through the machinery set up by a united industry.

Calls "Ballyhoo Boresome"

"I do believe all this ballyhoo about divorcement, alleged unfairness, must be getting boresome, if not to all those engaged in the business, at least to the public."

The distributor spokesman at this point gave public credit to the trade press generally for encouraging a trade practice code. "The stipulations of the code submitted are very great in their importance to the trade and still greater if measured from a monetary standpoint."

Outright statements and inferences that the distributors' committee had gone into the negotiations with "instructions," that the distributors' lawyers were dilatory and frustrated every independent exhibitors' effort to come to an understanding, are unfair, calculated only to mislead, declared Mr. Rodgers.

"non-productive outbursts have little, and in most cases, nothing constructive or practical to suggest."

On the subject of the Allied-sponsored anti-block selling and blind buying bill pending in Congress (see page 47), Mr. Rodgers said he knew that "many theatre owners in this country, including Allied members, have told me personally that the enactment of such a bill would mean nothing short of ruination to them."

Reviews the Trade Practice Code

Mr. Rodgers reviewed briefly for Allied's New York convention the trade practice program itself, starting with the "Exclusive Privileges" clause, which, he said, asks nothing more than an account not be in material default on an existing contract.

On the "Trade Announcement" clause, he said, the majors cannot go further. "Only theorists believe it is possible" to identify pictures sold as far in advance as is the custom.

The clause entitled "Public Demand for Exceptional Features," as written, he said, "is not perfect by any means, but nevertheless is a great improvement over previous custom and does relieve the situation as it has been reported to us."

The "Preferred Playing Time" clause is "very definitely a relief to the smaller operator." Under its provisions, he continued, "the smaller operator can play pictures when guarantees are given on such days as best suits his convenience. Furthermore, if a percentage picture, without guarantee, is unsuitable for preferred time and the contention is upheld by arbitration, another picture can later be substituted and the one objected to played on other days of the week."

The "Some Runs Available" clause, "a very difficult provision to cover the intent," is a "supreme effort to meet a condition that has been brought to our attention and many theatres will benefit thereunder."

Under the "Regular Customers" clause, the majors give "assurance to existing customers against chain invasion."

"Short Subjects, Newsreels" clause, under which shorts, newsreels and trailers will not be forced with feature sales, is a promise "that each unit of a distributor's output will stand on its merits."

No Separate Score Charges

"Score Charges": "No separate score charges, commencing 1939-40."

Regarding "Allocation of Features," "It has been agreed, in a subsequent modification, that once designation has been made it cannot be changed except by mutual consent."

"Form of License Agreement": Distributors will try, but Mr. Rodgers said he is "none too optimistic about a shorter form of contract," pointing out that "We cannot agree, as a group, to a standard form because of existing (anti-trust laws) and individual negotiations on such a subject would seem to me unending."

The "Selective License Agreements" clause "should and will speed up availability, as it compels those who have selective contracts to act within 21 days after availability."

The "Playing Pictures in Order of Release" clause "will serve to correct practices resulting from 'deadline' picture enforcement."

The "Coercing Contracts" clause, he continued, "serves as a medium through which it will bring to light any unauthorized threat of intimidation."

Specified under the "Other Subjects of Arbitration" clause are these additionals: "Performance of license agreements by either party; clearance; overbuying." On the subject of clearance, however, Mr. Rodgers added that "Distributors are firmly of the belief that clearance is their right to give and no right of the exhibitor to demand."

Concluding his analysis with observations on the newly completed arbitration agreement, Mr. Rodgers admitted, for the majors, that, "It is not perfect, we fully realize. We could not in justice accept all the suggestions made, but we have, insofar as possible, provided for those that seemed practical."

Besides the socalled "permanent board," Mr. Rodgers called attention to the "special boards," which are to be set up for those who prefer special machinery.

Board highlights:

Panels of five to 10 neutral arbitrators, to be selected by distributors, affiliated exhibitors and organized exhibitor groups.

Remainder of panels to be appointed 10 each by distributors and affiliated exhibitors, on the one hand, and organized exhibitor groups on the other.

Permanent arbitration boards of three members to be designated from the panels, one from the neutral panel and one each from the panel designated by distributors and affiliated exhibitors, and by organized exhibitors.

Expects Majority to Adopt Plan

Special arbitration boards may be designated from a panel of 20 selected, half by distributors and affiliated exhibitors, and half by organized exhibitors, or from outside the panel.

"At first glance the setup of the special board, where more than two parties are involved, may be looked upon as not equally balanced. I mention this principally because I want to assure you that even though the impression prevails in some quarters that affiliated theatres and distributors as a whole have a common interest, nothing further could be the case. As a matter of fact, it is often the reverse."

He told Allied's delegates that "Such matters of which Allied leaders have complained the most can be arbitrated. So can other subjects.

"Based upon the encouragement we have received from individual independent theatre owners, those given by organized theatre owner associations, I am firmly of the belief that the Trade Practice Code will be adopted by the majority of theatre owners of this country," he said. "We sincerely hope Allied will join. We are going forward with the conviction that in this plan we have a proposal that is sound.

"We solicit your consideration for the adoption of the Code, believing as we do it will tend to cement and unify an industry, that we may all give such talents as we possess to the development of this business, rather than to the constant harrassing and wrangling between the different branches of our industry.

"We are seeking the support of a program from which we, as distributors, cannot hope to make any gain, to the contrary we can only give, but we have individually and collectively a genuine feeling of pride in the authorship of the Code and are grateful to all Negotiating Committees for their patience and perseverance and also appreciative of those who contributed by their advice and suggestions, and time given, to the working out of the details.

"The provisions of the Code itself cannot be enlarged upon for the simple reason that we have given nearly to the breaking point and although we hope, and as I say solicit your consideration, if it is your decision to go forward without the Code and rely upon legislation rather than arbitration, then that is for you to decide, but I will tell you honestly and with great frankness that rather than enlarge the provisions of this Code we will of necessity have to take our chance on the legislation.

"We have endeavored to view your problems and to provide machinery to correct injustices where they are found to exist—more than that we cannot do," concluded Mr. Rodgers.

Twentieth Century-Fox board of directors Thursday declared a cash dividend of 37½ cents per share for the second quarter of 1939 on the preferred stock and a cash dividend of 50 cents per share on the common stock, both payable June 30th to stockholders of record June 15th.

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers escaped regulatory legislation in all states except North Dakota and Kansas, both of which passed adverse bills.

other products, and distributed to home and business. Dialogue by the characters and off-screen narration help make the picture interesting.

The production is being shown at the New York World's Fair in the Museum of Science and Industry. No plans have been made for distribution in theatres. Running time, 25 minutes.

Happily Buried
(MGM)
Romance and Music

Contrary to the title, the subject offers some gay melodies, a collection of comic moments and a bit of musical comedy romance. He and she are sponsors of differently designed waffle irons. The lad resorts to being buried alive to break down the resistance of his feminine competitior and heart interest. At a Fair the couple sing the praises of their respective equipment but love finally reigns supreme. The material sports some clever spoofing of big business executive meetings, done in a Gilbert and Sullivan style, a spot of dancing and some pleasing romancing and dueting by Anthony Allen and Rita Oehman. Mr. Allen, especially, looks like promising material for features.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Art Gallery
(MGM)
Imaginative Cartoon

The waggish fancy of Hugh Harman has contrived to produce an imaginative cartoon on that famed historical pyromaniac, Nero, and his destructive propensity in setting on fire an art gallery. The ensuing reaction of the artistic personnel of the museum makes up the highlights of the subject. The glimpses of various classical folk, some drawn to resemble prominent personages of today, especially a former president of the country, will afford the audience a particular amount of glee. The pigmentation of the cartoon business adds to the cleverness of the subject.—Running time, eight minutes.

The Theatre of the Sky
(Universal)
Going Places Subject

The Adler Planetarium in Chicago is the scene of this number of the ever popular "Going Places" series. In it are "close-ups" of planets millions of light years distant from the earth. The view of the moon, dotted with giant craters, is particularly impressive. Pointed out also is the first spiral nebula ever photographed, some six quintillion light years away. Then there is a comet with its tail many million miles long. Instruments for astronomical study made centures ago and now part of the exhibit in the Adler Planetarium are also shown. The script is by Henry Clay Bate.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

Paramount Pictorial, No. 11
(Paramount)
Entertaining

The combination of something old and something new effects for this Paramount Pictorial number a flavor of entertainment and interest. The memory section is served by a revival recital of "Thanks for the Memory," which won for its authors, Lee Robin and Ralph Rainger, the Academy Award. The reissue sequence has Bob Hope and Shirley Ross, the team who introduced the chanson in "The Big Broadcast of 1938." The element of novelty is supplied by a research visit to the office of Ted Peckham, Manhattan male chaperone de luxe, who formed an escort service which came into public note. The other item of the pictorial bill is a staid showing of the practices of ancient arts and crafts in the modern Orient.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Gals and Gallons
Mentone Brevity

Edward East and Ralph Dumke, better known as "The Sisters of the Skillet," are featured in this Mentone variety subject. The boys have acquired a modern automobile filling station and "hire" entertainers to bring in the customers. Rita Rio heads the entertainers, singing and leading the orchestra. Also appearing are Jan Pearce, tenor; Deneet and Dae, boy and girl dance team, and Pansy the Horse, with the Mayo Family.—Running time, 16½ minutes.

Montmartre Madness
(Columbia)
Variety Short

An American arrives in Montmartre expecting to find the romantic excitement of the Paris slums that he has read about. He is very much disappointed, but he dreams of the Parisian and Apache dances which in turn are shown to the audience. With Harry Stockwell singing and a Fanchon and Marco chorus, here is an excellent variety short.

National Decency Legion Classifies Nine Films

Of nine pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week five were approved for general patronage, three were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Blue Montana Skies," "Captain Fury," "Flaming Lead," "Mystery plane," "Trigger Fingers." Class A-2, "Blind Alley," "Bridal Suite," "The Gorilla." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "The Kid from Kokomo."

Thomas Orchard, associate producer of the March of Time, received an honorary Master of Arts Degree from Hobart College, New York, on Monday. Mr. Orchard was graduated from Hobart in 1931.

World's Fair Subject

Columbia is preparing a one reel subject on the New York World's Fair, a companion reel to the recently completed "Man-Made Island," which shows highlights of the San Francisco Exposition.

Ferretti To Return

J. J. Ferretti of the United States Air Conditioning International Corporation, now in South Africa, plans to sail for America sometime this month.

Close United Artists Theatre

Balaban & Katz are expected to close the United Artists Theatre, in Chicago, on Saturday.

Prospects in Britain Better Says Pommer

Improved prospects for British production are in view now with more pictures in preparation at London studios than have been projected there in months, Erich Pommer, British producer, said on his arrival in New York this week on the Normandie. Mr. Pommer will attend the Paramount sales convention in Los Angeles next week.

He will also discuss a new producing-distributing deal with the company. His fourth and final picture on his current contract with Paramount goes into production in July and is scheduled for release around December 1st. The picture is "The Admirable Crichton," starring Charles Laughton. Mr. Pommer brought a print of "Jamaica Inn," his third production for Paramount. He hopes to negotiate a new two year deal for five pictures, he said.

Mr. Pommer praised British production facilities, and said that they are as good as Hollywood's, while on a smaller scale. He said he would continue to work at Elstree.

Stern Group Reported Taking Gregory Circuit

The Stern group of theatres is expected to take over the Gregory circuit of Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin, some time next week, upon completion of negotiations. The Gregory circuit has about 30 theatres. The Stern group was interested in the Balaban & Katz circuit when that circuit started.

Pass Bingo Measure

After receiving more debate in committee and both houses than any other measure in the Connecticut legislature this session, Bingo for religious, communal or fraternal organizations only, passed the Senate and House and is now awaiting the signature of Governor Raymond Baldwin. Methodist ministers in an eastern conference unanimously had passed a resolution urging the governor to veto the measure. However, approval of the governor previously had been expressed.

Venezuelan Film Here

"La Gran Sabana" (The Great Prairie), a three reel film of the unexplored interior of Venezuela, is now being edited and scored in New York. It was produced by the Capuchin Mission of El Coroni with the cooperation of the Venezuelan Government. Father Baltasar de Matallana, who is negotiating a release, is completing the commentary in Spanish and English. Charles Light is collaborating in the work.

Bader with Agency

David A. Bader has joined forces with the Lichtig and Englander Agency, Hollywood, taking over the story department. Mr. Bader's Literary Corporation of America, with its affiliates in New York, London, Paris and South America, also moves over to the agency.

Moving Republic Exchange

The Republic Pictures exchange in Charlotte, N. C., now located at 300 West 3rd Street, will move into new quarters at 227 West Fourth Street, on or about June 1st. The new quarters formerly housed the RKO exchange.

U. S. ACCUSES MAJORS OF 55 ACTS OF "COERCION", INVOLVING 93 HOUSES

Latest Bill of Particulars in New York Anti-Trust Suit Includes Two Lists of Protested Acts; Motions Argued

Fifty-five acts of "coercion" involving 93 theatres charged to the major companies are cited by the Government in the newest of its bills of particulars in the "key" anti-trust suit in New York.

Hearing on Defendants' Demand

Defense counsel on Thursday argued in support of a motion requiring the government to furnish more detailed particulars, before Judge William Bondy in chambers. The defendants' counsel asked an order from the court directing the Government to comply with the court's decision of March 7 by furnishing "A further and more definite and adequate statement and bill of particulars;" an order, in the alternative, "striking the petition for failure to comply with said decision;" an order for additional particulars which already had been granted to Columbia and United Artists, and an order extending the time of the defendants to answer until 60 days after service of a further bill of particulars because of the long period (from 1918 to the present) covered in the Government's original bill.

After hearing arguments Judge Bondy reserved decision.

Two Lists of "Coercive Acts"

Last Thursday and Friday, as part of its bill of particulars, the Government filed two lists of "coercive acts" by the majors against exhibitors, naming, on Thursday, Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, Warner Brothers, and RKO; and on Friday, in a very long list, Columbia Pictures.

In the first list, Paramount is charged with 43 "coercions"; Twentieth Century-Fox with six; and Warner Brothers and RKO with three each. This listing cites unfair acts from 1918 to 1938, and covers cases in which 93 theatres figured. The listing was accompanied by the statement that the Government was unable to provide a "complete list" at the time.

In 23 cases, according to the charges, exhibitors were forced to sell their theatres; in 10, deprived of product; in 7, threatened with erection of competing houses; in 6, forced to lease their houses; in 4, threatened with acquisition of competing houses; in 2, refused licenses; in 2, charged excessive rentals; and in one case, an exhibitor was forced to stop construction of a theatre.

In the Columbia listing, the Government charges Columbia with refusing to sell second-runs in competition with producer-affiliated theatres, in agreement with other conspirators, not named by the Government, and with having committed many other unfair business practices.

The Government's bill of Thursday charges the following cases of coercion:

By Paramount:

Joe and John Johnson of Jasper, Ala., who sold the Colonial and New Jasper Theatres; R. V. McGinnis of Russelville, Ark., who sold the New Theatre; Andy McNeil and Dwight H. Blackwood of Little Rock, Ark., who sold the Arkansas Theatres; Harry Bott of Lakewood, Fla., closed the Lakewood; L. D. Joel of Lakeland sold the Auditorium Theatre; N. V. Darley of Tampa, Fla., owning the Rivoli Theatre, threatened;

Claude D. Swint of Atlanta, Ga., forced to cease construction of the Gordon; Mary Cinciolo of Gainesville, Ga., sold the Alamo theatre; Greater Chicago Theatres Corp., of Oak Park, Ill., deprived of product for the Lake Theatre; Verner U. Young of Gary, Ind., owning a large number of theatres, threatened;

Theatrical Managers, Inc., of South Bend, Ind., owning the State Theatre, threatened. Gail L. Pettit of Algona, Ia., sold the State; Nathan and Abe Sadoff of Sioux City, Ia., leased the Granada; Willard B. Harwood of Gardiner, Me., sold the Strand; William N. Youngclass of Columbus, Neb., sold the Swan; Frank D. Eager of Lincoln, Neb., leased the Liberty and Orpheum;

Edward Quittner of Middletown, N. Y., owning the State and Stratton Theatres, threatened with "harsh selling terms"; Theatrical Managers, Inc., of Marion, O., owner of the Palace and Marion, threatened; L. D. Joel of Greenville, S. C., sold the Garing; Carl P. Knudsen of Watertown, S. D., sold the State; Robert Z. Glass of Beaumont, Texas, sold the Rio Theatre and the Knox, Fair and Log Theatres of Dallas, Texas; Paul Scott of Dallas sold the Varsity;

H. E. Fulgham of Tyler, Texas, owner of the Joy Theatre, threatened; Theo Palamanakos of Greenville, Texas, sold the Opera House; W. H. Powers of Henderson, Texas, sold theatre; Inca Theatres, Inc., sold eight theatres in Texas; Ross Dorbandt of Jacksonville, Texas, sold the Dorbandt and Claire; M. G. Fry of Tyler, Texas, sold a lease to the Majestic;

Sam Myers, Chicago, owner of Cine, threatened; Harry Solomon of Chicago, owner of Belmont, threatened; Gust Constan of Decatur, Ill., owner of Avon, threatened; Verner U. Young sold theatre at Anderson, Ind.; Kalil Sliman of New Iberia, La., owner of the Evangeline, threatened; Irving Gillman of North Mankato, Minn., closed the Urban;

H A. Cole and A. W. Milly of Greenville, Texas, owners of the Rialto and Colonial, threatened by competition; C. L. Hackworth of Huntsville, Fla., owner of three theatres, threatened; L. D. Joel of Jacksonville, Fla., sold the Casino and Liberty; Joseph C. Boss of McAllister, Okla., owner of Photosho, "subjected to harsh practices"; H H. Jackson of Columbia, Tenn., sold the Grand; F. R. Newman of Greenville, Texas, sold the Crystal; H. S. Cole of Ranger, Texas, sold the Lone Star and Lamb Theatres; and E. H. Hulsey of Texas sold 11 theatres.

By Twentieth Century-Fox

Exhibitors listed as being subjected to coercion by 20th Century-Fox follow: Compton Theatre Corp. of Compton, Cal., sold the Compton; H. L. Gumbiner of Los Angeles leased the Power; Maurice Feigenbaum of Pomona, Cal., sold the Sunkist; Brookside Theatre Corp. of Kansas City sold the Brookside; B. K. Fischer of Milwaukee, leased four theatres; and Charles Washicheck of Milwaukee sold three theatres.

By RKO

RKO is charged with coercion against the following: C. C. Dunsmoor of Marshalltown, Iowa, leased the Capitol; Century Circuit of New York surrendered the Kingsway of New York and the Merrick of Long Island.

By Warner Brothers

Warner Bros. is accused of subjecting the following to "distress selling" methods: Wm. E. S. Wilcox of Silver Spring, Md., sold the Seco and Silver Theatres; William Filcock of Lake Geneva, Wis., owner of the Geneva and Delavan, "subjected to harsh selling practices," and the Capitol Theatre Co. of Wheeling, W. Va., also subjected to harsh practices.

By Columbia

In the Columbia bill of particulars, the Government charges 15 exhibitors were compelled, from 1934 to 1937, to maintain minimum admission prices; and were prevented from "double-featuring" Columbia product. They are:

Sam Kirchheimer, North Side Theatre, Houston, Texas; O. B. Bridges, Midway Theatre, Houston; North Fort Worth Amusement Co., Isis and Rose Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas; Robt. Wygant, Heights Theatre, Houston; Sam Archibald, Holly Theatre, Ft. Worth; Queens Amusement Co., New Liberty Theatre and Ideal Theatre, Ft. Worth; Louis Richker, Gaiety Theatre, Ft. Worth; H. C. Houston, Trinity Theatre, Dallas;

B. J. Highpower, Texan Theatre, Ft. Worth; C. A. Dickey, Avenue Theatre, Ft. Worth; Donald Dixon, Haskell Theatre, Dallas; O. C. Easter, Peak Theatre, Dallas; L. L. Dunbar, Queen Theatre, Dallas; L. G. Bessinger, Queen Theatre, Dallas; Robert Z. Glass, Knox St., Fair, and Lawn Theatres.

The Government also claims in the bill that Columbia had a working agreement with the Interstate circuit of Texas, not to license certain pictures to any other exhibitor in Fort Worth, San Antonio, Houston and Dallas at a lower adult evening admission price than 25 cents. The Government asserted that in 1935 and 1936 Henry Lazarus, operator of the Coliseum, New Orleans, paid over four times the rental paid for 21 features by the Iris theatre, a Paramount-controlled house.

Double Billing in Affiliates

The Government's bill further charges that Columbia encouraged double-billing by producer-affiliated theatres, and cites the following examples: contracts supposedly made in 1934-35 and 1935-36, with theatres controlled by National Theatres Corporation, providing for reductions in film rentals of five per cent if certain Columbia pictures were shown with certain other features; similar contracts with Loew's and subsidiaries, and with Warner Brothers and certain subsidiaries, calling the Lincoln theatre, in Union City, N. J., a Warner house which benefited by this type of contract.

The Columbia bill also includes the charge that Columbia placed stars under contract who were also under contract to other companies. Named were Gloria Blondell, said to have been also under contract to Warner Brothers; Melvin Douglas, also with MGM; Irene Dunne, with Paramount, RKO and Universal; Cary Grant, with RKO, and Edward G. Robinson, with Warner Brothers.

DELAYS IN CHICAGO AND OKLAHOMA SUITS

To permit the United States Department of Justice to examine the several thousand documents offered in pre-trial evidence by the defendants in the Government's Chicago anti-trust action against Balaban and Katz and the eight majors, a delay of trial until June 22 was granted in Chicago Chancery Court last week. This week, Master-in-Chancery Edgar Eldredge was expected to decide whether to admit as evidence, rental figures of Balaban and Katz to the eight majors during the past ten years.

In Oklahoma City, hearing on the motion by the Griffith Amusement Company and the eight majors, to dismiss A. B. Momand's $4,500,000 suit against them, was put over until June 16 by a Federal district judge.

Mr. Momand, an independent exhibitor of Shawnee, Oklahoma, charges illegal marketing agreements, other unfair business practices, and violation of the Federal anti-trust laws.

Victor Announces New Sound And Projection System

The Victor Animatograph Corporation has announced a new motion picture projection and sound system for 16 mm. film; adapted to educational and commercial purposes.

The system uses auxiliary units in addition to its basic projector, as a means of increasing the scope of its usefulness. Additional amplifiers and speakers are available, allowing broadcasts, recordings and announcements to be relayed to as many rooms as desired, according to the Victor Company.

"BEDEVILED" BY OPPOSITION, HE SAYS, NEELY PUSHES HIS BLOCK SALES ACT

Senator Demands and Gets A Showdown, Compelling Committee to Recommend A Floor Vote by Senate

Proponents of federal legislation outlawing block and blind selling of motion pictures apparently are not slumbering, in Congress or out. Armed with telegrams and letters from 8,000 "prominent men and women" favoring enactment of such legislation, Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely, of West Virginia, is pushing his bill on the Senate floor.

Following almost the same strategy he employed last year, when, in a dramatic move he got Senate passage, without a record vote or open hearing—the House kept its companion bill in committee—Senator Neely, in a new campaign for passage, moved for a Senate showdown last weekend. This was averted at the time only by promises of Chairman Burton K. Wheeler, Montana, that he would call his Interstate Commerce Committee for consideration of the Neely bill without further delay.

Passed by Committee

On Wednesday last-minute support from Senator Charles W. Tobey (Rep., N. H.), a member of the subcommittee in charge of the Neely bill who attended none of the hearings on that measure in April, gave Senator Neely the opportunity to bring his block booking measure before the full Senate Interstate Commerce Committee which, later on the same day, voted to report the legislation favorably to the Senate for a vote on the floor.

Only four of the five members of the subcommittee were present Wednesday, Senator Alben W. Barkley (Dem., Ky.), who has been a target for Senator Neely's criticism on the occasions this session on which he has discussed his bill on the Senate floor, being absent.

As had been expected, Senator Ellison D. Smith (Dem., S. C.), chairman of the subcommittee, and Senator Wallace H. White, Jr. (Rep., Me.) voted against a favorable report on Senator Neely's bill, but Senator Tobey's favorable vote brought about a tie, as a result of which the measure automatically went to the full committee.

On the basis of last year's action, the Senate is seen as passing the measure, but it is highly unlikely that the House will take any action on it this session.

This time, however, the Senators already have held open hearings on the bill, which, in one form or another, has been constantly before Congress for 11 years. The hearing at this session, started on April 3rd and running a week, witnessed a long line of arguments by representatives of the majors, the MPTOA and friendly clubwomen and churchmen, speaking against the measure, and the Motion Picture Research Council, Allied States and their clubwomen friends, urging passage.

At the conclusion of the April hearings, Senator Neely seemed to be the lone sub-committee proponent, after William F. Rodgers, MGM, industry spokesman, testified that the industry's new trade practice proposals will give relief to independent exhibitors and were acceptable to practically all exhibitor organizations, save Allied. The proposals were put into final form this week. (See page 41)

Aroused by his failure to obtain action on the measure, which he introduced again at the opening of this session, Senator Neely last Friday "let loose" on the floor of the Senate, bitterly arraigning Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, and Senator Ellison D. Smith, South Carolina, chairman of the Interstate subcommittee, for what he declared were obstructionist tactics.

FIRST STATE ACTION AGAINST BLOCK SALES

The House of Representatives in Illinois last Thursday approved by a vote of 84 to eight the bill of Representative Harold Lund prohibiting blind selling and block booking of pictures.

The measure requires distributors to provide synopses of all pictures over 2,000 feet in length at the time the deal for product is made, and if the finished film differs from the synopsis, the exhibitor would have the right to cancel. In this connection the bill is similar to Senator Neely's anti-block selling bill pending in Congress, and the clause is the most bitterly contested by the major companies.

Action by the Illinois House is the first taken against block selling in a state legislature.

"This bill has been bedeviled with more opposition, both revealed and concealed, than the hero of Pilgrim's Progress encountered on his slow and painful journey from earth to heaven," Senator Neely shouted on the floor. "A blindfolded, crippled snail on crutches could have traveled further in purgatory in six seconds than this bill has traveled since it was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce six months ago."

Says 8,000 Have Written Him

Reading the usual list of organizations which are in support of the bill, the Senator read also a list of "prominent men and women" among the more than 8,000 persons who he said have written and telegraphed him in favor of the measure.

The Senator detailed at length the history of block booking legislation since it was first introduced in 1928, citing that the hearings in that year constituted a 354-page record; in March, 1934, hearings were held, developing a 76-page record; in 1936 the Senate committee piled up another 218 pages and the House committee 526 pages in further hearings, and the hearings last April added another 651 pages.

Introducing the bill on January 4, last, Senator Neely continued, he found it impossible to get any consideration by the Interstate Commerce Committee, and his plea that the bill be reported without hearings was refused on an argument by Senator Barkley that there were new members on the Committee not acquainted with the subject who should have an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the arguments of both sides.

After a subcommittee was appointed to hold hearings, he charged, he again encountered difficulty in obtaining a date for the sessions, even after Chairman Wheeler, at his request, had intervened. It was not until he filed a motion to discharge the Committee from further consideration of the bill that he secured a definite date for hearings, he told the Senate.

Says Barkley Stayed Away

Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., of Maine, a Republican member of the subcommittee, attended practically all the hearings, Mr. Neely asserted, but "Senator Barkley, who, in my opinion, is almost exclusively responsible for the hearings having been ordered, attended the subcommittee's first meeting and participated in the proceedings.

"But the subcommittee held 12 additional sessions during the next 14 days," he added. "Never after the first of the 13 hearings was the Senator from Kentucky seen in the subcommittee room during the consideration of the bill."

In the heat of the debate, Senator Neely pointed out that while Senator Barkley could not find time to attend the hearings, he did find time to attend the Kentucky Derby. That remark, however, was deleted by him in the official Congressional Record's account.

After the hearings, Senator Neely said, he again could get no action, and on May 25 he informed the majority leader that unless the Committee met on the bill within 24 hours he would call up his motion to discharge.

"Let me appeal to the Senate to adopt my motion and thus bring this proposed legislation forth from the subcommittee's prison house as Lazarus was brought forth from the tomb," he appealed last Friday.

"The multibillionaire moving picture trust is on one side of this question and the American people are on the other. Let us this day righteously choose whom we shall serve."

Barkley Noncommittal

"I voted for the bill in the committee and in the Senate. I may or may not vote for it when it comes up again," Senator Barkley commented in answering Senator Neely.

The majority leader explained that he had asked for hearings because representatives of the industry complained they had not had a hearing during the previous session when the bill was reported and passed by the Senate. He did not wish to serve on the committee, because his duties as leader were so onerous, he said, and he did not attend the hearings because there was highly important legislation in which he was interested being heard at the same time by other committees of which he is a member, he told the Senate.

Further, he pointed out, the printed record of the hearings was not delivered until three days prior to Senator Neely's action in calling up his motion. Senator Neely interjected that he had not been able to get them out of the Government Printing Office until he threatened to "burn up" on the Senate floor those responsible for further delay.

Withdraws Motion

Pointing out that to act on the motion in the absence of Senator Smith, who had been called home because of his wife's illness, would be a reflection on the subcommittee chairman, Senator Barkley suggested that Chairman Wheeler of the full committee could order the subordinate group to act, and Senator Wheeler agreed that if the subcommittee did not meet immediately upon Senator Smith's return he would call a meeting of the full committee.

With this understanding, the West Virginia Senator withdrew his motion, but with the threat that if action was not taken he would again revive it and demand a showdown.

RULES FOR PROPOSED NEW FILM ARBITRATION SYSTEM

On this and the following pages is presented the complete text of the plan for voluntary arbitration of differences between distributors and exhibitors.

The plan represents an expansion of the proposal made as one clause in the original draft of the trade practice formulae presented to exhibitors by the distribution companies.

RULES OF ARBITRATION

I. Exchange Territories

Arbitration of disputes which are subject to arbitration under the Trade Practice Code or hereunder in the territories (hereinafter referred to as exchange territories) served by the film exchanges in the cities below named:

Albany, N. Y.
Atlanta, Ga.
Boston, Mass.
Buffalo, N. Y.
Charlotte, N. C.
Chicago, Ill.
Cincinnati, Ohio
Cleveland, Ohio
Dallas, Texas
Denver, Colo.
Des Moines, Iowa.
Detroit, Mich.
Indianapolis, Ind.
Kansas City, Mo.
Los Angeles, Cal.
Memphis, Tenn.
Milwaukee, Wis.
Minneapolis, Minn.
New Haven, Conn.
New Orleans, La.
New York, N. Y.
Oklahoma City, Okla.
Omaha, Nebr.
Philadelphia, Pa.
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Portland, Ore.
St. Louis, Mo.
Salt Lake City, Utah
San Francisco, Cal.
Seattle, Wash.
Washington, D. C.

shall, in each exchange territory, be governed by these Rules of Arbitration from and after the date of the appointment of the panel of neutral arbitrators for such exchange territory, as provided in Article II hereof.

II. Panel of Neutral Arbitrators

All distributors and affiliated exhibitors and organized exhibitor groups which have signed the Trade Practice Code to which these Rules of Arbitration are annexed, and which at the time carry on their business (or, in the case of organized exhibitor groups, have members who have signed the Trade Practice Code and who at the time operate theatres) in an exchange territory shall by unanimous action appoint a panel of not less than five nor more than ten neutral arbitrators for such exchange territory. Neutral arbitrators shall be compensated for their services, shall preferably have an understanding and knowledge of the motion picture industry but shall not be associated with either distributor or exhibitor interests.

III. Permanent Arbitration Board

(1) Appointment of panels. All distributors and affiliated exhibitors which are at the time entitled to participate in the appointment of the panel of neutral arbitrators for an exchange territory shall by unanimous action appoint a panel of ten arbitrators, and all organized exhibitor groups which are at the time entitled to participate in the appointment of said panel of neutral arbitrators shall by unanimous action appoint a panel of ten arbitrators, for such exchange territory. It is contemplated that arbitrators on said panels as well as arbitrators appointed on panels provided for in Article IV hereof will be associated with some branch of the motion picture industry and will serve without compensation.

(2) Personnel of Permanent Arbitration Board. A Permanent Arbitration Board consisting of one arbitrator from the panel of neutral arbitrators and two other arbitrators, one from each panel of arbitrators appointed as provided in paragraph (1) of this Article, shall be established in each exchange territory. The members of each of the panels appointed as provided in said paragraph (1) shall serve on the Permanent Arbitration Board in rotation, in such order and for such length of time as the members of such panels shall respectively agree upon. The two arbitrators so serving from said panels shall designate a third arbitrator from said panel of neutral arbitrators, or, if they are unable to agree upon a third arbitrator, the third arbitrator shall be chosen by them by lot from said panel of neutral arbitrators. Said third arbitrator shall be chairman of the Permanent Arbitration Board and shall serve during the term of office of the arbitrators designating or choosing him.

(3) Secretary. All distributors, affiliated exhibitors and organized exhibitor groups which are at the time entitled to participate in the appointment of the panel of neutral arbitrators for an exchange territory, shall be unanimous action appoint a secretary of the Permanent Arbitration Board for such exchange territory who shall also act as secretary for the Special Arbitration Boards in such territory provided for in Article IV hereof.

(4) Office. Each Permanent Arbitration Board shall maintain an office and have available adequate quarters for the hearing of arbitrations.

IV. Special Arbitration Boards

(1) Appointment of panels. All distributors and affiliated exhibitors which are at the time entitled to participate in the appointment of the panel of neutral arbitrators for an exchange territory, shall by unanimous action appoint a panel of ten arbitrators, and each organized exhibitor group which is at the time entitled to participate in the appointment of said panel of neutral arbitrators shall appoint a panel of ten arbitrators, for such exchange territory. An arbitrator designated by a party to a dispute submitted to a Special Arbitration Board shall preferably be a member of one of the panels, but need not be a member of any panel.

(2) Two party disputes. With respect to disputes between two parties the Special Arbitration Board shall be constituted as follows: Each party to the dispute shall designate an arbitrator. The two arbitrators so designated shall designate a third arbitrator who may, but need not, be a member of the panel of neutral arbitrators, or, if said two arbitrators are unable to agree upon a third arbitrator, the third arbitrator shall be chosen by them by lot from the panel of neutral arbitrators. Such third arbitrator shall be chairman of such Special Arbitration Board.

(3) Disputes relating to clearance. With respect to disputes relating to clearance, the Special Arbitration Board shall be constituted as follows: The complaining exhibitor shall designate an arbitrator, the exhibitor complained against shall designate an arbitrator, and the distributors which are the third party to such dispute shall, as a group, by unanimous action designate an arbitrator. The three arbitrators so designated shall by unanimous action designate two arbitrators who may, but need not, be members of the panel of neutral arbitrators, or, if they are unable to agree upon either or both of said two arbitrators, one or both, as the case may be, shall be chosen by them by lot from the panel of neutral arbitrators. One of said two arbitrators shall be elected chairman of such Special Arbitration Board.

() Right to eliminate arbitrator. In any case where a neutral arbitrator is chosen by lot from the panel of neutral arbitrators each arbitrator designated by a party shall be entitled to reject one neutral arbitrator chosen by lot, and if such right is exercised with respect to any neutral arbitrator so chosen, the neutral arbitrator so rejected shall not serve and another neutral arbitrator shall be chosen by lot from among the neutral arbitrators not so rejected.

V. Parties to Disputes

(1) Disputes between a distributor and an exhibitor. All disputes subject to arbitration under the Trade Practice Code except disputes relating to over-buying and to clearance shall be between a distributor and an exhibitor.

(2) Disputes relating to over-buying. Disputes relating to over-buying shall be between two parties, the complaining exhibitor and the exhibitor complained against, but each distributor which has signed the Trade Practice Code and at the time has a license agreement with the exhibitor complained against shall be entitled to notice of all hearings and shall have all other rights which it would have if it were a party to such dispute except only the right to designate an arbitrator.

(3) Disputes relating to clearance. Disputes relating to clearance shall be between three parties (a) the complaining exhibitor, (b) the exhibitor complained against, and (c) the distributors, as a group, which at the time have license agreements with the complaining exhibitor and grant to the exhibitor complained against the clearance complained of. Each of said distributors shall be entitled to notice of all hearings and shall have all other rights of a party except only the right individually to designate an arbitrator.

In the event that in any dispute relating to clearance any party thereto shall claim in writing filed with the arbitration board that any exhibitor not named as a party thereto may be prejudiced by any award made therein in favor of the complaining exhibitor, the arbitration board shall have no power to proceed with the hearing unless within a time to be fixed by the arbitration board there shall have been filed with it the consents in writing, signed by all such exhibitors, to be bound by any award which may be made in such dispute. If such consents in writing of all such exhibitors shall have been so filed, the arbitration board shall proceed with the arbitration and such exhibitors shall be entitled to notice of all hearings and shall have the right to represent themselves or be represented by others at all hearings and to examine or cross-examine all witnesses. The award of the arbitration board shall be binding upon such exhibitors to the same extent as if they had been parties to such dispute.

VI. Oaths of Arbitrators

Each person, upon his appointment as an arbitrator or as a member of any panel, shall take and subscribe to one or more counterparts of the form or forms of oath of office

ARBITRATION PROCEEDINGS TRACED

prescribed by law in the jurisdiction or jurisdictions where he shall act as arbitrator. In the event that no such form of oath is prescribed by law, he shall take and subscribe to thee following form of oath:

> I, ..., having been duly appointed (an arbitrator) (a member of the ....panel of arbitrators) for the .... exchange territory, do solemnly swear that I will faithfully and fairly hear and examine the disputes brought before me and will determine each such dispute in accordance with the spirit and intent of the provisions of the Trade Practice Code of the motion picture industry and the Rules of Arbitration annexed thereto, and will make a just award to the best of my understanding.

Said persons shall, from time to time, also take and subscribe to such other or additional oaths as may be required by law in connection with the hearing of any dispute and shall make and execute all papers necessary or convenient to make their awards binding and effective to the extent that such awards may in any particular case be made binding and effective.

The oaths shall be filed in the office of the Permanent Arbitration Board and in such other offices or places as shall be required by law in the jurisdiction or jurisdictions wherein the arbitration shall be held or wherein the award shall be filed to make the same binding and effective.

VII. Term of Office of Arbitrators, Removals and Vacancies

(1) Term of office. The members of each panel of arbitrators shall serve for six months.

(2) Removals. Arbitrators in the panel appointed by distributors and affiliated exhibitors may be removed at any time by a majority of the distributors and a majority of the affiliated exhibitors who are at the time entitled to participate in the appointment of arbitrators to such panel.

Arbitrators in a panel appointed by an organized exhibitor group or groups may be removed at any time by the action of the exhibitor group or groups who are at the time entitled to participate in the appointment of arbitrators to such panel.

(3) Vacancies. Vacancies in any panel of arbitrators occurring by reason of death, resignation, removal or disqualification shall be filled in the manner hereinabove provided for the original appointment of arbitrators to such panel. Any arbitrator so appointed shall serve for the balance of the term of his predecessor in office.

VIII. Jurisdiction of Boards

No Permanent Arbitration Board shall hear, and no Special Arbitration Board shall be constituted to hear, a dispute unless and until each of the parties thereto shall have become a party signatory to the Trade Practice Code, shall have otherwise complied with Article XVII thereof, and shall have signed the agreement of arbitration annexed hereto and made a part hereof. The secretary of each Permanent Arbitration Board shall keep a list of the names and addresses of the distributors and exhibitors in his exchange territory who have agreed to arbitrate disputes as above provided, which list shall be available for inspection during ordinary business hours by any interested party.

Each dispute which is subject to arbitration under the Trade Practice Code may be submitted to and determined by the Permanent Arbitration Board of the exchange territory in which it arises and shall be so submitted and determined unless one or more of the parties to such dispute shall request that such dispute be submitted to a Special Arbitration Board, in which case the dispute shall be submitted to and determined by a Special Arbitration Board. It is intended that any party to a dispute shall feel free to have such dispute submitted to a Special Arbitration Board. Until a Permanent Arbitration Board is established in an exchange territory all disputes which are subject to arbitration under the Trade Practice Code shall be submitted to Special Arbitration Boards.

An arbitration board shall have only the powers conferred upon arbitrators by the Trade Practice Code and these Rules of Arbitration and every award shall conform thereto.

HAYS URGES REVIVAL OF AMERICAN SPIRIT

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, speaking at the Indiana Day program, New York World's Fair, Thursday, urged a revival of "the American spirit."

"After all," he said, "it is with our assets, not our liabilities, that we will build the America of tomorrow, with its higher standards of living, better opportunities for our people, greater plenty to share, and the greater reserve which human security will require.

"America today needs a spirit as well as a program. That spirit, solemn and consecrated, exists. It is that spirit which urges us forward to new heights of progress and prosperity without sacrificing the principles of individual freedom that made us a great nation."

IX. Arbitration Proceedings

(1) Statement of claim. To initiate an arbitration hereunder the complaining party shall deliver personally or mail to the secretary of the Permanent Arbitration Board a statement of claim and a copy or copies thereof, which shall set forth in non-technical language the following:

(a) The name and address of the complaining party, the name of the theatre(s) involved in the dispute and the name of the party or parties claimed against, and, in case of a dispute relating to over-buying, the names of the distributors entitled to notice as hereinabove provided.

(b) A brief statement of the claim (including, if a license agreement is involved, the date of the same and the names of the parties thereto) and of the relief sought.

(c) A demand for arbitration and, if the complaining party does not desire that the dispute be submitted to the Permanent Arbitration Board, a request that the dispute be submitted to a Special Arbitration Board.

(d) The designation of an arbitrator who shall serve in the event that either the complaining party in such statement, or the party (or, in a case of a dispute relating to clearance, any party) complained against, requests the submission of the dispute to a Special Arbitration Board.

The statement of claim must be accompanied by a filing fee of $5.00.

(2) Notice of claim. The secretary shall promptly deliver personally or post by registered mail a copy of such statement of claim to the party (or, in case of a dispute relating to clearance, to each party) complained against. Such party (or, in case of a dispute relating to clearance, each such party entitled to designate an arbitrator) shall, within seven days after the delivery or mailing of such copy, deliver personally or post by registered mail to the secretary an acknowledgement in writing of receipt thereof and shall also at the same time designate in writing an arbitrator who shall serve in the event that either the complaining party shall in his statement of claim, or any party complained against shall in its designation, request that the dispute be submitted to a Special Arbitration Board.

(3) Notification of arbitrators. If any party to a dispute shall have requested that the dispute be submitted to a Special Arbitration Board, the secretary shall forthwith upon the receipt of the designations of arbitrators notify the arbitrators designated by the parties of their designation. In the event that any party shall not have designated an arbitrator when required to do so as hereinabove provided, the then chairman of the Permanent Arbitration Board shall designate an arbitrator for such party from one of the panels of arbitrators.

If no party to a dispute shall have requested that the dispute be submitted to a Special Arbitration Board, the secretary shall promptly so notify the chairman of the Permanent Arbitration Board presiding at the time the complaint is filed and the Permanent Arbitration Board as constituted at such time of filing shall hear and determine the dispute.

(4) Disqualification of arbitrator. No arbitrator shall act in any dispute in which he has, either directly or indirectly, a personal or financial interest unless such disqualification shall have been waived by all the parties; provided that in any dispute relating to clearance submitted to a Special Arbitration Board the arbitrator designated by the distributors shall not be disqualified because of his personal or financial interest in any distributor other than a distributor affiliated with an exhibitor which is a party to the dispute.

(5) Hearing and notice. The chairman of the arbitration board to which a dispute is submitted shall arrange for a prompt hearing thereof and give reasonable notice to the other arbitrators and to the parties of the time and place of the hearing and of the personnel of the arbitration board. In the case of any dispute relating to overbuying the chairman shall also give similar notice to all distributors who then have license agreements with the party complained against.

Hearings shall be held in the city named in Article I hereof in which are located the exchanges from which the complaining exhibitor is served or, if the complaint is filed by a distributor, in the city named in Article I hereof in which are located the exchanges from which the exhibitor complained against is served.

Parties may represent themselves or be represented by others at all hearings and shall have the right to examine or cross-examine all witnesses.

Witnesses shall testify under oath.

Any arbitration board may require any party to a dispute heard by it to produce at the hearing any records or documents deemed by it to be material and relevant.

Each arbitration board shall be the judge of the relevancy and materiality of the testimony or evidence offered, but the legal rules of evidence shall not be applied and the board may inquire into the good faith of any claim or defense offered.

Waiver, Awards, Local Rules and Arbitration Cost

Stenographic records of hearings will not be made unless one or more parties shall request the same and provide funds therefor, in which case the stenographer shall be designated or approved by the arbitration board.

(6) Waiver of oral hearing. The parties to a dispute (including all parties entitled to notice of hearing thereof) may by agreement in writing, filed with the secretary, waive oral hearings. In such case the complaining party shall file with the secretary a statement under oath of his claim supported by material and relevant evidence (which may include excerpts or statements from books of account or other records and documents) and by written argument, together with copies thereof for each party complained against. Immediately upon the filing thereof a copy shall be delivered personally or posted by registered mail by the secretary to each party complained against, each of whom, if he desires to make answer, shall within seven days after receipt of his copy file a statement under oath of his defense, supported in like manner, together with copies thereof for each other party to the dispute. Immediately upon the filing thereof a copy shall be delivered personally or posted by registered mail by the secretary to each other party to the dispute. If any party complained against makes answer as hereinabove provided, each other party to the dispute may within five days after receipt by him of a copy thereof file with the secretary a reply statement under oath supported in the manner above described, together with copies thereof which shall be transmitted by the secretary to the other parties to the dispute in the manner above provided. At the expiration of said five-day period, or, if no answer has been made, at the expiration of said seven-day period, the record shall be submitted by the secretary to the appropriate arbitration board.

X. Awards

An award in favor of the complaining party shall contain a statement of the claim or claims determined in favor of such party and the procedure, if any be required, to be followed in carrying out the award.

An award adverse to the complaining party shall dismiss the claim for lack of merit.

Each award of a Special Arbitration Board shall include an assessment of costs of the arbitration.

XI. Local Rules and Regulations

Each Permanent Arbitration Board may establish such rules and regulations, not inconsistent with these Rules of Arbitration or the Trade Practice Code, as such board may deem necessary or proper to facilitate the arbitration of disputes. Such rules and regulations shall not, however, enlarge the powers of, or confer additional powers upon, any arbitration board.

Each Permanent Arbitration Board shall also establish a special class of disputes which are of a type which require prompt and immediate decision and the Permanent Arbitration Board and Special Arbitration Boards hearing disputes of such special class shall give preference in the hearing and expedite the decision thereof.

XII. Cost of Arbitration

No Permanent Arbitration Board shall assess costs in any arbitration heard by it. In each arbitration heard by a Special Arbitration Board, such board shall assess as costs against one or more of the parties, in such proportion as it may deem just and proper and without regard to which party shall have invoked the Special Arbitration Board, only the fees of the neutral arbitrator or arbitrators.

Filing fees shall be applied toward the payment of expenses of arbitrations hereunder in the exchange territory where collected. To the extent that the moneys received are insufficient for such purpose, the distributors, the affiliated exhibitors and the organized exhibitor groups who are entitled to participate in the appointment of the panel of neutral arbitrators for such exchange territory shall provide funds for the payment of the same. If said distributors, affiliated exhibitors and organized exhibitor groups are unable to agree upon a fair apportionment of such expenses, such apportionment shall be made by a Special Arbitration Board constituted for that purpose, in which case said distributors and affiliated exhibitors shall be deemed to be one party and said organized exhibitor groups shall be deemed to be the other party.

Capital Sees Means for Adjusting Situations That Cause Trust Suits

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Considerable speculation over the possibilities of developing the long-sought program to give industry and the Government an intermediary through which adjustments may be made of situations which give rise to anti-trust suits follows the "exploratory" conversations between Department of Commerce officials and representatives of oil companies against which Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold has announced he will take action in the near future.

For years, the motion picture and other important industries of the Nation have pleaded for the establishment of some agency in the Federal Government which could give them advice in advance as to whether proposed practices or actions would be deemed counter to the anti-trust statutes.

Sporadically, under various Administrations, open-minded attorneys general have sought to make this possible; unfortunately, it is said, under such circumstances some industries have taken advantage of the situation to press practices against which the Department raised no objections to lengths never contemplated when the matters were originally under discussion.

As a result, succeeding heads of the Department of Justice found themselves confronted with situations which they felt should be the basis of action but found their hands more or less tied because of the previous tacit approval which had been given the original and, in themselves, unobjectionable proposals.

That is the situation today with respect to a number of industries, and is the basic reason why Mr. Arnold, in a number of instances, has resorted to equity proceedings rather than criminal cases.

Convinced, on the whole, that the Department of Justice means business, many industries now are anxious for an opportunity to "clean house" before they are caught in the meshes of the Government's anti-trust net.

It was on this basis that representatives of West Coast oil companies met with Dr. Willard Thorp, economic adviser to Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, apparently with the approval—or at least without the disapproval—of the Assistant Attorney General, who has in the past declared himself more interested in eliminating monopolistic situations than in harassing individuals.

Since the Department of Justice is preparing to take action against the oil men, its officials could not well undertake conversations with the men they planned to prosecute, lest the negotiations fail of result and jeopardize the Government's case. But, it is said, those officials had no objection to the oil men seeking counsel elsewhere in the Government, with a view to developing a program for correction of the abuses at which the proceedings will be aimed and which might be used as the basis for suspension of action, by consent decree or in some other way.

What transpired at the meeting between the oil men and the Department of Commerce has not been revealed. That nothing definite was developed, however, is known. What may come out of this and future conferences is a matter of conjecture. But that, if the negotiations are successful, an entirely new policy for handling anti-trust law violations may be developed goes without saying in Washington.

Because of the similarity in the structure and operating methods of the two industries, motion picture interests are said to be watching closely the attempt of the oil companies to develop new machinery for the settlement of monopoly complaints. The particular case involved in these negotiations, as it happens, centers around alleged violation of a consent decree, and the matter becomes of particular interest to film companies because the industry is facing exactly the same situation in the very same California territory, also in Chicago.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

We can see the long, very long, and deft, very deft hands of the Metro praise agents and press agents, among them Billy Ferguson, in widely publicising the fact that they're out to find a "junior" lion, a lion young to the company's Leo the Lion, for use as a trademark on its short subjects. They say they have enlisted the active cooperation of the 3,500 clubs of the Lion's International, whose 125,000-odd members, they add without batting an eyelash, will stage "a gigantic lion hunt in public zoos and private menageries."

Likely specimens—they must be American-born—will participate in a Lions' "beauty parde" at the Lions International Convention in Pittsburgh July 18th and the "winning lion" will be taken immediately to Hollywood there to be christened Leo the Lion, Junior, with ceremonies and a goodly gathering of newspaper reporters and photographers.

We remember the days when Ferguson used to "sell" the old Leo, now deceased, as a most ferocious, roaring beast, at a time when the animal hadn't a tooth in his head and Billy fed him creampuffs.

Aubrey Flanagan, our scout in London, sends along the notice in a British trade paper telling about the West Bromwich Town Council looking for the owner of a film theatre in Sitewell Road, West Bromwich.

The hall, which has been closed since sound started in 1929, is now considered to be in such a dangerous condition that it has been thought advisable to have it demolished. But the owners cannot be traced.

Brenda Frazier—she's a pretty gal, at that—who spends half of her time Park Avenue cafe society-ing, and the other half in the pictorial-and-print society pages of the newspapers, is purported to have been offered some $500,000 from Louis B. But, according to Nancy Randolph, New York Daily News society editor, "Brenda just toyed with her cigaret holder, gave him one of her Mona Lisa smiles, and gently shook her head no." Such condescension.

Butlers take their butlering seriously in New York, where more butlers butler per square foot than any other butler sector of the country. Take the butlers, for example, who butler for the Morgans, the Vanderbilts, the Astors, and the like. They have their own elite circle, in the Staff Club, to which no ordinary cooks or dishwashers can gain access. They seldom give recognition in official manner to such items as "the movies." But, apparently, the movies' own Arthur Treacher, the butleringest butler of them all, has butlered so much and so well in films that the Staff Club met him the other morning as he arrived in New York for a vacation from Hollywood. The butlers assembled with all due formalities on the steps of Grand Central Station, dressed in striped pants, Oxford coats, wing collars—and wide British accents. To Treacher they gave an honorary presidency in their club.

GRANDMOTHER and grandfather had to pose, stiff and uneasy, for the wedding photograph, and that was that. Today, the bride and bridegroom can have a motion picture, in color, made of the event, starting with the moment the household awakes and begins its bustling preparations for the Great Day, and ending with the honeymooning couple waving good-bye from the liner's rail.

Harcourt-Harris, 1475 Broadway, New York, take care of everything. Your movie will have the suave "production," the skilful splicing of film, the smooth close-ups and fade-outs of a Hollywood Grade "A" picture. Mr. Harris, or another member of the firm, goes to the home with as many camera men as are needed for the job. He works out his picture and goes over the route to be covered at least once on the day before the ceremony.

"Our men are quick and unobtrusive. We are all good at not getting into people's hair," says Mr. Harris. "Very often our men are concealed behind ferns and things, and people have no idea they are taking pictures. We like to start with the bride in the morning, the putting on of the gown and veil and so on. . . ."

For the 42nd time Joseph Crehan, oldtime Hollywood character actor, has donned whiskers, stuck a cigar in his mouth and assumed the role of Ulysses S. Grant.

This time he is playing Grant as the president of the United States, in Paramount's "Geronimo," story of the war against the Apache Indian chief who terrorized the southwest for ten years a generation ago and cost the Government $41,000,000.

Eight weeks ago Crehan finished playing Grant, the general in De Mille's "Union Pacific." Throughout his career on stage and screen he has played Grant the General 31 times and Grant the President 11.

Crehan, who is said to bear a striking resemblance to Grant, enjoys the role except that the cigars nauseate him. He has to smoke them, however, because Grant was an inveterate cigar smoker.

WAGES OF EXTRAS IS DEATH

Mass "killings" on the screen are on the upswing. Some 80 extras were paid $1,140 to get "killed" in "Union Pacific." Wages for the 50 or more "fatalities" in "Geronimo" will be proportionately the same. Seventy-five Arab and French Foreign Legion extras bit the desert dust in "Beau Geste." In "Hotel Imperial" 30 character actors and play "dead" at one time or another.

"Dodge City," "The Oklahoma Kid," "Juarez" and "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" had their full share of killings. The carnage rate will be pretty high in "Gone with the Wind." Samuel Goldwin plans to have a score or two "killed off" in "The Real Glory," and it is to be expected that a sizeable quota will be polished off in such productions as "Northwest Passage" and "Drums Along the Mohawk."

At Omaha the following 53 members of the Paramount sales staff will join the contingent: J. T. Manfre, G. W. Hinton, R. Carnie, J. W. Stark, J. R. Young, P. Hannon, A. H. Cole, J. H. States, N. At Evanston, Wyo., G. A. Smith and C. N. Peacock will board the special while at Salt Lake City the following 12 members of the sales staff will board the train: C. J. Bell, C. J. Duer, R. C. Ryan, W. M. Williams, J. Vos, W. A. Plunkett, F. H. Smith, A. Heid, H. M. Glanfield, J. G. Wilcos, H. Smith, and C. Burdette.

The following 31 executives and members of the sales staff will meet the conventioners in Hollywood: G. K. Haddow, R. M. Gillham, M. Sattler, H. Randel, W. H. Erbb, W. Hansher, W. O. Kelly, G. Lynch, J. J. Donohue, H. N. East, J. M. Bettencourt, A. R. Taylor, H. W. Haustein, J. E. Hurley, R. C. McDonnell, M. Segel, D. Spracher, G. H. Haviland, R. L. Estill, F. A. Roe, A. R. Anderson, G. Brogger, L. G. DeWaide, L. G. Stang, D. A. Wilson, S. Ralston, D. Brickman, R. Simpson, J. C. Rodman, R. C. LiBeau and G. Sessler.

Members from the Los Angeles exchange also attending the three-day session include I. G. White, H. Haas, M. C. Burles, L. C. Bristol and J. Haas.

The above 274 executives, members of the foreign and domestic sales staff will convene with production officials at the opening session on Thursday, June 8 at the first day of the three day meeting with Neil F. Agnew, vice president and general sales manager, presiding.

Other New Product and Sales Developments

The midwest sales district of Warner Brothers won this year's "Sears Sales Drive," with the west coast and central Districts winding up in second and third places, respectively. Carl Leserman was co-ordinator of the sales drive, named in honor of Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager. The drive ran from Dec. 25, 1938 to April 15, 1939.

Sharing in the awards are the following:

First, Rud Lohrenze as head of the midwest district; branches in this district receiving awards are: Chicago, Tom Gilliam, Manager; Minneapolis, Clarence Olson, Manager; Milwaukee, R. T. Smith, Manager; St. Louis, Hall Walsh, Manager; Des Moines, A. W. Anderson, Manager; and Omaha, Sid Rose, Manager.

Second, W. E. Callaway, west coast district manager, and the following exchanges: Salt Lake City, Wm. F. Gordon; San Francisco, Al Shmitken; Portland, V. Stewart; Denver, E. A. Bell and Los Angeles, N. H. Brower.

Third: Robert Smeltzer, central district manager, and the following branches: Pittsburgh, Harry Seed; Detroit, F. E. North; Philadelphia, W. G. Mansell; Cincinnati, Ralph Kinsler; and Cleveland, H. J. Ochs.

Mr. Leserman called this year's drive the most successful in the history of the company, topping last year's by 25 per cent. The final week reached a new high with nearly $2,000,000 in billings recorded.

Paramount Partners Arrive For Advance Product Talks

Paramount theatre operating partners from several sections were in New York this week for home office and product conferences in advance of the annual sales convention in Los Angeles.

Among them were J. J. Friedl and L. J. Ludwig of Minnesota Amusement Company, Minneapolis; Vincent McFaul of Buffalo; A. H. Blank and Ralph Branton of Tri-States Theatres, Des Moines; Martin Mullin and Sam Pinanski of M. and P. Theatres, Boston, and Hunter Perry, of Richmond.

Empire Hears About "U", Republic, GB Lineup

Empire Universal Films, Ltd., distributors in Canada of Universal, Republic and Gaumont British product, concluded its three day sales convention at the Royal York hotel in Toronto last Saturday.

Thursday's session had been devoted to Republic. James Grainger, Republic president, left New York last Wednesday and addressed the convention last Thursday. W. A. Perry, general manager of Empire Universal, presided, and on the platform were O. R. Hanson, Empire president, Paul Nathanson, vice-president and A. Laurie, assistant general manager.

After the convention meeting, at which Mr. Grainger outlined the 1939-40 Republic product, a dinner was given for him attended by all the Empire sales force and many from Famous Players Canadian Corporation, including N. L. Nathanson, president. Mr. Grainger returned to New York Saturday.

Nate J. Blumberg, Universal president, William Scully, general sales manager and vice-president, and F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager, left for Toronto last Thursday to attend the meeting. Last Friday was devoted to a discussion of forthcoming Universal product, and the meeting was addressed by Mr. Blumberg, Mr. Scully and Mr. McCarthy.

At a luncheon Friday, guests included N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players-Canadian; Henry L. Nathanson, general manager of Regal Films, Ltd.; Col. John A. Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada; J. Earl Lawson, member of the Dominion House of Commons; N. A. Taylor, vice-president of the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario and general manager of 20th Century Theatres, Ltd.; Ben Geldsaler, Morris Stein, R. S. Roddick, Clarence Robson, T. J. Bragg and R. W. Bolstad of Famous Players-Canadian; Jule Allen and Herbert Allen of Premier Theatres, Ltd.; H. T. Long and D. Main of Associated Theatres, Ltd., and local film critics.

Among those representing Empire-Universal were: President O. R. Hanson; Vice-President Paul Nathanson; General Manager Alfred W. Perry; Assistant General Manager A. J. Laurie; Secretary-Treasurer M. Stratton; Frank Fisher, Toronto branch manager; Harry Paynter, Montreal; Jerry Hoyt, St. John, N. B.; Walter Kennedy, exploitation manager; and A. Oulahan of Toronto.

Following the meetings, Mr. Scully and Mr. McCarthy returned to New York over the week end, while Mr. Blumberg went on to the coast to establish summer headquarters there.

On Saturday Arthur A. Lee, Gaumont British vice-president, outlined the GB lineup for the coming year.

"U" Production Up; Seidelman to Europe

As Universal entered its second year under its new management, its studios reached a new peak this week with seven productions in work and 2,500 employees on the payroll, said to be an all time high for the company. The company's expansion program is proceeding, with old equipment being replaced by new in both technical and property fields.

Fine Arts Deal Pends With Grand National

If a deal now being negotiated is completed, Fine Arts will contribute 30 films to the 1939-40 Grand National program, according to Franklyn Warner, Fine Arts president.

If the negotiations should fail, said Mr. Warner, Fine Arts will reduce its output to eight films and try to arrange a major release.

MGM Bookers Study Checking Problems

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's final territorial conference of office managers, bookers and checking supervisors, held last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, was devoted to an analysis of the problems of the checking organization and the duties of office managers.

Alan F. Cummings, manager of exchange operations, presided, over the sessions which were attended by representatives of the Albany, Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, New Haven, Canadian and New York exchanges.

Wanger Completes Lineup; Small To Start His Program

Walter Wanger has announced the completion of his production plans for 1939-40, with Mr. Wanger to contribute five films to the United Artists program.

The productions are: "Winter Carnival," with Ann Sheridan and Richard Carlson; "Whose Wife?" starring Loretta Young and David Niven; "House Across the Bay," starring Joan Bennett; "My Personal Life," based on the Vincent Sheehan novel, "Personal History," and "Send Another Coffin," based on the new novel by F. G. Presnell.

More than $300,000 has been spent on reconstruction and new equipment, and additional sums have been appropriated. Two new sound stages, bringing the total up to nine, are being rushed to completion, as the shooting schedule calls for nine features during July.

20TH-FOX HAS LEAD IN LIBERIA'S ONE THEATRE

A large portion of the playing time in Liberia, Negro Republic in Africa, has been obtained by Twentieth Century-Fox in a deal closed by Irving Maas, foreign service manager.

The pictures will be shown in the only theatre in the Republic. The theatre is operated by the Firestone Rubber and Tire Company. With 24 playing weeks available, the company purchased a total of 12 films from Twentieth Century-Fox.

Edward Small arrived in Hollywood last Wednesday after a brief holiday, to start on his 1939-40 program. Budgeted at $5,000,000, his films will include "Kit Carson," with Joel McCrea, Henry Fonda and Frances Dee; "My Son, My Son," with Louis Hayward; "Quantrill, the Raider," "Valentino," "South of Pago Pago," "Two Years Before the Mast" and "Food of the Gods," based on the H. G. Wells story.

Joseph H. Seidelman, Universal vice-president and foreign head, sailed for Europe Monday on the Normandie. He will convene the company's European sales representatives in Paris shortly after his arrival. On June 27th Mr. Seidelman will attend the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association convention in Blackpool, England, where a screening will be held of Universal's "The Sun Never Sets."

William Heineman, Universal western sales manager, left last Friday night for a week's tour of the mid-west territory. The primary reason for the trip is to set the salesmen off on the Universal summer product line-up.

Twentieth Century-Fox Meeting Opens at Rio

Twentieth Century-Fox's first South American convention started Thursday for three days, with Sidney Kent, president, and Walter Hutchinson, director of foreign distribution, attending.

Mr. Kent, who will be received by President Vargas and Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha of Brazil, will outline Latin-American production plans at the convention, and propose a program to strengthen ties with exhibitors and the industry in that market.

In attendance will be J. C. Bavetta, Brazil managing director; S. S. Horen, managinig director of Argentina, S. Chiesa of Peru and Arthur Ruscica of Chile and about 40 salesmen.

Mr. Kent and Mr. Hutchinson will leave Rio about June 10th for Trinidad, where a Caribbean territory convention will be held.

Plan New Wisconsin Buying Service

A new buying service for the majority of independents in Wisconsin has been announced by Max Weisner and E. F. Maertz. It is called Theatre Service Agency. Mr. Weisner has been associated with film exchanges in the Milwaukee territory for many years. Mr. Maertz, president of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and upper Michigan, has been an exhibitor more than 26 years.

RKO Hearings Set for Monday

Judge Learned Hand of the circuit court of appeals has set next Monday as the date for an application on the part of John S. Stover, attorney for Ernest W. Stirn, for further extension of time to file his record on appeal from the confirmation of the RKO reorganization plan.

Atlas Corporation, also on Monday, will apply to the court for dismissal of the Stirn appeal. Previous extensions were attacked on the ground that only a district court judge had the right to grant them, and Judge Hand stated that if this were so, a "dismissal of the appeal would be in order."

Two other appeals from the confirmation by other parties will not be affected by the decision.

William Bondy, federal judge, has signed an order which authorizes the Irving Trust Company, RKO trustee, to extend time of payment by it of $50,000 in secured 6 per cent gold debentures from June 1, 1939 to January 1, 1940.

Judell Company to Make and Sell 36

A new producing company with a large program and national distribution was announced in New York last week by Ben Judell, a producer and distributor of 34 years' experience.

The company will make 36 features, three a month, for the new season, beginning September 3rd, Mr. Judell said. The program will cost "about $1,000,000."

Mr. Judell outlined the distribution set-up: 27 exchanges, some his own offices in the key cities, others those of the regional distributors already established.

His own offices will be in Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Louis, Kansas City, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, and Washington.

Other distributors to be used are, in Pittsburgh, Lou and Milton Lefton, of Monarch Pictures; in New York, Syndicate Pictures of Melvin Hirsch and Burt Kulick; in Cincinnati, Lee Goldberg; in Detroit, William Flemian and Ann O'Donnell of Excellent Pictures; in Boston, Harry Asher; in Cleveland, Lee Goldberg; in San Francisco, Armand Cohn of All-Star Distributors.

The executives are to be Harry Rathner, sales manager and eastern representative, based in New York; Jerry Olenick, advertising and publicity manager, with offices in Los Angeles; Sig Neufeld, in charge of production.

There will be six associate producers, whom Mr. Judell did not name. The company will rent studio space in Hollywood. No name has been chosen for the new company. Production will start in July.

Of the 36 features, six will be in the "A" classification, Mr. Judell intimated. Directors and players are being signed now.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

For Norton-Somlo

Currently in production at Denham for Norton-Somlo Production is "A Window in London," which is being directed by Herbert Mason. This will be followed by "On the Night of the Fire," which Brian Desmond Hurst will direct from a best-seller by F. L. Greene. It has a provincial city background. Leading artistes in the film will be Diana Wynyard and Ralph Richardson. Production starts in two or three weeks.

Williams Chosen

Emlyn Williams, British stage and screen actor-playwright, is to play one of the leading roles in the film version of A. J. Cronin's "The Stars Look Down," a Grafton Production to be released by Grand National.

Michael Redgrave and Margaret Lockwood already have been assigned to the principal roles. Among others in the cast is Nancy Price, of the older generation of stage personalities. Mutz Greenbaum is to have charge of the camera, and Carol Reed will direct.

Three Stories

Three stories are scheduled for production in the near future at the Warner-First National Studios, Islington.

First is the life of Baron de Reuter, who established the world-famed news agency, for which an original story has been written by Valentine Williams. Second is a story already prepared, dealing with the foundation of the Cunard Line. Third is Somerset Maugham's "Caesar's Wife," adapted by Ian Hay.

Elstree Activity

When Herbert Brenon took the floor at Elstree last week with the Edgar Wallace thrilller "The Flying Squad" the number of Associated British pictures in current production totaled four, making the Studio the most consistently active of all British studios—consistent, that is, as regards the sustained level of production and the number of films before the cameras at one time.

Other pictures on the floor at Elstree include the Tommy Trinder musical comedy, the title of which has been changed from "Runaway Romance" to "She Couldn't Say No." Graham Cutts is directing, and Googie Withers, Greta Gynt, Fred Emney, Basil Hadford and David Burns are in the cast. Claude Friese Greene is at the camera.

Shooting on "Poison Pen," the Flora Robson drama, has been concentrated upon an old church at Aldenham, a village three miles from the studio, where exteriors have been filmed.

Fourth on the floor is "Dead Man's Shoes," in which Leslie Banks is starring, with Thomas Bentley directing. So great has been the demand for space at the Elstree Studios that exterior shooting has been transferred, for the time being, to the Rock Studios across the meadows, with the building used as setting for a French factory. Gunther Krampf is cameraman.

Ostrer Buys

Seven new subjects have been purchased by Maurice Ostrer, director of Gainsborough Pictures, for ultimate production at the Islington Studios. Four of these are novels and three plays.

First is "The Ghost Train," which was filmed by Gainsborough in 1931 and is due for a new adaptation with Arthur Askey, radio comedian, in the lead.

Arnold Ridley, author of "The Ghost Train," is also represented with another story, "Third Time Lucky," which also was produced by Gainsborough some years ago. It has a setting in Devonshire and London.

The third is "The S.S. Mystery," a sabotage thriller.

Others include "Midsummer Mischief," by Nelson Mapple, the story of a country curate and set in the hamlet of "Market Fogbottom"; "Fighter Blake," the study of a big man in the coal mining industry; "Behind the Scenes," Lance Lanyon's satirical comedy of newspaper life, and a mysterv melodrama, "Stolen Death," by Leo Grex, which is to be adapted as another vehicle for Inspector Hornleigh, with Gordon Harker and Alistair Sim in the leading roles.

Shipyard Locale

Settings on the Gracie Fields comedy, "Shipyard Sally," have switched to the shipbuilding yards of Clydebank and neighborhood. One recent set, which has an important share in the film, is that of a neighborhood street to which Gracie returns after presenting, in London, a petition from her fellow workers for the resumption of shipbuilding on the River Clyde. A line of typical Glasgow shops is set before a skyline of derricks and industrial machinery. Over a hundred crowd workers were engaged.

The next set in course of erection will be the foyer of a London hotel. Monty Banks is directing with Maurice Ostrer in charge of production.

Foal to Wreath

The story of a horse, from the day it is foaled to the day it wins the Grand National, classic steeplechase of the year, will be told in "Happy Event," which Leon Hepner of Anglo-French Films is producing at Highbury.

Exteriors already have been shot at premier British race courses, Hurst Park and Newmarket. Stanley Wooton, leading English trainer, lent eight horses for recent sequences at Hurst Park, which cameraman Leslie Murray shot from numerous novel angles.

Portrait

"Tinker" Russel Flint, 23-year-old son of the British painter, exhibits in this year's Royal Academy a portrait of Robert Stevenson at work on the set of "Young Man's Fancy." Seen in the composition are stars from the film, with the focus on Billy Bennett in a Hussar's uniform and Anna Lee as the Human Cannon Ball about to be fired from a gun.

Formby Returns

Recovered from his recent illness, George Formby, winner of MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S Box Office Champion Poll, and most popular star of the British screen, has commenced work at the Ealing Studios on "Come On, George!"

The same team associated with the recent Formby successes, producer Jack Kitchin and director Anthony Kimmina, again are with the Lancashire comicker.

Formby this time plays the part of a jockey.

Providing the romantic interest is a "discovery," 18-year-old Patricia Kirkwood. Others in support of Formby are Joss Ambler as a racehorse owner, George Hayes as a trainer, Dave Burnaby as barker to a flea circus, and Gibb McLaughlin as a psychoanalyst with a trained horse.

Anthony Kimmins wrote the original story which he and Leslie Arliss are adapting.

Itemized

Shooting has been concluded at Ealing, two days ahead of schedule, on the Jimmy O'Dea comedy, "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," which Walter Forde has been directing.

Venture Films, whose two most recent productions, "Two Days to Live," with Richard Goolden, radio star, and "Trouble for Two" have been acquired by Anglo-American Film Corporation, have now completed arrangements for work to start upon a third, "The Murder Auction," at Worton Hall, Isleworth. To follow will be another Richard Goolden picture.

A film story of the King's First Dragoon Guards, and shown under that title, has been made by British Foundation Pictures, of which Ronald Haines is director-producer. This is to be followed with a subject entitled "Sailors with Wings," which is a story of the Fleet Air Arm.

Cast for an important role in the Norton-Somlo production, "A Window in London," is 20-year-old brunette Patricia Roc. Miss Roc, who has not played considerably in British films, is called a "discovery" of merit.

June Duprez, whose work in "Four Feathers" attracted considerable attention, has been chosen by Alexander Korda to play the part of the princess in the new color film, "The Thief of Baghdad," to be made at Denham. Conrad Veidt and Sabu will play in this film and Ludwig Berger will direct.

R. C. Sherriff, playwright, novelist and scenario writer, has joined the staff of Alexander Korda Productions. He will act as literary adviser and will work on scripts and scenarios. Sherriff's record as a screen writer includes such better known achievements as "Journey's End," "The Invisible Man," "The Three Comrades" and "Goodbye, Mr. Chips."

A series of short subjects dealing with Palestine is to be made by a new company called Bulldog Films, which has been formed by Ernest Gartside and Alex Bryce, erstwhile directors of Fox British.

BRITISH OPTIMISTIC ON REVISION OF RIGOROUS NEW DUTIES ON FILM

Hope for Adjustment Follows Presentation of Protest to Sir John Simon by Trade; Facts and Figures Cited

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Its case presented in full and final documentary form, its various sections united in assuring Sir John Simon that the retention of the new film duties would be disastrous for the industry, the trade now awaits future action, or inaction. Its fate is in the Chancellor's hands.

Though little indication was given by Sir John, either that he would make concessions, or that he would not, the pervading spirit is one of optimism. Early this week he was reported to be satisfied that certain adjustments were necessary. The Films Council unanimously resolved to send recommendations for changes to the Chancellor through the Board of Trade.

Simon Weakening

Hopes for the future are based partly upon confidence in the trade case as presented by the deputation, and partly upon the fact that though the Chancellor with characteristic legal diplomacy gave no inkling either way, he was obviously surprised by certain aspects brought to his notice.

It has already been reported that he told the delegation that the cost of a new tax would mean to them approximately a quarter of a farthing per seat per annum (35 cents per capita). This was in reply to a speaker representative of the trailer manufacturers, who pointing out that the average price of a seat was tenpence, contended that it would mean the addition of a halfpenny per seat by the exhibitor. The Chancellor replying it was not much in detail, agreed that in the aggregate it would mean a large sum, but that actually his tax did not mean more than the amount he mentioned.

His reply was taken as an indication of the attitude of mind which has probably inspired the new duties, an attitude based rather upon gross income than practical application of economic principles.

American Revenue Questioned

The less sanguine of trade students took as significant the request for information on how many millions went to America annually from this country as a return on motion picture imports. That D. E. Griffiths was able to point out that the American industry annually invested millions of capital in this country, and that the bulk of the money transferred to America was spent on the production of films and was not profit, did not remove the implicit sting in his question, or the reasoning which inspired it.

It is clear that Sir John, for all his studied reserves had not realized the urgency of the situation as it affects certain trade sections and was obviously interested in the reasoning of some of the partisans. Color, for instance, with its raising of the question of eight negatives, the sub-standard problem, and the economic implications of the newsreel situation, probably gave him food for thought.

Headed by Dave E. Griffiths, the deputation represented 17 trade sections for which the chief of the Kinematograph Renters' Society was spokesman.

Their visit was preceded by the presentation to Sir John of a lengthy series of memoranda running to 38 pages, comprising fifteen sectional viewpoints and arguments. Each, naturally, was representative of its particular branch. All united in agreement that the new budget duties would mean decreased importation of films to Britain, decreased production of films in this country, an all round drop in unemployment and a general deceleration of the present rate of trade, with operators in all departments going out of business. So far as newsreel companies, shorts film producers, specialized cinemas and color enterprises are concerned, it is feared and contended the result will be a complete cessation of activity.

CONTRACT VIOLATION COMPLAINTS STUDIED

With all factions of the film industry in Britain united in protest against the proposed new import and excise duties, friction between distributors and exhibitors has not disappeared entirely it was indicated this week when the London exhibitors' independent committee met to consider claims of widespread breaches and nonfulfilment of contracts by distributors. The committee will compile the complaints and take them up with individual distributors.

Distributors Submit Figures

Most urgently concerned are the distributors whose case, naturally, in that they control the country's film product, is to a great extent the case of the entire industry. As their memorandum pointed out they consumed 218,000,000 feet of British positive in the last year for the 1,635 British and foreign films they distributed—excluding old films, trailers, educationals and color prints. On this excise tax would amount to £473,000 net. On feature films the tax represents an increase in distribution costs of £700 per film, on shorts £53. They must either pass the tax on to the exhibitors or assume the burden themselves. The latter course would mean the elimination of shorts—the market for which is already in a precarious position—the cessation of distribution of British second features upon which the tax would mean an extra cost of £700 each, a consequent cut in the import of foreign features and a curtailment in quota production, the quality of which has already been appreciated by American distributors.

Would Cost Newsreels $1,250,000

This question of second features was raised, too, in the CEA memorandum, with emphasis upon the necessity of that type of film to the independent's survival. They raise, too, the likelihood of newsreels either being compelled to put up their charges to an uneconomic level, or going out of business altogether. More pointedly, however, exhibitors who pay £6,000,000 a year in entertainment duty emphasize that the theatre tax already fixes admission prices, that however small the actual tax may be calculated as a per capita cost, any increase in admissions following an increase in rentals would have to be at the rate of at least a penny a time. They pointed out that experience has shown that such increases mean a considerable decline in patronage.

Fully aware of the corollaries of the situation are the newsreel companies, who told Sir John that even if it were possible to increase the present hire rates of newsreels, ultimate contract cancellations would more than counter balance the amount brought in. In twelve months, ending March, 1939, the five newsreel companies issued 98,823,118 feet of positive. On this figure the new excise duties would mean an additional cost of £214,117. During the same period they imported 1,142,279 feet of negative and positive. The new import duty would thus involve them in extra charges of £33,733—a total additional cost to them of just under £250,000 per annum—a figure which removes them from the field of practical economics.

Aware of the implications both of import duties and excise duties are British producers. They are aware that the import duties will further burden those distributors who sponsor quota productions. More concerned are they, however, with the excise duties which would place an addition of at least £1,000 on the production and distribution of every British feature picture—giving the coup de grace to the voluntary British producer.

Studio owning companies have an obvious case in the face of the likelihood of a decrease in production. So, too, have laboratory companies who process approximately 340,000,000 feet of film annually. They foresee a diminution in the number of positive required for distribution, a consequence not only of the import duties, but also of the increased operating cost brought about by the excise duty, and fear the elimination of trailers and an end to dubbing.

Facing a dilemma, too, are importers and exporters here, who would be compelled to pay the full duties on films brought in here, which might not necessarily be sold, and for which no refund is guaranteed in the new Finance Bill. In such cases of payment of duties would mean a dead loss.

Quota and Fact

The Board of Trade announces that the examination of the returns for the year ended September 30, 1938, provided by exhibitors under the Cinematograph Films Act, 1927, shows that during that period the aggregate length (including repeated performances) of registered films exhibited in cinematograph theatres in Great Britain was 44,999 million feet, as compared with 42,726 million feet in the previous year. The total length of registered British films exhibited was 11,555 million feet or 25.7 per cent of the whole, as compared with 27.9 per cent for the year ended September 30, 1937.

The aggregate length of long films (3,000 feet and over) included in the above figures was 41,435 million feet, of which 10,949 million feet or 26.4 per cent were British, as compared with 29.3 per cent for the year ended September 30, 1937.

Under the Act, as amended by Section 16 of the Cinematograph Films Act, 1938, the minimum proportion of British films which exhibitors were required to show during the year ended September 30, 1938, was 15 per cent.

There were 103 British features registered in the year ended March 31, 1939, with registered footage of 697,742 and renters' quota footage of 870,904. Foreign features registered were 501 under the renters' quota, for a total of 3,214,347 feet, and 34 exempt at 274,475 feet for a total of 3,488,822 feet. Thus there was a renters' quota of 4,085,251 feet, giving a British percentage of 21.3, whereas the statutory minimum percentage is 15.

In short subjects total British renters' quota footage was 335,437 and foreign 891,840, a total of 1,227,277, or a British percentage of 27.3 as against a statutory minimum of 15 per cent.

LEADERS TILT AT COAST STUDIO UNION TRIAL

Drive by Locals for Return of Autonomy and Revocation of Assessment Is Recited

The long campaign of IATSE studio union members for return of autonomy and revocation of the 2 per cent salary assessment was recited this week in the trial of the suit in Hollywood by officers of Studio Technicians Local 37 against International officers for control of the unit.

Kibre Resolution Introduced

With Stephen Newman, former International representative of George E. Browne, IATSE president, continuing on the stand throughout, A. Brigham Rose, attorney for Local 37 elicited testimony regarding the 1937 suit brought by James E. Shaw, local member seeking declaratory relief from International supervision and the two per cent levy on wages. Also entered into the records was notice of an action brought by Irwin Hentschel and Chester Cohee, other Local 37 members, seeking the same remedy.

Judge Henry Willis permitted the introduction of text of a resolution drafted by Jeff Kibre, Local 37 minority leader which sought to have the 1938 Alliance convention return autonomy to four Hollywood studio locals. The resolution went down to overwhelming defeat and the convention instructed Mr. Browne to conduct an investigation of "obstructionist tactics and deterimental actions" of Mr. Kibre.

The disparity of the number of votes permitted delegates from various locals was shown through presentation of proceedings of conventions by Mr. Rose who sought to disclose that delegates appointed by International representatives had more voting power than those elected by other locals' members.

Mr. Rose said he would confer with J. Edgar Hoover, FBI chief and U. S. Attorney General Frank Murphy on possible action against International Alliance officers.

Accountable to No One

Mr. Browne has no one and nothing to account to for money collected under 2 per cent assessments except his conscience, Judge Willis ruled in the trial of the suit by officers of Local 37 against International officers over control of the local. Efforts by counsel for local officers to show that Mr. Browne never accounted for funds brought an admonition from the judge that disposition of money in any way by Mr. Browne was approved by the Alliance constitution and by-laws.

Frank Stickling, International representative, who with John Gatelee took over Local 37 offices March 13th, testified that he did not know what happened to charter of the local, despite the fact that armed guards have been around the premises since that date.

On Thursday Mr. Browne informed Judge Willis in a telegram that he had ordered the charter given to Louis Krouse of New York, general secretary of the International. Mr. Browne said in his wire that he revoked the charter because the local failed to hold a membership meeting in a three months period and thereby violated the constitution.

Bioff Answers Attorney

William Bioff, former personal aide to Mr. Browne shouted from the witness stand, "You're a liar" to Local 37's attorney, Mr. Rose when Mr. Rose told the court he would attempt to prove Mr. Bioff had obtained a $100,000 cashier's check from Joseph M. Schenck in 1937.

VOTES TO OUTLAW SIT-DOWN STRIKE

A bill setting up sharply defined limits within which employees and labor groups can carry on union activity in Pennsylvania was passed by the legislature on Monday. Sit-down strikes would be outlawed as "unfair labor practice" and "an illegal act."

Employers, including those in the motion picture business, are accorded the right to petition the State Labor Board for a collective-bargaining election, under the measure. In addition the bill declares it an "unfair labor practice" for an employee or a union or its officers:

1. To intimidate, restrain or coerce any employee by threats of violence or harm... with the intent of compelling the employee to join or refrain from joining any labor organization.
2. To intimidate, restrain or coerce any employer by threats of violence or harm to the person of said employer . . . with the intent of compelling the employer to accede to demands, conditions and terms of employment.

The outburst which brought a threat of contempt action against Mr. Bioff from Judge Willis, came as Mr. Bioff, called by Mr. Rose as a witness, balked at answering various questions. "The only purpose of this questioning," Mr. Bioff told the court, "is to smear me."

Asked whether he had deposited $100,000 in Westwood bank, two years ago, Mr. Bioff replied he didn't remember. The same answer was given to a query whether he had taken $100,000 in cash and placed it four days later in a safety vault. Mr. Rose then produced the transcript of Bioff's testimony before the Sacramento County Grand Jury, last year, to the effect Mr. Bioff did deposit that amount in 1937 and withdrew it in cash later. Mr. Bioff had declared before the grand jury that it was a loan. Objection to a question whether Bioff, C. B. Cregan and Harland Holmden, officers of IATSE, had formed a motion picture stock pool in 1937, was taken under advisement.

Earlier, Mr. Bioff declared that the reason for the long suspension of autonomy of four studio locals from 1936 to 1938 was that producers had refused to deal with local union leaders in collective bargaining.

The Screen Writers Guild has protested to producers the use of James Roosevelt's name in a letter to the National Labor Relations Board asking that hearing of charges of Wagner Act violation not be reopened. The Guild said that Mr. Roosevelt, vice-president of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., had not figured in the negotiations with studios.

A truce was signed Thursday by representatives of the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union and the Five Boro circuit of New York, ending a four day strike in nine houses of the circuit. Terms were to be determined on Friday.

Father Flanagan Tribute June 26

Show folk throughout the nation will unite June 26th in honoring Right Reverend Monsignor Edward J. Flanagan of Boystown, Neb., when the Variety Clubs of America present him their first annual National Humanitarian Award at a testimonial dinner sponsored by the Variety Club of Omaha.

The presentation will be made by national chief barker John H. Harris, general manager of the Harris Amusement Co., in accord with a vote of the 21 assembled Variety tents in convention recently in Detroit. A silver plaque will be awarded annually hereafter by the Variety clubs for the most unusual and outstanding humanitarian during the preceding year.

Father Flanagan was the prototype for the role portrayed by Spencer Tracy in Metro's "Boys Town."

The dinner committee includes chief barker Harry Shumow of the Omaha tent, chairman Joe Jacobs, Evert Cummings, Edward Shafton, John Gillin, Jr., Jack Epstein, and Leon Dizon. Robert J. O'Donnell of Dallas, John J. Maloney of Pittsburgh, and Mr. Harris will represent national Variety.

On the testimonial program are Governor Roy L. Cochran of Nebraska, Senator Edward R. Burke, Mayor Daniel B. Butler of Omaha, and the Most Reverend James H. Ryan, Bishop of the Diocese of Omaha.

Also on the civic committee honoring Father Flanagan are A. H. Blank, president of Tri-States Theatres Corp., Henry Doorly, publisher of the Omaha World-Herald, Chief Justice Robert G. Simmons of the Nebraska Supreme Court, Judge James A. Donahue of the U. S. District Court, Henry Monsky, International President of B'Nai B'Rith, William Jeffers, president of the Union Pacific Railroad, DeEmmett Bradshaw, president of Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Society, president W. Dale Clark of the Omaha National Bank, Frank P. Fogarty, commissioner of the Chamber of Commerce, president W. J. Coad of the Omaha Flour Mills, president Joseph Cooper of F. H. Cooper Enterprises, president O. H. Barmettler of Iten-Barmettler Biscuit Company, president George Brandeis of F. L. Brandeis & Sons, president James E. Davidson of Nebraska Power Company, president Paul Gallagher of Paxton & Gallagher Co., president Louis Hiller of Universal Finance Co., president Ford Hovey of Occidental Building & Loan Association, president H. A. Jacobberger of Kimball Laundry, vice-president W. D. Hosford of John Deere Plow Co., vice-president Morris E. Jacobs of Bozell & Jacobs, Inc., vice-president James P. Lee of the Omaha and Council Bluffs Street Railway Co., president Francis P. Matthews of the Chamber of Commerce, president Bert Murphy of Andrew Murphy & Sons, president Otta Swanson of Nebraska Clothing Co., L. W. Trester, manager of General Outdoor Advertising Co., William Schellberg of Union Stock Yards, and J. A. C. Kennedy.

R. V. Nolan has been appointed RKO branch manager in St. Louis, succeeding Bernie McCarthy who resigned because of ill health.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

CATTLE RAIDERS, THE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Very good and Starrett is well liked.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

COLORADO TRAIL, THE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Always good westerns in this series. A few new faces would help a little as many of our patrons become confused by the stills, etc.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

STRANGER FROM ARIZONA: Buck Jones—Jones is one of our oldest western stars and has yet to fail to please. This is no exception. Give us more of them.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

THERE'S THAT WOMAN AGAIN: Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce, Margaret Lindsay—A good comedy. Audience raction OK. Box office good. Running time, 73 minutes.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre, Stanwood, Wash. Small town and farm patronage.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU: Jean Arthur, Lionel Barrymore, James Stewart, Edward Arnold, Mischa Auer, Spring Byington, Ann Miller—There is lots of comedy in this picture which every one would enjoy seeing. Good small town patronage. Running time, 125 minutes. Played May 4-6.—Little and Friesen, Abbotsford Theatre, Abbotsford, B. C., Canada. Small town patronage.

Commodore

TOMBSTONE TERROR: Bob Steele—This pleased the western fans.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

First National

BLACKWELL'S ISLAND: John Garfield, Rosemary Lane, Dick Purcell, Stanley Fields—When a producer gives top billing to two stars who only have a minor part in the picture, he is misleading the public and that we feel is poor business. Fields is the whole show and is excellent. Lane could have been left out altogether and Garfield's part is only fair. This is a good way to pull down the buildup of a proven star. Just a fair picture that was allocated 'way high. Running time, 71 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BROTHER RAT: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Jane Bryan—A laugh riot and pleased 100 per cent. This Morris boy sure is tops. Running time, 89 minutes.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Just buy this one and set back with confidence that you will play an outstanding picture and one you will be proud you secured for your patrons. It's a grand show and will please every mother's son and will grow every minute on your screen. Hats off to Bette Davis.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains, Margaret Lindsay—Here is a good picture and it will do business.: Maybe it is old but if you can trade a new punk for it, then play it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Gaumont British Pictures

CLIMBING HIGH: Jessie Matthews, Michael Redgrace, Noel Madison—This little picture produced in England I think was very good entertainment and seemed to please our Saturday patronage. Running time, 71 minutes. Played May 13.—Ira Smith, Breeze Theatre, Beaufort, S. C. Small town patronage.

Grand National

SOMETHING TO SING ABOUT: James Cagney, Evelyn Daw—Double billed this and pleased. Would never play it single.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Una Merkel, Alan Marshal, Ann Rutherford, Kent Taylor—This is a very good picture with plenty of action, which did more than average business. Played May 15-16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HONOLULU: George Burns and Gracie Allen, Eleanor Powell, Robert Young—Played midweek but should have had a Sunday opening as this is excellent entertainment and would have grossed twice as much. One of the very best comedy-dramas of 1939. Gracie Allen really went to town in this. It was her top performance of her many showings on the screen. Robert Young also very, very good.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres, Original Ice Follies Cast—And I repeat that she is still poison at my box office. The Ice Follies is one of the best color spectacles that anyone has ever made and if you can get them in with that kind of advertising they won't notice so much. James Stewart should go places with someone, but not Joan.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LISTEN, DARLING: Freddie Bartholomew, Judy Garland, Mary Astor, Walter Pidgeon—Fair little picture that seemed to please. Not much to this one. Running time, 76 minutes. Played May 5-7.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

PYGMALION: Leslie Howard, Wendy Hiller—This is a very good picture, well produced with plenty of comedy, but made in England. I hesitated about playing it but was surprised at the business I did, which was above average. Played May 14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SERGEANT MADDEN: Wallace Beery, Tom Brown, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day—This is a good show and the picture will draw average or better. Good enough for your best change even if there is some shooting in it. Your patrons will like something different from these socalled specials and go for this one.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Barton MacLane—Just the kind of a show that my patrons like. Plenty of action with the race between the stagecoach and the railroad, and Beery just as good as ever. Can be played any time. Running time, 95 minutes. Played May 21-23.—Frank Slavik, Alpine Theatre, Hundred, W. Va. Small town and rural patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan, Mischa Auer—We haven't enough music lovers around here to put over this type and the result was rock bottom business. Those that like this kind of show praised it highly; others panned it cruelly and one couple among the walkouts demanded their money refunded. 'Taint no use trying to give them what they don't want.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General paronage.

THREE LOVES HAS NANCY: Janet Gaynor, Robert Montgomery, Franchot Tone—A nice comedy with Janet having them laughing through the whole picture. Running time, 69 minutes. Played May 17-18.—Frank Slavik, Alpine Theatre, Hundred, W. Va. Small town and rural patronage.

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN: Virginia Bruce, Herbert Marshall, Mary Astor, Janet Beecher—A very mediocre program picture that should be double billed. We played it in conjunction with a summer fashion show from which we enjoyed nice business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

YANK AT OXFORD, A: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lionel Barrymore, Vivien Leigh—I picked this up in place of a current attraction, having passed it up last season. The very few that came commented very favorably, but with two strikes against it, being English and more than a year old, it just didn't have a chance.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

Monogram

STAR REPORTER: Warren Hull, Marsha Hunt—A fair picture we used in tying up with one of our local merchants, which did above average business. This was not due to the merits of the picture. Would advise double billing it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

ACCUSING FINGER, THE: Paul Kelly, Marsha Hunt, Robert Cummings—This pleased, and great for a double bill. Running time, 62 minutes.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

ARTISTS AND MODELS ABROAD: Jack Benny, Joan Bennett, Mary Boland, Yacht Club Boys—Have seen many better and a few worse. While this picture was, according to the boys here, below the usual Paramount standard, it did have several laughable moments. The singing act put on by the Yacht Club Boys when they offered the selection "What Have You Got That Gets Me" made a big hit. Wherever Benny fans are predominant, this picture will be a surefire hit. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 22.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation and Education, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FRONTIERSMAN: William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden—This is a good western and a very nice picture, which did good business for a weekend picture. All were pleased with it that saw it. Running time, 72 minutes. Played April 21-22.—Little and Friesen, Abbotsford Theatre, Abbotsford, B. C., Canada. Small town patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN: Mae West, Randolph Scott, Warren William, Alice Brady—Double billed this and went over big. Picture rather old and you can't go wrong doubling it. Running time, 80 minutes. G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

HIDEAWAY GIRL: Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, Robert Cummings—A nice feature and pleased. This Shirley girl is tops, not forgetting Martha. Running time, 72 minutes.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

I'M FROM MISSOURI: Bob Burns, Gladys George—This was disappointing from a business standpoint. However, the audience reaction was satisfactory. Would suggest playing on a Friday-Saturday. Running time, 79 minutes. Played April 30-May 2.—K. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

I'M FROM MISSOURI: Bob Burns, Gladys George—Hardly half the draw of "Arkansas Traveler" and not half as good. Was very much disappointed in this as I expected a lot more business and a picture as good as "Arkansas Traveler." Should have been a big draw considering that our record breaking crowd on "Jesse James" caught the preview on this. (Maybe the trailer kept them away?).—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

MIDNIGHT: Claudette Colbert, Don Ameche, Francis Lederer, John Barrymore, Mary Astor—Excellent comedy drama that did fine business here and pleased 100 per cent. This proves once more that a good picture can be produced for less than a million dollars. Give us more, Paramount. Running time, 94 minutes. Played May 15.—Ira Smith, Breeze Theatre, Beaufort, S. C. Small town patronage.

RIDE A CROOKED MILE: Akim Tamiroff, Frances Farmer, Leif Erikson—A rather different type of picture that went over fairly well and did about normal business. Plenty of action and ideal for a Saturday change.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SING, YOU, SINNERS: Bing Crosby, Fred MacMurray, Ellen Drew, Donald O'Connor, Elizabeth Patterson—A dandy. Right down to the last inch of film, there is plenty of that very important thing called "entertainment." Donald O'Connor was an outstanding hit and it is sincerely hoped Paramount will find another good vehicle for him and pass the boy our way once again. Crosby and MacMurray are always popular with the boys but in this one we must rate Elizabeth Patterson next to the clever and amusing O'Connor lad. You can offer this one to any audience and be sure they'll eat it up. Running time, 88 minutes. Played April 29.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation and Education, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, John Barrymore, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, Louise Platt—Did good business even if it had played all around us. George Raft played a good part with Dorothy Lamour and they all liked fishing story and icebergs. Running time, 110 minutes. Played April 14-15.—Little and Friesen, Abbotsford Theatre, Abbotsford, B. C., Canada. Small town patronage.

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER: Ralph Bellamy, Katherine Locke, Andy Clyde—A nice picture and strictly a double bill feature. Running time, 71 minutes. Played May 17-18.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

VALIANT IS THE WORD FOR CARRIE: Gladys George, Arline Judge, John Howard—Here is something old and one you can go to town with. One of those weepers that is sure to create talk. A knockout. Running time, 109 minutes.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Republic

ARIZONA GUNFIGHTER: Bob Steele—Another Steele western that is tops. For action and thrills Bob is hard to beat.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

BORN TO BE WILD: Ralph Byrd, Doris Weston, Ward Bond—A dandy for your double bills and will please.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

COME ON, LEATHERNECKS: Richard Cromwell, Marsha Hunt—OK for action half of double bill.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

COME ON, RANGERS: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart—Good western but no business. Too much weather.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

DOWN IN "ARKANSAW": Ralph Byrd, Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Pinky Tomlin—This picture did some extra business, not the kind they talk about, but better than average. If you haven't played it, trade something that don't mean a thing for this one, and maybe make your rental back with some interest.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DURANGO VALLEY RAIDERS: Bob Steele, Louise Stanley—Just another western.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

EXILED TO SHANGHAI: June Travis, Wallace Ford—For double bills only. Will please on such nights. Played May 12-13.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

FRONTIER PONY EXPRESS: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart—One patron told me that the westerns were getting to be somewhat alike, except the singing, and he said somehing. Drew about average business, which isn't so much now. Will please the action fans, if you can get them in to see it. We couldn't.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HIGGINS FAMILY, THE: James, Lucille and Russell Gleason—Pleased everyone. About on a par with the Jones series.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

NIGHT RIDERS: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Ruth Rogers—Good western drama which did average business. Played May 19-20.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

OLD BARN DANCE, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Helen Valkis—Better than the average run of westerns. The best Autry that I have played to date, although parts of some were spoiled by a bad print. We small town exhibitors are always on the end of the stick and most prints are badly worn. However, can recommend this only on a double bill. I happen to be one of those fortunate not to run double bills and these features are really too short. Running time, 60 minutes. Played May 11.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

PALS OF THE SADDLE: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Doreen McKay—Very good western. Biz only fair due to weather.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

PALS OF THE SADDLE: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Doreen McKay—Fair action picture which we played on a double bill to average weekend western enthusiast.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PARADISE EXPRESS: Grant Withers, Dorothy Appleby—Good for double bills only. Will please as such.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

SANTA FE STAMPEDE: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), June Martel—These westerns do about as well as the other Republic stars and cost a lot less. If they'd just leave that dummy in the box, it would help. They're full of action and our patrons like them.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SHINE ON HARVEST MOON: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart—Not as good as his others, but his singing was well received. Running time, 57 minutes. Played May 19-20.—Frank Slavik, Alpine Theatre, Hundred, W. Va. Small town and rural patronage.

WESTERN JAMBOREE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Jean Rouverol—A good western and with Smiley Burnette these seem to satisfy but I sure would like to know where all that business is that the salesman and exhibitor reports said were being done by Autry. My Friday and Saturday programs just don't do it any more.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WRONG ROAD, THE: Richard Cromwell, Helen Mack—A nice picture. Double this and give it all you got because it has a strong story and very deep. You will hear the gasps and many comments. Our misfortune is not seeing it before play day. Running time, 62 minutes. Played May 15-16.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

LOVE AFFAIR: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—All my patrons were very much disappointed in this production. It pleased no one, entertained no one, and I personally considered it a very poor picture. Running time, 85 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STORY OF VERNON AND IRENE CASTLE, THE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Edna Mae Oliver, Walter Brennan—In spite of the publicity and the fact that this is one of the finest pictures of the year, besides being our opening midweek attraction, we failed to make expenses on the two nights run. Played May 17-18.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALWAYS IN TROUBLE: Jane Withers, Robert Kellard, Jean Rogers—Despite fine weather and Jane's popularity here, we fell way down at the box office. Played two nights to one night's business. Picture acceptable to those who came. Played May 5-6.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

CHANGE OF HEART: Michael Whalen, Gloria Stuart—Comedy that was very well liked. Just the type to double with an action picture.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN HONOLULU: Sidney Toler, Phyllis Brooks—Ran this with "Gateway" on our usual weekend (Friday-Saturday) double bill immediately after "Jesse James" and did the lowest double feature business in the history of the house. Both pictures are OK entertainment nevertheless.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

CHASING DANGER: Preston Foster, Lynn Bari—The picture seemed to please and while it didn't draw, there is nothing wrong with it and will do well enough on bargain night or on a double bill. Just another picture that you can get along with or without.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DOWN ON THE FARM: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Louise Fazenda—Pleased everybody. Running time, 60 minutes.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre, Stanwood, Wash. Small town and farm patronage.

DOWN ON THE FARM: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Louise Fazenda—The Jones Family proved satisfactory. We played to normal business. Played April 21-22.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FIVE OF A KIND: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt, Claire Trevor, Slim Summerville—In Sodus as elsewhere the Quins, are a draw. In spite of a school dance the first night, a satisfactory showing was made at the box office for the two nights. Played April 28-29.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

GATEWAY: Don Ameche, Arleen Whelan, Gregory Ratoff, Lyle Talbot, Binnie Barnes—See report on "Charlie Chan in Honolulu."—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott—Did a nice business and was enjoyed by everyone. Running time, 106 minutes. Played May 14-16.—Frank Slavik, Alpine Theatre, Hundred, W. Va. Small town and rural patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott—Very well liked. Good business. Nearly double average three days. Running time, 106 minutes.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre, Stanwood, Wash. Small town and farm patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott—One of the biggest grosses since James Cagney in "G-Men." We actually thought depression was over. God bless Fox.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott—Played three nights midweek to a new high for the theatre. Even the third night was far above the usual Sunday draw. This was two weeks ago and we haven't had any business since. Must be the patrons thought nothing would be worth seeing after this. To some extent they are right, as the usual "run of the mill" stuff seems rather tame in comparison to this grand production.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST (reissue): Will Rogers—A good reissue such as this does more than two current duds on a double.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—Here is one of the grandest pictures we have played and we had them come back to see it more than once. Walter Brennan steals the show. Running time, 96 minutes. Played April 30-May 2.—Frank Slavik, Alpine Theatre, Hundred, W. Va. Small town and rural patronage.

KENTUCKY: Richard Greene, Loretta Young, Walter Brennan—Certainly will rate one of the 10 best of 1939. This is easily the finest racing picture that has come to the screen. The direction is superb, the color gorgeous and the story made for all classes. Business was not up to expectations but was several points above average.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP
ROCKEFELLER CENTER NEW YORK

SUBMARINE PATROL: Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, George Bancroft, Preston Foster, Slim Summerville—We played this on a Friday and Saturday night. Business Friday night was 'way off partly due to counter attractions. Saturday night was fair but below normal. This picture was well portrayed and pleasing. Played May 12-13.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SUBMARINE PATROL: Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Preston Foster, George Bancroft, Slim Summerville--A very interesting picture. Though the cast is predominantly masculine, the director does a very excellent job and puts forth a picture which will appeal to all. The boys here were pleased with the performances of both the oldsters and the youngsters, with George Bancroft and Slim Summerville getting somewhat the best of it. To say the least, the picture is most timely, what with the newspapers and air being pretty much taken up with that very distasteful word, war. Running time, 95 minutes. Played April 15.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation and Education, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell—We did a fair business on this picture that features women and airplanes. There is plenty of sob-stuff and the pace could be a lot faster, but the picture did please some of our patrons, and that is something. Worth a date but not at top allocation prices.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

United Artists

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon, Patsy Kelly, David Niven, Walter Brennan, Thomas Mitchell—Did fair business. They that saw it liked it. They all thought it was a wild shooting picture but was just a western story. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 6-8.—Little and Friesen, Abbotsford Theatre, Abbotsford, B. C., Canada. Small town patronage.

DRUMS: Sabu, Raymond Massey, Roger Livesey, Valerie Hobson—This is a good picture, beautiful in colors, lots of action. A production that one will not be sorry they ran. Big enough for any spot. It's not clicking heavy but be assured it's a good show for your house. Running time, 85 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

DRUMS: Sabu, Raymond Massey, Roger Livesey, Valerie Hobson—Didn't do a thing on this, while the men liked it, but had some of the women walk out. Running time, 96 minutes. Played May 10-11.—Frank Slavik, Alpine Theatre, Hundred, W. Va. Small town and rural patronage.

KING OF THE TURF: Adolphe Menjou, Roger Daniel, Dolores Costello—This is a weak sister. No business and did not please over 50 per cent. No love interest. Running time, 87 minutes. Played May 10-11.—K. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

Universal

GAMBLING SHIP: Helen Mack, Robert Wilcox—We played this on a double bill and found our weekend cash customers quite satisfied. Business average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GUILTY TRAILS: Bob Baker, Marjorie Reynolds—Below normal at the box office but satisfactory to the western fans who came to see Bob Baker. Played May 20.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LAST STAND, THE: Bob Baker, Constance Moore—As usual Bob Baker is tops and this is no exception.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

SON OF FRANKENSTEIN: Boris Karloff, Basil Rathbone, Bela Lugosi, Josephine Hutchinson—Some liked it and some didn't. My opinion is that the industry would be better off if they would quit making these type pictures. It is just a lot of bunk that people don't care for. Running time, 94 minutes. Played May 12-13.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

SPIRIT OF CULVER: Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew, Andy Devine, Henry Hull, Jackie Moran—For all the buildup we gave this picture, living close to Culver as we do, this picture was an absolute flop. Slow and draggy and not the picture Universal would have you believe it is. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THAT CERTAIN AGE: Deanna Durbin, Melvyn Douglas, Jackie Cooper, Irene Rich, John Halliday, Nancy Carroll—This is great and should pack them in anywhere. Running time, 101 minutes.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP: Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Charles Winninger, Robert Cummings, William Lundigan—This is undoubtedly one of the finest audience pictures in many months. I believe it pleased 100 per cent. Business was quite good compared with recent grosses on other pictures. Running time, 90 minutes. Played May 7-9.—K. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—Here is one to pin your ears back. A swell picture that kept the box office busy all the first day. Good in anybody's language. Plenty of action, and the color wonderful. Flynn a trifle too perfect for the part but he gets by nicely with the general run, so no complaint. Hat off to Warners for this outstanding picture. Running time, 104 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FOOLS FOR SCANDAL: Fernand Gravet, Carole Lombard, Ralph Bellamy, Allen Jenkins, Marie Wilson—Double billed this and pleased.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

GIVE ME YOUR HEART: Kay Francis, George Brent, Roland Young, Patric Knowles—Double billed this and it pleased. As such you have nothing to worry about. Running time, 88 minutes.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

HARD TO GET: Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland, Charles Winninger, Allen Jenkins—Our patrons liked this picture and business was better than usual on bargain night. Lots of good comedy and that Winninger really did a nice job with the father part. Play it and don't be afraid to brag a little.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ISLE OF FURY: Humphrey Bogart, Margaret Lindsay, Donald Woods—Picked this up from a scrap box and must say it pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 60 minutes.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

MR. CHUMP: Johnnie Davis, Lola Lane—A good musical and pleased. Good for doubles, not strong enough to single. G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

ROMANCE IN PARIS: Fernand Gravet, Joan Blondell, Edward Everett Horton—A grand picture and heard many comments. Gravet and Blondell are tops here. Played May 15-16.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

VALLEY OF THE GIANTS: Wayne Morris, Claire Trevor, John Litel, Charles Bickford—One of the best pictures of the year and easily one of the best money makers for some time. A knockout. Running time, 79 minutes.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

YOU'RE A SWEETHEART: Alice Faye, George Murphy—Brought this one back to exceptionally good business. An old show that is good is always better, I think, for business than a new mediocre. This is one of those shows where Univeral really went to town as far as a good show was concerned. Played March 20-21.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

Short Features

SINGAPORE AND JAHORE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Good travel talk in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

THEY LIVE AGAIN: MGM Miniatures—A tribute to the discoverers of insulin and very good. MGM shorts as a whole are better thought out than most producers' and this is no exception. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TINY TROUBLE: Our Gang—Average Our Gang comedy.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

NATIONAL GAME BASEBALL, THE: Different. The picture was very well received and provoked much favorable comment. Running time, 41 minutes. —J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation and Education, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Paramount

HOLD YOUR BREATH: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Very interesting underwater novelty reel. Running time, B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatres, Stanwood, Wash. Small town and farm patronage.

MUSIC THROUGH THE YEARS: Headliners—Fine musical short. Running time, 10 minutes.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre, Stanwood, Wash. Small town and farm patronage.

TREES: Musical Romance—Ran this old but it was pretty and they didn't go out to smoke.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TWO BOYS AND A DOG: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Interesting one-reeler about two boys out hunting.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS: The only thing wrong with these is the price. You can buy a good feature or a can full of shorts for what they charge me for these.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WOTTA NITEMARE: Popeye the Sailor—Very good Popeye which pleased all.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CUCKOO BIRD, THE: Terry-Toons—Very good black and white cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

FERDINAND THE BULL: Walt Disney Cartoons—Well received. Running time, 10 minutes.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre, Stanwood, Wash. Small town and farm patronage.

FERDINAND THE BULL: Walt Disney Cartoons—Gave the boys a real laugh. They were all anxiously awaiting this short and none were disappointed. Running time, 7½ minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation and Education, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

GOLD RUSH DAZE: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LONE STRANGER AND PORKY, THE: Looney Tunes—Very funny cartoon, takeoff on "Lone Ranger" serial. Running time, eight minutes.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatres, Stanwood, Wash. Small town and farm patronage.

Serials

Columbia

GREAT ADVENTURES OF WILD BILL HICKOK: Gordon Elliott, Kermit Maynard—We have played 12 chapters of this serial. Personally, I find myself quite biased against serials. But on discussing their merits with our weekend customers we find many quite enthusiastic.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Republic

PAINTED STALLLION, THE: Ray Corrigan, Hoot Gibson—Playing chapter seven this week and can safely say this is one of the best shown for some time. The whistling arrow is box office.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Benjamin Named Republic's District Sales Manager

William Benjamin has been appointed central-midwest district sales manager of Republic. He will supervise the Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha and Des Moines territories, working out of the Kansas City office. These exchanges were formerly handled by Max Roth, midwest district sales manager, who will concentrate on the Chicago, Milwaukee, Indianapolis and Minneapolis branches, and, in addition, Detroit, transferred under the new setup from the central sales division.

Circuit Adding Two

Anderson and Urling, who operate a circuit throughout West Virginia and western Pennsylvania, are adding two new houses, a 550-seat theatre in West View, Pa., and a 500-seat theatre in Pinegrove, W. Va.

Farm Becomes Camp

Mercello Farms, near Belton, Texas, owned and operated by R. E. Griffith of the Griffith theatres, has been turned over to the Dallas Variety Club as a camp for underprivileged boys. A first group of 20 boys entered the camp Thursday for two weeks. The camp will continue through August.

Sproule in Theatre Deal

Lee Sproule, who at one time operated a circuit of about a dozen houses in Kansas, has divested himself of his final two exhibition interests. He has turned over the Rex, Newton, Kan., to Ray Roberson, and the Ritz at Winfield, Kan., to Roy Taylor. Mr. Sproule is taking a rest due to ill health.

Domino Productions has started shooting on an all-Negro feature at the Biograph Studio in New York. Arthur Leonard is directing the picture, which features Nina Mae McKinney.

Ralph R. Unks has been appointed Albany branch manager for Ross Federal Service, succeeding K. A. Davis, who has returned to the coast. Harvey J. Hanreddy has been transferred from Los Angeles to Indianapolis as branch manager.

Jules Levy, RKO Radio general sales manager, has shifted Herb Greenblatt from Cleveland branch manager to Pittsburgh, and George Lefko from Pittsburgh to Cleveland.

Joseph L. Underhill, for 10 years manager for RCA Photophone, Ltd., London, has returned to Camden, N. J., to take up a new post under the direction of Max C. Batsel, chief engineer.

James Frank, Jr., has been promoted from the sales promotion department of National Theatre Supply to manager of the New York branch, succeeding C. H. Secor, resigned.

Fred P. Fielding, account executive with N. W. Ayer and Son since 1920, has joined the research sales force of Ross Federal Research Corporation's Philadelphia office.

Earl Retting has signed a one year contract as casting director at the Hal Roach Studio.

Program Set for Unveiling Will Rogers Statue Tuesday

The Oklahoma Will Rogers Memorial commission this week announced a tentative program for the unveiling of the Will Rogers statue in Washington, D. C., Tuesday. Governor Leon C. Phillips of Oklahoma will present the statue, which will be accepted by a high ranking government official as yet unnamed.

Speakers will include N. G. Henthorne, editor of the Tulsa World; Walter M. Harrison, managing editor of the Daily Oklahoman and Oklahoma City Times, and Luther Harrison, editorial writer for the Daily Oklahoman. Mrs. Sally McSpadden of Chelsea, Okla., sister of the late humorist, will unveil the statue, assisted by Jo Davidson, the sculptor. Mrs. Will Rogers, with her sons, Bill and Jimmie, and daughter, Mary, will attend the ceremonies.

Tobias in Hollywood

Chester L. Tobias, superintendent of the Laboratory of the Motion Picture Division of the Air Corps of the United States Army, Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, has arrived in Hollywood to take a 60-day course of training in motion picture laboratory procedure under the auspices of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Carriers Expand Service

Operation by film delivery companies of shipping, storage and inspection departments for centralized services to distributors has been extended to 14 key cities throughout the country. Two principal features of the plan is to have the carrier provide services for all distributors and thus eliminate a number of smaller exchanges.

Open Supply Branch

The Oklahoma Theatre Supply Company of Oklahoma City has opened a Kansas City, Mo., branch for handling of Heywood-Wakefield seats and U. S. Air Conditioning in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa. L. J. Kimbriel is in charge.

Loach on Monogram Board

T. P. Loach, treasurer of Pathe, Inc., and former accountant with Price Waterhouse and Company, has been elected a member of the board of directors of Monogram. He replaces William Rhinelander Stewart, resigned. Harry M. Iverson has been elected comptroller of the company to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Ben Agren.

Air Express Revenue Rises

Gross revenue from air express on a nationwide scope for the first quarter of 1939 increased 20.4 per cent over the corresponding period of 1938, the Air Express Division of Railway Express Agency announced this week. Motion picture film forms a large part of air express service.

RKO Managers Exchange Posts

Jules Levy, RKO general sales manager, has announced an exchange of branch managerships between Herb Greenblatt of Cleveland and George Lefko of Pittsburgh. The two men have switched their posts, Greenblatt going to Pittsburgh and Lefko to Cleveland.

SPIRIT OF TOLERANCE ADVOCATED BY MAYER

Addressing nearly 300 foreign students who shortly will be graduated from Southern California universities, Louis B. Mayer on Tuesday at the MGM studio struck a keynote of hope for the future when he advised the graduates who soon will return to their native lands: "Take back to your countries the spirit of tolerance of learning. Courage and confidence in yourself and the future should be the lodestone of hope for you. America has prepared you; it is up to you to carry back to your homelands that message of peace and friendship."

Universal Starts Group Insurance for Employees

Nearly 1,000 employees in the New York office of Universal and all its exchanges are now protected by group accident and sickness insurance, according to announcement this week by Samuel Machnovitch, treasurer of the company. The cost of insurance, which is provided through an arrangement with the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, will be saved by the company and the insured employees.

During disability resulting from non-occupational accident or sickness, insured employees will receive payments to a maximum of $40 a week, in accordance with their earnings.

Revise "Gulliver's Travels"

Mayer and Burnstyn, distributors of foreign product, have completed the revision of the Russian film, "Gulliver's Travels," for release in this country. According to the distributors the film has been cut from 80 to 65 minutes with the elimination of propaganda. The commentary is now in English and a short prologue has been added, which shows an American boy reading Jonathan Swift's "Gulliver's Travels."

Sues Over Projection Device

James W. Decker, of New York, has filed suit in federal district court in Wilmington, Delaware, to obtain a patent for improvements in tape controlling means for news projection machines. Mr. Decker charges that he is the inventor of improvements involved in the patent at issue, in which his application for a patent is in interference with a patent issued to Kenneth L. Curtis, who assigned it to Trans-Lux Theatres, the device now being used for projecting news flashes on their newsreel theatre screens.

Hold Club Election

G. Ralph Branton has been elected president of the Des Moines Variety Club, with Nate Sandler, vice-president; Lou Elman, secretary; Harry Schiffrin, treasurer; Lew Levy, chairman of the house and rules committee.

June 12th and June 19th have been set for the annual RKO home office employees' outings. Boat ride on the Peter Stuyvesant to Bear Mountain, entertainment and sports are on the programs.

Non-Theatrical Division Established by Monogram

Monogram has established a non-theatrical division, operating under the supervision of Joseph A. Kehoe, with headquarters at the company's offices in the RKO Building, Rockefeller Center, New York. Each of the company's branches in the United States has set up a non-theatrical department to handle the release of films for engagements which are not in competition with regular motion picture exhibition.

Among the features which have been made available are "Hoosier Schoolboy," "Romance of the Limberlost," "Boy of the Streets," "Atlantic Flight," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Navy Secrets," "Barefoot Boy," "Streets of New York," "Mystery Plane," "Mr. Wong, Detective," "The Mystery of Mr. Wong," "County Fair" and "Gangster's Boy."

Dunningcolor Absorbs 2 Companies

The newly reorganized Dunningcolor Corporation has absorbed the Dunning Process Company and the Dunning Realty Company. Dunningcolor is a three color process which will be used on 35 and 16 mm. films. Carroll H. Dunning continues as president and Dodge Dunning as vice-president.

Realign Story Department

Richard Halliday, eastern story editor for Paramount, and Francis Langton, of the company's story and writing department, have taken over the duties of Manny Wolfe, studio story and writing head, who resigned to enter production. Mr. Halliday becomes studio story editor and Mr. Langton, head of the studio writing department.

Ten RKO Theatres Will Close

Only 10 RKO Theatres will close for the summer, according to John J. O'Connor, vice-president and general manager of the circuit. The closing houses are: Strand, Syracuse; Trent, Trenton; Albee, Providence; Majestic, Columbus; Orpheum, Kansas City; Colonial, Dayton; Central, Yonkers; Orpheum, Champaign; Century, Rochester, and the Alden, Jamaica.

Griffith Deal Pending

A deal involving $100,000 for three theatres in Nebraska is being negotiated by the Griffith Amusement Company with Booth Brothers and Oscar Johnson. The Booth houses are in Auburn (3,200 population) and Nebraska City (7,000), while the Johnson theatre is in Falls City (7,000). If the deal is consummated it will mark the Griffith circuit's first entrance in that state.

To "Glorify" Los Angeles

Warner Brothers are planning a sequel of "Dodge City," which will glorify the early history of Los Angeles in a film called "The City of the Angels." The cast will be the same as in the former picture with the additions of Humphrey Bogart and Gilbert Roland. The film will trace the fortunes of the characters in "Dodge City" as they move westward to join in the founding of Los Angeles.

Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc., New York, has published a guide on "Union Pacific," Cecil B. DeMille Paramount production, in which is incorporated a "Pictorial Notebook" competition.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

IT CANNOT BE DONE SITTING BEHIND DESK

The instance is not an isolated one. Happily, the name of those who so qualify is legion. But because of a recent communication from the member who illustrates the profit side in what he terms the personal touch, we give you George Patterson, manager of Maurie Stahl's Rivoli, Rutherford, New Jersey. Stahl, as readers may remember, is one of the smart exhibitors who shares the net with his personnel. And, to make this cut as generous as possible, manpower is allowed to proceed mostly under its own power.

Thus, in keeping with the Stahl policy of cementing goodwill between theatre and community, Patterson has identified his operation with the city's most progressive movements by taking a prominent part in these activities. As a result, the Round Tabler is president of the retail merchants' association, chairman of a chamber of commerce committee, and is currently engaged in carrying out an assignment to organize a junior chamber.

"All of which means what?" you ask. Well as concerns Rutherford, for instance, it means that the theatre gets a much better than average break in publicity, theatre promotion is received with open arms by otherwise conservative merchants, hard-to-make contacts are effected for the benefit of individual campaigns, and, with everything else equal, a lot of extra admissions that might go to other spots obviously find their way to the Rivoli boxoffice.

These pages have carried, time and again, and could be filled again and again, with similar illustrations in other situations of close participation in affairs beyond the immediate province of the theatreman. In almost every case, these cooperations lead directly to the theatre boxoffice, either in definite increases in business or enhancement of theatre prestige which is another way of saying it.

The theatreman who has the latitude to do so and is not concerned with outside activities is not doing a complete job. The bossman who restricts his managers in these directions virtually shuts his doors to increased takings.

It is more than a coincidence that showmen who do the soundest job at the boxoffice are usually to be found in the front line of projects that advance community welfare.

RESPECT—BUT NO FEAR

In reporting what he has already set and is planning to hold up grosses in the next three months, a rightfully optimistic member writes:

"What chance has the heat got to stop me with this line-up of exploitation?"

And that, gentlemen of the Round Table, expresses well the sentiment of theatremen set to take summer in stride, and especially among those who tell about it elsewhere in this section. Further evidence of confidence will be set forth in next week's issue.

Annually, it has been the practice of this department to query representative showmen regarding their preparations for the heated spell and each succeeding year, according to the reports, shows the situation under firmer control. This year appears to be no exception.

In his plannings for summer business, your weather-wise showman regards outdoors opposition with the respect it rates. But a respect, it may be noted, that is completely devoid of boxoffice fear.

TAKE A BOW, HARRY SHAW

At best, the position of division manager is not the easiest one in exhibition. Between the home office and manager he answers to one for the other. On his toes at all times, continuously on the go from city to city, from unit to unit, the headman who is doing his work must be a combination of many virtues, and often all at one time. His is not exactly the softest bed of roses.

The recent party thrown by the Loew New England theatremen and other friends for Harry Shaw, to celebrate his fifth year as division head, is evidence of the success that has attended Harry's efforts in doing a job satisfactory to all hands. On behalf of the membership, congratulations distinctly are in order.

Round Table In Pictures

An unusual lobby setpiece was created by Manager Maurice Gable for the opening of "Dark Victory" at Warner's Boyd, in Philadelphia. The display "Fisherman's Wharf". Typical shanty with clothesline, etc., formed the background for cutouts of the picture's stars.

"Dodge City" penny pitching stunt was used in advance in the lobby of Warner's Granada and on downtown street corner of Santa Barbara by Howard Ralston. Cowboy in attendance, barking to passersby, invites them to step up and try their skill. Plate was floating on water in tub; if penny remained in plate, pitcher received one pass to see the film. Round Tabler says more than 1,500 pennies were turned over to the Salvation Army and only eight single passes given out.

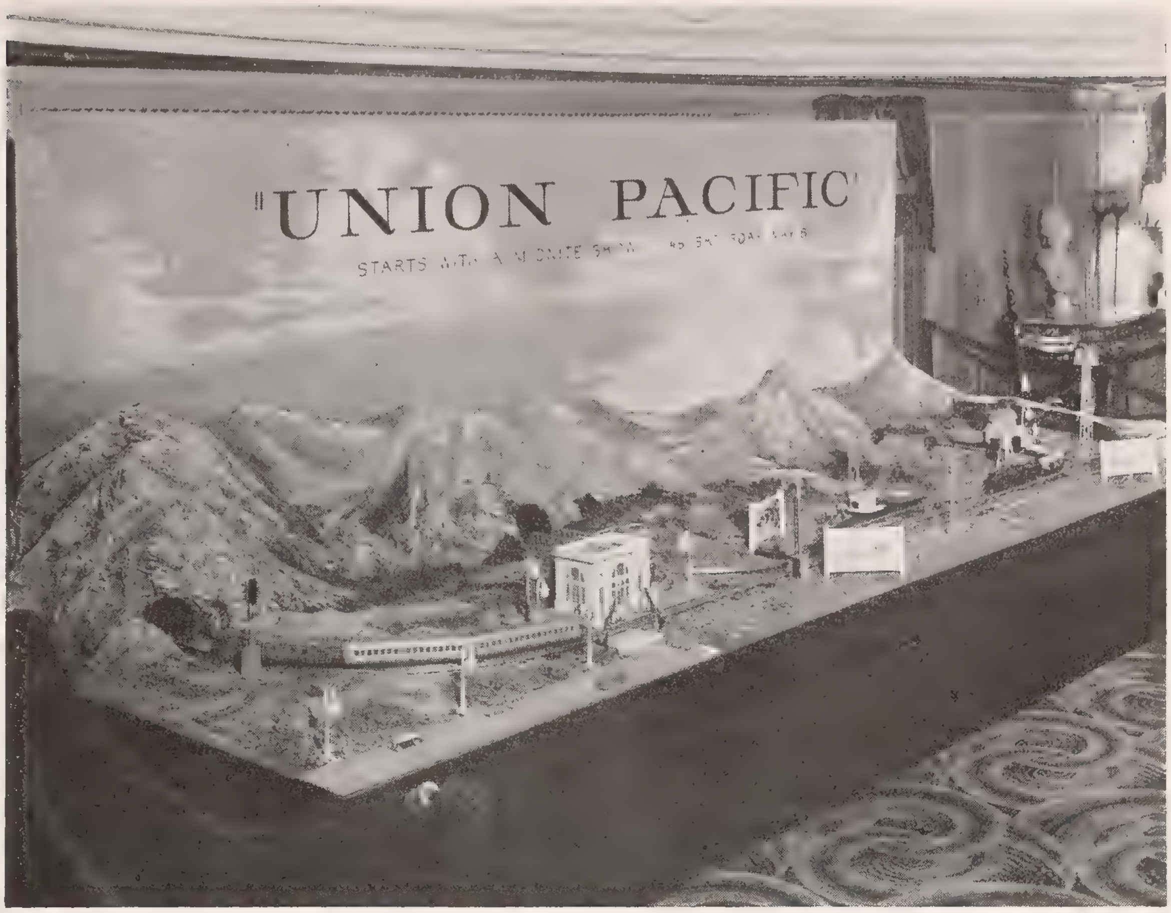
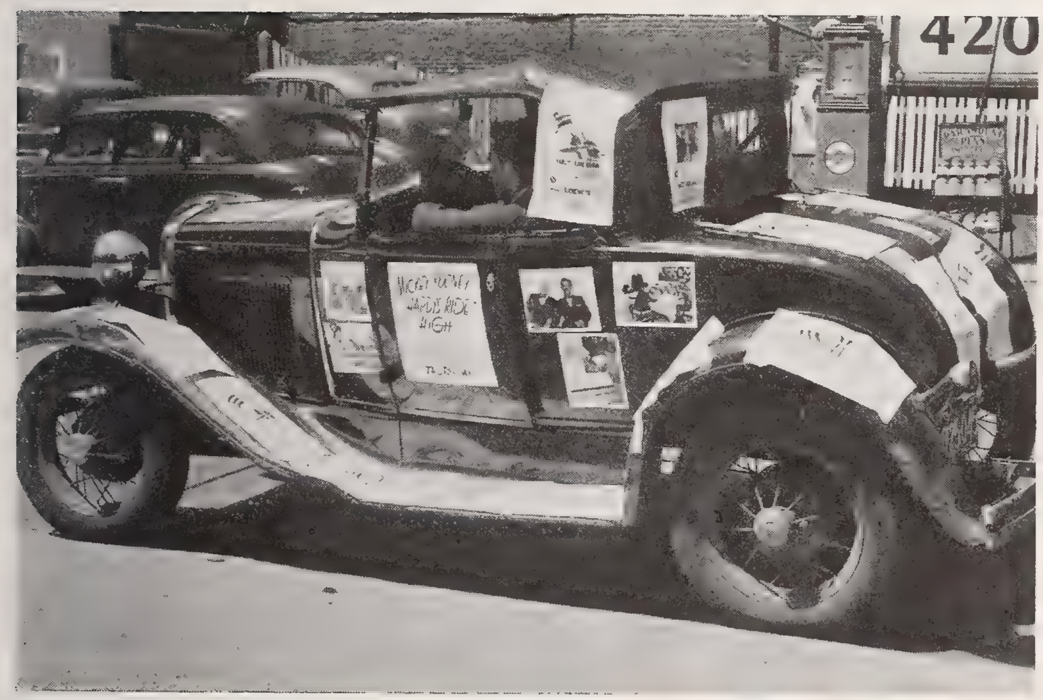
FISHERMAN'S WHARF

Not to be outdone by his Round Table brothers in these parts, Terry Leung at the Queen's Theatre, in Hong Kong, forwards examples of his display on "Fisherman's Wharf." Typical shanty with clothes line, etc. formed the background for cutouts of the picture's stars.

The chap at left holding the daisy to Ferdinand's nose is none other than Round Tabler Bill Bohling, of the Texas Grand Theatre, in El Paso. The bovine measuring 10 feet in height was toted around town on truck bannered with tiein copy. Ferdinand was parked at busy intersections.

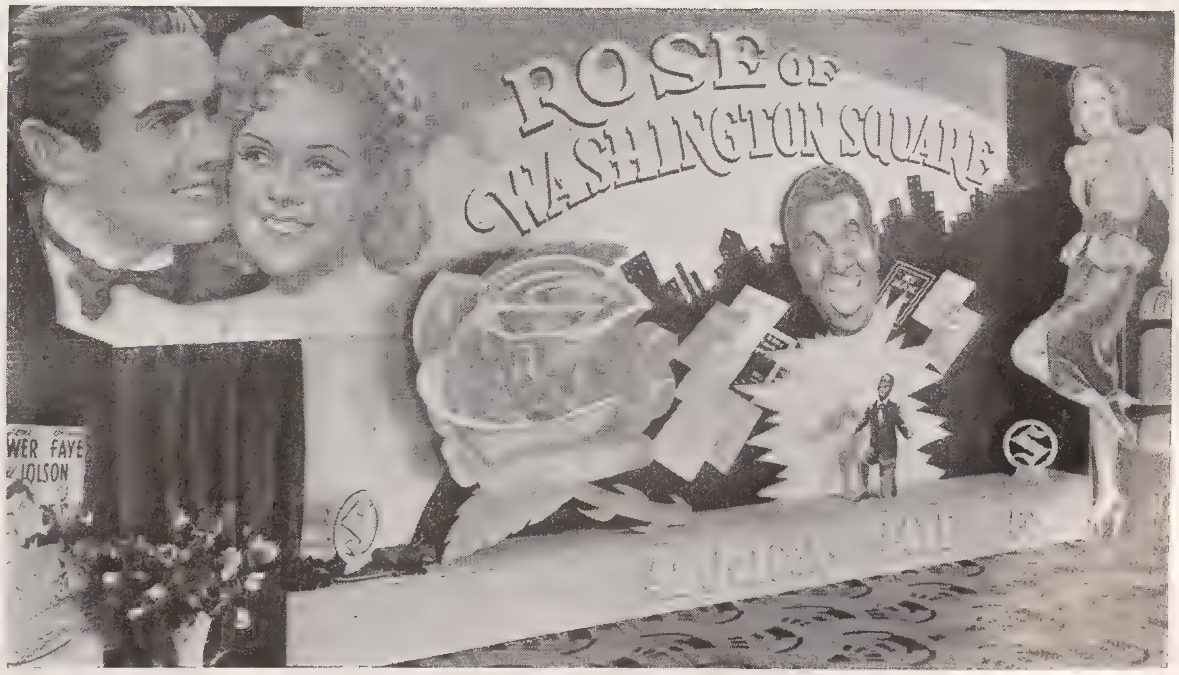
Forwarded by City Manager Leonard Worley, Publix Great States Theatres, in Peoria, Ill., is photo of the "Union Pacific" lobby display created by Art Director C. J. Rhodes for that date at the Madison Theatre. Mountains in the background were made of papier mache and quite realistic. The electric trains ran constantly and consisted of a modern streamliner as well as a freight train and older types of locomotives. The stop and go lights, bridges, signals, etc., were lighted at all times as well as the trains.





An excellent attention grabber is the street ballyhoo shown at left for "The Hardy's Ride High", which was put across by Lou Brown, subbing for Joe DiPesa at Loew's State and Orpheum in Boston. This broken down car costing $12 was plastered with stills, ads and press book material from the picture and then sent around town visiting the baseball parks, the race tracks, schools and through the business sections. From time to time, the car was stalled, tying up traffic and garnering some extra attention for the date.

Happy Hasselo, State Theatre, in Worthington, Minn., sends along setpiece illustrated at right and created by Henry J. Hower for the "Rose of Washington Square" date. Entire background was painted in three shades of blue, buildings were cut out of compoboard and set forward two inches. The rose was also cutout and the star lettering on the bloom was backed by red tissue paper. Heads and figures were taken from 24 sheets and the Jolson head was set forward one inch and tacked to buildings.



AN ITEM OF CORRESPONDENCE

Mr. A-Mike Vogel
Managers' Round Table
Motion Picture Herald
Radio City, N. Y.

Dear Mike:—

Enclosed please find photo of one of my recent lobby displays . . a sportive little affair such as I certainly never should conceive in more serious moods. Anyway, the idea was to inform the public that they could indulge in a good cry over "Dark Victory." They seemed to get the message . . and if they also managed to get a little mild amusement over the display itself, what harm could it do?

Cordially,

William W. Johnson
Manager, Opera House
Millinocket, Maine

POST SCRIPT:

Does your editor, Mr. Terry Ramsaye, accept fan mail? There is something about his editorial page that inspires me to unreserved admiration. Until I began to read the Herald I always had the idea that the editors of trade magazines were dull fellows who wrote very dully about dull facts. But certainly not Mr. Ramsaye. Somehow he seems to have at his command a limitless storehouse of information about the industry . . from way, way back to the present . . from which he always manages to select the most timely topics with amazing dexterity. And which he invariably presents with a light and effortless style that makes reading a pleasure instead of a duty. Sometime maybe I'll be overcome to the point of sending him a fan letter!

Taxi Company Cooperates With Lampe on "Midnight"

Excellent newspaper coverage was given to Gus Lampe's "Midnight" contest put over for that opening at the Keith Theatre in Syracuse. In the taxi cabs of the city there appeared a sign announcing that the cab was participating in the contest, each cab was also numbered. Every morning, the number of one cab was drawn from a hat at the theatre. The cab records of passengers were then checked and whoever was riding in the cab at midnight was pronounced the winner for the day, receiving cash and ticket award. Contest ran ahead and during entire run, with stories building up the stunt and picture; winners names being listed each day.

Well-known band at leading hotel played the song Midnight every evening at twelve giving picture, theatre, stars and playdate plug and the song was also played over WFBL with proper plugs. Numerous window displays were used in stores, bus terminals, etc., etc., with prominent picture, cast and playdate copy.

Youthful Ambition Contest Tied to "Three Smart Girls"

Conducted by Manager Ed Miller and publicist Manny Pearlstein for the "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" date at Warner's Hippodrome in Cleveland, was a contest conducted in cooperation with the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Entrants were required to write on what one particular youthful ambition they had, and how it was realized. First contest story of 90 lines broke three days in advance and subsequent stories appeared daily right through the opening. Total space garnered due to this promotion was about 500 lines, entire cost to theatre being $10 and passes.

For "The Castles," the theatremen secured from RKO the gowns used in the picture which were made the basis of a full window display at one of the leading department stores, credits and scene stills were prominently spotted. Other stores tied in with window displays, one featuring the Ginger Rogers clothes handled by the merchant, records and sheet music, etc., etc. Radio included 100 word announcements over WGAR starting four days ahead, theatre ad reciprocation being ten second trailerette and local Wurlitzer dealer cooperated by featuring a window display of old songs played during the Castles era as against those now in vogue.

Wide Coverage Accorded "Antoinette" in Brussels

Reported by S. Habib, general manager for MGM in Brussels was the campaign put on for "Marie Antoinette" at the Grand Bazar, in which bookshops and libraries of large department stores tied in by plugging sale of books dealing with the life, the period and loves of the French Queen. Leading manufacturer of ladies lingerie created special garment inspired by one worn by the star in the picture. All shops owned by this outfit arranged special window displays and took advantage of the picture's opening in the first run theatre of each town for the beginning of their general sale. Exact replicas of the gowns worn by Norma Shearer in the film were made and exhibited locally in leading stores, each merchant plugging the display in his newspaper ads, heralds stuffed in packages leaving stores in addition.

Schrieber Puts on "Milkman's" Show

Fleet of 400 milk trucks with their drivers, representing the local Borden companies attended a "milkman's matinee" as guests of C. H. Schreiber, at the RKO Palace, Columbus, for special showing of "East Side of Heaven." Men drove to the theatre at 3.00 a.m. the night ahead of opening and parked the trucks in front and around the theatre before going in to see the picture which, incidentally, features "Baby Sandy," 11-months-old daughter of a Los Angeles milkman.

In addition to attracting attention of the homeward-bound motorists and pedestrians, several news pictures were made for local breaks. In repayment for the "matinee," the milk companies bannered their trucks with copy and put hangers on milk bottles. Employes were also instructed to talk up picture to patrons and the novelty matinee was played up in advance with news stories.

Cooperating milk company also had two uniformed men in the theatre's lobby standing at giant cutouts of Crosby and "Sandy" milk set piece in advance. Trucks were bannered with the following copy: "Healthy babies like Sandy in 'East Side of Heaven' now at the RKO Palace Drink Vitamin D Milk." Bottle hangers used the same copy.

Widespread Coverage Secured By Taylor for "Dark Victory"

First gun of Charlie Taylor's "Dark Victory" date at the Buffalo Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y. was fired when 2000 invitation type calling cards were placed strategically in hotel rooms and mail boxes throughout the city. Distribution was concentrated in the four most prominent hotels. To a selected mailing list of prominent social and civic leaders endorsement post cards were mailed and added to this was the distribution of 3000 colored heralds which were used by the theatreman for the first time in a year.

Theatre tied in with various merchants giving the film widespread coverage in the way of displays and giveaways. Local Beck store was prevailed upon to imprint their paper bags with theatre copy as did other merchants and for the first time the Buffalo Transportation company allowed a theatre to use placards on the windshields of their busses. In addition a five day classified contest in the Buffalo Times was good for free advertising with a two-column by eight ad every day including an ad mat. A five day film quiz contest was also placed in the local Polish paper.

Wright Holds Donkey Party

Reported as highly successful was the recent donkey street party held for "Hound of the Baskervilles," by Erle Wright, at the Paramount Theatre, in Syracuse, N. Y., consisting of a cloth donkey with cutout tails made available to onlookers by boy in attendance wearing a black mask. Any one pinning the tail properly on the donkey received guest tickets to the picture. Wright says this sure proved to be a traffic-blocker, boy continually announcing the title, cast, playdates, etc.

Theatre Sponsors Artist Exhibition

A splendid example of how the theatre can be made the center of community interest is the current Institute of Art Exhibit in the lobbies and on the mezzanine of Shea's Buffalo theatre. The exhibit, sponsored by the Adult Education Service of the Department of Education, includes more than 250 paintings, sketches, sculptures and lettering.

The exhibit was placed in connection with a theatre party held by members of the institute and for which they sold tickets to the theatre. On opening day of the exhibit more than 2,000 persons visited and closely inspected the exhibit. So successful was it, according to Charles Taylor, ad head, that it is being held for a second week.

Famed Art Works Displayed

Many of the works are by artists who are exhibiting at the New York and San Francisco fairs. Paintings are mounted on easels and hung from walls. The exhibit reverses the usual idea of having the public visit local art galleries for here the art is brought to the public—in a beautiful theatre lobby and mezzanine setting. Considerable space has been set aside on the theatre premises, the layout made convenient for the crowds drawn by the exhibit.

Buffalo newspapers gave the exhibit their whole-hearted support with several advance stories, as well as a review of the display and art.

The exhibit is reported one of the most successful good-will tie-ups ever made by a Buffalo theatre and its box-office draw makes it even more valuable. In order to "freshen up" the exhibit new works are constantly installed. Local artists whose works are shown are bringing in their friends to see them via the box office.

Various Slants Used by Moore To Sell His Attractions

Immediately ahead of opening of "Frankenstein" date at the Grand, Sudbury, Ontario, E. L. Moore, assisted by J. A. Kudirka, sent man out on streets attired in black flowing robe with hideous looking false face. Small boy followed short distance behind distributing blotters carrying title, cast, playdates, etc. As the figure carried no advertising upon its person, curiosity was aroused and double interest accorded the blotters as a consequence. Teaser ads were spotted on selected pages, one sheets and window cards were planted and atmospheric lobby display prepared for the occasion.

Merchants Help on "Honest Man"

On "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man" a tieup was effected with local men's furnishings shop through which guest tickets were given to each customer with every purchase of five dollars or over, tickets were paid for in full by the merchant. Three sheets were cut out and posted on show windows and window cards and standees spotted throughout store display. Balloons coming from the mouths of the cutout characters carried store advertising copy tied up with the theatre attraction.

Coast-to-Coast Coverage Shown In Current Fortnight Listing

Truly representative is the listing of Appointments in the current Fortnight with 16 states and one Canadian province among the winners, who span the continent from California to Maine, from Texas to Alberta. The Awards, scattered among big cities and small towns, first runs and subsequent situations, are taken down equally by previous winners and newcomers to the Competitions.

With the result announced in the current Fortnight which marks the halfway mark, three Fortnight periods remain before the ending of the Second Quarter of the 1939 Awards. This means three distinct opportunities for interested theatremen to forward sufficient entries in each of these periods to be eligible for the Quarter Judging. Although material is judged on quality and not quantity, it is obvious that entrants represented in more than one Fortnight will receive the greater consideration for the Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations.

Lamm Distributes "Love Affair" Folder

Distributed one week in advance by young girl dressed in nurse's costume were gag heralds distributed by Julius Lamm at Warner's Uptown, in Cleveland for opening of "Love Affair." In the form of a three-fold sheet, front carried cut of a heart with copy "Secret prescriptions for love-sick maidens. Sure cure recommended inside." Inside could be found thumbnail cartoons with gag copy, reverse carried the well-known symptoms of love together with complete cast, playdates, etc. and the remedy for recipients to see the picture at the Uptown.

Grab-Bags Sell "Finn"

Arranged by Jack Campbell of the Capitol, in Brampton, Ontario was tieup with local merchant for main window display in connection with showing of "Huckleberry Finn." Store manager had his girls make up grab bags in several of which were inserted theatre passes for kids only. Seven foot streamer was pasted across window advertising the sale at a nominal figure of the bags which were piled high in center of the display. Credit cards and scene stills tied the stunt into the picture with title and playdate mention.

Educational Phases Aid Shaffer on "Gunga Din"

Stressed by Frank Shaffer, manager of the Warner Dixie in Staunton, Va., on "Gunga Din" was a quiz contest which broke in the weekly magazine of the Mary Baldwin College, the weekly publication of the Staunton Military Academy and a daily paper printed by high school students. Guest tickets were awarded for the first 15 correct answers submitted.

Letters, with bookmark enclosed, were mailed to every teacher in the community. Bookmarks were also placed in city, county, college and public schools a week in advance of playdates.

Novel Classified Ad Contest

Sold entirely by Jack Braunagel of the Paramount, in Provo, Utah, and his staff was the full ad page on "Jesse James," with cooperating paper donating the banner head and center picture spread. Each ad contained a question and the answer to another; contestants were asked to list these correctly, for which guest tickets were awarded. All ads contained copy about Jesse James and questions were so written as to acquaint contestants with the picture copy and create a desire to see the picture. Braunagel reports opening day broke all house records.

EXPLOITATIONS SET FOR SUMMER, SAY READY-TO-GO ROUND TABLERS

Members Report Plans to Take In All Forms of Advertising, Publicity and Tieins to Keep the Ticket-Machine Clicking

As has been the yearly practice of the Round Table, on these pages is set down what some of the representative members report having in mind or already in work as part of their general campaigns for summer business.

It is to be noted that many of the promotions and exploitations that proved successful last year are to be repeated this year, in addition to the different slants conceived by the theatreman to fit in with current events and happenings.

It was endeavored to get a cross section of summer showmanship from situations of different sizes and classifications. What the members reported is being set down with very little change. In addition to the reports here published, others will follow in next week's issue, carrying details of seasonal activities as planned by other Round Tablers, circuit and independent, in various sections of the country.

Rosenthal to Promote Business from Beaches

Being surrounded by beaches, Morris Rosenthal, at the Majestic in Bridgeport, Conn. proposes putting out weekly programs to summer residents in those situations so that when they come to town they will have the Majestic in mind. Tieins will also be made with soda fountain and ice cream parlors, as well as popular taverns where the public goes on hot weather nights. Last summer, Rosy distributed round disks imprinted with picture copy to set under glasses.

A summer style show on stage to include modeling of beach swim suits for adults and children will be held, cooperating merchant plugging the event in storewide campaign and advertising. Tieup is now underway to supply soft drinks to patrons in lobby. Entire house goes into summer colors, lobby in flowers and lattice work and inside lobby will have a garden with water fountain tending to create cooling effect. All seats are dressed with cool, crisp linen covers. Morris also has a golf short booked on which he intends tying up local sports shop, pros, players, etc.

"WHAT ARE YOU PLANNING FOR SUMMER"

Cincinnati "Opener" Milked by Nathan Wise

At the opening of the baseball season in Cincinnati, arrangements were made by Nathan Wise, director of publicity at the RKO Theatres, Dayton, to have Pathe News shoot special extra shots of Dayton fans at the "opener," as well as news shots of the three local sport writers at the game, talking with several of the Cincinnati baseball heroes. Much enthusiasm was aroused locally when considerable space was devoted to the fact that Dayton was at the "opener" and sports writers responded with features on this angle. Local baseball followers shown in the shots as well as other fans turned out in large numbers.

Wise managed an ace campaign on the golf short "Smooth Approach" featuring famous professionals and sponsored by local golf equipment manufacturer. Star of the short was Dick Metz, home-town star which was played up by sports writers. Agency sent out bulletins to all professionals and clubs in addition to contracting sports stories. Another sport short "Fisherman's Pluck" was likewise given special attention. With tried results, Wise contemplates capitalizing on such popular interests this summer as swimming, fishing, golfing, baseball, horse racing, World's Fair featurettes, etc.

THE HARDY'S RIDE HIGH AND SO DO LOEWMEN

In conjunction with the Rotary Club of New Rochelle, Jim Grady, manager of Loew's New Rochelle, and Teddy Arnow of Oscar A. Doob's publicity department presented a silver plaque to the "typical American Family" of that city, the gift of the Hardy Family of Hollywood and signed with the engraved signatures of Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Fay Holden and Cecilia Parker. Arthur Treacher, the well-known movie butler, made the presentation at a widely publicized dinner where the ceremonies took place.

Coincidentally, "The Hardy's Ride High" opened at Loew's the following day.

"WHAT ARE YOU PLANNING FOR SUMMER"

Hollister to Repeat Last Year Successes

Contests are the old standby of C. L. "Holly" Hollister at the Babcock Theatre, in Wellsville, N. Y. who plans among others a cow-milking stunt on stage for cash prizes and plugs for the cooperating dairy. Entrants are permitted the use of only one hand to milk and to fill a pint milk bottle. Reported as highly successful last year and to be repeated is an old-time fiddlers contest plugged in dailies in advance.

Hollister also plans sending invitations to presidents of senior classes in surrounding town high schools inviting their classes to attend in a group on designated nights. Another activity of last year set for a repeat and which brought a reported overflow business was a dance recital. In general this Round Tabler's summer exploitation plans include a greater effort for rural patronage by means of bill posting, herald distribution and advertising in the surrounding weekly papers.

Contests for Juveniles Planned by Charninsky

Early in July in conjunction with a Roy Rogers picture, Louie Charninsky, at the Capitol, in Dallas, Texas is planning a guitar-playing contest for boys and girls under 15. The first group will appear on stage week in advance of showing to be followed by a different group each night for three consecutive nights, finals slated for the opening night of the picture. A local music store is offering two guitars as prizes to the winners, and leading music school is offering three complete courses. Additional cash awards will be offered by cooperating stores.

Beginning the first week after close of school, ice cream bars will be distributed to patrons attending the early Saturday shows. Tieup also being made with candy distributor who will furnish samples for remainder of the summer.

Now in work is a plan whereby local newspaper is tied in, the carrier boys selling tickets to the theatres, entire proceeds of which will go to the Free Milk Fund. All business college students, beginning June 1, will be admitted any day after two, upon presentation of a student's ticket, at a special reduced rate. Dallas high school band students will also sell tickets for the theatre during the summer, half of proceeds from the sale will go toward buying new uniforms for the next semester.

Ruddick Starts Summer With Annual Flower Show

Now in progress and what has heretofore been a competitive event is the annual spring flower show, sponsored and presented by the local Garden Club of Springfield, Mo. The show is presented in the lobby, foyer and mezzanine of the Fox Midwest Gillioz Theatre, by Manager Joe Ruddick and attendance entails the purchase of a regulation theatre ticket.

Fox Midwest Theatres and Commonwealth Theatre, opposition, have secured the state franchise on the annual "Miss America Beauty Pageants." It is planned to make this a large mid-summer activity, bringing in all six of the local theatres for individual contests, merchant sponsored, with the finals probably held at the Gillioz. Local city winner will receive an all-expense trip to the state finals at one of the Fox key theatres in Kansas City. Also planned is a combination benefit and stage show with the Elks Club for the week of July 4, a banner week annually in the organization.

Other activities will include dance recitals, additional benefits, ticket deals with the two large summer teacher's colleges there, a comedy show sponsored by one of the civic clubs and a World's Fair Tour contest.

A new deep well system, newly installed to supplement an overloaded mechanical system, will be the cause for an extensive billing trip, selling the cooling system together with the first exploitation special of the summer parade, i. e. "Only Angels Have Wings."

TOURIST BUSINESS TO BE TAPPED

Bearg Reports Hook-ups With Local Race Meets

Up in Vancouver, B. C., Larry Bearg, district chief, reports on the contemplated summer activities of the Famous Players theatremen in that sector. With six weeks of horse racing extremely popular, arrangements are made with the track officials to have a Capitol and Orpheum Theatre Day when special handicap races are held in connection with the name of the current picture or star. Cup is awarded by the star and telegram from him read over the loud speakers calling attention to the picture to an attendance of about 12,000. In connection with all tieups that are made at the track, theatre receives loud speaker announcements.

During the midst of the season a "Sport of Kings" night is held at one of the theatres when the leading jockeys and other prominent officials connection with the various tracks are introduced. Oftimes it is found the jockeys can sing, which helps make the presentations unusual. The desire to see these jockeys at close range is a reported big business getter.

Hotels and apartment hotels are contacted for special display board credits in lobbies, selling the current programs in the four FP-C downtown first run theatres. These are built in keeping with the architecture of the hotel for which they are intended and placed in a location that will give them sufficient prominence to be worth the extra expense involved.

Bearg also uses a truck, during the summer when the tourists are on the streets and at the numerous beaches, which carries advertising for the current shows. Also inexpensive but proven effective are street ballyhoos of people dressed in character according to the attraction. All advertising copy is written with the thought in mind of selling the theatre as well as the attraction to tourists.

"WHAT ARE YOU PLANNING FOR SUMMER"

Comprehensive Campaign Planned by Eshelman

In cooperation with the Huron, S. D. Chamber of Commerce, Jim Eshelman, has secured permission to place four billboards, six sheet size, on the four leading highways approaching the city, with the following copy: "Howdy, Mr. Tourist, why not spend the night in Huron . . . for perfect rest and relaxation attend the delightfully cool Huron Theatre."

With local papers anxious to do something that will stimulate interest in their want-ad pages, the "Whoosit" type of contest has proven profitable for Jim. A group of questions are listed on the classified page, answers to which are found among the ads. Theatre guest tickets are offered to those sending in neatest answers. Paper usually provides unlimited space to explaining the contest which also includes plug for current attraction.

Leading restaurant is also cooperating with the theatreman by offering special imprinted theatre courtesy cards to their customers. Cards admit holders at matinee prices up to 7:30 p. m. Restaurant will run announcement ads in paper and also provide window space for picture copy.

SUGGESTS TIEING IN WITH OUTDOOR ACTIVITIES

"Each year finds the public more and more eager to participate in sport —not to just watch—but to play. Softball teams are taking more and more people away from the boxoffice at the important hours. Therefore, activities should be directed at those "leaks" and by working into them they can in some measure be diverted to the theatre, if not at the moment, perhaps a little later. Every opportunity should be taken to be in among those competitive outdoor activities to turn a hot summer into hot business."

—Stuart Tomber, Fargo, Sycamore, Ill.

Letters will be mailed to all school superintendents suggesting that the graduating classes include a theatre party on their list of activities. Jim reports rural schools are especially appreciative of this suggestion and the idea has developed into a big money-getter for him. With most organizations looking for some means to raise funds, benefits will be held at the theatre with organizations involved selling the tickets.

"WHAT ARE YOU PLANNING FOR SUMMER"

The Bugs Will Also Jitter For Samartano This Summer

Planned by Joe Samartano, at Loew's Poli-Palace, in Meriden, Conn. is a jitterbug contest to be presented on stage once a week in search for Meriden's most popular dance teams. Weekly prizes promoted from local jeweler consisting of two wrist watches to the weekly winners plus a silver engraved trophy to be given to the best team at the finals have already been arranged for. Since there are a number of local name bands in his area, who have a certain amount of public following, the theatreman has arranged to alternate these bands every week to play for the Jamboree and also put on an extra entertainment program. Daily ads are placed in the classified column of local dailies inviting contestants and announcements are made by all of the bands engaged for the Jamboree.

Another stunt to be repeated at intervals during the summer in co-operation with the Merchants Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce is a "dividend night," the climax of the Merchants Dividend monthly sales drive. The stores issue coupons during a two day sale called "dividend days" and the public is invited to bring these coupons to the theatre where a drawing is held. Sixty prizes valued at $500 are distributed. Theatre gets daily newspaper breaks on the stunt including a front page ribbon and attraction announcement.

Special Shows Arranged By Nessel for Hot Months

Ferd Nessel's summer campaign at the State Theatre, in Anderson, Ind. covers a 13 week period from May 14 to August 12. Bookings have been carefully considered, big pictures playing on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday with double featuring on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday-Saturday with special tieups. House has been revamped from front to back to denote coolness, shadow boxes done in blue and green as are all house lights and all advertising carries cool copy.

Underway is a 13 week amateur contest on stage giving cash prizes to the first three winners. These in turn go to semi finals in the 11th and 12th weeks where numerous promoted prizes are awarded and in the final week a group will be selected to represent the State in other theatres in the circuit. Ten contestants are used each week.

On Saturday mornings at 10 a. m. Nessel has his "Happy Hour Kiddie Show" for which the theatreman books selected shorts and a Western. Ice cream, prizes, entertainment and novelties have been arranged for. Each Saturday one child is selected by drawing from ticket stubs, who is entitled to bring 10 of his friends the following Saturday as guests of the theatre, with ice cream sodas promoted for the party from cooperating merchant.

During July, Ferd has arranged for a four day cooking school on stage, sponsored by one of the local papers. Held one morning each week on stage, prizes are handled by the paper, theatre furnishing the pictures and shorts. Entire show to be held at regular matinee prices.

Ruralites to Carry Posters for Bishop

To counteract some of the usual seasonal opposition during the summer months, Hal Bishop, Capitol, in Winnipeg, Manitoba, intends booking the golf short entitled "Smooth Approach" which features four top ranking professionals. Golf clubs will be allowed to place notices on their bulletin boards and urged to advise their members to see the picture at the theatre to improve their "short game." Bishop is also booking sport shorts having to do with inside baseball and local ball clubs will be approached for announcements over their public address systems.

Hal is also making a strong bid for the tourist business. While Provincial legislation prohibits the placing of sign boards along the highways, arrangements have been made with local farmers who own property adjoining the roadways to place stick cards reading "While in Winnipeg, be sure to visit the Capitol." etc. etc. Sign boards will also be placed in all tourists camps, signs in bus stations and all important restaurants will also cooperate.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

THOMAS A. MANGAN
entered showbusiness back in 1922 and his first job was that of usher. Three years later he secured a manager's post at the Washington Theatre, Chester, Pennsylvania and then was transferred to West Chester, in the same state, working for Stanley-Warner circuit at the Warner and Rialto houses.

suddenly realized that no little mention had been given him in the Round Table pages and that officially he had not joined the membership. Thus, along came his long-delayed application from Sycamore, Illinois, where he is holding down a managerial position at the Fargo Theatre. We are all well acquainted with the fine job he is doing there. Stuart came on to this spot after he left the Stadium, in Evanston, Illinois.

started at the age of 13 as errand boy at M & P's Morton Theatre, Boston, Mass. He later became an usher and then was promoted to chief usher, these jobs being done at the same house. Moving to the Thompson Square Theatre, Charlestown, last year, found him as assistant manager and a very short while thereafter he secured the skipper's post at the Hollywood.

is the manager of the State Theatre in Kansas City, Kansas. He started working in the moving picture field when he obtained a job at the Blaine in Henryetta, Oklahoma, for Griffith Amusement Co., where he stayed for over four years. He moved to the Yale in the same city and after a year came on to the Tivoli in Kansas City, Missouri, as assistant manager. Immediately after this job he secured the one he now has and is quite happy at his work.

entered showbusiness six years ago, serving as doorman at the Studio Theatre, Prescott, Arizona. A year later he was advanced to assistant manager, holding this post for a year. His next move was to Flagstaff, in the same state, being installed as manager of the Orpheum and Liberty Theatres in that city. When his employers bought the Flagstaff house, Coates managed this, along with the other two, until 1938, when he was returned to manage the Studio, in Prescott, his point of beginning.

has been in theatrics since 1937, at which time he secured his first job as assistant manager at the Squirrel Hill Theatre in Pittsburgh, Penna., for Warner Bros. He moved to the Manor, then to the Schenley, in the same capacity. His first managerial post was at the Regent, also in Pittsburgh, at which spot he is now located. Please keep us well informed of what you are doing for the box office, Hank.

JAMES FONTAINE, weight six pounds five ounces, born May 23rd to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Strother. Daddy is a booker for Fox Wisconsin Amusement Company in the home office in Milwaukee.

is well known to Round Table readers, having contributed much to its pages and also being well represented in the Quigley Awards Competitions. He is the manager of the Fox Midwest Gillioz Theatre in Springfield, Missouri. In fact, Joe has been with that Circuit since he entered showbusiness, in 1932. At that time he began as an usher at the Plaza Theatre in Kansas City, Missouri, moving to the Apollo in the same sector, in like capacity, and having a doorman's duties as well. In 1935 he was transferred to act as assistant at the Mainstreet house in Lexington, Mo., following with another assistantship in Marshall, Mo. Two years later brought him to Ft. Madison, Iowa, remaining for a short period and then back to Marshall. He came on to his present situation in 1938, from which post we hope to hear from him at not too infrequent intervals.

JOHN FRANCIS WRIGHT
has been in theatre business for the past eight years, mostly in the entertainment and promotional end. He acted as master of ceremonies for amateur contests, producing theatricals and promoting country store nights. We now find him at the American Theatre in East Liverpool, Ohio, one of the houses of Interstate Theatres, where he is doing a nice job as assistant manager.

manages the First Capital Theatre, one of the houses of the Long circuit, in West Columbia, Texas. His duties in the movie business started right at the door and so quickly did he grasp theatre work that he shortly was promoted as manager of the Star Theatre in League, Texas. From there he was transferred to his present job and is doing his "durndest" to make a great success in it. Our best wishes, Tom.

began as operator in a small North Alabama town, in 1922, while still attending high school. He remained there for five years, then quit to try his hand at selling insurance. Several years later John bought a half interest in the Bonita Theatre, Marion, managing there for over a year, then selling to return to the commercial field. By 1937, feeling he had sold everybody some insurance, he felt the call to showbusiness once more and secured his present position of managing the Strand in Uniontown, Alabama.

began his theatrical career at the Metropolitan Theatre in Boston, Mass., in 1930, when he secured an usher's job at that spot and shortly after was promoted to captain and assistant chief. Following this he went on to the publicity department and also had a chance to spend time in the personnel department of Paramount-Publix. Publicity work in vaudeville, as well as radio continuity were also tackled by Bob and his thespian ability brought him to both stage and screen. Several months ago, in order to gain added experience in small house operation, Bob joined the Graphic Circuit, to manage their Park Theatre, in Dexter, Maine.

IN COURTS

Tax Actions in Three States

Carlton S. Dargusch, former vice-chairman of the Ohio Tax Commission, has been retained by the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio as counsel to protect interests of members in actions to recover on the state three per cent sales tax. The state's answers in connection with two suits for recovery are due in Franklin County court of appeals June 15th.

The Ohio ITO has advised members that they must pay the "use" tax on purchases made outside the state. Tax Commission auditors have been checking exhibitors' books and in many cases exhibitors have been compelled to pay the tax plus a 15 per cent penalty.

In Pennsylvania, the state has appealed to the supreme court to uphold the chain store and theatre tax, declared unconstitutional by a Dauphin County court. John Scott, counsel for the state, said this week that there is a clear distinction between one owner operating many stores, and many owners operating one store each, and legislation may make this distinction the subject of taxation.

Louisiana's collector of revenue has announced an appeal to the state supreme court from a district court's decision prohibiting the state from collecting a sales tax on fees exhibitors pay for showing films.

The appeal will not be considered until sometime next fall, after the court's summer recess which started this week.

Court Gets Theatre Clearance Dispute

A clearance dispute between the Schuyler and Arden theatres, both on Columbus Avenue in New York, has resulted in a suit filed in the state supreme court. Schuyler Theatre Corporation filed suit against Columbia Pictures for breach of a contract made last December, under which the theatre purchased 40 films. The contract provided, it is claimed, that the Arden was not to receive clearance over the Schuyler. The complaint charges, however, that the clearance was granted. A temporary injunction, pending trial, to prevent Columbia from granting clearance to the Arden in the future, has been asked. Harry Brandt books for the Schuyler, which is a Kaybern house. William Kaster operates the Arden.

File Paramount Suit

Suit for an undisclosed amount was filed Monday in New York supreme court against Paramount Pictures, Inc., Stanton Griffis, and Henry A. Schatzkin and Mortimer W. Loewi, trading as Schatzkin, Loewi and Company, by Blanche W. Laurence and Jules C. Leeds, executors of the estate of Abram L. Leeds, and the firm of Stear and Leeds. No details of the suit were available, but it is understood to involve purchase by Paramount of a 50 per cent interest in the DuMont Television Company. Leeds owns an interest in the company and claims part of the purchase price, it is understood.

File "Revels" Suit

Goldwyn Suit Delay Seen

Motion by United Artists to dismiss the complaint of Samuel Goldwyn and Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., in the breach of contract suit in Wilmington may not be reached for hearing before the fall, it was learned this week. Procedure in the Delaware federal courts is to hear all motions in the order in which they are filed. The calendar is more than a month behind and unless action is speeded before summer recess, the motion is not likely to be argued before October.

Burns Sues Magazine

Bob Burns has filed suit in Chicago superior court against Esquire magazine for an accounting, asking for money due him, he claims, for syndicate articles.

Smith in New UA Post

Guy Croswell Smith, who was appointed United Artists manager in Cristobal, Canal Zone, recently, sailed last week to take over his new post. Mr. Smith, a former United Artists manager in France, succeeds Paul Wir, resigned.

Altec has created a new service territory in the Philadelphia area, comprising the eastern shore of Maryland, Delaware and Virginia. W. M. Schubert will service the new territory from his headquarters in Dover, Del.

OBITUARIES

William B. Millar Dies; Headed Film Foundation

The Reverend Dr. William Bell Millar, who resigned in 1934 as general secretary of the Greater New York Federation of Churches to become secretary of the Motion Picture Foundation of the United States of America, died May 30th in New York. He was 73 years old and a native of Lake Mills, Wis.

The Motion Picture Foundation of which he became secretary was started with a large sum, supplied by a group of business men, to lend to independent producers for the promoting of "wholesome and intelligent" films.

Dr. Miller was a trustee of Drew University, the Golden Rule Foundation and the Near East Relief, and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic society, and the New York Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

John Miller Dead; Former Producer

John F. Miller, 67, former producer and newspaper man, died in the United States Veterans Hospital at Sawtelle, Cal., May 24th. Mr. Miller produced films in New York, starring Ruth Roland and Grace Cunard, before moving to Culver City, Cal., in 1920. He was employed on newspapers in Buffalo and Los Angeles.

Raymond Freil Dies Of Heart Ailment

Raymond A. Freil, cartoonist, scenario writer and former motion picture director, died May 24th in Yonkers, N. Y., of a heart ailment. He used the name Dick Freil in writing and drawing. He was 45.

Mr. Freil drew for Bud Fisher and Walt Disney in the early days of the animated cartoon. He wrote scenarios, played in Mack Sennett comedies and had directed Richard Dix and Johnny Hines in pictures. Mr. Freil also had been connected with Fox Film Company, Famous Players and Paramount.

Samuel Berman Dies

Samuel I. Berman, 64, former Brooklyn exhibitor, died May 28th at United Hospital, Port Chester, N. Y. At one time he operated the Walker and Senate theatres in Brooklyn, retiring in 1929.

Ada Humbert

Miss Ada E. Humbert, known through her duties for 30 years in a New York theatrical exchange, to many actors and actresses of the stage and screen, died in New York May 28th. Among those reported to have received their first theatrical work from Miss Humbert are Katharine Cornell and Fredric March.

James Fitzpatrick

James E. Fitzpatrick, 40, branch manager in Albany for the Fitch Advertising Company, died there May 28th. He was a former president of the Albany Advertising Club.

Henceforth, associate producers on "A" pictures at Warner Brothers will receive screen credit. Associate producers on the lower budget pictures will continue to remain anonymous on the main leaders. Warners had been the only studio not recognizing associate producers on title cards.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Col.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as offically given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

PICTURES for AMERICA

THE sum total of world pressures and problems of the motion picture result in an outlook for product most favourable for the American exhibitor.

The news of the industry is full of the issues and the endeavours at selling the patrons overseas.

The facts of the industry, as reflected by the production plans of Hollywood, show a more intensive and conscious address to the homeland market than has ever before been visible in the entire history of the business.

The product announcements in hand, and to come, promise more pictures made primarily for the consumption of the people between Eastport, Maine, and Point Loma, California, than since Mr. Thomas A. Edison built the Black Maria studio in West Orange.

Not so long ago every first class ship brought over some personality proclaimed as a discovery for Hollywood, really intended as a selling point for some overseas market. By that formula we may presently now and then be getting some Latin-American names from the keen, high coloured, and slender art of the Latin-Americas, but in the main for a while we shall be seeing motion pictures presenting the people of today's Hollywood and normal acquisitions from the English speaking stage.

THE American motion picture industry has been, for the most of the years of its existence, international, tending to cosmopolite service of its homefolks. The land of the melting pot has taken it and liked it. Until sometime around the period of the War Between the States, British literature, mostly pirated, dominated the American book market. An indigenous art of the word arose, but we still buy British books, and lots of them. It now seems that the course of the screen will be something like that, all over the world.

But, while once peoples were free to buy and read and see, new factors of influence appear. The last issue of Motion Picture Herald presented a headline: "Japan Joins Nazis, Italy, on Film Control to Advance its Culture." Some two years ago or more The Herald said that would be.

From our neighbor south, Mexico, come tidings that production is to be financed by the National Workers and Industrial Bank—"money for pictures, however, is to be allowed only those producers endorsed by the Mexican Producers Association and the labour organizations."

We are yet to hear much from the Latin-Americas south of the equator. There are frontiers as primitive as colonial America, and capitals as sophisticated as New York, London and Paris.

MOST interesting, most serious, is the problem of the American motion picture in Britain, where poised against each other are the concerns of showmen dependent on Hollywood's output and a nationalism which would have an important industry of its own.

And, more than that, there is in Britain's endeavours about the cinema a special showing of what may be had out of the notion of a "planned economy." It is proving so far, if one is to accept the tidings of difference between British exhibition and British production, not so satisfactory. Once upon a time, and for a long while Britain was a "free trader," the doctrine of a seller in a seller's market. Since 1914, and now, the motion picture is in Britain something to buy—and with taxes on it. Once there was a Boston tea party over an issue like that.

Despite, and because of, the problems of the world market, the American exhibitor and his public are today so much the largest customers of the Hollywood production machine that they can rule the output. The wave of acute Americanism on the screen, somewhat transiently expressed in terms of patriotic product, tends presently to evolve into service of, rather than preachment to, the home audience.

PEGLER ENTERPRISE

MR. WESTBROOK PEGLER, celebrated Scripps-Howard columnist, last week regaled his readers with a bit of lore about his remarkable dad, Mr. Arthur James Pegler, journalist extraordinary, now retired in his middle 70's. Then Time Magazine picked up the tale and told of the enterprising successes of the two Pegler sons, Westbrook and Mr. Jack Pegler, motion picture and advertising figure, and mentioning, too, that Pegler-the-elder had a fling in motion pictures in association with your editor.

So now we'll tell one. Back yonder when Jack and Westbrook were in knee pants, their father and your editor lived next door in Chicago, a-newspapering together. Also together one day they returned home to hear sounds of riot, confusion and cries of murder on the back verandah. Together they raced to the rescue to find the scene occupied by the little Pegler boys, holding between them the family parrot, which was vociferating at the indignity of an effort to give him an enema.

The parrot had an amazing vocabulary.

Indignantly, in alarum, the father demanded: "What goes on here—what are you doing?"

"We're trying to get back our dime," Westbrook indignantly explained. "This so-and-so swallowed it."

They were born with a spirit of enterprise.

PRODUCTION NOTE

CHERISHING in malicious memory as we do that euphemistic phrase from Mr. M. H. Aylesworth, about "the wedding of the arts," it is with special interest that one regards the sharp statistical fact that in the motion picture's program of about five hundred productions for the coming season, two (2) take their origin from radio. It would seem a decided possibility that the motion picture industry might make some remarks about non-support—artistically.

It is pleasant to observe the report from Mr. William R. Weaver, our Hollywood editor, that "major companies alone will supply sixty-one westerns." It is to be hoped that they will make them outdoors. Too many "A" pictures observed of late are laden with painted, well painted but nonetheless painted, backdrops, and many others have used process treated scenes all too obviously.

The analysis which decides that 212 of the coming pictures are to be "originals" is a bit fine-haired. All motion picture

This Week

Washington Conference

Ranking officials of the industry and the president of its trade organization went abruptly to Washington this week to discuss with the secretary of commerce "broad problems affecting the motion picture industry in its relation to the general economic structure." Broadest of the problems in everyone's minds was the matter of a possible consent decree settlement of the Government's pending anti-trust suit. Particular business of the meeting was not disclosed but Frank Murphy, attorney general, intimated his department had initiated the suggestion for a meeting.

The report starts on page 12.

58 for Paramount

Paramount, meeting in convention at the source of production in Hollywood this week, heard 1939-40 plans for 58 features. Emphasis in the new program will be on action pictures, American history figuring importantly, and great store is being set in a group of young players which the company is developing.

Titles and details are in the convention story on page 26 and on the same page Terry Ramsaye reports the details of the unloading of 18 cars of Paramount salesmanship on Hollywood after transcontinental miles of conferences.

PRODUCTION NOTE

versions are distinctly original, regardless of source. Mr. Henry Ford is said once to have testified that "history is bunk." He should see it on the screen—it's really putty, moulded under entertainment license.

COMING and GOING

BY TRAIL, plane and radio the nation has been taken, this hectic year of 1939, to openings at Dodge City, Omaha, and Springfield. And this is written at 80 miles an hour on a special train which heads for Los Angeles to make it, for the days of the Paramount annual convention, the capital of the corporation's dominion. The motion picture business seems to be full of elsewhere, and these days Broadway is where you find it. The home office in the world of tomorrow will be in a dirigible.

Terry Ramsaye

"Pernicious Effects"

After long weeks of hearings on arguments for and against Federal legislation against motion picture block booking, latest in a series of official and public arguments on the matter which have dotted the years, Senator Matthew M. Neely of West Virginia this week, in his committee report on this year's bill was eloquent on the "pernicious effects" of block booking and blind selling, the propaganda effects of the MPPDA, the high salaries of film company executives and other "evils" in the industry.

The 19 page report is quoted on page 16.

Royal Visit

Arrangements for newsreel coverage of the visit to the United States of the King and Queen of England, record breaking in their completeness and scope, were concluded early this week. At the Canadian border, in Washington, at the World's Fair, at Hyde Park and along the routes between these points newsreel crews were posted and ready to film the royal couple's travels for a waiting world.

The ingenuity of the newsreel companies in securing vantage points for their cameramen is reported on page 17.

Fair Strike Threat

Dissatisfaction of New York theatrical trades unions with the attitude of both the management of the New York World's Fair and that of the concessionaires operating in the amusement area, culminated at mid-week with the likelihood of a strike, in which would be involved all of the unions associated in the New York Theatrical Trades Council.

These unions are the Musicians' Union, Local 802; the American Federation of Actors; the Projectionists' Union, Local 306; the Cameramen's Union, Local 644; the Stagehands' Union, Local 4; the Motion Picture Studio Mechanics' Union, Local 52; the Theatrical Teamsters' Union, Local 817.

The strike, which was anticipated by week's end, would also involve all of the union members working at the fair, inasmuch as no American Federation of Labor members were expected to pass a picket line.

Specific cause for the dispute appeared to be the boiling dissatisfaction of the union officials with the Fair management, whom they declare not only failed to aid unions in obtaining recognition from individual concessionaires, but whom also they charge with failing to favor the employment of union members by the Fair Corporation.

The Cameramen's Union some time ago refused to allow its members to enter the Fair; and the Local 306 has been attempting, unsuccessfully, to have its members operate the 16 mm machines at the Fair.

Vote in Minneapolis

The highlight of the annual convention of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors which opens next week in Minneapolis will be, according to the present program, a vote by delegates on the floor, no matter what their organization affiliation, on their attitude toward the proposed trade practice program to be presented by distributors. The arbitration clause of the revised code was presented last week in New York and the complete document, as revised will be studied at the Minneapolis meeting.

Final plans for the meeting are on page 14.

Encore

Universal's Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "The Mikado," showing at the Rivoli, New York, is to be made the subject of experiments to study the audience response to encores for certain scenes, according to an announcement from the theatre management. Trade representatives will be invited to early morning screenings of the picture at which regular projection "change-over" technique will be employed to throw on reserve reels so as to repeat a scene in answer to applause.

Television Knockout

Boxer Lou Nova lacerated slugger Max Baer into submission in eleven rounds on Thursday evening last, before 17,000 persons in the Yankee Stadium, New York—and before uncounted thousands more, who were not at the stadium. It was the first telecast of a professional boxing match in this country, and it was, to the National Broadcasting Company engineers and television proponents generally, a proof of television's practicability in reporting news events. The fight was received with clarity, but not with fine definition. The consensus was that the television camera will have to be closer to its objects than it was on that night. Nevertheless, television spectators had the "feel" of the fight, and all published reports called the telecast at least "satisfactory." Several New York theatres played to capacity crowds—in their lobbies and lounges, where their television receivers caught the fight.

Other television news on pages 44 and 45.

Trade Practices

First official expression by an exhibitor organization on the majors' new trade practice program came late Wednesday from the ITOA in New York which accepted with reservations, as the majors' committee was finishing the final draft.

Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA, at a general membership meeting at New York's Astor Hotel announced acceptance of the trade code provided the distributors revise the rules of arbitration to assure more representation for independent exhibitors on the panels of arbitrators, charging the setup as proposed gives distributors and affiliated circuits an advantage.

Mr. Brandt was reelected president.

June 16th was designated for negotiations of a new contract with Local 306 operators.

New England Unions

Units of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees in New England, in convention this week in Boston planned a campaign to clean up non-union conditions, another to bring 16 mm operators under union jurisdiction, and voted confidence in international officers.

See page 46.

Insurance Rates Rise

With increases in some cases running as high as 66 per cent, the rates on liability insurance for exhibitors have been raised; the new rates going into effect this week.

Theatres in Boston are affected the most; with New York, Kansas City and St. Louis houses also affected strongly.

An account and analysis of the new rates will be found on page 52.

Bingo Law

Exhibitors in Connecticut, long irked under rulings outlawing chance games, this week watched the state legislature pass and submit to the Governor a bill permitting the operation of Bingo games. But under the law as it stands they achieve no benefit. The games can only be played by non-profit organizations such as churches, schools and clubs.

Reports from other states on chance game laws are on page 40.

From the Ledger

A Securities and Exchange Commission brochure containing "selected information" published this week in Washington reports that seven of ten film production and distribution companies whose securities are listed with the Commission did a total business in 1937 of $406,855,095 on total assets of $529,950,000; showed a combined operating profit of $40,911,459, and a combined profit after all charges of $34,091,330. Dividends paid were $22,343,341.

The statistics are explored on page 22.

Griffith's Camp

R. E. Griffith, upon whose ranch at Belton, Texas, the Dallas Variety Club has been maintaining a boys' camp, has arranged that the ranch may be used by the Dallas club as long as they sponsor the camp. Mr. Griffith is head of the Griffith circuit, of Texas and Oklahoma. The camp has been opened for the summer.

Commission Under Fire

Aside from the provision for an extension of the license period from six months to one year, few of the more important of the Federal Communications Commission's proposed new regulations for standard broadcast stations were given the approval of the radio industry at final arguments before the Commission this week.

The proposed extension was unanimously commended, although the idea was voiced that the license term should be even longer and suggestions were made that Congress may be asked to force such action on the part of the Commission.

The proposed financial ability proof to be demanded of every applicant for station license, however, drew the fire of the industry counsel who argued the rules as being entirely too stringent. Under such regulations, it was declared by Philip Loucks, special counsel for the National Association of Broadcasters, new stations might be impossible in times of depression and, he said, "whether a station can make or lose money, based upon testimony nebulous at its best, should not be the sole criterion upon which the Commission decides whether or not a community requiring service shall have that service supplied."

The Commission this week was digesting the flood of protests from broadcasters, Congressmen and the public which followed its recent declaration of rules, governing short wave international broadcasts. Mildest of the protests charged attempts to assume censorship. See page 34.

Mischief in Illinois

The Illinois Senate on Wednesday received a bill passed by that state legislature's House, prohibiting exhibitors from screening any film or films continuously for longer than two hours. An intermission of 15 minutes is required at the beginning of each hour in excess of two.

Zay and French Bill

The bill pending in France for control of the film industry will not interfere with any existing treaties or agreements between France and other countries, especially the United States, Jean Zay, French Minister of Education, said on his arrival in New York this week.

Mr. Zay is sponsor of the proposed legislation, on which action has been deferred to the fall. He is in this country on educational matters and to receive a degree from Columbia University. American companies have feared that the bill, if enacted, would seriously affect their revenue and operations in France, as a ban on double billing was included.

U. S. AND MAJORS TALK ABOUT "BROAD PROBLEMS"

Consent Decree Reported One Of Points Discussed as Company Executives, Will Hays Meet Secretary of Commerce

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

With the dramatic abruptness of a bare few hours' advance announcement to the public, executives representing the highest motion picture officialdom met with the United States Government in Washington on Tuesday to discuss "broad problems affecting the motion picture industry in its relation to the general economic structure." And at the end of the day all agreed to meet again, in Washington, early in the new week.

The discussions were between the United States Secretary of Commerce Harry Lloyd Hopkins, and other officials of his Department, and Will H. Hays, president, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; Nicholas M. Schenck, president, Loew's, Inc.; Harry M. Warner, president, Warner Brothers Pictures, and George J. Schaefer, president, RKO Radio Pictures. Also participating were J. H. Hazen, executive vice-president of Warners; Willard L. Thorp, economic adviser to Secretary Hopkins; Nathan D. Golden, Chief, Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and Ernest A. Tupper, chief statistician of the Bureau.

Conferences of Department of Commerce officials with representatives of the film industry will have no effect on the Department of Justice plan for prosecution of the New York suit, Frank Murphy, attorney general, said on Wednesday.

However, he added, "We will view with great respect and consideration any recommendations that Secretary Hopkins may make, and know he will only try to be helpful."

Mr. Murphy suggested that it is possible that the Commerce Department conferences will reach some trade practice agreement that may simplify settlement of the litigation in New York and elsewhere.

"As with all industries engaged in practice of violation of the anti-trust laws, we have to take immediate action to enforce the law," he explained. "Whatever we do, we hope will have an effect good for the public. We hope it will be good for the industry, and will not harm it. We hope to bring it into line with practices we approve of, and we do not want to be harmful but want the industry to flourish."

The attorney general admitted the implication that the Commerce Department was acting, possibly, as an intermediary, and negotiator for a consent decree in the film case, and that the conferences had been suggested by the Justice Department.

Discussing the economic problems of the motion picture industry in Washington, left to right, Harry M. Warner, Nicholas M. Schenck, Will H. Hays, George J. Schaefer, J. H. Hazen, executive vice-president of Warners, and Harry Hopkins, United States secretary of commerce. The group will meet again early next week.

He made it plain, however, that while it might be possible to settle civil cases by consent decree, no such action could be taken on criminal prosecution.

No official announcement was forthcoming following the initial discussions, but informal opinions were expressed, and Capital observers understood that "many problems" confronting the industry were before the conferees, among them possibilities of a consent decree to end the Government's pending anti-trust suit against the majors in New York; the industry's new trade practice agreement and system of arbitrating trade disputes, block booking, labor problems and foreign trade of films.

Department of Commerce Statement

First open disclosure that a meeting had been arranged came Monday afternoon in the following broad statement from the Department of Commerce at Washington.

"The Secretary of Commerce, Harry L. Hopkins, and other officials of the Department of Commerce will confer Tuesday, June 6th, with representatives of the motion picture industry to discuss economic problems concerning their industry.

"The discussion will embrace broad problems affecting the motion picture industry in its relation to the general economic structure.

"The meeting is in line with the Commerce Department's policy of serving as a government agency with which business men can confer on specific problems in terms of broad, economic factors."

Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, was mentioned also as participating, but he was visiting South America.

Business Aspects

Mr. Hazen remained in Washington after the conversations, to acquaint Commerce Department statisticians and economists more intimately with the motion picture industry, its economics, operations and structure. Mr. Hays likewise stayed on, returning Thursday. Mr. Schaefer, Mr. Warner and Mr. Schenck returned to New York Wednesday morning.

None, of course, would discuss the visit with Secretary Hopkins, Mr. Schenck reporting that Mr. Hays was "the spokesman" for the film group, although he did say that the conversations would be continued in the new week.

One report is that the officials presented the business aspects and potentialities of what heretofore has been a series of legal and other moves against the organized industry.

There are some who point out that not taken into account in the Government's suit is the size and scope and general economic structure of the industry, with its 282,000 persons and $368,560,000 annual expenditure on steady payrolls; its estimated $1,000,000,000 gross turnover annually at the boxoffice; its $100,000,000 estimated annual tax payments to the Federal Government alone; its $2,000,000,000 capital investment in theatres, studios and exchanges.

Capital observers expect to see brought out in the present conversations such points as the feelings of some in the industry regarding the inability of Hollywood to make big, quality pictures if certain changes in the general structure are forced by the courts, legislation or otherwise.

Speculation on Reactions

The all-important question in speculation, of course, is just how much effect even the most sympathetic reaction of Secretary Hopkins can and would have upon the Department of Justice in its prosecution of the industry, assuming that such is even possible.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on June 3rd, page 50, reported that "considerable speculation over the possibilities of developing the long-sought program to give industry and the Government an intermediary through which adjustments may be made of situations which give rise to anti-trust suits follows the 'exploratory' conversations between Department of Commerce officials and representatives against which Thurman Arnold, assistant district attorney general, has announced he will take action in the near future."

"For years," the article continued, "the motion picture and other important industries have pleaded for the establishment of some agency in the Federal Government which could give them advice in advance as to whether proposed practices or actions would be deemed counter to the anti-trust statutes.

"Convinced, on the whole, that the Department of Justice means business, many industries now are anxious for an opportunity to 'clean house'. . . . And it was on this basis that representatives of West Coast oil companies met with Dr. Willard Thorp, economic adviser to Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, apparently with the approval—or at least without the disapproval of the assistant attorney general."

Describing a situation existing similarly in the motion picture industry, the HERALD article of June 3rd, said "Since the Department of Justice is preparing to take action against the oil men, its officials could not well undertake conversations with the (oil) men they planned to prosecute, lest the negotiations fail of result and jeopardize the Government's case. But, it is said, those officials had no objection to the oil men seeking counsel elsewhere in the Government, with a view to developing a program for correction of the abuses at which the proceedings will be aimed and which might be used as the basis for suspension of action, by consent degree or in some other way. . . . Because of the similarity in the structure and operating methods of the two industries, motion picture interests are said to be watching closely the attempt by the oil companies to develop new machinery for the settlement of monopoly complaints."

Monopoly and Trade Practices

Although both the Commerce and film groups refused to say that their Tuesday meeting was designed to explore the possibilities of a consent decree to end the Government's pending New York suit against the industry, Washington understood the question of monopoly and trade practices was among the important subjects discussed.

The film group is said to have laid before Secretary Hopkins its latest proposals for a trade practice agreement, explaining that it was hoped the pact would put an end to the internecine conflict within the industry.

The foreign trade conversations covered not only the situation in the European countries but also the possibilities of development of the Latin American market.

Although it was denied by Department of Commerce officials that the meetings are designed to establish a basis for the settlement of anti-trust prosecutions, it is significant that the groups which have thus far participated—oil, phosphates and films—are all involved in cases brought by the Department of Justice, and it was admitted that the conferences have been approved by that department and in some instances, it was said, suggested by Mr. Arnold acting for the Justice Department.

Bureau of Economics Feeler

The meetings are viewed by observers in Washington as an exploration of the possibilities of establishing a bureau of industrial economics in the Department of Agriculture to give business advice as to the propriety of proposed activities but this is denied by the Department of Justice. Such a bureau was suggested some time ago by President Roosevelt and last month was given the approval of Mr. Murphy in his statement explaining his anti-trust policy.

Following the conference, Mr. Hays in Washington, said: "We discussed all the economic problems involving the industry that we could think of. They were in the nature of a general survey and we hope much will come out of it."

The conference convened at about 10:30 a.m., and, with the exception of an hour for lunch, at which, however, the discussions continued, lasted until 5:30 p.m., when, with both Government and industry groups remaining firm in their denial that the New York suit was a major subject of discussion, it became known that the underlying purpose of the meetings is the development of consent decree proposals which can be laid before the Attorney General and his assistant in charge of anti-trust enforcement.

It was pointed out that the meeting was attended by the highest paid officials in the industry, whose time is too valuable to be devoted to a discussion of quotas, labor problems and other questions with which other officials more directly concerned are probably more familiar.

The film men, it was said, appeared to be prepared to bargain on a consent decree and ready to make many concessions in order to bring the New York proceedings to a quick conclusion.

It was indicated that when they return in a week the film officials will have more definite matters to lay before the Department.

It was freely admitted outside the conference chambers in the Commerce Building that the conferences are for the purpose of determining what the Department of Commerce can do as liaison between the motion picture industry and other government departments in an effort to reach a solution to some of the problems affecting the industry, Dr. Thorp said, speaking for the Department. He indicated that this could be taken to mean that the Commerce Department would act as an intermediary for the industry in its dealings with the government.

Two More Trust Suits Hit Majors; Action Filed in Brooklyn and Boston

Independents filed two more anti-trust suits this week against the majors, adding to the score or more pending in Federal courts.

Ida Shereff, as secretary-treasurer, filed an action in behalf of Folly Amusements, former operator of the Folly theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., in U. S. District Court, New York, against Randforce Amusement and Samuel Rinzler and Louis Frisch, of Randforce, independent circuit, also naming the eight major companies and the independent Monogram and Republic distributors.

Damages of $750,000 are asked for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, Interstate Theatres, Rockingham Operating Company, Graves Theatres and Loew's, Vitagraph (Warners), Paramount, United Artists, Universal and Columbia are named defendants in a $100,000 suit alleging monopoly in restraint of trade filed in Boston U. S. District Court by George S. Ryan, Boston, and Arthur L. Graves, of St. Johnsbury, Vermont, in behalf of Andrew Tegu, operating at St. Johnsbury.

Government, Defendants Confer in New York Case

Counsel for the Department of Justice and the major company defendants in the New York anti-trust action have discussed settlement. The "negotiations" are understood to have as their purpose to find out whether basis for agreemen exists and to devise a "truce" plan. The discussions are reported to have been held in New York and Washington, and some by mail.

Columbia Will Ask For Dismissal of U. S. Suit

Columbia on Tuesday, in New York federal court, filed notice that on Friday next it will ask the court for an order to direct the Department of Justice, which has named Columbia in its list of defendants in the New York anti-trust action, to file a more detailed bill of particulars; and that it will ask, if this request is denied for dismissal of the government suit against Columbia, or for the prevention of the Government from presenting evidence against Columbia at the trial.

Hays at Rogers Unveiling at Washington

Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Major Leslie Thompson, RKO executive, represented the industry at the unveiling, on Tuesday, in Statuary Hall of the Capitol in Washington, of the statue of Will Rogers, late and renowned film star. Mr. Rogers' family, vice-president Garner, hundreds of political luminaries, stage and screen stars, Oklahomans, and ordinary citizens were present.

Mr. Hays and Mrs. Sally McSpadden, sister of the late humorist, unveiled the statue, which was executed by sculptor Jo Davidson.

STEFFES CALLS "EVERY EXHIBITOR" TO MINNEAPOLIS TO VOTE ON PACT

First National Exhibitor Meet Since Completion of Program For Self-Regulation Convenes Tuesday, with Majors Present

The first mass balloting by independent theatre owners on the majors' new program for self-regulating distribution-exhibition is virtually at hand, as promised by William Alvin Steffes, Allied leader, for the highlight of the tenth annual convention of Allied States Association, running from Tuesday to Thursday in the Nicollet Hotel in Minneapolis.

Sending out an eleventh-hour warning on the seriousness of pending trade practice matters, Mr. Steffes, as convention chairman, in a statement this week, told exhibitors, both independent and affiliated, that, "The trade practices are so important that I don't believe any exhibitor leader or group of leaders has a moral right to make a decision for their members; therefore, every theatre owner in the United States, if it is humanly possible, should be on hand to act."

Action by independents on the code, said the national convention chairman, is the most important piece of business for the theatre owner in the industry's recent history.

A "secret vote" by exhibitor delegates on the floor to decide on the program will prevail, with all independent owners eligible, regardless of affiliation, according to Mr. Steffes.

He also disclosed that high film rentals will be the second matter for action, in what "Fighting Al" promises will be "a knockdown, drag-out affair."

Mr. Steffes at the convention will be aided by a special convention committee, composed of Jack Kirsch, Chicago; Maurice Rubin, Minneapolis; Henry Lazarus, New Orleans; Herman Blum, Baltimore; Nathan Yamins, Fall River, Mass.; Ray Branch, Michigan; Irving Dollinger, New Jersey; M. B. Horwitz, Cleveland; P. J. Wood, Columbus; Martin Smith, Toledo; M. A. Rosenberg, Pittsburgh; Sidney Samuelson, Philadelphia; C. H. Olive, Washington; Colonel H. A. Cole, national Allied president, Dallas; Edward F. Maertz, Milwaukee, and Abram F. Myers, board chairman and national counsel, of Washington.

Setting the program this week, the committee also put on the agenda the problems of giveaways and 16mm competition.

"Something must be done at this convention about non-theatrical competition which is gaining a foothold," declared Mr. Steffes, who admitted, too, that there is "quite a movement by theatre owners throughout the country to admit patrons to theatres on box tops, box covers, coupons taken out of packages, etc."

A vote on the Neely anti-block selling bill, now pending in Congress, "is out of order," he declared, answering reports that the convention would so act. There will be no vote, he continued, because "Allied has already gone on record as being in favor of the bill and should use its best efforts to bring about its passage." He thinks chances for passage by the Senate "are very good."

Bringing the completed trade practice program to the convention for the majors will be William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who as chairman of the majors' code negotiating committee, announced completion of the arbitration system for adjudicating code disputes, two weeks ago, at Allied's regional convention in New York. Mr. Rodgers will head a delegation of sales managers to Minneapolis this weekend.

TORONTO OWNERS SEEK RELIEF

Independent Theatres Association in Toronto is making a canvass of all independent theatre owners in Canada for the Anti-Protection League, which seeks relief from clearance schedules now in effect. The argument is advanced that protection in its present form is having a disastrous effect on subsequent run business.

A special committee of the organization, with J. O. Scott, of Toronto, as chairman, is organizing the drive for concessions and it is claimed that 60 independents of the Greater Toronto area already have become league members.

Failure to get relief will cause the unit to take its case to the public, and, if necessary, to the legislature.

The matter of a "mass buying and booking combine" of and by independents may be brought up on the floor, as suggested by individual independents.

Selling policies, product and such are also slated for open discussion.

In order to give independent theatre owners an opportunity to be heard, the convention committee has decided to make the first session, Tuesday, an executive session. There will be no one admitted to the meeting room at the opening session, which is to start at 2:00 P. M., other than independent motion picture theatre owners. There will be no producer representatives or distributor representatives present at that time. All other sessions, however, will be thrown open to general industry affairs. Producer-distributor representatives will be accorded the floor the same as the independent exhibitors.

After all discussions have been held there will be a secret ballot taken. No one other than bonafide independent theatre owners will be allowed to vote.

Registration opens at the Nicollet Hotel on the mezzanine floor at 11:00 A. M. on Tuesday, continuing throughout the entire three days There will be a luncheon meeting of the Allied national board of directors at 12:00 noon sharp in the Junior Ballroom at the Nicollet Hotel. At 2:00 P. M. President Cole will call the convention to order.

All theatre owners registered will receive guest tickets to any downtown or suburban theatre in the city of Minneapolis. They will also receive green fee tickets for Oak Ridge Golf Club where they can play golf Wednesday or Thursday morning.

There will be a meeting of the national board of directors at 11:00 A. M. Wednesday in the Nicollet Hotel. A luncheon will be served to all registered guests in the Minnesota Terrace at 12:30. The convention will reconvene at 2:00 P. M. in the main ball room of the Nicollet. This session will be open to all guests, visitors, etc.

A dinner in the Minnesota Terrace will be held Wednesday evening.

At 10:00 A. M. Thursday the national board of directors again will meet.

A buffet luncheon will be served at 12:00 noon and the third day's session will start at 1:00 P. M. and will continue until adjournment.

The tenth annual birthday dinner will take place at 7:00 P. M. Thursday, at which time leaders of the motion picture industry will be heard from as well as city, state and government officials.

Carolinas Approve Code, Oppose Neely Bill

The North and South Carolina Theatre Owners, in convention Monday and Tuesday at Myrtle Beach, S. C., voted their unalterable opposition to the Neely anti-block selling bill, approved the efforts of Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, in behalf of the new trade practice program, and voted approval of distributors' actions against non-theatrical opposition, as provided in the trade program.

The trade program is a "fairer bill of rights than has ever before been offered, and while it is not exactly Utopian, it should be accepted when completed," Mr. Kuykendall told the Carolina exhibitors, district and branch managers and salesmen in convention.

He pleaded for closer cooperation between exhibitors and distributors. He condemned the Neely bill and assailed governmental interference in business.

Mr. Kuykendall took issue with Abram Myers, Allied attorney, for his stand on the Neely bill. He recommended the organization of a delegation to create legislation against ASCAP.

The meeting was presided over by Lyle Wilson, exhibitor of Roanoke Rapids, N. C. Addresses were made by Colonel Holmes Springs of Myrtle Beach and Frank Beddingfield of Charlotte.

A board of directors' meeting was held.

Guests at the convention included: O. C. Lam, Rome, Ga.; Edward Auger, RCA Photophone, New York; Gus King, Capitol City Supply, Atlanta; Hugh Anderson, National Carbon, Atlanta; John Mangham, Atlanta Monogram exchange.

Also, Hubert M. Lyns, district manager for RKO, Atlanta; Charles Lester, district manager, National Screen Service, Atlanta; Fred M. Jackson, district manager of Warners, Dallas; Roy Rogers, Republic western star; Nandy Fiore, Altec, Atlanta.

Committees included: Resolutions, M. S. Mill, chairman; E. L. Hearne, Albert Sottile; membership, George Pharr, chairman; S. S. Stevenson, J. I. Sims; publicity, W. C. Ormond, chairman; Mrs. C. H. Albrecht, R. B. Benfield; ladies' entertainment, Mrs. Runa Curtis, chairman; Mrs. M. W. Johnson, Mrs. H. T. Green; recreation, John Vickers, chairman; Buster Schnibben and L. C. Sipe.

H. M. Richey, exhibitor relations head for RKO, also spoke on fair trade practice code and advanced the thought that it was the nearest scientific approach to the solution of the industry problems yet advanced. His thought on clearance in the future is based on a more scientific theory of a sliding rule based on admission prices, seating capacity, local economic conditions, etc. This, he believes, would result in larger revenue to producers from the best balance obtainable.

Officers serving the Carolina unit until the next meeting in December include Lyle Wilson, president; Frank H. Beddingfield, H. R.

Competitive Oklahoma Boards in Meeting

Meetings of the board of directors of both Oklahoma theatre owners associations were held in Oklahoma City this week, with the MPTO of Oklahoma meeting at the Biltmore Hotel Monday and members of the board of Allied Theatre Owners of Oklahoma meeting in the same hotel on Tuesday. The Allied board voted against the new arbitration system.

Both meetings were open meetings to which all exhibitors from over the state were invited.

Purpose of the MPTO meeting was to complete plans for the association's annual convention which will be held June 26-27.

The Allied meeting brought the members of the "board," the organizing committee, together to complete final plans for their membership drive and to also draft plans for a September convention, and a five-state buying combine.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, will head the list of speakers at the convention of the Oklahoma Theatre Owners, at the Biltmore Hotel June 26 and 27. Morris Loewenstein is president.

Other speakers will be D. R. Milstein, Tulsa, state representative for Ascap; Bessa Short, booker of shorts for Interstate Circuit, Dallas; Bob O'Donnell, president of Interstate, and Paul Short, sales manager of National Screen Service.

New York Allied to Talk on Clearance

New York Allied, meeting in Albany Tuesday, decided to send a committee of Albany, Troy and Schenectady members to a meeting in New York Friday with Si Fabian and Henry Ritchie, circuit operators, on clearance.

Clearance in some cases is understood to be running up to 120 days. Mitchell Conery, regional vice-president, was named delegate to the national Allied convention in Minneapolis next week.

Virginia MPTO Meets Monday

The MPTO of Virginia will hold its annual midsummer convention at the Hotel Roanoke, Roanoke, Monday. Mayor Walter W. Wood will welcome the delegates at the business session in the morning. A dinner dance will be held in the evening.

Elmore Heins, chairman of the convention committee, has appointed the following exhibitors as aides: Hunter Perry, Charlottesville; Frank Falls, Lynchburg; R. F. Plank, Blackburg; Allen Sparrow, Richmond; D. D. Query, Marion; J. M. Moody, Wytheville; Frank O'Brien, Richmond, and F. L. Steele, Roanoke.

Robinson to Serve For Jersey Allied

Charles Robinson, former New Jersey exhibitor, has been appointed field contact man by Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey. The position has been vacant since E. Thornton Kelly resigned as executive secretary to take a similar post with New York Allied.

The organization will hold its seventh annual convention in Atlantic City in September. Its next meeting is set for June 27th.

Diplomats, Hays and Quigley in Chile--Teatro al Dia Film Tribute

Will H. Hays, president of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; Alberto Cabero, Chilean Ambassador to the United States; Martin Quigley, publisher and editor-in-chief of the Quigley Publications, and Anibal Jara Letelier, Chilean Consul-General, are among the speakers expected to take part in the Pan-American radio broadcast arranged on the occasion of the reception tendered by the Chilean Government in honor of the American motion picture industry, with the cooperation of "Teatro al Día," the Quigley Pan-American magazine.

This reception will be held Friday, June 16th, from 2:00 to 6:00 P.M., in the Chilean Pavilion in the World's Fair. Special buses will drive the guests leaving from Nine Rockefeller Plaza, where the offices of the Chilean Consulate-General are located in New York. The Committee in charge has arranged for a typical Chilean fiesta which will include outstanding native stars at present appearing in New York City. A buffet consisting of Chilean dishes will be served, and the industry will be toasted with Chilean wine. The broadcast has been arranged through the facilities of Columbia Broadcasting System and its international stations in New York and Philadelphia, and it will be re-transmitted by the leading stations in Latin America.

Dorita Norby, Argentine artistic delegate to the World's Fair, and one of Latin-America's foremost folk-lore singers; Tito Coral, Venezuelan baritone, and other noted Spanish-American artists will avail themselves of the opportunity to render tribute to Chile by taking part in the program.

Alfonso Merlet, Chilean delegate to the World's Fair, and H. Albán-Mestanza, editor of "Teatro al Día," are in charge of the arrangements. Mr. Merlet will act as master of ceremonies.

Stage is Behind Times: Hornblow

The motion picture industry can learn much from the legitimate theatre, but the legitimate theatre had better learn showmanship soon, "or else," according to Arthur Hornblow, Jr., Paramount producer, who left New York for the coast on Monday, after ten days during which he saw about ten legitimate shows. It was Mr. Hornblow's first visit East in two years. He had completed "Man About Town" for Paramount before leaving the coast. (Picture in Pictorial Section).

Mr. Hornblow called the legitimate theatre "30 years behind the times" and predicted its collapse unless it received a Federal subsidy or accepted the change in public taste, which he defined as a desire, at present, to receive more for one's money.

"American audiences want more for their money," he said. "Witness the double feature. Price cutting is difficult in the legitimate field, but is necessary if the public is to regain its lost habit of theatre going. In any event, production budgets should be increased. Present production is slipshod and shoddy."

Mr. Hornblow also criticised the maintenance, ventilation, and exploitation methods of the legitimate theatre. He declared that, during his visit to New York, he searched for one theatre, and discovered he had been standing in front of it.

"That is poor showmanship," he concluded.

That the public will "'go for" legitimate shows at lower prices is proven by the success of the WPA theatre projects, according to Mr. Hornblow. He cited long WPA theatre runs on the West Coast.

"I think we in production activity on the coast should come more often to the East, the home of the legitimate theatre," Mr. Hornblow said. "We learn much from it; we can benefit by its ability to experiment; from the new ideas it develops. I know I certainly am fond of the theatre, possibly because I began my career in it."

Martin S. Quigley Wins Honors

Martin Schoefield Quigley, son of Martin Quigley, head of Quigley Publications, was graduated Monday from Georgetown University, Washington, D. C. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree magna cum laude, as well as the Ryan Medal for the highest average of the year in psychology, natural theology and ethics, and the Quicksall Medal for the best oral examination in three plays of Shakespeare. He led his class over a period of four years.

E. J. Sparks Florida circuit will add a new theatre with the construction of a 450 seat house at Dania.

ASKS BLOCK SALE BAN TO "RESTORE, NOT INNOVATE" INDUSTRY PRACTICE

Senator Neely In New Attack On Opponents of His Block Booking Bill, Is Eloquent on 'Pernicious Effects' of Practice

Lashing out at the "pernicious effects" of block booking and blind selling, the propaganda efforts of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, the high salaries of film company executives, and other socalled "evils" in the motion picture industry, Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely told the Senate Saturday that enactment of his meaure to outlaw block booking "aims more at a restoration than an innovation in industry practice."

Expected to Die in House

It is expected in Washington that the bill will be forced to a vote in the Senate by a motion but that even if it is passed no action will be taken in the House.

In a 19-page report, more than three pages of which were devoted to a defense of the constitutionality of the legislation prepared by Noel T. Dowling, Francis X. Fallon, Jr., and Delmar Karlen for the National Motion Picture Research Council—associated with Allied States in pushing the bill—the Senator pictured the plight of the independent exhibitor and excoriated the "Big Eight" now involved, he pointed out, in the Government's New York anti-trust suit, in which block booking is an issue, he said.

"The primary purpose of the bill is to establish freedom in the selection of motion-picture films," he explained. "A secondary purpose is to relieve independent interests in the motion picture industry—producers, distributors and exhibitors—of monopolistic and burdensome trade practices."

The report pointed out that the exhibitors constitute the only logical and readily available points of contact between the motion picture industry and the various communities.

Cites Independent's Problem

But, Mr. Neely continued, when groups or organizations protest against undesirable pictures exhibited in the local theatres, they find that because of these practices the exhibitor is not a free agent in the selection of films, is required to buy blindly and in blocks, and to refuse to exhibit "even the most objectionable picture included in a leased block" would be subject to financial loss which he can seldom afford to bear.

"These representatives also find that the exhibitor is helpless in the matter of obtaining many outstanding pictures not included in the blocks, under contract for the reason that three or four blocks of pictures will virtually preempt his playing time and he cannot obtain the meritorious pictures of other distributors without buying their entire blocks which, in the circumstances, he cannot possibly use," he said.

"To the foregoing evil effects of compulsory block booking and blind selling should be added the injury to the independent producer whose pictures are not distributed by the 'Big Eight,' and who finds the playing time on the screens so monopolized by his stronger rivals that he can only obtain occasional spot bookings for his output and consequently has little or no incentive to increase either the number or quality of his productions."

At the same time, the Senator's report set forth, "remote control of local environment is un-American" and has already produced bad effects. The campaign of the Legion of Decency was a result of this remote control, the Senator asserted, and another has been the activity of the public relations department of the MPPDA in persuading local welfare groups to confine their efforts to advertising the best films.

NEELY DROPS FIGHT ON DAYLIGHT SAVING

Senator Neely has abandoned all efforts to have enacted at this session of Congress his bill which proposes daylight savings time on a national scale. It was indicated that he will renew the bill in Congress next year. Exhibitors everywhere are opposed to daylight-saving.

Sees "Propaganda Machine"

"A third unfortunate result has been the creation of a monstrous propaganda machine over which communities have no control."

Quoting from the testimony of Colonel Jason S. Joy, of Twentieth Century-Fox, that in the event of war the industry will be required to change its programs almost overnight "and it would not be at all possible for us, this summer, to indicate what we would have in pictures if such an emergency came about," the Senator's report declared that "if such a course were followed, local communities would, under existing conditions, have to submit to centralized control of public opinion by means of the movies. It is by the control of such means of mass communication that the European dictatorships have been able to maintain their hold on national sentiment."

To support his contention that block booking and blind selling are a "blight" on creative effort, production and employment, Senator Neely quoted from leading trade papers and various producers, pointing out that MOTION PICTURE HERALD for December 17, 1938, carried an editorial by Martin Quigley, its publisher, acknowledged by the Senator as an authority on motion pictures, in which he said:

"The industry's greatest asset is the reputation of the motion picture. It should be cherished and preserved. This most decidedly is not done when pictures which are known to be below acceptable standards are forced upon the screens of thousands of theatres, not by any demand that exists for them—on part of either the public or the exhibitor—but rather by a system which automatically insures their distribution."

Says Risks Are Passed On

"In no other industry are all of the risks of the manufacturer or producer passed on to the retailer and the consumer," Senator Neely continued. "The Big Eight designate a certain number of pictures to be paid for on the basis of a stated percentage of the gross receipts of the theatres while showing such pictures. But these designations are not made until after the box-office value of the pictures has been determined by test runs, so that no risk is involved so far as the Big Eight are concerned.

"The independent exhibitor, in order to get any films, is obliged to contract to accept and pay for all that the producer sees fit to release during the contract period—one year. He cannot cultivate the good will and suit the preferences of his patrons by selecting the pictures best calculated to please them. Subject only to minor exceptions, the rule is 'all or none.'"

Explaining the various provisions of the measure, the Senator revealed his recognition of the contention of producer witnesses that the synopsis provisions would require the attachment to contracts of what would virtually be a copy of the final shooting script, and that he would offer an amendment easing the situation, when the bill was taken up for consideration.

The Synopsis Requirement

The new requirement for an "accurate synopsis" will call for "a general outline of the story and description of the principal characters, and a statement describing the manner of treatment of dialogs concerning and scenes depicting vice, crime, or suggestive of sexual passion."

The amendment also will explain that "it is the purpose of this section to make available to the exhibitor sufficient information concerning the type and contents of the film and the manner of treatment of questionable subject matter to enable him to determine whether he wishes to select the film for exhibition and later to determine whether the film is fairly described by the synopsis."

Throughout the report, Senator Neely stressed the contention that the bill would not do injury to the industry.

"The Big Eight do not exhibit the poorer pictures in their own theatres and do not enforce block booking against one another," he said.

Charges Discrimination

"If the producers refrain from showing their poor pictures in their own theatres, and do not force them upon one another, it is manifestly unfair to force them upon the independent exhibitors," he added. "The significant fact is that, by this discrimination, the Big Eight have withdrawn 2,500 of the largest and best situated theatres from the assured market for films and look only to the independent exhibitors to underwrite the cost of producing poor pictures, plus a profit for the producers.

"The enactment of this bill cannot result in loss to the industry as a whole. * * * Loss from the curtailment of playing time for poor pictures will be more than compensated for by the increased playing time of good pictures. The market will still be there—an assured market—but the good pictures will earn more and the poor pictures will earn less.

"What the Big Eight fear is loss of monopolistic privileges over and above the legitimate rewards of enterprise—privileges that have been enjoyed so long that they are now regarded as vested rights."

Attacks High Salaries

These privileges, he said, have given rise to high salaries. Calling the attention of the Senate to a fact that greatly impressed him when brought out at the hearings, he said: "One Hollywood executive received, in 1937, a salary that exceeded the combined salaries of the 96 United States Senators."

Most of all, however, he declared, the Big Eight fear competition.

Analyzing the provisions of the proposed industry code, the Senator declared it would not be a proper substitute for his bill, explaining.

"After having failed to make good on prom-

CAMERAS COVER BRITISH ROYALTY FROM WASHINGTON TO HYDE PARK

Motion Picture and Still Cameramen in Army Tank Ride 20 Feet from British King from Train to White House

Preparations for the arrival in this country of King George and Queen Elizabeth have been as elaborate as the historical occasion prescribed including preparations by the newsreels.

Among all the formal hustling-and-bustling in Washington by the United States Government, its President and First Lady, its Department of State, its Army, Navy and Marine Corps; and, at Grover Whalen's World's Fair on Flushing Meadows, with its specially-polished guards and top-hatted receptionists; and at Hyde Park, at Roosevelt's home—in and around all of those persons and places there stood out in bold relief the soundmen and cameramen of the five American newsreels, to record the reception to the first British Emperors ever to set foot on American soil.

Trying Obstacles Overcome

By Tuesday afternoon, the newsreel managements had completed all their arrangements to make as complete a coverage as ever was focused on any foreign dignitary in this country's history. Their Washington managers and special contact men had overcome some of the most difficult obstacles of assignment ever faced inland, and by Thursday morning, a few hours after the actual arrival of the Royal Pair, they already had celluloid well on its way to the projectors of the country for showing before the weekend.

That there were obstacles to overcome by the newsreels may best be attested by the fact that all the arrangements for the visit of Their Majesties were under the control of the studiously-correct State Department and the equally meticulous Secret Service, to say nothing of the Britons' own Scotland Yard men, Washington police and the police of all the other places visited.

On the whole, the cameramen fared better than did still photographers, newspaper men or broadcasters in Washington. And there were some 50 newsreel camermen, soundmen, assistants, contact men, helpers and whatnot on the "royal party.".

The radio contingent did not know until almost the last minute just what advantageous points it would be to cover and conversations were going on between broadcasting representatives and State Department officials almost to the moment of the arrival of the royal train.

The broadcasters were able finally to get a quite complete picture of the arrival of the King and Queen, their ride from the Union Station to the White House, the Capital reception and other events, with men stationed at major points and others spotted along the route, all equipped with portable short-wave transmitters feeding into the networks.

More Privileges Than Expected

Although the newsreel representatives insisted to the last that they had not been given all the privileges they thought they should have, they privately admitted that after all, they had been given many more than they had expected.

Where possible, each of the newsreels stationed its own men and did its own filming, but where circumstances demanded, one camera made the shots for all and all got "lavenders." Thus, every company was able to participate in the arrival and reception at the Union Station, the reception at the Capitol and the arrival at the White House.

INTERSTATE EXTENDS COMMUNITY WORK

The Texas Interstate circuit plans to extend its community work along lines suggested by Karl Hoblitzelle, president. The circuit is undertaking a campaign in Texas public schools to promote traffic safety with the cooperation of local theatres.

Robert J. O'Donnell, general manager of the circuit, plans to give special shows for children, the proceeds to be used to purchase badges for junior traffic directors and copies of Irving Caesar's song "Sing a Song of Safety."

Mr. Hoblitzelle has also suggested sponsorship of contests among high school bands, with probable benefit performances where instruments are needed.

As the King and Queen descended from their train in the Union Station they faced one camera—all that space permitted. Again, as they met President and Mrs. Roosevelt in the reception room in the station, another camera was shooting from a doorway, again due to the limitations of space.

On the station plaza, as the party entered the official State automobiles which were to take them to the White House, all the newsreels had men. At the Capitol, arrangements were made for shots both inside and out, and along the route between the Union Station, Capitol and White House, each company had about ten men spotted, shooting individually. At the White House, all companies again dependent on the one camera for which arrangements had been made.

Cameramen in Army Tank

Not only were the cameras able to get the King and Queen leaving the train, meeting the President, receiving the 21-gun salute outside the station, leaving the Plaza and all along the route, but one motion picture and one still cameramen, dressed in Army uniforms, rode the whole distance in an Army tank within 20 feet of the King's automobile.

The tank spot was an achievement of no little distinction. Two Army officers were forced out of a coveted position to make room for the newsreel filmers, and there was no competition from radio, for the broadcasters, seeking a similar privilege, had been turned down.

The newsreel camera coverage of the King and Queen, like the reception itself and the escort to the White House, had all been rehearsed on the arrival of the President of Nicaragua in May, so that every newsreel man participating knew exactly his place and the moves he was to make. There could be no upsets.

Rigid regulations for deportment while filming were in order. All camermen were instructed by the State Department and British officials to stay at a specified distance from the Royal Pair. Wearing special armbands, they were not permitted to "shout" or issue directions to the King or Queen, nor instruct them how to pose. The State Department also issued special badges to the newsreelmen.

Special Stands Designated

The special stands spotted along the Washington route were designated as to placement by the State Department and built under close Departmental scrutiny.

On coverage at the World's Fair, State Department officials, New York City Police representatives and newsreel managers met Tuesday and completed arrangements. Because of the crowds the arrangements at the Fair were even more limited than those at Washington.

Following the Washington visit, Thursday and Friday, the newsreels are to ride from Washington to Red Bank, N. J., in proximity to the Royal party, then motor over to Fort Hancock for the reviewing of troops.

World's Fair Visit

The King and Queen and all the British and American dignitaries accompanying them are to board a U. S. destroyer at Red Bank, unless bad weather compels them to board a special train to Jersey City. From special tugs the newsreels are to cover the destroyer going up New York Bay. There will also be special crews at the Battery where New York will officially receive the pair. The official cars will speed from the Battery up New York's West Side Highway, for five miles to the Triborough Bridge, and on over Grand Central Parkway to the Fair, with newsreel cameramen either riding along or shooting from vantage spots en route.

Then at Columbia University

More coverage comes with the visit of the King and Queen at Columbia University, and, finally at the Presidential home at Hyde Park, where the pair officially will bid adieu to the United States.

Some of the newsreel companies will not have specials, others may. Pathe's first plans included the holding of the weekend reel, Thursday, to insert pictures of the reception at Washington, to be shipped to key spots by plane. Eight crews had been lined up by this company for coverage.

In charge at Washington for Fox Movietone News were Tony Muto, Washington manager, and Earl Allvine. In New York and Hyde Park, A. A. Brown and Mr. Allvine are handling arrangements. The company was yet to decide on a special release; if not, it was to insert Thursday pictures in the weekend release, like Pathe.

News of the Day scattered 15 crews through Washington, New York and Hyde Park, and tentatively had decided upon a special release.

Universal had eight crews. It decided against a special.

Paramount was also well placed at Washington, New York and Hyde Park.

Fox Rushing Special

Fox Movietone News is expressing, by air, to all of the Dominions, a special reel covering the visit of the King and Queen of England to Washington. The newsreel company is also re-issuing its color reel on the coronation of the royal pair. Pathe had planned, but gave up

Testimonial Broadcast

Radie Harris, radio interviewer and commentator, was to be in charge of the special National Broadcasting Company testimonial broadcast from Hollywood, for their Majesties, on Sunday afternoon, during the visit of the royalty to Hyde Park, New York.

Color Photographs

"The British Cavalcade of Color," a special showing of color photographs of England, Ireland, and Scotland, and also of the early part of the royal pair's Canadian tour, was shown at the Hall of Color in the Eastman Kodak Exhibit at the New York World's Fair.

Theatre on Ship

The "theatre" on board the Empress of Britain, the homeward-going ship of the British King and Queen, is elaborately furnished and well equipped. It is, in reality, the main ballroom, has floor space of 70 by 40 feet, and is decorated by the British artist, Sir John Lawery.

Radio Coverage

The visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to Canada and the United States was well covered by all the American networks, in cooperation with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. There have been broadcasts from Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, and Victoria; planned have been broadcasts from Niagara Falls, Washington, Mount Vernon, Arlington, and New York; also from Halifax on June 15, when the King will deliver his "farewell" address.

Music Hall Program

Co-incidental with the arrival of the British King and Queen on American soil, and in New York on the weekend, the Radio City Music Hall, in New York City, presented Universal's drama about the British Empire, "The Sun Never Sets."

"Victoria" Re-bookings

RKO reports requests by exhibitors for "Victoria The Great," a Herbert Wilcox picture released through RKO. Visit of the British royalty, and the attendant publicity, is regarded as the reason for the re-engagements. Mr. Wilcox's "Sixty Glorious Years," also in color, and also on the life of Queen Victoria, will be released under the title, "Queen of Destiny."

"We're getting fine cooperation from the State Department, the New York Police and the World's Fair," said William Montague, assistant editor of Paramount News. Paramount was expected to bring crews in from Boston and Philadelphia to augment its forces for the event. Paramount has nine crews assigned.

Sees Higher French Budgets

French producers are gradually increasing their budgets on a number of films which are being made with an eye on the American and English markets, according to Max Glass, French producer, who is in New York, arranging for distribution of two of his films, "Entente Cordiale" and "Imperial Tragedy."

Natan Sentenced By French Court

Bernard Tanenzapf, who as Bernard Natan was known for years as the French film "czar," has been found guilty with two associates of defrauding stockholders of the French Pathe Film Company, which has no connection with any American Pathe company. Mr. Tanenzapf was sentenced to four years in prison, Jean Cerf was sentenced to three years, and Alexandre Johannides, Greek film engineer, to two years. A fourth defendant, Lucien Dollfuss, was acquited.

A judgment in the 13,000,000 franc film swindle of 5,000,000 francs ($130,000) was ordered against the three jointly, in addition to individual fines of 3,000 francs ($78). The 5,000,000 francs is to come from the receivership management of Pathe Cinema.

The court found Mr. Tanenzapf principally to blame for a series of illegal transactions in which Pathe Cinema's assets were dissipated in the establishment of many subsidiary concerns and in the purchase of worthless motion picture patents from a fictitious company operated by his lieutenants.

The difficulties of the French Pathe company began in April, 1935, when its stockholders filed complaints against Mr. Tanenzapf charging violation of a law prohibiting the formation of dummy companies. Later in the same year Pathe was declared bankrupt, and thereafter an investigation was undertaken to clarify all phases of the company's finances.

Last December, as a result of the investigation, 7,000 stockholders of Pathe joined in preferring charges of fraud and conspiracy against Tanenzapf, Cerf and Johannides. It was said at the time that the investigation had disclosed the formation of 33 dummy corporations under the French Pathe company.

Local 306, Empire State Unions Reported Merging

Solution of the New York state projectionists' union squabble—a solution which would leave uncontested the Local 306, an affiliate of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands and Employees—was reported in New York this week.

The plan, reportedly to go into effect soon, would have the Local 306 absorb the Empire State Motion Picture Operator's union, Local 306's sole rival in New York. Unemployed Empire members, not immediately taken into 306, would be placed on a "preferential list."

Local 306 officials were non-committal, but did not deny that negotiations were going on.

Empire State officials flatly denied that any negotiations were under way, and charged that any reports of Empire's absorption by Local 306 were "plants" by the latter, to "scare" exhibitors holding Local 306 contracts into remaining with Local 306.

ises of voluntary reform undertaken while similar legislation was under consideration in 1936, the Big Eight, on the eve of the hearings on this bill, brought forth a proposed voluntary trade-practice code as a substitute for the bill.

"Objections were raised by the proponents of the bill on the grounds that because of the manner in which the proposal was brought forth and the history of such attempts in the past, the good faith of the gesture was open to doubt; that the committee room ought not to be made a 'bargaining counter' for the adjustment between different branches of the industry of practices affecting the public; that since the proposal really amounts to an agreement to perpetuate in modified form the practices in question, it is of doubtful legality; and, in any case, it is not a fair substitute for the bill.

"The producer's proposals do not abolish compulsory block booking or blind selling, but, on the contrary, they propose to perpetuate those practices. Certain of the proposals would slightly diminish the hardships of compulsory block booking, but they would effect no change in blind selling. Relief from the effects of the objectionable practices would be slight, and such as it might be would be accomplished by a limited right of cancellation, by allowing the withdrawal of a picture locally offensive, and by allowing an exhibitor to get a popular picture under special circumstances without having to lease an entire block."

Calls It "Moderate" Move

In conclusion, the Senator declared: "in reporting the bill favorably, the committee is confident that it will meet in as moderate a manner as possible a need for legislation that is constantly growing more acute, due to the tremendous influence of the movies on the morals, thinking and culture of the country (admitted by proponents and opponents of the bill alike), and to the monopolistic control which the Big Eight now exert and are constantly increasing over all branches of the motion-picture industry.

"The contention that the movies have improved in quality since the Legion of Decency campaign in 1934 is irrelevant since the public is entitled to choose even as between good pictures. But the reformation was made only in response to insistent public demand and there is no assurance that even present imperfect standards will be maintained if this legislation is not passed. Experience as recounted at the hearing teaches that, as a rule, such reforms are sporadic, are always forced by outbursts of public indignation, and are usually of short duration."

Skouras Answers Warner Charge

Flat denial that Warner Brothers had suffered by the double feature policy of Fox West Coast theatres; an assertion that Warner Brothers should abolish double features in their theatres before reproaching independent circuits for the practice; and a declaration that West Coast disapproved double features but had to accede to public demand for them, were the points made Tuesday by Spyros Skouras, executive vice-president of National Theatres Corporation, in reply to Gradwell Sears, general sales manager of Warner Brothers, who last week announced that his company, in resentment against the double featuring policy of Fox West Coast, a National Theatres subsidiary, would sell away from that circuit.

Counter Accusation Made

"If Warner Brothers aspire to the honor of being the standard bearers for the abolition of double features," said Mr. Skouras, "they should abolish double features in some three hundred theatres which they own and operate themselves."

Mr. Sears, last week, in announcing the policy, declared that Warner Brothers would "get a better return" by selling away from Fox West Coast.

"The double feature policy," he said, "as practiced by Fox West Coast reduces the possibility of film rentals on deserving pictures, freezing the possibility of returns to such an extent that support of this practice makes it impossible to produce fine, big budgeted productions for a fair return."

Mr. Sears had also charged the handling of Warner product by Fox West Coast, over a number of years, did "not contribute to our progress."

Mr. Skouras, continuing his charge that Warner Brothers, through its theatre chain, practiced the double feature policy for which it criticized Fox West Coast, said:

"For instance, the Warner Beverly Theatre of Beverly Hills, California, has recently played double bill such attractions as the following: 'Four Daughters' with 'Valley of the Giants'; 'Wings of the Navy' with 'Yes, My Darling Daughter'; 'Dodge City' with 'The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle'; 'Three Smart Girls' with 'Confessions of a Nazi Spy'; 'Dark Victory' with 'Confessions of a Nazi Spy.'

This double feature policy is practiced in over three hundred Warner theatres located in the territories of Pittsburgh, Chicago, and Albany, and in the states of Connecticut, New Jersey, Ohio and Wisconsin."

Mr. Skouras found that the public wants double features, though he and his organization deplore the practice; and, in the NRA conferences in Washington, the Skouras representative had advocated the abolition of double features, he said.

"Although he was unsuccessful, his endeavors and the efforts of those who joined with him are a matter of record," Mr. Skouras said. "It is well recognized that competitive conditions at present necessitate the use of double feature programs in certain localities. . . . This necessity is recognized by the Warner theatres as well as by other theatre operators throughout the country. . . . While we appreciate that many people do not like double features, nevertheless, experience has shown us that the masses demand double features."

Mr. Skouras argued the Warner contention that Warner experience with Fox West Coast had not been beneficial to the former, and cited figures, thus:

"Under the present management of Fox West Coast Theatres Corporation and the other theatre interests of National Theatres Corporation, the film rental paid to Warners for their pictures was about $500,000 in 1932, and will be over $1,500,000 for the year 1939, for the same number of theatres.

"Wholehearted approval," nevertheless, of the new Warner policy, was voiced by Mr. Skouras. said he:

"We have not solicited Warner pictures for the coming year. We cannot, and of course, do not, object to Warner Brothers' election to sell to other exhibitors. This freedom to contract has always been respected by us. We wish Warner Brothers every success."

In Hollywood, Mr. Sears was to meet on Thursday and Friday of this week to set up new machinery to sell Warner product to sources other than Fox West Coast. He asserted that about 50 deals had been made with independents in the Kansas area.

Heads Merged 20th-Fox Offices

Rodney Bush, until this week head of the exploitation department at Twentieth Century-Fox in New York, now is in charge of both the exploitation and publicity departments, under an appointment made by Charles McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity, who merged the two departments.

Mr. Bush, formerly eastern representative for Wanger Productions and before that associated with RKO and Paramount, joined 20th-Fox two years ago to handle cooperative campaigns on major features.

His assistant in the exploitation department, William C. Chambliss, also will work under Mr. Bush in the new alignment, having succeeded Leonard Gaynor, resigned. Mr. Gaynor had been with the company seven years, in charge of exploitation until the exploitation department was formed and in charge of newspaper and syndicate contacts.

Earl Wingart will continue to handle trade paper and publicity contacts.

American Films Advance in Peru

American motion pictures have made noteworthy progress in Peru in the current year and the outlook is definitely favorable, according to David M. Clark, acting American commercial attache in Lima, in a report to the Department of Commerce.

The report said that Spanish dialogue pictures, especially those produced in Mexico, have lost considerable ground.

The increasing popularity of American films in Peru is shown by the percentages of English and Spanish dialogue films exhibited this year as compared with 1938, the attache reported. The ratio of English films advanced from 48.5 per cent of the total exhibited in the first quarter of 1938 to 52 per cent in the corresponding period of 1939, while that for Spanish films declined from 41.5 per cent to 39.7 per cent.

In the first 16 days of April English films accounted for 65.9 per cent compared with 47.8 per cent in the corresponding period, with the ratio of Spanish declining to 31.5 per cent as against 41.8 per cent.

Leaders Sponsor Institute

Among the 52 leaders in varied fields in American life agreeing to serve as sponsors of the 1939 Williamstown Institute of Human Relations are Lenox Lohr, president of the National Broadcasting Company; William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, and J. Robert Rubin, vice-president of Loew's, Inc. The purpose of the Institute, according to Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, director, is to provide an occasion for analysis, study and exchange of experience in connection with problems recognized as of common concern to large numbers of citizens. The 1939 meeting of the Institute will be held at Williams College from August 27th to September 1st, with "Citizenship and Religion" as its central theme.

George D. Fawcett, stage and screen actor, died Tuesday night in Nantucket, Massachusetts, at the age of 77. Mr. Fawcett, who had been retired for the last few years, served a term as third vice-president of Actors' Equity; and started his stage career in 1886.

"Daughters Courageous"

On Wednesday, the same day that the picture has its premiere on the coast, Warner Brothers will hold a special preview of "Daughters Courageous" and a luncheon, for the trade press and exhibitors, at its New York home offices. Carl Leserman, Mort Blumenstock, and Sid Rechetnik will be the New York hosts, for the picture company.

Houghton Returns

After a leave of absence of several months, on the staff of American Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, in London, Arthur Houghton, of the West coast staff of Joseph Breen, Production Code Administrator, returned to the coast this week. Mr. Houghton, long a friend of Mr. Kennedy, had worked with the latter, in London, on British film quota matters.

$406,855,095 SALES BRING PROFITS OF $40,911,459 TO SEVEN COMPANIES

Combined Profit After All Charges 8.3% of Sales in 1937 Compared With 7.2% the Year Previous, Says SEC

Seven of the ten motion picture producing-distributing companies whose securities have been registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington did a total business in 1937 of $406,855,095 on total assets of $529,950,444, showed a combined operating profit of $40,911,459, or 10.1 per cent of sales, and a combined profit after all charges (including non-operating gains and losses, prior claims, interest and income taxes) of $34,091,330, or 8.3 per cent of sales, and paid dividends of $22,343,341.

Higher Than in 1936

These figures, contained in a report on "selected information" on such companies, released by the Securities and Exchange Commission Tuesday, compared with sales in 1936 of $375,703,530, an operating profit of $32,822,156, or 8.7 per cent; a combined profit after all charges of $27,146,462, or 7.2 per cent, and dividends of $13,982,505.

For 1935, total sales of the seven companies were $336,950,924; operating profit was $24,402,985, or 7.2 per cent; combined profit after all charges was $13,039,979, or 3.8 per cent, and dividends were $5,948,809.

The report on motion picture companies is one of a large number being prepared by the Securities and Exchange Commission on important industries.

The purpose of the compilation, it was explained, is to bridge in some measure the gap between these data in the Commission's files and the potential users of such material.

The seven companies whose figures are included in the above totals are those for which complete information for a period of three years is available. The seven include Columbia, Educational, Loew's, Paramount, 20th-Fox, Universal and Warner. Data for three other companies registered are available for less than that period, including Grand National, Monogram and Universal Corporation.

Six Share in $70,000,000 Sale Increase

Six of the seven companies participated in the $70,000,000 increase in gross sales between 1935 and 1937, it was shown, the individual figures being as follows:

Columbia Pictures: $17,499,028 in 1935; $19,066,100 for 1936; $20,101,699 for 1937.

Twentieth Century-Fox: $42,447,609 in 1935; $51,670,694 in 1936; $56,172,192 in 1937.

Universal Pictures: $14,317,188 in 1935; $14,711,314 in 1936; $16,396,242 in 1937.

Warner Brothers: $84,475,567 in 1935; $90,204,127 in 1936; $99,864,237 in 1937.

WARNERS START FAIR INFORMATION SERVICE

As a service to exhibitor visitors to the New York World's Fair, Warner Brothers has set up an information service at its home office at 321 West 44th Street, with Isabel Turner of the advertising and publicity department in charge.

Mrs. Turner will advise visitors on where to sightsee, places to dine and shows to see so that they may get the most out of their New York stay.

Assets Rise Also

The report showed also that there has been an increase in the total assets of all the companies, except Educational, as follows:

Columbia Pictures: 1935, $13,520,919; 1936, $15,465,001; 1937, $16,515,933.

Grand National figures were available only for 1936, when it had sales of $1,205,651 and total assets of $1,857,652. Monogram picture figures were available only for 11 months in 1937, during which it had sales of $286,780 and total assets of $1,262,376. Universal Corporation figures were available for 1936 and 1937, sales being $16,359,879 for the latter against $14,718,696 for the former, and total assets of $13,372,241 against $13,315,033.

Return on Invested Capital

The return on invested capital at book value in the fiscal years ended on or about Dec. 31, 1937, based on a total net profit before prior claims, interest and income taxes of $49,000,000 for seven enterprises, was 10.6% compared with 9.2% in the fiscal years ended on or about Dec. 31, 1936; and 5.9% in the fiscal years ended on or about Dec. 31, 1935. The return on tangible net worth based on totals for seven enterprises was 12.0% in the fiscal years ended on or about Dec. 31, 1937; compared with 10.1% in 1936; and 5.2% in 1935. All these returns were after depreciation, depletion, etc. which for individual enterprises, ranged from 1.2% to 5.8% of sales in the fiscal years ended on or about Dec. 31, 1937; from .9% to 6.5% of sales in 1936; and from less than 1/20 of 1% to 7.2% of sales in 1935. The "seven enterprises" mentioned are those already referred to.

The combined totals for the five selected expense items shown separately in the reports studied—maintenance and repairs; depreciation, depletion, amortization, etc.; taxes (other than federal income and excess profits); management and service contract fees; and rents and royalties—amounted to approximately $60,000,000 in the fiscal years ended on or about Dec. 31, 1937. This compares with $54,000,000 in 1936; and $51,000,000 in 1935. Changes in individual items included increases in maintenance and repairs which rose from $3,000,000 in 1935 to $5,000,000 in 1937; taxes which rose from $10,000,000 in 1935 to $14,000,000 in 1937; and management and service contract fees which rose from $1,000,000 in 1935 to $3,000,000 in 1937. Depreciation, depletion, amortization, etc. of approximately $14,000,000 and rents and royalties of approximately $23,000,000 showed little change during the same period.

Dividends paid out by these seven enterprises during the fiscal years ended on or about Dec. 31, 1937 totaled $22,000,000 compared with a combined profit after all charges (including non-operating gains and losses, prior claims, interest and income taxes) of $34,000,000. In the fiscal years ended on or about Dec. 31, 1936 dividends paid out totaled $14,000,000 compared with a combined profit after all charges of $27,000,000; while in 1935 dividends paid out totaled $6,000,000 compared with a combined profit after all charges of $13,000,000. Of the total of approximately $42,000,000 paid out by these seven enterprises during the four-year period as dividends, $40,000,000 was in cash and $2,000,000 in stock. Cash payments were $9,000,000 for current dividends on preferred stock; $2,000,000 for arrears on preferred stock; and $29,000,000 for dividends on common stock. Stock dividends of $2,000,000 were paid on the common stock. During the same period, interest expense for the seven enterprises was $29,000,000.

The combined total for all surplus accounts for these enterprises increased approximately $49,000,000 during the three fiscal years ended on or about Dec. 31, 1937. This increase was the result of increases of $8,000,000 in 1935; $21,000,000 in 1936; and $20,000,000 in 1937.

Combined Balance Sheets

The combined balance sheet assets for the seven enterprises totaled $530,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937 compared with $512,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1936; and $497,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935. Cash and cash items moved downward from $35,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935 to $27,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1936; and then rose to $29,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937. Marketable securities rose from $4,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935 to $8,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1936 and then declined to $5,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937. Trade receivables and inventories increased—the former from $7,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935, to $11,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937; the latter from $94,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935, to $121,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937. There was no material change in "other" current assets. The net result of these changes was a steady increase in current assets from $146,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935, to $156,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1936; and to $172,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937. Treasury securities reported as assets were not material during the three year period. Investments reported were approximately $45,000,000 at the close of each of the three fiscal years, and intangibles, deferred charges and "other" assets showed no material change during the same period. Land, buildings and equipment after reserves showed an increase from $285,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935, to $290,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937. This same pattern was followed by reserves for land, buildings and equipment which rose from $105,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935, to $113,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937.

The liability side of the combined balance sheet reveals a steady increase in current liabilities from $37,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935 to $55,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937. Notes payable which amounted to $8,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935, rose to $12,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937. Accounts payable rose from $12,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935 to $15,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937. Accrued items moved steadily upward from $14,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935 to $21,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937, while "other" current liabilities rose from $4,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935 to $8,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937. Long-term debt decreased during the period from $161,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935, to $148,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1937, while "other" liabilities showed no material change. Reserves and minority interest both declined during the same period—the former from $11,000,000 to $8,000,000 and the latter from $7,000,000 to $5,000,000. Stockholders' equity, as indicated by the total of capital stock and surplus, moved upward from $268,000,000 on or about Dec. 31, 1935 to $284,000,000 a year later; and to $300,000,000 two years later.

The current ratio based on totals for seven enterprises was 3.12:1 at the close of the fiscal years ended on or about Dec. 31, 1937; as compared with 3.52:1 a year earlier; and 3.90:1 two years earlier. Current ratios for individual enterprises ranged from 1.34:1 to 9.12:1 on or about Dec. 31, 1937; from 1.00:1 to 6.62:1 on or about Dec. 31, 1936; and from .82:1 to 6.76:1 on or about Dec. 31, 1935. Net sales per dollar of inventory or "turn-over" of inventory based on totals for all seven enterprises was 3.59 in the fiscal years ended on or about Dec. 31, 1935 and Dec. 31, 1936; and then declined to 3.35 in the fiscal years ended on or about Dec. 31, 1937. Turn-over of tangible net worth based on totals for all seven enterprises was uniformly higher in each of the three years studied, increasing from 1.33 in the years ended on or about Dec. 31, 1935; to 1.40 in 1936; and to 1.43 in 1937.

Summary of Selected Data

The Securities and Exchange Commission's report is the 17th of a series of reports based on a Works Progress Administration project known as the Census of American Listed Corporations.

The report contains a summary of selected data on ten motion picture producers and distributors registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. It provides individual data for each of the companies and also combined data for all companies in the group. Included in the data on individual companies are a general survey, the names of the parents and subsidiaries of each company, the outstanding security issues of each company, sixteen financial and operating ratios for each company, salary data for each company, and individual balance sheets, profit and loss statements and surplus reconciliations. The combined data for each group as a whole include a balance sheet, a profit and loss statement, a surplus reconciliation, totals of selected expense items, and selected expense items, and sixteen financial and operating ratios.

The Census of American Listed Corporations (a Works Progress Administration project carried on in New York City under the sponsorship of the Commission) was begun in January 1936. It was designed to abstract the more significant data available in registration statements filed with the Commission under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The study covers about 2,000 companies having securities listed on national securities exchanges.

A forthcoming summary will cover data on registered companies manufacturing automobile parts and accessories. The study does not cover railroads and other carriers reporting to the Interstate Commerce Commission, communications companies reporting to the Federal Communications Commission, insurance companies, banks and trust companies, bank holding companies, bondholders protective committees and foreign companies other than Canadian and Cuban.

The study has been confined to factual presentation of basic data, plus ratios and percentages derived from the data, with no attempt to draw conclusions or to indicate opinion.

This study was conducted as a project of the Works Progress Administration, which in New York is under the administration of Colonel Brehon B. Somervell, and was carried on under the general supervision and with the advisory assistance of James C. Buckley, Rexford C. Parmelee, and Ralph H. Krapp of the Research Staff of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"Little Business Men" to Probe Status Of Small Companies at June Meeting

Fifteen representatives of smaller business in virtually all lines will draw up the program of small business needs and demands for presentation to the second convention of the National Small Business Men's Association which will be held in Detroit June 27th–29th. This committee on resolutions, headed by J. S. Westbrook of Bridgeport, Connecticut, is now receiving the suggestions of association members and others interested in the welfare of smaller business. "Small business men" in motion pictures participated in the formation of the organization two years ago.

The association's declaration of principles and program of immediate objectives adopted at the Pittsburgh convention last September will provide the foundation on which the committee will work in preparation for the Detroit meeting, according to announcement this week from national headquarters at Akron, Ohio.

Invitations to speak at the convention have been given to Senators Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan and Harry Byrd of Virginia, R.F.C. Chairman Jesse Jones, and others. Roy A. Foulke, economist for Dun & Bradstreet, will talk on finance and credit problems of small business. A large part of the time on the three-days program will be reserved for discussions by members of the association on problems of small business, including labor.

Membership in the association now extends into 43 states, according to national headquarters, with organized units formed in dozens of cities between Springfield, Massachusetts, on the east and Omaha, Nebraska, on the west. Following the Detroit meeting, the association hopes to extend to the south and far west.

Columbia Pictures on Tuesday reported a net loss of $80,158 for the nine months ending April 1, 1939, compared with a net profit of $438,268 for the same three-quarter period ending in April, 1938.

The balance sheet shows current assets of $12,105,516, running almost on a 12-to-1 ratio to the current liabilities of $1,285,161. Working capital totaled $10,800,000.

PARAMOUNT TO SPEND 30 MILLIONS ON 58 FEATURES, 85 SHORTS IN '40

Draws Upon Exhibitors and Public, Through Questionnaires, in Determining Product, Studio Convention Is Told

Promising the biggest year in the history of the studio and representing an investment estimated by the management at $30,000,000, 58 features and 85 short subjects will be released by Paramount Pictures during 1939-40, it was announced Friday at the Paramount national sales convention at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles.

The announcement disclosed that Paramount has launched a new policy in film production by drawing upon exhibitors and the American public for story material and aid in the selection of screen talent.

Polls Theatregoers

More than six months ago the company instituted an elaborate system of polling theatregoers and theatre operators on their likes and dislikes in motion picture entertainment. Many of the features on the 1939-40 Paramount program are the direct result of suggestions reaching production executives of the company in this manner

The 260 sales delegates and studio and home office executives assembled at the Ambassador were told that while some Paramount pictures for the coming year will be made in England and possibly New York, the bulk of the $30,000,000 program will be produced, as usual, at the Paramount Hollywood studios, maintaining local payrolls at top level.

In an address to the delegates, Barney Balaban, Paramount president, paid high tribute to Y. Frank Freeman, vice president in charge of studio operations, and William LeBaron, managing director of production, under whose direction the Hollywood plant is operated.

"With these men at the studio helm, Paramount confidently undertakes the biggest program of features in the industry," he said. "A program calling for at least one feature each week and every week, a record that only Paramount has had for the past 1,300 weeks."

Ninth Large Convention

Paramount is the ninth of the ten large companies to hold sales conventions to date for 1939-40, RKO Radio concluding the sales convention season when it holds its convention in Westchester, N. Y., June 19th to 22nd.

While Paramount's feature lineup for 1939-40 is numerically the same as this year's, its production budget of $30,000,000 is an increase of $4,000,000. The short subject total of 85 is 17 less than the 102 on the 1938-39 program. The newsreel, of course, is in addition.

Mr. Freeman expressed the company's appreciation to theatre men from all parts of the country for their assistance in the preparation of Paramount's 1939-40 production program.

"From such outstanding theatremen as Spyros Skouras, John Balaban, Tracy Barham, Abe Blank, Ralph Branton, Dave Cockrill, Harry David, Fred Dolle, J. J. Fitzgibbons, John Friedl, Bill Jenkins, Harry Katz, Mike Kincey, S. A. Lynch, M. A. Lightman, Martin Mullin, Harry Nace, Bob O'Donnell, Sam Pinanski, E. V. Richards, Harold Robb, Ed Rowley, Jay and Maurice Rubens, Ed Sparks, Tony Sudekum, Bob Wilby, and others, either by personal contact or by telephone or letter, have come showmanship ideas that have been invaluable to us," said Mr. Freeman.

"From you salesmen, you men in the field who have stood in the lobbies of the small-town theatres from Beeville to Bennington, and from Waycross to Wenatchess, who hear what the small-town exhibitor and his customers want, have come some of the most important production suggestions in our new program lineup for 1939-40.

In his remarks at the convention, Mr. LeBaron promised the sales force that Paramount will make motion pictures that truly move—"pictures with a maximum of action and a minimum of dialogue.

"Using suggestions from Mr. and Mrs. Public, from film salesmen, and from theatremen, we have shaped a production program which offers this year one of the longest lists of fresh box office personalities in the company's history

They Meet by the Mile, Then Unload 18 Cars of Paramount Salesmanship

by TERRY RAMSAYE
in Hollywood

Hollywood got a load of Paramount salesmanship this Wednesday—18 cars of it on the longest special train to travel over the rails of the road which was named for Cecil B. DeMille's "Union Pacific." The occasion was, and for the rest of the week was to be, the annual Paramount sales convention, a function pertaining to certain matters that Neil Agnew has had in mind for the last several months.

The arrival and opening hour of the national conclave took keynote from the unconcealed fact that Paramount Pictures Corporation is disposed to put emphasis on its production entitled "Beau Geste." So, in Foreign Legion caps, with no implied characterization of its visitors by Hollywood, the array of executives, salesmen and gentlemen of the ensemble marched, by bus, upon the Paramount studio lot for a flag-raising ceremony with military ritual and bugles sounding the calls, including "the charge" and "cease firing." The sounding of "the charge" was by request of Mr. Agnew. The American flag was raised to signify the taking over of Hollywood by the United States. Immediately under the national ensign was the Paramount flag, including stars and the dynamic volcano, to imply, it is understood, symbolistically, the taking over of the American market by Paramount. It was a gala occasion followed immediately by the exodus of the foreign legion from New York, Chicago, and American way stations, to the Hotel Ambassador and a hot bath.

The trans-continental excursion of the big Paramount special train was an unqualified success in expeditionary showmanship, when, at journey's end, Stanton Griffis and Adolph Zukor, bridge partners, were one dollar and seventy-eight cents winners over A. O. Dillenbeck, advertising agency expert, and Arthur Prachett, in charge of Mexico. A suggestion that television might supplant bridge signals was not denied, but ignored.

An endeavor to draw Barney Balaban, president, into a discussion of some of the complex aspects of the motion picture industry and its controversies resulted in a ringing statement from him that he felt that whereas the scenery of the high prairies of Wyoming offered volume, he felt that Westchester County enjoyed certain advantages of quality.

The overland trek was unmarked by important events until arrival at Chicago, when Terry Ramsaye and Al Wilkie, presiding for the publicity department, sembled the greatest array of younger talent—stars of tomorrow—ever placed under contract by a Hollywood studio. These are Paramount's 17 'Golden Circle' players, so-called in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of Thomas A. Edison's invention of the Kinetoscope, forerunner of the modern movie projector without which our industry could not exist.

STARS OF TOMORROW IN TRYOUTS

The "Golden Circle" Players

"These youngsters, it should be emphasized, are not novices. Already they have been tried in the guelling competition of stage and screen and without exception have proved their brilliance and the fact that they are ready to step up into the ranks of our greatest stars. The group includes:

"Joseph Allen, Jr., who has 'clicked' on both stage and screen and who soon will be seen in the romantic lead of 'Our Leading Citizen,' the forthcoming Bob Burns starring picture;

"Muriel Angelus, of the Broadway show, 'The Boys from Syracuse';

"Judith Barrett, who has turned in impressive performances in a dozen pictures and soon will be seen in the film version of the Lloyd C. Douglas best-seller, 'Disputed Passage';

"Louise Campbell, whose performance in 'Men with Wings' won her the feminine lead opposite Bing Crosby in 'The Star Maker';

"Tom Coley, who played the juvenile lead in the roadshow of 'Our Town', and who will make his screen debut in 'Dr. Cyclops';

"Ellen Drew, whose performances in 'Sing You Singers' and 'If I Were King' won her co-starring roles in 'The Lady's From Kentucky' and 'French without Tears';

"Betty Field, who was in Broadway's two-year hit, 'What A Life' and whom Paramount signed for the same role in the screen version of the play;

"Virginia Dale, who proved her talent in vaudeville as one of the Paxton Sisters and who will make her Paramount film bow in 'Death of a Champion';

"Susan Hayward, whose screen debut will be in the feminine lead of 'Beau Geste';

"William Henry, already established as a screen personality who has added to his stature with performances in several Paramount features, including 'Geronimo';

"William Holden, who is currently playing the title role of 'Golden Boy' after Columbia Pictures had conducted a nationwide search for a young actor with sufficient talent for the part;

"Evelyn Keyes, who was last seen in 'Union Pacific' and who is now playing the role of Suellen in 'Gone with the Wind';

"Janice Logan, blonde newcomer to the screen who already has impressed with her performance in 'Under-Cover Doctor' and who will be seen next in 'What A Life';

"Joyce Matthews, the Florida girl who was last seen in 'Boy Trouble' and whose next performance on the screen will be in 'Night Work';

"Betty Moran, who made her screen debut for Harry Sherman and who now is playing in 'The Star Maker';

"Patricia Morison, Irish-American, who was discovered in the Broadway musical, 'Two Bouquets' and who was in 'Persons in Hiding';

"Robert Preston, whose performance in 'Union Pacific' won him the role of Digby Geste in 'Beau Geste'.

"That great pictures demand the services of great directors is fully recognized by Paramount in its 1939-40 production program which bears the names of 27 of the most important men in that field," continued Mr. LeBaron.

The 27 directors he named are these:

George Archainbaud
Anthony Asquith
Frank Borzage
Cecil B. DeMille
Eddie Dmytryk
George FitzMaurice
Robert Florey
Edward H. Griffith
Henry Hathaway
Alfred Hitchcock
James Hogan
Louis King
Mitchell Leisen
Frank Lloyd
Lewis Milestone
Ralph Murphy
Kurt Noumann
Elliott Nugent
Theodore Reed
Alfred Santell
Ernest Schoedsack
Lesley Selander
Paul Sloane
Andrew Stone
William Wellman
Tim Whelan
E. H. Venturini

Neil F. Agnew, Paramount vice president in charge of sales, pointed out to the delegates that never before in company history has Paramount approached the beginning of a season with as many pictures completed and shooting.

"With the initial release for 1939-40 still three months away, we have an unprecendented backlog of 13 great pictures completed and on the verge of completion," he told the convention.

The convention program the first day, Thursday, consisted of the following schedule: breakfast at 8:00 A.M. in the French Room and Patio; meeting at 9:30 in the Fiesta Room with Neil F. Agnew, vice-president and general sales manager, chairman; roll call by G. B. J. Frawley; address of welcome by Mr. Agnew; introductions by Adolph Zukor, Barney Balaban, Stanton Griffis, John W. Hicks, Jr., and members of the foreign department; and 100 Percent Club by J. J. Unger. The delegates adjourned for lunch in the Cocoanut Grove. At 2:15 P.M. the session was resumed with the production department being represented by Y. Frank Freeman, William LeBaron, A. M. Botsford and members of the production department. Dinner was held at the Cocoanut Grove, screenings at the studio.

On Friday, following breakfast, delegates assembled for an analysis of product by Neil F. Agnew; the advertising department activities were outlined by R. M. Gillham and A. O. Dillenbeck, of the Buchanan Agency. Don Velde engaged in a survey of the effect of sumptuary laws about breakfast food in Illinois on election days. The results, while spotty, were adequate. The lid leaks.

At Omaha, which only now is beginning to emerge from the whiskers it grew for Mr. DeMille's ceremonials, a local radio station, suspected of railway influence, surrounded Mr. Balaban on the station platform for a statement on the air about how he felt about the prospects of a picture entitled "Union Pacific." He indicated a certain reasonable optimism, assurance, in fact.

After Omaha, where the expedition took on a brace of new steam-electric locomotives and quite a load of ice and assorted fruits, nothing much happened until a couple of ranchers in the region of Grand Island ran past a flagman and stalled their two alleged automobiles on the main line. The engineer tried out his new electric brakes, slithering a matter of several thousand tons of train and man-power to stop within two feet of the stalled cars. The exploit broke a coupling knuckle, a lot of glass ware and bankrupted the vocabulary of the traffic officials on board. "Judge" Frawley of Paramount's expeditionary statistical department found his accounts moved over two decimal points.

The rest of that night passed uneventfully except for a search of the entire train by the officials in charge for a volume entitled "The Philosophies of Plato" belonging to one Peter Harrison, a bridge expert giving lessons to clients enroute.

Since the special had the entire home office of Paramount on board, there was, of course, the customary series of meetings and conferences consisting of various arrangments of patterns, including Mr. Agnew, Mr. Balaban, Mr. Griffis, Mr. Zukor, and Mr. John Hicks, Jr., of the foreign department. They met by the miles, hundreds of them. Mr. Zukor and Mr. Hicks are, by degrees, approaching an examination of the state of affairs in Australia—where, if one may interject an opinion, American pictures do very well. Mr. Hicks, under pressure, has been given an assignment to see if the cliche phrase "by leaps and bounds" was born of the kangaroo—an important matter to no one save the editor of the Herald.

The meetings, conferences and conclaves involved, of course, the district managers aboard, such as Oscar Morgan, Joe Unger and Charles Reagan, and, of course, Morris Milligan of Canada, whose territory in these days of the concentration on the English speaking market assumes special importance.

Mr. Alec Moss of Paramount, with whom your correspondent made an exhaustive examination of the cuisine of New Orleans on the occasion of "The Buccaneer," has authorized quotation to the effect that this is "our year." He has reference to a certain motion picture company.

discussed ad sales. The afternoon session, getting under way at 1:30 P.M., was devoted to both newsreel and short subjects in talks by Russell Holman and Lou Diamond. The meeting was adjourned at 3:00 P.M. with all delegates boarding busses to the studio. Two hours were spent on sets and at 6:00 P.M. a buffet supper took place in the studio restaurant. Starting at 7:30 P.M. screening of new product was held at the studio.

Saturday, the last day of the three-day session, was devoted to discussions by divisional managers. J. J. Unger's talk concerned "The Turning Point"; C. M. Reagan discussed "Sales Policy" and Oscar Morgan's topic was a discussion of "Shooting Trouble." The afternoon session, starting at 2:00 P. M., was attended by district and branch managers only with both Neil F. Agnew and Austin C. Keough discussing the new trade practice regulations. The meeting concluded with a dress banquet at the Cocoanut Grove at 8:00 P.M.

Arrangements were made by Columbia Broadcasting and Paramount for presentation of a nationwide broadcast with a hookup of 101 stations in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of Thomas A. Edison's invention of the Kinetoscope. The broadcast originated at the Cocoanut Grove in the Ambassador Saturday evening, preceding the banquet.

Jack Benny M. C.

Jack Benny acted as master-of-ceremonies with Cecil B. DeMille, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Tito Guizar, Linda Ware and others participating in the program. Anson Weeks' orchestra supplied the music.

Irving Reis and Bob Hussey produced and directed the show. Mr. Reis, former CBS producer, now holds a writer-director contract with Paramount. In addition to the coast-to-coast broadcast the program was short-waved to Europe and South America.

Winners in Paramount's "Four-Star" sales drive were announced by Mr. Agnew. Leaders in the five separate divisions of this 13-week drive period were as follows: for district managers, George A. Smith was first with Ralph C. LiBeau second.

In the branch managers' division first place was won by Albert Mendenhall, of Omaha; second, John T. Howard, of Detroit, and third, by Chester J. Bell, of Denver.

Salesmen division was led by I. G. White, of Los Angeles; second, E. Rubin, of Omaha, and third place to J. Wilcox, of Salt Lake.

First place in the bookers' division was won by Omaha; second, Detroit, and third place went to Denver. In the Ad Sales Managers' division, first was won by Wendall Overturf. of Omaha; second, Selby Carr, of Minneapolis, and third by James Nicoll, of New Orleans.

Paramount has completed plans for another long-distance opening—the world premiere of the new Jack Benny picture, "Man About Town," in the comedian's home town, Waukegan, Ill., on June 25th at the Genesee theatre, it was announced.

The real reason for the journey of Paramount's vice-president, Y. Frank Freeman, to the commencement exercises at Georgia School of Technology, his alma mater, was revealed. Mr. Freeman was awarded the Georgia Tech distinguished service plaque for 1939, presented each commencement to the outstanding alumnus of the year. Presentation was made by M. L. Britain, president of the institution. Secrecy had surrounded Mr. Freeman's trip to receive the honor because the identity of the recipient of the plaque each year is never announced until the actual presentation is made.

Mr. Freeman is a former president of the Georgia Tech Alumni Association. He returned to Hollywood via American Airlines today to greet the delegates to Paramount's convention.

Paramount's official product announcement for the 1939-40 season, beginning September 1, set forth the following productions already completed or in the final stages of production, as described by Mr. Agnew:

Beau Geste, action-drama, by producer-director William A. Wellman, from Sir Percival Christopher Wren's story of the French Legion, with Gary Cooper, Ray Milland and Robert Preston, supported by Brian Donlevy, Susan Hayward, J. Carrol Naish, Donald O'Connor, James Stephenson, Broderick Crawford and Charles Barton.

Jamaica Inn, film version of Daphne Du Maurier's novel, starring Charles Laughton in a role carrying on the "Captain Bligh" in "Mutiny on the Bounty" tradition. Directed by Alfred Hitchcock. The picture features Maureen O'Hara, Leslie Banks, Emlyn Williams and Robert Newton.

Geronimo, action story of Apache depredations in early Arizona; a successor to "The Plainsman" and "Union Pacific." The film features Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine, Gene Lockhart, William Henry, Ralph Morgan, Chief Thundercloud and a cast of thousands of Indians, cowboys and soldiers.

The Cat and the Canary, based on the stage play by John Willard. Directed by Elliott Nugent and starring Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard, supported by John Beal, Douglas Montgomery, Gale Sondergaard, Nydia Westman, Elizabeth Patterson and George Zucco.

What a Life, based on the George Abbott stage play, now in its second year. Theodore Reed will direct with Jackie Cooper and Betty Field co-starring and supported by John Howard, Janice Logan, Lionel Stander, Vaughan Glaser, James Corner and Hedda Hopper.

Happy Ending, directed by Lewis Milestone, and co-starring Pat O'Brien and Olympe Bradna, supported by Roland Young, Reginald Gardiner and George Stone.

Disputed Passage, from the novel by Lloyd C. Douglas. Directed by Frank Borzage, with Dorothy Lamour, John Howard and Akim Tamiroff.

Are Husbands Necessary, co-starring Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll and featuring Allan Jones, Helen Broderick, Osa Massen and Carolyn Lee. Edward H. Griffith directed.

Ruler of the Seas, a Frank Lloyd production telling the story of the triumph of steam over sail in the North Atlantic. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood and Will Fyffe are co-starred.

French Without Tears, from Terrence Rattigan's Broadway and London stage play, produced in London under the direction of Anthony Asquith, co-director with Leslie Howard of "Pygmalion" and co-starring Ray Milland and Ellen Drew.

Five Came Back

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama

From RKO in the last six months have come several surprise pictures, whose appeals have surpassed even most optimistic hopes commensurate with their budgetary limitations. "Five Came Back" perhaps will meet with such response. A story of occurrences which follow a crash of a plane with ten persons aboard in an uncharted South American jungle, the picture is a tensely wrought and impressively told melodrama so fashioned as to have maximum audience interest.

Eleven persons are aboard a plane when it takes off from San Francisco for Panama City. One, the steward, is lost in a fall from the ship. The plane crashes in a jungle, inhabited by head hunters. The two pilots labor for days to repair the disabled engine, only to find that the craft can take only five persons back if it is to make the return flight safely. The final choice of who should go is made by a political murderer, who is being returned to his South American country for execution.

The highly capable cast is headed by Chester Morris, Lucille Ball and Wendy Barrie.

The screenplay is by Jerry Cady, Dalton Trumbo and Nathaneal West, who adapted the story by Richard Carroll. It is a moving bit of cinema literature in which each character is etched deeply.

John Farrows' direction is brisk throughout the Robert Sisk production. Lee Marcus was executive producer.

Previewed at the Westwood Village Theatre, Westwood, Cal., to an audience tensed all the way.—V. K.

Southward Ho!

(Republic)

Semi-Historical Western

The western film in line with the times, is having its plot ingredients garnished with historical dressing. Witness the latest production from the Roy Rogers' division. Besides the customary fancy riding, gun play and fisticuffs, the picture touches the problem of reconstruction days in Texas just after the Civil War without in any way weakening the film while it does add exploitation material.

Exhibitor reports to "What the Picture Did for Me" have been roseate in predictions for Roy Rogers' screen future. His vocal charm is exploited to its fullest besides his riding and fighting talent. Mary Hart continues as Roy's leading woman and retains her bright and appealing looks. George "Gabby" Hayes, as a bewhiskered crony of the hero, offers a rich characterization in a comic vein. The camera work is particularly good.

At the close of the war "Roy" and "Gabby" return to Texas to reclaim "Gabby's" share in a ranch. They find that a "Yankee" general, whom they have met before under circumstances that hardly could be termed amicable, is co-owner.

"Roy" learns that the partner has a lovely daughter, "Ellen." Romance is temporarily sidetracked while "Roy" and "Gabby" settle the matter of tax collection as it is unscrupulously handled by the Union Army men assigned to the job, but justice returns to work.

The Sun Never Sets

Personal Melodrama

The exploitable name values in "The Sun Never Sets" are Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Basil Rathbone, Barbara O'Neil, Lionel Atwill, Virginia Field, C. Aubrey Smith and Melville Cooper. Of significance also are the facts that the producer director, Rowland V. Lee, and the screen play author, W. P. Lipsomb, have been associated with several earlier productions of historical and semi-historical background.

The picture is both a family story and one of service to a nation. The seed of the story idea is the British overseas colonial consular service. The picture concerns itself with a great many things before it reaches the punch of its plot. Consequently there is an overabundance of dialogue and situations that have comparatively little meaning.

Loyal, self-effacing service in England's far-flung colonies and protectorates has long been considered the patriotic duty of the "Randolph" family. It is the life blood of elder brother, "Clive." Younger brother "John" has no liking for it, but is inveigled to serve by grandfather "Sir John." When the national safety of England, as well as that of the world, is menaced, "John," derelict in his duty on the African Gold Coast, is responsible for "Clive's" demotion, a disgrace to the family escutcheon. "John's" self-satisfying alibi is that his brother's wife was about to have a baby. But when he discovers a pseudo-scientist, "Zurof," is broadcasting the subversive propaganda via a secret radio hidden in darkest Africa, he interrupts a broadcast (while presumably in a drunken stupor) with information which leads bombing planes to the location. The stain removed from family tradition, "John" is proud to follow in the footsteps of family tradition and those of "Clive," who has been reinstated.

The House of Fear

(Universal)

Comedy-Mystery

Bearing such a title, it would be contrary to expectations if the picture were not full of weirdly spooky stuff. It is, but for every bit of business, situation, dialogue line and stage trick that sends chills chasing up and down the spine, there's a comedy counteraction. As a show the piece is audience entertainment, the kind of sustaining attraction that often saves the day when the show window attraction misfires.

It does not provide any super great names with which to excite patrons but in William Gargan, Irene Hervey, Dorothy Arnold, Alan Linehart, Harvey Stephens, Walter Wolf King, Robert Coote, El Brendel and Tom Dugan, producer Edmund Grainger rounded up a troupe of players who, under Joe May's astute direction, put the story across in lively fashion. Big names are hardly necessary, for the show is its own showmanship.

"House of Fear" is a different kind of backstage photoplay. The murder of a star baffles the police, terrifies the cast and jinxes the theatre. After a year, Detective "McHugh," posing as a producer, reorganizes the cast and plans to restage the show with the intent of capturing the killer. Immediately skullduggery takes a hand, but despite eerie voices, inexplainable phone calls and sinister threats, "McHugh" continues with his plans. "Carleton," assuming the dead star's role, is killed in the same mysterious manner as his predecessor, after the producer and others have been made victims of ghost tricks. After a bit of comedy for relief, "McHugh" makes an excursion through secret passages between walls and tunnels, and gets a clue that leads to the capture of the killer and solution of the crime, after a breakneck chase through the stages.

The identities revealed are a complete surprise to those who make advance conclusions.

Grand Jury Secrets

(Paramount)

Melodrama

The use of short wave radio transmitters and receivers in the plot of Paramount's "Grand Jury Secrets" lifts it above the limits of exploitation afforded by its title. To the ever-growing army of 'hams"—amateur short-wave enthusiasts—the picture will have intensified appeal, while it qualifies for entertaining melodrama for all.

The phase of the story involving a newspaperman anxious for "scoops" gives this Sam Engel production a peg on which to hang a showmanship campaign out of the ordinary, despite the drab title.

John Howard plays the role of the unscrupulous reporter; Gail Patrick the love interest; William Frawley a photographer, and Harvey Stephens the brother of the reporter and assistant district attorney. Others in the cast are Jane Darwell, Porter Hall, John Hartley, Elisha Cook, Jr., Kitty Kelly, Morgan Conway, Jack Norton, Richard Denning, Frank M. Thomas and Edward Marr. James Hogan directed from a screenplay by Irving Reis and Robert Yost, based on a story by Reis and Maxwell Shane.

"Keefe," anxious for news "beats," plants a short wave transmitter in the grand jury room and his paper gets the story of their investigation of "bucket shops." Embittered by his brother's actions and his mother's censure, "Keefe" starts out to trap the criminals himself, and, getting into a scrape, is rescued by "hams" who hear his coded pleas for help.

Inside Information

Crime Melodrama

The chief exploitation value of "Inside Information," produced by Irving Starr for Universal, lies in the not new cinematically, factor of a fight between advocates of scientific crime detection and of the old school of using fists promiscuously in the backroom.

The cast consists of Dick Foran, Harry Carey, June Lang, Mary Carlisle, Addison Richards, Joseph Sawyer, Grant Richards, Selmer Jackson, Paul McVey, Frederick Burton, Robert Homans and John Harmon.

The screenplay, by Alex Gottlieb, was based on what the credits styled as an original story, "The 47th Precinct," by Martin Mooney and Burnet Hershey. Charles Lamont directed.

Foran has the role of "Blake," a rookie cop, trained in scientific methods, who jousts verbally with " Captain Dugan," uncle of his beloved. The usual conflict follows, the rookie cop solving the crime with the aid of "Dugan."

The Girl and the Gambler

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy Melodrama

Many never saw "The Dove," parent of "The Girl and the Gambler," either as a stage play or picture. Consequently there is a market for either. The play was written by Willard Mack and staged by David Belasco. The fundamental plot with all its melodrama, comedy, action, excitement and adventure is preserved, but this screen version of the original is embellished by quite a bit of dancing and vocal and instrumental music.

Leo Carrillo, Steffi Duna and Tim Holt, the principals, are the leading exploitable name values, yet further marquee strength is available by the inclusion of Chris Pin Martin, Paul Fix, Julian Rivero, Donald MacBride, Esther Muir and Eduardo Raquello in the supporting cast.

Despite all its menace, "The Girl and the Gambler" is free and easy entertainment, the appeal of which is intensified by the ways in which comedy, dancing and music are used. A sort of Robin Hood Mexican bandit, "El Rayo," considers himself very much a ladies' man, and when his eyes light upon "Dolores," a cabaret entertainer, he wagers he can win her. She is in love with an American gambler, "Johnny Powell." Unable to make much headway romantically, "El Rayo" frames a mess for "Johnny" which lands him in jail on a murder charge. Hijacking the gambler from the calaboose with the intention of shooting him, but alternately playing on the caballero's vanity and ridiculing him, "Dolores" hoodwinks him into sending both across the border to safety.

Plenty of shooting, riding and fighting supplement the thematic content and while the show may never win any prizes, it is quite apt to prove enjoyable popular entertainment.

Previewed at RKO-Hillstreet theatre, Hollywood, it went over fairly well with the Friday night crowd.—G.M.

Serial

Three stalwart heroes are offered in this action-mystery melodrama serial. The title belongs to a "three musketeers" combination of active young collegians who use the label for their sideshow trapeze act. The lads become involved with the forces of evil when a deranged escaped convict proceeds to ruin the business and personal life of a former partner. The boys have to rely on their nimble feet, strong physiques and ready fists, whereas the opposition is equipped with all the assorted paraphernalia of serial villains—lethal gas, death dealing rays, strange gadgets of doom, secret passage ways, a cordon of bruiser stooges and limitless money and materials. The male leads, Charles Quigley, Herman Brix and David Sharpe, are cut to the pattern of the action hero and their admirers may select one or all for their adulation and be sure that the team will give them a rousing good time throughout the twelve chapters. Carole Landis is the muchly buffeted heroine. Charles Middleton is the arch-fiend of the piece. The opening chapter sets a furious pace. Running time, 30 minutes, first chapter; remaining eleven chapters, 18 minutes each. Release date, June 10, 1939.

March of Time, No. 11

War, Peace and Propaganda

March of Time's latest edition delves into the subjects of war, peace and propaganda and the effects these subjects have on the American people. Noted are Great Britain's vast exhibit at the New York World's Fair and the receptions given King George and Queen Elizabeth on a goodwill tour of Canada and the United States. The Netherlands, neutral during the last war, are shown preparing to stop any invasion. Belgium is extending her underground frontier. How Britain, while praying for peace, is preparing for war, also is depicted. The camera turns back to America and shows how British colonies in the Caribbean figure in U. S. defense strategy while military experts debate whether the United States should cooperate directly with Great Britain in the event of a war.—Running time, 19 minutes.

First Greater Union Release

Frank Capra's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" will be the first picture to be released in Australia under the long term franchise agreement between Columbia Pictures Proprietary, Ltd., and Greater Union Theatres Circuit. The new F. H. Richardson Bluebook of Projection, revised to date, was published this week by Quigley Publishing Company, Rockefeller Center, New York. It is the second revision of the Bluebook's sixth edition. Price, $7.00.

Originally published in 1935, the sixth edition was first revised in 1937, with some textual changes and inclusion of a supplementary chapter covering technological developments. The present revision, covering further developments down to this year, was extensively rewritten. The supplementary chapter was abolished, its material being incorporated in the body of the text in the proper locations, and much new material added.

Illustrations throughout the work were changed in favor of new ones representing of equipment of later design. Textual matter covering both projection and sound apparatus was recast to include descriptions of the latest types of equipment. Sound apparatus wiring diagrams as used in the original sixth edition, chosen at that time because they represented generally used equipment and could be of direct help to many readers in addition to exemplifying basic principles for the benefit of all readers, was found to illustrate apparatus now nearly obsolete, and replaced by new diagrams and new descriptive text covering the more generally-used models of very recent systems. Textual changes were added throughout.

The new Bluebook includes 20 sound trouble-shooting charts occupying more than 40 pages. These charts appeared originally in the Better Theatres Section of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. For the benefit of owners of older copies of the sixth edition they are also being published separately in pamphlet form.

An alphabetical index, affording instant reference to every subject treated in the book's 719 pages, has also been added.

Approximately six months' time was required by F. H. Richardson and his collaborator on sound, Aaron Nadell, in completing the work of revision. George Schutz, editor of Better Theatres, arranged the typographical details.

West Virginia Exhibitors Feted

More than 300 exhibitors, producers' representatives, exchangemen and political dignitaries honored George D. Sallows and George P. Communitz, West Virginia owners, at a banquet in the Morgan Hotel, Morgantown, W. Va., Monday on their silver anniversary in the motion picture business.

Presiding as master of ceremonies was Burt Bishop, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange manager in Pittsburgh. Speakers included the mayor and city manager of Morgantown. A floor show was headed by Walter Framer, Pittsburgh radio "show shopper."

Guests included district managers John J. Maloney of MGM, Edgar Moss of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Bert Stern of United Artists, as well as Morris Rosenberg, regional vice-president of the Allied States Association.

All Pittsburgh exchange managers attended except Paramount's David Kimmelman, who was enroute to his California convention. Theatre owners were present from eastern Ohio, western Pennsylvania, and West Virginia.

At an afternoon meeting preceding the banquet, the West Virginia Theatre Owners Association voted to affiliate with Allied States Association following an address by Mr. Rosenberg, who is also president of the Western Pennsylvania Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association.

BROADCASTERS, CONGRESSMEN UP IN ARMS OVER U. S. RADIO CENSORSHIP

Representative Demands Commission Members Resign; Association Leader Questions Legal Authority for Move

A much bedeviled and bewildered Federal Communications Commission this week was seeking a defense against new attacks.

Still attempting to digest the suggestion of Representative McLeod of Michigan that they resign because of the new F. C. C. "censorship" provision in the new rules for international stations, the Commissioners found on their desks in Washington Monday a lengthy letter from Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, demanding to be informed what legal basis the Commission found for its requirements, while from the Capitol came the news that Representative Wigglesworth of Massachusetts was asking that the House Appropriations Committee hold hearings on Commission activities before it undertakes to provide any appropriation for the fiscal year which begins July 1st.

Other Requirements Protested

From the radio industry, also, came an uproar against a requirement in the new regulations that all stations on the international channels go to 50 kilowatt power within a year, protesting that the new equipment necessary and the program restrictions would involve unwarranted and unbearable expense, particularly as the short-wave field for advertising is so limited as to return negligible revenue.

If the Commission's program requirements go into effect, it will be necessary to set up special program departments for the international stations, which now are operated by only one or two broadcasters, the others using their regular sustaining programs and some of their commercials, waxed and amended to eliminate the advertising.

Enforcement of the requirement that international stations render only a service which will "reflect the culture of this country and which will promote international goodwill, understanding and cooperation," would deprive the stations of those programs which are most popular abroad, the unbiased and uncensored news broadcasts which are not available from any station in any other country in the world, it is contended.

Recognition of Foreign Censors

More important, it was pointed out by Mr. Miller in his letter to the FCC, the requirement would be considered abroad as a recognition by the United States Government of the right of foreign governments to censor the American press and radio, since it would eliminate programs which have been the subject of complaint from Germany and other countries, to which complaints the State Department always has replied that it has no authority to suppress freedom of expression.

Mr. Miller also inferentially criticized the Commission for including in its regulations "new and unprecedented restrictions and requirements" without prior public hearing, pointing out that they "precipitate certain fundamental questions which are a matter of vital concern to broadcasting generally and to the entire American public."

The interest of the National Association of Broadcasters in the matter is due, in part, to the fact that a majority of the nine licensees, operating 14 international stations, are members of the organization, the letter disclosed.

"We have been unable to find a legal basis for the regulations which we have discussed," Mr. Miller wrote with respect to the program requirements.

"While the Communications Act of 1934 clothes the Commission with extremely broad powers on matters of allocation and the technical and physical operations of broadcast stations, we can find nothing in the act or in the several decisions of the court which have been based upon this act to support this character of regulation."

Further, he pointed out, "if the Commission has the authority to promulgate this character of regulation in the international field, it must have equal authority with respect to domestic broadcasting, as the same provisions of law govern both classifications. If licensees of international broadcast stations can be required to restrict their programs to any regulatory authority's concept of American culture, it would seem clear that the licensees of domestic broadcasting stations could be required to limit their programs to some 'official' definition of culture, education and entertainment.

In view of the furore which has resulted from the issuance of its regulations, it is not improbable that the Commission will adopt Mr. Miller's suggestion that application of the regulations be postponed and opportunities given interested parties to present their views.

Insist on Theme

Regardless, FCC spokesman in Washington insist that this country's international broadcast stations must "promote international good will, understanding and cooperation" with their programs beginning November 1st.

Only last week, Edward M. Kirby, director of publication relations for the Broadcasters Association, told the National Council of Women, meeting in New York's Hotel Commodore, that the radio industry's own code of self-regulation, coming up for action on July 11th, at the Broadcasters' convention in Atlantic City, would, besides setting up fair trade practices, provide for self-censorship by the broadcasters over certain types of domestic air material, such as political campaigns, racial prejudice and "hidden propaganda" (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, June 3rd, page 25).

Resignations Demanded

Resignation of the members of the Commission because of their regulations requiring international stations to broadcast only "goodwill" programs, was demanded in the House last Friday by Congressman Clarence J. McLeod (Rep., Mich.)

Representative McLeod declared that "it has long been apparent that the Commission has sought greater control of the air waves, but such a brazen attempt to say what shall or shall not be broadcast—in effect, censorship of radio programs—most certainly was not anticipated.

"When the FCC attempts to tell the broadcaster what programs he shall broadcast internationally, it knows that if it can get by with this dictation there is just one short step remaining to the control of standard broadcasts or domestic programs, and when that hurdle is cleared radio is under the domination of bureaucracy and ceases to be free," he said.

Pointing out that when the Communications Commission was created it was not intended that censorship should be a part of its functions, the Congressman told the House that "no matter how you view this regulation, you can reach no other conclusion than that this is the most flagrant attempt yet made to stifle and kill the right of free speech. In all the history of our nation no more audacious or tyrannical step has been taken to destroy a vested right."

Radio Offers Films a "Goodwill" Plan; U. S. Advances South America Plan

"Goodwill" for films was offered this week by radio broadcasters through gratis short-wave broadcasts throughout the world; "goodwill" for American films and American business in general moved closer in South America with the House of Representatives authorizing the President to proceed with his plan to use motion pictures in a program for developing better relations between the American republics.

Columbia Broadcasting System has offered to make available to the film industry a 15-minute five-day weekly program on short wave, to Latin-America and Europe.

The broadcasts will be given each day in a different language, including English, French, Portuguese and Spanish. CBS is giving the time and production free. Studios will provide translators and commentators.

NBC has offered a duplicate proposal which the companies are also considering.

An important feature of the President's program will be the showing in Latin-America of motion pictures depicting the United States as it really is, and the showing in this country of films dealing with the South American republics.

To make this possible, it is planned to edit and rescore six films now in the Government files at a cost of $30,000, make a picture of the United States at a cost of $45,000 and produce a picture of South America at an expense of $45,000.

In addition, it is planned to ask a fund of $6,000 for distribution, $6,000 for other expenses, $6,500 for a film library, and $28,000 for the installation of projection equipment in American embassies south of the Rio Grande.

Finally, it is planned to make a film of the Coast Guard, to be shown in South America by a Coast Guard vessel making a goodwill tour, to cost $10,000.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Stronger Than Desire

(MGM)

Society Melodrama

Jealousy which leads to a blackmail plot and culminates in murder and a sensational courtroom trial, and a sensational denouement, are the principal story elements of this society melodrama.

Name value in "Stronger Than Desire" (tentative title) is represented by Walter Pidgeon and Virginia Bruce, who recently were co-featured in "Society Lawyer." Ilka Chase, screen and stage comedienne, Rita Johnson, lately in "Broadway Serenade" and "Honolulu," Lee Bowman and Ann Dvorak have principal roles. The supporting cast will present little Ann Todd, Richard Lane, Margaret Burt, Leonard Carey, Reed Hadley and Barbara Bedford.

The locales of the story, which is an original by W. E. Woodward, are fashionable homes and penthouses, night clubs, law offices and courts in New York City. The picture is the second major feature to be directed by Leslie Fenton, former actor, who turned out the interesting "Tell No Tales."

While much of the early part of the story is given over to the description of a four-cornered marital situation, the novel dramatic highlight and possible most worthy exploitation feature is the discovery by the lawyer-husband of a reflection of his own wife's image in an enlarged photograph of the dead man's eye. This discovery not only enables him to clear his wife but to defend successfully the guilty woman.

Release date: June 30, 1939.

Elizabeth and Essex

(Tentative Title)

(Warner Bros.)

Historical Romance

The story of England's glamorous Queen Elizabeth and the Earl of Essex, soldier, rebel and a favorite among the Queen's many lovers, often has been told in poetry, prose and pictures.

It is a fascinating subject, one that makes possible the parading of practically every entertainment element. Their associations, sometimes tenderly affectionate, other times bitterly inimical, the great political, social and martial events that were the backgrounds of their lives, provide the subject matter of "Elizabeth and Essex," "The Knight and the Lady" or whatever it may be finally titled. The screen play writers, Norman Reilly Raine and Aeneas McKenzie, the producer, Robert Lord, and Michael Curtiz, one of Warner's ace directors, will present the detail in ways new and intriguing. The high budget is reflected in the authentic and complete sets, their number and size, costuming and attention to other details.

Warners are making available three of their most important personalities, Bette Davis and Errol Flynn, the title characters, and Olivia de Havilland. Other capable players in principal parts are Donald Crisp, Alan Hale, Henry Stephenson, Henry Daniell, Leo G. Carroll and Vincent Price. There will be scores of minor characters and hundreds of extras.

Release date: To be determined.

Timber Stampede

(RKO-Radio)

Action Melodrama

It should be of some exploitation significance that "Timber Stampede" will be the 63rd starring or featured picture for George O'Brien. This is undoubtedly an all-time record for modern outdoor stars. O'Brien again will be seen in the type of role which he portrays so successfully. The setting is the west of about 60 years ago; the theme concerns the age-old battle between cattle raisers and lumber men. Cattleman O'Brien heads the fight against a crooked combination of lumber and railroad interests which threaten to despoil the lands. A romance, of course, and an exciting story of early journalism are woven into the main plot.

Marjorie Reynolds, with O'Brien in "Racketeers of the Range," will again be in the cast, as will Chill Wills, Robert Fiske and Monte Montague, who also were in that picture. Other players to be seen are Guy Usher and Robert Burns, who have been in previous O'Brien pictures, and Morgan Conway and Earl Dwire.

"Timber Stampede" will be the ninth O'Brien picture produced by Bert Gilroy and the 21st which David Howard has directed. Writing credits give the story to Bernard McConville and screen play to Morton Grant.

Release date: To be determined.

Dust Be My Destiny

(Warner)

Human Interest Melodrama

The story is of the type which the producers are sure will appeal to the more sentimental emotions. It's about a boy who thought that everybody in the world was against him. He married a girl who did not hold to the same opinion, and won the friendship of a man who didn't think so either. With the aid of both, he found that he could become a useful member of society.

A miscarriage of justice resulting in a jail sentence convinces the hero that the cards are stacked against him. Although proved innocent, he is given no occasion to think otherwise. Again arrested, to be brought into association with the girl who is to become his wife, ill luck dogs his trail. He flees with the girl upon being accused of murder. They are married in a theatre, but notoriety he does not want submerges him. Skipping ahead of the law, he wins the friendship of an editor, scores a news scoop and becomes more a subject of public interest than ever. Finally forced to face a charge of which he was not guilty, he is saved by his wife and the newspaper man.

John Garfield and Priscilla Lane, who made a definite impression in "Four Daughters," will be in the leading roles. They will be supported by Alan Hale, Charles Grapewin, Henry Armetta, Stanley Ridges, Frank McHugh, and two of the "Dead End" group, Billy Halop and Bobby Jordan.

The picture is being directed by Lew Seiler, maker of "The Kid from Kokomo," "Heart of the North" and "Crime School," among others, for Warners.

Release date: To be determined.

The Women

(MGM)

Modern Comedy-Melodrama

A case of husband snatching and husband retrieving, that's all an exhibitor need know of the theme. He will have many other matters of significance with which to occupy himself as he plans to interest his clientele.

The screen version of Clare Booth's famous Broadway stage show will be played by an all-woman cast. Headed by Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford in her first "heavy" role, and Rosalind Russell, whose characterization is that of the arch gossip of all time, there will be 135 women to enact this drawing-room type of comedy romance melodrama. Even the animals will be female. Men will only be talked about, but they will be talked about all the time.

MGM is spending real money to produce the picture. Naturally it will be a lavish style show. One set will be an ultra modern beauty salon which will give men a peek into this strictly feminine type of rendezvous.

Although there are a few unfamiliar names, such as Phyllis Povah and Hilda Plowright, in the supporting cast, the cast includes Joan Fontaine, Florence Nash, Lucille Watson, Virginia Weidler, Mary Boland, Ruth Hussey, Muriel Hutchinson, Esther Dale, Denny Moore, Virginia Grey and Ann Morriss.

The picture is being directed by George Cukor, whose "Holiday" (1938), "Camille" and "Romeo and Juliet" are as well remembered as "Little Women" and "Dinner at Eight." Hunt Stromberg, the producer, has made such lavish pictures as "Marie Antoinette" and "The Great Ziegfeld."

Release date: To to determined.

Second Fiddle

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy Romance, Music, Spectacle

Names and facts of significance to exhibitors and the public in connection with "Second Fiddle" are Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee, and music and lyrics (all new) by Irving Berlin. The subject matter is a "Hollywood making a picture" yarn. Lightning strikes a little Minnesota school teacher, a remarkably talented ice skater—thus the spectacle—and she becomes a glamorous screen star. In the meantime, a publicity department unit man, to gain newspaper space, must promote a phoney romance between the discovery and the graduate leading man of the New York stage. That, in short, is a modernized version of the Alden-Standish-Priscilla romance.

The production quality of "Second Fiddle" will be in harmony with Miss Henie's previous successes. Sidney Lanfield, who piloted the skating star in "One In a Million" and "Thin Ice," again is the director. Harry Tugend, who collaborated on "Sing, Baby, Sing," "Wake Up and Live" and others, did the screen play from George Bradshaw's story. Gene Markey is the produced.

Additional names of importance are Edna May Oliver, newcomer Mary Healy, Lyle Talbot, Alan Dinehart, Mina Gombell and Spencer Charters.

Release date: July 14, 1939.

DISAGREEMENTS BLOCK PROGRESS OF NEW SOUTH WALES CONTRACT

Government Film Commission Indicates Standard Form Enforced in New Zealand Will Be Model to Be Followed by LIN ENDEAN

in Sydney

Australian trade attention currently focusses upon the framing of a standard form of film hiring contract, recently decreed by legislation as the instrument under which trading between exhibitor and distributor in the state of New South Wales must be conducted. The government-appointed Films Commission has been ordered to have the document ready before August 1, and the members now are studying objections proposed by both sides to a preliminary draft which provided the framework for discussion between exhibitor and distributor representatives.

Wide Disagreement

Originally, the Commission expressed a desire that the two sides reach unanimity on as many clauses as possible, and leave a minimum for the commissioners to determine; their belief, apparently, being that machinery clauses would predominate in the contract, and that the industry itself was best fitted to fashion these to a point of mutual satisfaction.

However, last week both sides informed the Commission it was not possible for anything concrete to be achieved, and that the only course was for both sides to outline their viewpoints and present individual documents carrying notations to clearly define the opposing angles on each point in dispute. It is understood that, in the widely covering nature of the planned contract, particularly as to the desires of the exhibitors, 81 clauses are included and, of these, only a negligible number were agreed upon fully by the parties.

New Zealand Model Cited

It is considered significant that the Commission, simultaneously with the breaking down of exhibitor-distributor discussions, requested that the two sides refresh their memories on the standard contract governing the New Zealand trade and be prepared to give opinions on this document. Despite the fact that conditions of the trade's routine business vary considerably in Australia from those pertaining in New Zealand, it appears that the Commission will use this contract as a guide in their deliberations. And that suggests that both sides will have to prepare strong arguments to impress the necessity of adapting certain clauses to local conditions.

There is a possibility, time permitting, that before the contract, as eventually drawn up by the Commission, is introduced as law it will be referred back to the industry interests for last minute consideration and suggestions; but there will not be opportunity for much alteration as the Act provides that it definitely must be ready by August 1.

Other States to Follow

The distributors' position is difficult, in that as soon as the New South Wales contract is set, exhibitor organizations in other states will press for similar legislation. Thus they have to view the forthcoming document in a nationwide light—and trading conditions and releasing circumstances vary so in each state that reasonable protection of their interests demands a far greater care than is evident at first glance. In the case of the exhibitors' claims, of course, it is only New South Wales that directly concerns them, and any move that any other state's exhibitors may make is solely a matter between them and their own particular government. Of certainty, nevertheless, is the fact that whatever the new contract includes will be a guiding factor for all others.

NO SUMMER SLUMP IN NORTHWEST

While the summer used to be a slump season for the motion picture business it is now on a par with that of winter in the northwest territory, according to George Roy, exhibitor of Eugene, Oregon, who was a guest at the RKO Radio exhibitor lounge this week. "People will see good product at any time of the year," he said.

Another visitor to the RKO lounge this week was L. Tunick, Maryland showman, who said that the public wants one thing in entertainment and that is good pictures. "I don't play double features because the public doesn't want them, and the same goes for Bank Nights and the like," Mr. Tunick added.

Merle Bucknum, operator of two theatres in Emmett, Idaho, says "Pal Night" has been a big booster of business for him.

E. C. Beatty, president and treasurer of the Butterfield circuit, with headquarters in Detroit, praised the RKO lounge and said that many exhibitors from the mid-west were planning to make it their headquarters while in New York for the World's Fair.

National Decency Legion Classifies Eight Films

Of eight pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week three were approved, one was listed as unobjectionable for adults, three were cited as objectionable in part and one was condemned. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Street of Missing Men," "Three Texas Steers," "Young Mr. Lincoln." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "6,000 Enemies." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Missing Daughters," "The Ware Case," "Youth in Revolt" (French). Class C, Condemned: "The Puritan" (French).

Distribution rights to "One Third of a Nation" have been acquired by Grand National, Ltd., throughout the British Empire.

Bar Screenings Of Banned Films

Notice has been served by Paul Moss, New York City License Commissioner, that non-theatrical showings in the city of films which have not been approved by the New York State Censor Board will not be tolerated.

Commissioner Moss expressed himself as entirely in sympathy with exhibitor leaders who had protested a recent showing of "The Puritan," a French film banned by the Censor Board, at the New School for Social Resreach, under the joint auspices of Film Audiences for Democracy (a merger of Films for Democracy and Associated Film Audiences) and the Theatre Arts Committee.

Officials of the New School, at a hearing before the Commissioner last Friday, pleaded ignorance and were excused with a warning that showings of banned films would subject them to penalties in the future. The elimination of an admission charge, said the Commissioner, does not clear the way for screenings of a banned subject, and he warned that showings of such subjects would be followed by a permanent loss of a screening license.

At The New School showing an "assessment fee," rather than an admission charge, had been levied.

"Ecstasy" Sent to Appellate Division

The New York supreme court, in an opinion rendered last week by Justice Gilbert V. Schenck, denied without mention the motion for a civil jury trial on the merits of the revised version of the film "Ecstasy," and referred the case to the third department of the appellate division.

Two years ago the appellate division upheld the ban on the film as then constituted.

Liberties Committee Asks Dismissal of Censor Board

The Chicago Civil Liberties Committee, in a wire to Police Commissioner James P. Allman, has asked for the dismissal of the present police censor board on the grounds that it is "either incompetent or arbitrary" in its rulings. The Committee's action was caused by the ban on certain films, among them "Oppenheim Family."

Ohio Censors Review 614 Reels

The Ohio censors, during the month of May, reviewed a total of 614 reels from which 33 eliminations were ordered. Seven reels were rejected for the week ending May 26th. This compares with 499 reels reviewed and 31 eliminations ordered in April and 473 reels with 21 eliminations in May, 1938.

Batcheller Joins Roland Reed

George Batcheller, Jr., for two years an assistant director for Republic, has resigned to join Roland Reed Productions with headquarters at the Selznick International studio in Hollywood. Mr. Batcheller will be assistant to Mr. Reed.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Nine Start; 11 Finish

The most important picture to go into production in the week undoubtedly was "Ninotchka." In addition to returning Greta Garbo to the screen, it will present Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire, Felix Bressart, Gregory Gaye and Sig Rumann in the principal supporting roles. MGM's second starting picture was "Blackmail," in which Edward G. Robinson, Rita Johnson and Tom Neil will be the stars.

Republic also started two pictures. The cast for "Should Husbands Work" includes James, Lucille and Russell Gleason, with Marie Wilson, Mary Hart, Tommy Ryan and Harry Davenport. In "Colorado Sunset," Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Story, Robert Barrat and Larry Crabbe are featured.

Fine Arts began work on "Trouble over the Pacific," in color. In the cast are William Gargan, June Lang, Wallace Ford, Katherine DeMille, Gilbert Roland, Tom Dugan and Etienne Girardot.

At 20th Century-Fox, "Falling Stars" went before the cameras. Don Ameche and Alice Faye are starred. The featured support includes J. Edward Bromberg, Stuart Irwin, Chick Chandler, Willie Fung, Alan Curtis, Lynn Bari and Robert Lowery.

With Laurel and Hardy reunited, Hal Roach started work on "A Chump at Oxford."

Universal's new activity of the week was "The Desperate Trails." It will present John Mack Brown, Bob Baker, Frances Robertson and Fuzzy Knight.

Warner Bros. started "Kid Nightingale," in which John Payne, Jane Wyman, Walter Catlett and Ed Brophy will be featured.

Clearing the Deck

To clear the decks for an intensive production drive this month, eleven pictures were completed. MGM, RKO-Radio and Universal each finished two. First to come off the line at the Culver City plant was "Stronger Than Desire." It will present Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce, Lee Bowman, Ann Dvorak, Ilka Chase, Rita Johnson, Richard Lane, Ann Todd, Margaret Burt, Leonard Carey, Barbara Bedford and Reed Hadley. The second picture, "On Borrowed Time," a screen adaptation of a recent Broadway stage success, will make available the name values of Lionel Barrymore, Bob Watson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Beulah Bondi, Eily Malyon, Una Merkel, Charles Waldron, Ian Wolfe, Nat Pendleton and Phillip Terry.

Two pictures moved on to the cutting rooms at RKO-Radio. Unique because it will feature an all-male cast, "Bad Lands" will present Noah Beery, Jr., Robert Barrat, Douglas Walton, Andy Clyde, Guinn Williams, Francis Ford, Paul Hurst, Stanley Ridges and Francis McDonald. Lee Tracy plays the title role in "The Spellbinder," and will have the support of Barbara Read, Allan Lane, Linda Hayes, John Laird, Charles Halton, Pierre Watkin, Chester Clute and Leona Roberts.

UNIVERSAL EMPLOYS 2,500 AT STUDIOS

Universal Studios, entering its second year under the new management, has 2,500 employees on the regular payroll, an all-time high for the company. Since N. J. Blumberg became president, a year ago, the plant has undergone a physical transformation. Studio improvements, under the supervision of David Garber, have been effected in every department. Upwards of $300,000 already has been spent on construction and new equipment, and additional sums have been appropriated for further modernization.

On Mr. Blumberg's arrival here Monday, extra crews were added to the construction forces building two new large sound stages; by working 24 hours daily it is planned to complete both units by July 1st. Orders to speed completion of the new stages were necessitated by the increased production schedule, which calls for nine top bracket pictures to be shooting full blast next month.

Universal's Two

The finished pair at Universal are "Forgotten Women" and "The Underpup." The first named features Sigrid Gurie, Donald Briggs and Eve Arden. In "The Underpup" are Robert Cummings, Nan Grey, Gloria Jean, Beulah Bondi, Virginia Weidler, Margaret Lindsay, C. Aubrey Smith, Billy Gilbert, Ann Gillis, Raymond Walburn, Paul Cavanaugh, Samuel S. Hinds and Shirley Mills.

"Second Fiddle" was finished at 20th Century-Fox. Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power and Rudy Vallee are the stars. The featured support includes Edna May Oliver, Alan Dinehart, Lyle Talbot, Mary Healy and the Brian Sisters.

Monogram finished "Stunt Pilot," second number in the Tailspin Tommy Series. John Trent, Marjorie Reynolds and Milburn Stone again have the leading roles. The support includes Jason Robards, Pat O'Malley, George Meeker, Wesley Barry, George Cleveland, Johnny Day, Charles Morton, Mary Fields and Buddy Cox.

"Laughing Irish Hearts" was finished at Republic. The cast includes Phil Regan, Jean Parker, Jerome Cowan, Horace MacMahon, Dorothea Kent, Benny Baker, Peggy Ryan, Barnett Parker, Mary Gordon, Oscar O'Shea, Muriel Campbell and Dick Keene.

Paramount completed "Heaven on a Shoestring," in which Pat O'Brien and Olympe Bradna are supported by Roland Young, George E. Stone, Reginald Gardiner, Frank Sully, Russ Powell and D'Arcy Corrigan.

At Warners "Nancy Drew and the Hidden Staircase" was finished. The principals are Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas, John Litel, Fred Tozere, Vera Lewis and John Ridgley.

Unit Casts

Further development of the unit feature cast idea is seen in the decision of Warners to use the stars of "Dodge City," Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan and others—in "Tombstone."

In the past year or so the "Jones Family," "Judge Hardy," "Bulldog Drummond" and "Tailspin Tommy" series consistently have featured the same principals. The Warner idea, however, is to continue its group in a number of pictures, the entertainment nature of which is similar to "Dodge City." Thus "Tombstone" will be a semi-historical romance melodrama of the early days of Arizona Territory when the noted frontier marshal, Wyatt Earp, was making news items for the famous "Tombstone Epitaph."

Production of "Tombstone" will precede that of "City of the Angels," a story of Los Angeles' rip-roaring early days, which was to have been the first reunion of the "Dodge City" cast.

Michael Curtiz will direct the film, which is based on a Seton I. Miller story. It will be photographed in color.

News in Brief

MGM will start five pictures within the next week. Three of them are "Northwest Passage," "It Can't Happen Here," and Balalaika," in which Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey will be co-starred.

H. B. Warner, Richard Dix, Rouben Mamoulian, John Hall and Frances Langford will be semi-final judges on the Jesse Lasky "Gateway to Hollywood" radio program.

Universal renewed the contract of Jack Otterson, art director, for another year.

William McGann, for ten years Warner director and assistant director, has left the lot.

David Niven will play the illusionist in Wanger's "Whose Wife," co-starring with Loretta Young.

Herbert Stothart and George Stoll completed the musical score of MGM's "The Wizard of Oz."

Samuel Goldwyn has set July 17th as the starting date for "Black Gold," a story of the oil fields. Jon Hall and Andrea Leeds will be starred.

CONNECTICUT ALLOWS "BINGO"—FOR CHURCHES

Exhibitors Help Pass Law, But Legislature Restricts Game to "Non-Profit" Groups

Their fight for legalization of Bingo in Connecticut won after many years, the exhibitors of the state this week found themselves barred from profiting by the "victory"; for the bill, as passed by the Senate and House, and this week awaiting Governor Baldwin's signature, allows only nonprofit "organizations" (churches, clubs, et al) to use the game. Both the state Allied organization and the MPTO have protested to the Governor.

Local Vote Required

The bill further is restrictive in its effect by the provision for local option. Bingo is still illegal, unless affirmed by vote of a local governing body.

With the Governor's signature, the bill becomes law on July 1.

Originally, the bill had been passed by the Senate without the amendments barring theatres from use of the game. However, the House revised the bill, and sent it back to the Senate, which approved it in its present form.

Further provisions of the bill are for municipal control of the parties operating the game; permits to be issued only to those organizations in good standing for two years; permits to be issued on a yearly basis, limiting the number of games to 40 per week, and on a daily basis; prizes not to exceed $250 worth of merchandise, and not to be in cash.

Developments Elsewhere

In other locales, developments were as follows:

In Cincinnati, the use of Bingo is declining; it fell off one fourth in April, compared to March; however, exhibitors report it still reducing theatre attendance. A police department report for that city discloses that, in April, there were 154 games, with 149,087 attendance; $110,243 in gross receipts; $27,887 in prizes; $82,356 in profits.

In Mansfield, Ohio, the Warner-Skirball Madison Theatre has had trouble with Mayor Hunter over the awarding of prizes in Bank Night.

In Rutherfordton, N. C., Judge J. A. Rousseau declared in Superior Court that Bank Night violates the State lottery laws, and ordered enforcement of those laws, in a grand jury charge.

In Madison, Wis., action against Sol Epstein, charged with operating Bank Night at the Capitol Theatre, in violation of the lottery laws, was dismissed, upon motion of Walter Bjork, assistant district attorney. The plan, an offer of Bank Night insurance to persons participating in Bank Night, has been dropped.

In Ontario, the attorney general forbade prize giveaways for charity by organizations; and was reported investigating the use of chance games and similar gadgets by theatres.

Book Premiums in Chicago

In Chicago, the Villa theatre, in Villa Park, was using book premiums, the Adelphi having been the first to use the idea. The plan, as used at the Adelphi, allows the patron to get any book on a listing, after presenting one dollar's worth of "book money," and 13 cents "service charge." The "book money" is given with each admission.

In Lincoln, Neb., the Attorney General's office has ruled against money prizes being given in Beatrice, Bank and Job Nights have already been banned under the rulings of the Attorney General.

F. J. McCarthy, owner of the State Theatre, Brookings, S. D., declared, while in New York City for a visit to the World's Fair, that the public wants Bank Night, and that motion picture films should not contains disparaging remarks about the game.

"IF THE OTHERS USE GAMES. . . ."

Abe and Rosa Baier, operators of the Lindbergh, in Kansas City, have always been against giveaways. However, on two evenings recently, their theatre issued a "challenge," worded in this way:

"All passes, two-for-one, gift checks, premium cards, scrip books, or what have you, issued by any other theatre in Kansas City, honored here tonight."

FCC Candy Case Halted Pro Tem

Application of the Federal Trade Commission's orders in the so-called automatic theatre candy vending machine case has been halted, temporarily at least, through the filing of a petition for review by the Third Circuit Court of Appeals by the Hershey Chocolate Corporation of Hershey, Pa.

The application will be resisted by the Government, which is filing a brief in opposition. No action has yet been taken by the court, and it is unlikely that, if the petition is granted, the case will be heard before next fall.

The automatic vending machine case was initiated by the FCC in May, 1937, when complaints were issued against the Sanitary Automatic Candy Corporation, New York; Berlo Vending Company, Philadelphia; Confection Cabinet Company, Newark, N. J.; Hershey Chocolate Corporation, Peter Cailler Kohler Swiss Chocolates Company, Fulton, N. Y.; Chocolate Sales Corporation, and Lamont, Corliss and Company, sales agent.

The complaint charged the companies operating vending machines in theatres had entered into contracts with the chocolate manufacturers and the sales agent under which the latter gave to the vending companies terms and conditions for the supply of candy which they refused to extend to other vending machine operators.

After nearly two years of investigation and hearings, the FCC on March 16th, last, entered an order requiring the respondents to abandon exclusive agreements.

The filing of the application by the Hershey Company was somewhat surprising in view of the fact that that company early last year abandoned its exclusive distribution policy.

"Syndicalism" May Rule Spain

General Francisco Franco presided, Monday, over the first meeting of the Falangist Grand Council, which had been called to consider a law for the setting up of a syndicalist state, according to the United Press.

The law would creat direct Governmental supervision of the country's production in manufacturing, mining and agriculture, and presumably motion pictures, as well. It would have to be approved by the Governmental Council of Ministers before becoming effective.

Under the law, syndicates would be organized for every branch of production in industry and business; with all participating in the business to be in the particular syndicate of that business.

The Spanish Government announced on Monday the formation of a five-man commission to continue, indefinitely, censorship of the press, mails and telegraph.

Leo Abrams, formerly manager of Universal exchange in New York City, has been made short subject sales manager. David Levy succeeds Mr. Abrams at the exchange.

A deal has been closed whereby 67 theatres of the Saenger Amusements and United Theatres circuit are to be services by RCA Photophone.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Necessity is the mother of invention all right, as Police Inspector Edward Handley discovered the other day in San Francisco. Seems that the inspector was perplexed no end every time his coppers raided a local burlesque show and found the girls clad in long-sleeved and long-legged ballroom gowns.

He finally discovered that the blonde cashier pressed a buzzer from the box office booth out front every time the law approached. When the buzzing sounded backstage, the gowns were lowered to the shoulders of the girls from wires suspended overhead, like the old harness on fire horses.

The other sunny Sunday afternoon a building in the center of Dexter, Maine, caught fire. It was not long before a crowd of several hundreds had gathered. After all, Dexterties don't get a chance to see the red wagons often.

Bob Cox, of the Park theatre, was one of the first on the scene, and when he saw the crowds gathering he felt himself wishing for the power of Aladdin so that he could conjure up a ballyhoo sound truck—the old Barnum that he is.

The wish gave birth to the thought and before long Bob was in action. He sent two young lads to the opposite side of the crowd and in a minute or less the attention of virtually all of Dexter's townsfolk was diverted from the blazing building.

"Hey Bob," the boys yelled across the crowds, "what's playing at the Park today?" Whence Bob promptly shouted back, "Let Freedom Ring." "Who's in it?" "Nelson Eddy," Bob replied.

William Harrison Hays, MPPDA's generalissimo, turned newspaper reporter the other day on the occasion of his visit as guest at the World's Fair Indiana Day—he's a native Indianian. At the luncheon in Perylon Hall, General Hays was seated next to Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, commandant of the Third Naval District. While the luncheon was in progress Mr. Hays scribbled the following note on the back of his place card and sent it by a waiter to the reporters at the nearby press table: "Admiral Woodward just told this story: In his uniform walking around the Fair grounds this morning, a visitor stopped him, thinking him an attendant, and said: 'Call me one of those motor chairs,' to which Woodward explained, 'But I am an admiral in the United States Navy!' 'All right,' answered the visitor, 'then call me a boat!' "

Any exhibitor so reminded could put into his marquee lights two unusually sympathetic titles in the form of Columbia Pictures' "The Chump Takes the Bumps" and "The Sap Takes the Wrap," both current..

MR. ROBERT E. SHERWOOD, the playwright, has pending in the Supreme Court of the State of New York a suit to prevent Twentieth Century-Fox from using the title "Young Mr. Lincoln" on its current Lincoln picture, and from selling "Young Mr. Lincoln" to exhibitors, and advertising it on the grounds that it confuses with Mr. Sherwood's Broadway play, "Abraham Lincoln in Illinois." In his complaint, Mr. Sherwood admits that prior to his Abraham Lincoln production several plays had been produced concerning the life of Abraham Lincoln, "but," the complainant adds, "they did not have any great box office value and they did not arouse any great public interest in the life of Abraham Lincoln."

Now, some 16 years ago, the brothers Al and Ray Rockett, early-timers in production, made "Abraham Lincoln," running through the life of Lincoln all the way from his childhood to his assassination—and the old First National Pictures, subsequently bought by and merged with Warners, made $1,650,000 on the film! Furthermore, the Rockett's "Lincoln" did arouse great public interest, and if memory serves correctly, it won the award for the year, Hollywood's greatest professional tribute.

And in view of all the Lincoln-mindedness of the day in stage and screen, Al Rockett has taken his "Lincoln" from the shelf, is dusting it off and will reissue it, adding sound to the original.

"Ex-Lady," for instance, arrived on Chinese theatre screens as "Flower Clusters in the Night," and "The King and the Chorus Girl" was translated into "Playful Dragon Has a Lark with a Phoenix." "God's Country and the Women" was changed to "Green Hills and Red Powder," and "Nine Days a Queen" to "Bloodstains on a Jade Palace." "Wife, Doctor and Nurse" came out as "In His Right and Left Arms" and "I Met Him in Paris" as "Three Stars Flatter the Moon."

The bill, he added, "has been bedeviled with more opposition than the hero of Pilgrim's Progress encountered on his slow and painful journey from earth to heaven."

And only the other day Milton Berle proposed that Congress provide federal funds to encourage the study of humor.

TAXES CLOSE QUEBEC HOUSES; ASCAP WINS

Fight Film Showings Should Be Legal Interstate and Intrastate, Says Senate Committee

Quebec's mayor, Lucien Borne, after the city's 11 theatres had closed last Friday as a protest against recent tax increases of from 10 to 20 per cent. threatened Monday to order an inquiry into the entire film industry in Quebec. He was met with the reply on the part of theatre owners that "such an investigation will be highly welcomed."

Finding it unprofitable to continue operations under taxes running as high as 40 per cent after a four weeks trial, the theatre owners had sought unsuccessfully for revisions of the additional taxes. The mayor accused the operators of "banding together to bring about an organized strike." To this one theatre operator answered that his house would be run for any period if the city would be willing to shoulder any deficit incurred.

About 130 employees have been thrown out of work as a result of the move, while theatregoers have been attending theatres across the St. Lawrence in Levis.

ASCAP a Victor

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers escaped legislative activity in 12 out of 14 states in which measures adverse to the Society's operations had been introduced during the 1938-39 legislative session. North Dakota and Kansas were the only states in which anti-Ascap bills were enacted; while they were defeated in Arkansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Minnesota, Indiana, Illinois, Oregon, Connecticut, Ohio, Missouri, Michigan and Pennsylvania.

Vermont enacted a bill for a 5 per cent tax on the Society's collection within the state, requiring ASCAP to file a list of its music annually. The Florida house has amended the anti-Ascap law enacted last year. Washington, Tennessee and Nebraska enacted anti-ASCAP laws two years ago.

New York Tax Continues

New York Governor Herbert H. Lehman has signed Senator Frederic Coudert's bill continuing for another year New York City's right to impose a gross receipts sales tax, levies on engaging in trades, profession or business, real estate or franchise exercise. Under the provisions of the law, it would be possible for the ctiy to enact a special tax for the privilege of operating a theatre, a tax on admissions and a tax on gross receipts, it has been disclosed.

The 1939 Florida legislature has adjourned without putting any new taxes on the amusement; despite many proposed tax bills which would have affected the industry, including a proposed 10 per cent tax on theatre admissions and the addition of theatre chains to come under the chain store tax law.

Sparks Theatres Protest

The City Council of Fort Myers, Fla., has passed an ordinance assessing a tax of five cents on theatre tickets of up to 15 cents and 10 cents for those costing more. Managers of houses in the Sparks circuit have obtained the signatures of more than 1,000 persons to a petition protesting the tax.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee has recommended enactment of the bill proposed by New Jersey's Senator Warren Barbour to repeal the 1912 law prohibiting the interstate transportation of fight pictures.

The committee's studies, the report declared, showed that the act is widely violated, frequently unwittingly. "Motion pictures of various boxing contests, both amateur and professional, are shown in most states against the law but without molestation by officials," it was pointed out. "Motion or still pictures may be taken legally in every state. What is legal in intrastate commerce is illegal in interstate."

It was also pointed out in the report that continuance of the 1912 law might affect television. "While it is not illegal to broadcast a boxing contest to millions of interested listeners," the committee explained, "if the present bill fails of passage it would be a clear violation of the law to utilize television in transmitting a boxing contest to the public."

Although the hearings were widely publicized, no witness appeared in opposition to the bill.

Pennsylvania Bills Die

The Pennsylvania legislature adjourned last week with the film industry emerging unscathed, as a score of bills relating to the business went into discard. Most important of the measures which failed to be enacted were the theatre divorcement bill, prohibiting producers or distributors from operating theatres, and an anti-American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers law which would have prevented the music licensing society from operating within the state.

The legislative committee of the Association of Commerce has voted to oppose the bill in the Wisconsin legislature which would assess a tax of $2.50 per 1,000 feet on film handled by exchanges operating in the state.

The tax measure was introduced by the Committee on State and Local Government and has been referred to the Committee on Corporations and Taxation. The entire industry in Wisconsin has cooperated to fight the bill.

Wisconsin Occupational Tax

Wisconsin exhibitors face an occupational tax on their theatres in connection with three sales tax proposals presented to the legislature by Governor Julius P. Heil as a means of balancing the state's biennial budget. The tax, it is estimated, would raise $300,000 annually.

The Connecticut budget having been balanced, exhibitors there are free of the threatened amusement tax for two more years. However, resentment is expressed over the Bingo bill which has passed both houses, and now awaits the Governor's signature to become law July 1st. The bill limits use of the game to civic and religious organizations.

A bill has been introduced in the Illinois legislature that requires a public record be made of owners of theatres and other business places. It prohibits any person from doing business under an assumed name or under any designation, corporate or otherwise, other than real names.

The Sandquist bill in the Illinois legislature, which would require theatres to have a 15 minute intermission after each two hour show, has passed a third reading and passage is expected some time in the week. The Senate bills for state censorship, theatre divorcement and juvenile curfew were recalled this week to a second reading for amendments.

To Increase Membership

Associated Theatre Owners of New Jersey, booking and buying organization headed by Irving Dollinger, is preparing to increase its theatre membership from 14 to 25.

Can't Bar "Spy" Hull Tells Nazi

The State Department, Washington, has advised the German Government it has no legal right to bar production or distribution of motion pictures such as "The Confessions of a Nazi Spy."

A note signed by Dr. Hans Thomsen, the German charge d'affaires, denouncing the film as an example of the pernicious propaganda that has been "poisoning" German-American relations, was delivered to Secretary Cordell Hull.

The protest was forwarded to MPPDA officials in New York who, in acknowledging its receipt, informed the State Department that the picture was based on actual court records of the Nazi spy case in New York.

Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell in New York this week asked that the Warner Brothers film, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," be shown in United States district court in New York next Tuesday to aid him in deciding the application of Fritz Kuhn, German-American Bund leader. Kuhn seeks to restrain Warners from showing the film, contending that it untruthfully depicts the Bund as being engaged in espionage activities.

Affidavits of Stanley Freedman, Leon G. Turrou, former G-man, Mort B. Blumenstock and Carl Leserman were submitted Friday for Warner Brothers charging Kuhn with hypocrisy. Mr. Leserman stated that the film cost $700,000 and had future contracts for 9,000 play dates, with a total estimated gross of $1,875,000.

The State Censor Board of Mexico has passed "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" with no changes or eliminations ordered. The Cuban censor board has also passed the film.

Quebec Prosecutes Nazi Film Shows

In the first step against Nazi or Fascist propaganda in Quebec Province, the attorney general's office this week charged the Harmonia Club with two offenses under the provincial film act. The Nazi film, "Le Merite," was seized by police during a showing in the club on April 28th and the audience dispersed. The film lacked censorship approval.

Refugee Benefit Set

A benefit for Christian German refugees will be held at the Winter Garden, New York, next Thursday. The midnight benefit will inaugurate a drive for $600,000. Performers include Eddie Cantor, Raymond Massey, Tallulah Bankhead, Fredric March, Hildegarde and Kitty Carlisle.

Massey to Receive Degree

Raymond Massey, star of the stage play "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," who will also play the title role in the screen version for RKO release, was awarded an honorary degree from Lafayette College on Friday. He was the first actor so honored in the college's 108 years of existence.

Eastman Starts Building

Eastman Kodak Company has started construction of a new seven-story building at its Kodak Park plant in Rochester, N. Y., as one of the major factors in Eastman's $15,000,000 United States building program this year. The majority of this sum will be spent in Rochester. The new building will provide additional space for the finished film department, where film is cut to final size and packed. A 45-year-old building is being razed to make room for the new structure.

Largest RKO Convention Seen

Attendance at RKO's national sales convention June 19-22 at the Westchester Country Club, Rye, N. Y., will be about 250, making it the largest in the company's history, according to Jules Levy, general sales manager.

All salesmen from the company's 38 exchanges in this country and Canada will attend. Also attending will be Ralph Hanbury, United Kingdom; Ralph Doyle, Australia; Nat Liebeskind, Argentina; Bert Reisman, Peru; Max Momez, Mexico; Pedro Saenz, South America; Reginald Armour, Continental Europe; Leon Britton, Far East; Bruno Cheli, Brazil; Fred S. Gulbransen, Panama; Ned S. Seckler, Cuban home office representative, and Gus Schaefer, district manager for central and northern South America.

Committees have been announced as follows: General, A. A. Schubert, M. G. Poller, W. J. McShea, Harry Gittleson, and S. Barret McCormick; Reception, A. A. Schubart, William McShea, M. G. Poller, Bob Wolff, Frank L. Drumm, Phil Hodes, Jack Ellis, Lou Kutinsky, Eddie Carroll, Harry Zeitels and John Dacey; Foreign Reception, Phil Reisman, B. D. Lion, Michael Hoffay, R. K. Hawkinson; Publicity, S. Barret McCormick, Rutgers Neilson, Harry Gittleson, Michael Hoffay; Decorations, Leon J. Bamberger, Lou Gaudreau; Transportation, W. J. McShea, William Gegenbach.

Gene Towne, writer, who recently became an independent producer for RKO Radio, plans to produce four productions, "Swiss Family Robinson," "The Deerslayer," "Tom Brown's School Days" and "African Intrigue." His new producing unit is called The Play's the Thing Productions.

Wanger Completes Plans For Five UA Releases

Walter Wanger has completed plans for the five pictures he will make for United Artists release in the 1939-'40 season. Titles are "Winter Carnival," "Whose Wife?" starring Loretta Young and David Niven, with Tay Garnett directing from the original by Gene Towne and Graham Baker; "House Across the Bay," starring Joan Bennett, Archie Mayo, director, story by Myles Connelly, screen play by Sarah Y. Mason and Victor Heerman; "My Personal Life," John Meehan's adaptation of Vincent Sheean's novel, and "Send Another Coffin," F. G. Presnell's new novel which Tay Garnett will direct.

Hutchinson Outlines 20th-Fox Product at Rio Convention

Walter J. Hutchinson, vice-president in chage of foreign distribution for Twentieth Century-Fox, outlined the company's 1939-'40 product at the opening session last Friday in Rio de Janeiro, the company's first convention in South America. The convention was held over a three-day period.

Sidney R. Kent, president of the company, also addressed the convention. About 40 salesmen were on hand.

Monogram's Bookings At Highest Point

The next eight weeks' bookings and playdates of Monogram pictures are the highest in the company's history, W. Ray Johnston, president, said this week. In that period Monogram plans to release some of its best product, including "Streets of New York," "Wolf Call," "Boys' Reformatory," "Across the Plains," and "Down the Wyoming Trail."

CITE TELEVISION NOW AS A NEWS PURVEYOR

Engineers Study Technical Difficulties Revealed by Telecast of Nova-Baer Fight

by FLOYD STONE

Television demonstrated, to its adherents at least, its practicability as a purveyor of news as well as entertainment, on Thursday last, when several thousand persons in the New York area saw and heard the Nova-Baer boxing match over an estimated 500 receiving sets. Such telecasting of news events is not novel in England, where television as a commercial venture is three years old, but it was the first news telecast in this country; and this week engineers of the Radio Corporation of America and the National Broadcasting Company were scanning reports of public reaction and of the technical difficulties which made the telecast merely "satisfactory."

Distinguished, Not Recognized

Seen on a television receiver in the RCA Building, headquarters of NBC television, the fight, telecast from the Yankee Stadium, was easy to follow, but not much more. The iconoscope had been set up about 40 feet from the ringside. The fighters could be distinguished, but not recognized. When on the near side of the ring, they were of average proportionate height in the approximately 9 by 12 inch screen; when on the far side, they were small figures. At various times, a haze along the rim of the screen interfered with definition; spectators rising in their seats between the iconoscope and the ringside also interfered with the telecast.

The use of a "telephoto" lens on the television camera is apparently impractical; and NBC engineers, from reports, battled to get as near to the ring as they did. Mike Jacobs, fight promoter, was reported irked by the space which the television unit occupied in an area commanding high seat prices.

The fight telecast was seen not only in several hundred private homes but also in the lobbies of the Paramount, Earle, New Amsterdam, Little Carnegie, and other New York theatres. In all cases, the crowds watching the telecasts were large, and the television receiver screen small.

Introduction of a large television screen, especially one for use in the theatre, has been awaited from the Baird Television Corporation which has set up American headquarters in the Gaumont British offices at 1600 Broadway. Ian Javal, commercial director of the Baird Company, an English television pioneer, arrived in this country several weeks ago with a staff of engineers, equipment for large size television receiving, and plans for the establishment of such apparatus in Broadway theatres.

This week it was reported that the Baird Company was delaying its efforts to introduce a large size television screen in theatres here, "because of the meager amount of program material suitable for theatre use," and due to technical difficulties.

Goes Ahead in England

Baird, however, in England, has gone ahead with the sales of its theatre television equipment. The annual "Trooping of the Colors," which occurred in London on Thursday, in the absence of the King and Queen, was received in many Gaumont British theatres, over Baird television sets and on the large Baird television screens, of 20 by 15 feet, and 15 by 15 feet. This event was telecast last year, also.

In this country, television has been seen in practical operation by a million persons at the New York World's Fair and the San Francisco Golden Gate Exposition, it is estimated.

The NBC, in New York, has been endeavoring to substitute "live talent" for old motion picture film, on both its evening entertainment and its afternoon test programs. There is conjecture on the possible use by television of 16 mm. film, for economy, with the mass of film material available from 16 mm. libraries, for reduced fire hazard, and more efficient storing. At present, the television industry is hampered in the use of 35 mm. film by its inability to obtain new films of such width from the motion picture industry.

While television occupies the minds of radio folk and public alike, the radio set manufacturers are watching its effect on the sales of their own product. At a meeting of General Electric district sales managers and radio representatives in Schenectady last week, Dr. W. G. Baker, director of the GE radio and television department, warned dealers not to devote too much attention to television.

Albert Murray, engineer in charge of television for the Philco Radio and Television Corporation, declared last week that television still was "uncertain." He listed, as difficulties still to be overcome, the high prices for receiving sets and transmitters, range limitations, the refusal of the Federal Communications Commission to issue commercial licenses, the lack of suitable program material.

Four More Registered

In Albany, New York, four new television companies have been registered. They are the United States Television Manufacturing Corporation, with $150,000 capital; the World Television Corporation, with $20,000 capital; The Independent Sales Corporation; and the Wire Broadcasting, Inc.

In London, Solomon Sagall, managing director of Scophony, Ltd., told the annual meeting of the company on Monday that capital had been increased from $1,500,000 to $2,500,000. Oscar Deutsch, a director of the company, and head of the Odeon circuit, said negotiations were under way with the British Broadcasting Company for control of fees on theatre broadcasts, and predicted television's growth.

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association is expected to decide, late this month, at the annual meeting in Blackpool, on policy towards use of large screen television in theatres. The Kinematograph Renters Society (distributors), opposes the practice.

Alfred Werker has been signed by Twentieth Century-Fox and his first directorial assignment will be a new Sherlock Holmes story.

Oscar Deutsch, head of the Odeon circuit in England, has been named a director of Denham Laboratories, Ltd.

Jack Otterson, art director at Universal studio for the last three years, has signed a new one year contract.

Sol Edwards, eastern sales manager for Grand National, has set 18 first run bookings in the east on "Exile Express" and "Panama Patrol," prior to release.

Sees Friendly Treatment for U. S. in Japan

"No doubt at all" that the Japanese government will "live up to its obligations" and allow more American films to be imported under the present agreement for about 200 such, was expressed last week in New York by M. M. Bergher, manager in Japan for Columbia Pictures. (Picture in Pictorial Section).

Up to the present, about 100 American films have been imported, under a financial agreement which limits the number of imports and also allows American film companies to withdraw their money only after three years' deposit in the Yokohama Specie Bank.

Delay Fulfilling Pact

"Yes, they will live up to their promises, the Japanese will," said Mr. Bergher. "They have committed themselves for the entire quota. And I do not think they want to back out. They did not stop, actually, fulfilling their agreement; they have merely delayed it."

He remarked that the unfavorable trade balance had impelled the Japanese Government to refuse to issue more import permits—"also the fact that the theatres have not required such quick turnover."

"Even now," he added, "there is still some stock of film available in the hands of distributors."

Mr. Bergher said it was "impossible" to predict how the new Governmental film regulations, to go into effect September 1st, would affect the American film companies' situation, but believed that the regulations probably "would not be severe."

"I really expect the Japanese Government not to give us harsh treatment, because I believe they are too anxious to gain the good-will of this country, and especially of the motion picture industry, which can do so much for them."

However, the details of the new Japanese law, revealed last week by the motion picture division of the United States Department of Commerce, show it was prepared to "contribute toward the national culture," placing the industry under government control.

Demand Free Trade

Mr. Bergher was asked whether the concessions admittedly given American film companies by the Japanese Government and the South Manchurian Railway film monopoly were enough to make the American companies return to business in Manchukuo. He replied that the American film men in Tokyo were awaiting the report from the commission recently sent to that country, on the advisability of reopening offices in Manchukuo, and added:

"It is true that they have tried everything to bring us in, but not on the basis of free trade, which is the only principle upon which American business men will operate in the Far East."

He said, however, he expected the American companies to re-enter as "soon as differences are settled."

Mr. Bergher hopes the new Japanese governmental regulations for the motion picture industry there, will improve Japanese product. Said he:

"I hope so for the sake of the Japanese industry. They certainly cannot prosper without making pictures of better quality.

"As a matter of fact," he noted, "they depend upon American industry to learn technique. Our 'A' class pictures are being studied carefully by Japanese film workers."

DISAGREEMENTS SPLIT UNITED ACTION ON BRITISH FILM-TELEVISION POLICY

Exhibitors and Distributors Send Delegation to Postmaster But Fail to Agree on Terms of Memorandum He Requests

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Irritation, increased by the confusion of certain trade and extra-trade incidents, has now driven the British industry to take, with some superficial semblance of unity, practical action to regularize the relationship of television with the cinema. The meeting of the Television Advisory Committee, the increasing cinema showing of televised sporting events, the financial complexities of the diffusion fee problem and the persistence of the B.B.C. in televising films, have driven both distributors and exhibitors to examine the position and find out where they stand.

Joint Deputation

Most recent step in this direction has been the joint approach to the Postmaster General of a deputation representing the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Kinematograph Renters Society. They went, asking him if he would define the Government attitude on television and the cinema. Most significant factor in the situation is that both parties, asked to draw up a memorandum outlining the supposedly united viewpoint of the trade, have already been unable to agree in the matter.

The memorandum which was to guide His Majesty's Postmaster General, which was to chronicle in firm and unequivocal terms the trade's position and viewpoint, yet awaits to be compiled. In spite of a long and eloquent discussion between the two parties, sufficient unity was not forthcoming and the matter is to be referred on the one hand to the full KRS Council at an early date, and on the other discussed by the CEA at the annual Conference at Blackpool, with a possible further discussion by the local branches.

There is agreement in both parties on certain fundamentals, such as the use of films by the BBC for private entertainment, the association of certain renter groups with circuit interests and the presence on the CEA of circuits which are rapidly installing cinema television apparatus, and have already shown, and battled over the showing of television items, are factors which stand in the way of a united platform.

Twitting the Trade

It is not impossible that the Postmaster General has long been and is still aware of the divergent interests within the film industry, and may even have suggested the memorandum with a twinkle in his eye, if not, purely metaphorically, his tongue in his cheek. A short while back Mr. Gerald Cock, television chief of the BBC, speaking for his organization on the question of diffusion rights, gave it that the BBC could join in no controversy on the matter, suggested that the Corporation could not be expected to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for the trade, threatened if the controversy became more acute, that the BBC might take a stiffer line of action on diffusion. Broadcasting House twitted the trade on its disunity, and sectional oppositions, refused to be involved.

The key factor in the present situation would seem to be the control of the fees paid for diffusion of televised events. At present the larger circuits, such as GB and Odeon, are able to pay the indubitably high charges asked—not by the BBC, but with their tacit approval. Smaller newsreel houses, such as those run by the Monseigneur chain, find it uneconomic. It is stated that £250 ($1,000) per theatre was asked, by those responsible, for permission to diffuse the broadcast of the Derby. Three GB houses and the Odeon, Leicester Square, showed the broadcast of the race. Jack Davis, of Monseigneur, has already protested against the way in the system of exacting large fees operates against smaller independent houses. It is obvious that with GB fast installing their larger houses with Baird apparatus, and Oscar Deutsch declaring his intention of putting Scophony into his circuit, and with the probable spread of television entertainment to the provinces, notably to Birmingham, the independent exhibitor is likely to be faced with another pretty problem in economic survival.

U. S. TO STUDY LATIN AMERICAN MARKET

The Latin American market, to which the American motion picture industry is looking with increasing optimism as a wider market for its films, will be subjected to a broad study by the United States Department of Commerce on the possibilities of increasing American import trade generally, Harry L. Hopkins, Secretary of Commerce, said this week.

Mr. Hopkins addressed a gathering of business men, industrialists and financiers at the ninth annual world trade dinner, held at the New York World's Fair. The principal objective of the study will be an enlargement of American foreign trade in both directions, offsetting the "unwholesome" export balance of more than $1,000,000,000 last year, he said.

At the same time Mr. Hopkins referred to the necessity of what he called "a vital change" in financing in Latin America and a long-range program looking to greater domestic management of foreign-financed enterprises there, as a supplement to the good neighbor policy of the Administration.

See Decreased Playing Time

Renters, foreseeing this development, foresee logically, too, a decrease in the playing time of their product, with a consequent decrease in the rentals to be derived therefrom.

So far as the big screen is concerned, asked point blank by the Postmaster General whether the trade was anxious for it, the industry's representatives replied in the negative, expressing not so much complete opposition as a preference to let it take its course, and reach a suitable technical and commercial form.

The procedure under which payment is extracted for televised broadcasts gives rise to the CEA-KRS opposition. With events such as the Derby and larger prize fights, the BBC place cinema proprietors in touch with the promoters. The latter, owning the rights of the events, are entitled to, and have been known to charge, figures claimed to be exorbitantly high. In the case of the Derby they should have netted approximately £1,000. The BBC gives the cinema its television service, but pays as a royalty itself the very nominal figure of £75. Exhibitors claim that this procedure not only might place them in the hands of monopolists and royalty racketeers, but means that cinemas must pay through the nose so that the BBC can get attractive programs inexpensively for the ordinary private viewer.

See Monopoly in Spirit

Such action by promoters, claim exhibitors, is alien to the spirit of the undertaking with the Corporation that there should be no monopoly and that fees shall be in proportion to seating capacity. As Charles Metcalfe has pointed out, these fees are often highter than the total monetary capacity of the cinemas. The absence of competition makes it impossible for fees to be controlled by the ordinary commercial means of bidding for alternative entertainment.

For the Derby broadcast, Gaumont charged admissions of two shillings and sixpence, and five shillings, whilst the Odeon varied their prices over the ordinary cinema admission range, from one shilling and sixpence, to eight shillings and sixpence. For the Roderick-Armstrong fight, however, Deutsch closed down the Leicester Square Odeon, cut out "The Four Feathers" for the evening, and charged ringside prices from five shillings to two guineas. In large independent supers, such as the Trocadero, Elephant and Castle, and elsewhere, customers can go into the cafe and see such broadcasts on an ordinary television apparatus without it costing them more than the price of a cup of tea or a plate of bacon and eggs.

Boxing Promoters See Loss

Meanwhile, the other side of the medal, oddly enough, is presented by the boxing promoters, who claim that by giving way to television and broadcasting interests they are losing money. Only 5,000 persons went to Harringay to see Armstrong beat Roderick, and Brigadier General Critchley claims that the promoters lost £8,000 on the fight.

"The fee," says he, "paid by the BBC and television people to the promoters is a perfect joke." The Greyhound Racing Association, of which Mr. Critchley is chief, now say that they will either have to ban broadcasts and television, or compel the BBC to increase their nominal figure of £75. The British Boxing Board of Control will also take up the matter, although they contend that the loss on the Armstrong-Roderick fight was not necessarily connected with the television.

Meanwhile, the controversy goes on. The CEA's vice-president Mears sees in television a menace, insists that television of films must be stopped, asks the Government to protect the industry. Exhibitors in the Birmingham and Manchester and other areas, fearing the imminence of an extension of the BBC television to the provinces, are increasingly on their guard. Scotland, geographically removed from the BBC's program, is indifferent. American students of the scene consider the whole business so elementary and in such an embryo state, that there is no need for worry.

Discussion will inevitably bring out divergent interests and viewpoints. Whether these will be brought together into one coherent platform remains to be seen.

IATSE IN NEW ENGLAND TO FIGHT NON-UNIONISM

District Convention Delegates Urged to Action in 16 mm. Field; Studio Officials Upheld

by JOHN W. RILEY
in Boston

A general "cleaning up" of non-union conditions in the six-state New England area, a fight to "open up" the 16 mm. projection field for IATSE unionism and a vote of confidence for certain IATSE officials in the present fight over Hollywood studio union control, highlighted the convention, Sunday, of the New England district International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, at the Penthouse, Hotel Bradford, Boston.

Brennan Presides

In the absence of John F. Gatelee, of Springfield, Mass., Local 53, who for the last three years had presided at the New England district meetings, James J. Brennan of New York Local 1, sixth vice-president of the IATSE, was in the chair during the six and one-half hour session, called to order by Fred W. Newcomb, secretary-treasurer of the IATSE, from Providence, R. I., Local 223.

Mr. Newcomb was re-elected secretary-treasurer for the fourth consecutive year; and Worcester, Mass., was automatically named the convention city for the next meeting on December 3, 1939, by virtue of the Boston-Worcester alternate plan. Fifty-eight delegates were present representing 62 locals of the New England area, including those in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Maine, and New Hampshire. Vermont has no local.

Mr. Brennan caused Mr. Newcomb to appoint the following committees which went into conference shortly after convening: Credentials Committee: Bernard McGaffigan, chairman; Edward Patrick, Patrick J. Doheny, Ralph Young, Lloyd Wertman; Finance Committee: Gerald H. Payne, chairman; Joseph Bell, Fred S. Penwell, George Brissell, James Corrigan, Louis L. Williamson; Resolutions Committee: Thad C. Barrows, chairman; Herbert F. Slater, Thomas E. Gannon, John S. O'Connell, R. K. Lewis, James J. O'Brien, William F. Dever, Harlan A. Cole, Charles H. North, M. J. Casey, Winfield White, Jr., and Thomas J. Shea.

The conference heard a report of the credentials committee by Mr. McGaffigan, followed by Mr. Payne's financial report, including figures on the $5 annual assessment, the 10 cent a month tariff, and the 10 cent per week tax to fight the 35 E. M. Loew and five Leibermann non-union houses in New England. There are 26 locals affected by this 10 cent per week assessment to combat non-union conditions in towns where Loew and Leibermann operate.

Leibermann Next Target

Discussion followed on "going after" the Leibermann interests after the Loew situation is cleared.

Reports from state legislation committees were made by James F. Burke, Local 182, for Massachusetts: Defeat of safety devices for film; George Brissell, Local 479, Norwalk, Conn., for that State: That legislation against independent exhibitors was practically nil inasmuch as senators and representatives in some instances were allegedly linked with the trade in some respects; Charles McCloskey, Local 198, for Maine: That the gadget bill was killed; and that Sunday movies will begin July 1; and that the licensing of all operators will become effective July 1. No report was made from New Hampshire. Mr. Slate, of Local 223, Providence, reported for Rhode Island, saying that four bills died in committee.

IATSE TO RESIST TMAT "INVASION"

The International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees will resist any effort to infringe on its jurisdiction over cashiers, ushers, doormen and ticket-takers, an IATSE official said this week in New York.

"Jurisdiction was granted to us by the American Federation of Labor in 1935 and since that time we have established 77 locals covering these employees," the official said. "The locals are known as Theatre Employees' Union and are organized in many cities."

The Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union, also an AF of L affiliate but not a member of the IATSE recently undertook to bargain for this class of employees in New York City.

The TMAT has been recognized by the Five Boro circuit.

The 16 mm. Field

Richard J. Walsh, of Local 4, Brooklyn, fourth vice-president of the IATSE, talked on the necessity of getting union men into the 16 mm. field, citing 16 mm. conditions at the New York World's Fair. He urged the convention to consider the 16 mm. field and to fight to put union men into it now. He said the wage scale was not a factor at present.

Mr. Walsh was concerned over the attitude of press and public toward labor unions. He said that they were not properly informed in the work unions are attempting.

Mr. Walsh cited the battle now being waged by over 12,000 studio union men on the West Coast. He was bitter in his remarks against the ethics employed by certain Hollywood and Los Angeles union men, who attempted to get control of the locals in that territory. He said that the courts and public opinion are against the IATSE on the West Coast, particularly in Hollywood and Los Angeles. He cited "the ridiculous decision" of the California Supreme Court which ruled that the closed shop agreement in San Francisco is illegal.

Mr. Slater was author of a motion that Mr. Newcomb be authorized to send a telegram of assurance and backing to Mr. Gatelee, informing him that his bailiwick was one hundred per cent in back of him in his assignment on the Coast.

Mr. Newcomb read a telegram addressed to him by Donald I. McDonnel, secretary, Hartford, Conn., Local 486, advising him of the State's Supreme Court ruling of dissolving the E. M. Loew injunction on picketing against the Hartford Local.

Frank Reel, counsel for the convention, spoke on legal matters in which the convention is specifically interested, particularly anent picketing Loew and Leibermann houses. Mr. Barrows made a motion, which passed, in which the convention gave a vote of confidence to the committee in charge combatting these circuits.

Mr. Brissell, on the summer theatre situation, said that of the 50-odd summer houses throughout New England, four were IATSE and each had about two men employed. He urged negotiation with the managers for IATSE employment.

The condition of non-union men maintaining equipment sold by supply house members of the IATSE brought forth heated discussions from Mr. Barrows, Mr. Slater and Mr. Hauser.

Mr. Slater stated that union jobs commanding $80 weekly are going to $20 and $22 per week non-union men.

Mr. Brennan asserted that locals have control over these supply house members and that officials of the unions should prefer charges against these misdemeanors. It is more difficult, he said, to regulate this condition when non-union supply men are involved.

Mr. Barrows read a letter sent by him to a committee asking them to meet for the express purpose of settling this situation. Letters were sent to supply houses and urged representatives to meet in regard to drive-in theatres.

Mr. Barrows said that the report of that committee crystallized to the denoument that supply houses could sell equipment to any theatre, but mentioned nothing about maintaining that equipment. He said that supply houses were sending sound systems to these spots with non-union operators. As far as the jurisdiction of union operators is concerned, it is the duty of these supply houses to get in contact with the out-of-town unions when bringing a job to that locale, it was said.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to Boston Locals 182 and 11 for being host to the dinner.

Reports Foreign Business Better

Jack Segal, manager of foreign exchange operations for Columbia, came back to the New York home offices of the company, last week, after a seven month foreign tour which took him from Spain to India—with the belief that foreign business will improve, and that the delay in re-entering the Spanish market in quantity is merely a "matter of dollars and cents."

Mr. Segal sees no ideological bias operating against the American companies in Spain; they can ship their films there now, he asserted; it is merely that "they are waiting to see what the new government will do in respect to the film industry."

"I do not think we are being discriminated against," he said. "We can ship in there. There are no laws stopping us. But it's a question of getting dollars for our pictures. We've got to know the answer to that first, before we send out merchandise."

Reminded that news sources relate the comparatively favored distribution of Italian and German films in Spain, Mr. Segal replied:

"Well, they're part of the 'axis,' and seem to work together, as far as we can see. Maybe they do get some money from Spain. But I would not go so far as to call their treatment a 'preference.'"

He noted, further, that Columbia offices had been open in Barcelona, Madrid, Valencia, Seville, and Bilbao through the civil war; that they were still functioning, with two-year-old product; that they were staffed with Spaniards, and that the Spanish personnel had suffered some losses from the war.

Mr. Segal declined to comment anent the possibility of anti-American propaganda in Latin America, through Spanish pictures.

Business was best, he noted, in England, the Scandinavian countries, France, and Belgium.

IN COURTS

Extra Plagiarism Award Granted on "Lynton"

An additional $16,470 was recommended for Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes, authors, by Special Master Kenneth E. Walser in federal court in New York this week for alleged plagiarism of "Dishonored Lady" in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Letty Lynton." The authors had previously been awarded $532,000 against Loew's and subsidiaries, on which an appeal is being argued this week in the circuit court of appeals. The additional award was made against Moredall Realty Corporation, operators of the Capitol theatre, New York.

MGM's appeal is based on the theory that the play, by itself, doesn't merit the $532,000 damage award, since there were other factors contributing to the success of the picture, the expense of the production, the stars, screen adaptation, direction, etc.

Decision Expected on Fox Bankruptcy Case

The final hearing on the William Fox bankruptcy case was held in Atlantic City on Saturday and a decision is expected momentarily. It is reported that the $600,000 offer of settlement includes $350,000 in cash, $100,000 over a three-year period and $150,000 subject to litigation. Severe opposition to the offer was reported.

Order Examination

Edward J. Churchill, president of Donahue and Coe, Inc., has been ordered by the appellate division of the New York supreme court, to submit to examination before trial in the $100,000 damage suit of Edward J. Pfeiffer, who claims to have given Mr. Churchill and his company the idea of the Movie Quiz contest.

Detailed Complaint Ordered

John W. Clancy, federal judge, in New York this week directed Howard Y. Bary, plaintiff in a $307,000 damage action against Universal Pictures Company, Inc., Lester Cowan, W. C. Fields and Al Wagner and Ann Dempster, trading as Al Wagner Theatrical Agency, to file a detailed statement of his complaint. The plaintiff charges the defendants with inducing the breach of a contract which he had with Alverson Blacaman and his troupe and furthermore claims plagiarism of his story, "A Circus Episode," in the Universal film, "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man."

MGM Suit Filed

A suit has been filed in the United States district court in New York against Loew's, Inc., and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by Francis E. Weidhass asking for triple damages in the amount of $800,000. The plaintiff claims that the defendants are using, manufacturing and selling stage curtains which incorporate patents which he owns.

ERPI Files Patent Suit

Electrical Research Products, Inc., has filed suit in federal court in Los Angeles against Glen Glenn Sound Company, claiming infringements of patents relating to the recording of sound on film. An injunction is sought.

Settle Arnstein Suit

Nicky Arnstein this week made an out-of-court settlement, believed to be $25,000, with Twentieth Century-Fox in his suit involving "Rose of Washington Square."

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

LADY AND THE MOB: Fay Bainter, Ida Lupino, Lee Bowman—Why a company should waste time and material on this is without rhyme or reason. Just a washout. No comedy as far as we could see even though listed as such. Skip it. Running time, 63 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OUTSIDE THESE WALLS: Michael Whalen, Dolores Costello, Virginia Weidler—Good entertainment. Patrons' reaction favorable. Running time, 58 minutes. Played May 14.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE REDWOODS: Jean Parker, Charles Bickford—Excellent picture for family entertainment. Lots of action and some forest fire scenes that really get 'em. If it had had a couple of big names, it would have been in top allocation. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 21-22.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

TERROR OF TINY TOWN, THE: All Midget Cast—This pleased about 90% of our attendance very well. The others walked out. Jed Buell's midgets act cleverly and the piece is satisfactory entertainment of a novelty nature for most audiences. Played May 19-20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU: Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Spring Byington, Mischa Auer, Ann Miller—Here is a great show from director Frank Capra. We played it three days to a very good business but not as good BO as "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." We had patrons who have never been inside of the theatre. Print in good condition. Running time, 127 minutes. Played May 2-4.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

First National

GARDEN OF THE MOON: Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay, John Payne, Johnnie Davis, Jimmie Fidler—A slow draggy musical that did not register. Fidler better stick to radio as he is terrible. The show is implausible and certainly did not have audience appeal. Running time, 94 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane. Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, May Robson, Roland Young—Not so hot. Wish I had skipped it because a woman that's been in jail 19 times is not very well thought of in my town. That's another part that should have been cut off. Lots of mothers didn't approve of their daughters to see the picture and didn't mind telling me so. Wish I had never played it. Running time, 82 minutes. Played May 14-15.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BURN 'EM UP O'CONNOR: Dennis O'Keefe, Cecilia Parker, Harry Carey—Average action fare. Mild draw. Played May 13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CALLING DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore—Positively aces. 81 minutes of fast entertainment of the 81 minutes it takes to run it off. Should cinch the Kildare series and pep up any lagging box office. Played May 20-23. Running time, 81 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

DRAMATIC SCHOOL: Luise Rainer, Paulete Goddard, Alan Marshal, Ann Rutherford—Very good. An appealing role for Miss Rainer and an interesting performance by Paulette Goddard. Played May 3.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Kent Taylor, Ann Rutherford—Very good entertainment. Everyone well pleased. Ann Rutherford did especially well. Played May 19-20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HARDYS RIDE HIGH, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford—Pleased generally. It's not big but people seem to like it generally. This manager says good "B" product; that's all. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young—A honey for any spot. Played April 30, May 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns and Gracie Allen—What a show! Good, pretty and grand. One of the best in long time. Running time, 83 minutes. Played May 7-8.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres, Original Ice Follies Cast, Lewis Stone—Joan Crawford should have skated so maybe she would be starring in "Ice Follies" or it would have been lots better if Crawford would have been left out and "The Ice Follies of 1939" starred the Ice Follies with James Stewart, Lewis Stone and Lew Ayres. Figure it out. Running time, 89 minutes. Played May 19-20.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres, Original Ice Follies Cast, Lewis Stone, Lionel Stander—The best picture from Metro this year. Good story, star cast including Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lewis Stone and Lionel Stander for the comedy, while the International Ice Follies put on an Ice Ballet in beautiful color that is tops. The Russian Revels, Circus, Cinderella's Ice Palace and Pumpkin Coach, Puss in Boots, Indian Pow Wow, Candy Kids, Blackbird Pie, Mother Goose, all the old fairy tales come to life on the screen. The Ice Ballet is something new and unbelievably beautiful, and we hope to see the Ice Follies again. Don't be afraid to advertise this one. Running time, 82 minutes. Played May 5-7.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LET FREEDOM RING: Nelson Eddy, Victor McLaglen, Virginia Bruce, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Charles Butterworth, H. B. Warner—In my opinion, one of Nelson Eddy's best shows but for some reason the cash customers were not interested. A good story of early day railroad building and with a cast including Victor McLaglen, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Charles Butterworth, H. B. Warner and Virginia Bruce. This is packed with excitement. Eddy sings a number of excellent songs. Running time, 87 minutes. Played May 19-21.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Virginia Weidler—Didn't do the business we anticipated.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PYGMALION: Leslie Howard, Wendy Hiller—I am very much afraid that it will take the intellectual class to appreciate Shaw's works. I know that the English pictures must, to be authentic, have that screwy dialect to be in character. I'll say that it is different than any picture that we have run. The picture is clever as it can be. But we could not seem to reproduce the recording plainly, though I lay that to the English talk and recording over there. We experience no difficulty in other features. I'll hand a bouquet to Wendy Hiller. She handled a difficult part right up to the hilt. But, I still am not sold for a steady diet of Shaw. The dialogue was brittle and snappy; that put the picture over.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PYGMALION: Leslie Howard, Wendy Hiller—Well, we don't know. It definitely is not a small town picture. Those who saw it liked it immensely but they were few and far between. We did everything possible to bring them in but no dice. Would say skip it to the average small town. Running time, 87 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RICH MAN, POOR GIRL: Robert Young, Lew Ayres, Ruth Hussey, Guy Kibbee—A fair program picture suitable for double billing. Business only average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SERGEANT MADDEN: Wallace Beery, Tom Brown, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day—Very much disappointing or something. Sure did flop at the box office.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

SOCIETY LAWYER: Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce, Leo Carrillo—A good program picture and the cast gave all they had. It is "Penthouse" over again. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SOCIETY LAWYER: Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce, Leo Carrillo—Metro's still out in front for us in '39. This is no retreat. Usual swell entertainment. Played May 24-26. Running time, 79 minutes. —W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

SOCIETY LAWYER. Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce, Leo Carrillo—"Penthouse" about five years ago, made over, rebuilt or what have you? No box office names. While it is a fair story and not too bad cast, it has no box office draw, and that is all I care about. In my opinion, Virginia Bruce is getting altogether too many and too big parts. Why not give us one good star in each show? Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 12-14.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

STABLEMATES: Wallace Beery, Mickey Rooney—Rooney and Beery team wow 'em again. Has everything you expect of these two great players. Played May 24-26. Running time, 89 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

STABLEMATES: Wallace Beery, Mickey Rooney—These two are always good. Business not up to weekend business. Autry makes these look sick.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

YOUNG DR. KILDARE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Lynne Carver, Jo Ann Sayers—We can sure use more like this. While the picture didn't do anything sensational, it is one of the best so far. They are asking about the next of the series already. Everyone well pleased. Running time, 83 minutes. Played May 12-14.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

Monogram

STAR REPORTER: Warren Hull, Marsha Hunt—Average entertainment. Played May 13-16. Running time, 64 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

Paramount

BACK DOOR TO HEAVEN: Patricia Ellis, Wallace Ford—Actually kept people away. Overburdened with acting and dialogue. Steer clear of it. Worst business so far in 1939. Played May 7-19. Running time, 68 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo. Colo. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S SECRET POLICE: John Howard, Heather Angel—A little far fetched but thoroughly enjoyable. Our customers enjoyed it. Played May 20-23. Running time, 55 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

COLLEGE HOLIDAY: Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Mary Boland, Martha Raye—Played with "Popeye the Sailor Meets Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves." We put this in as a double attraction and met with a great success. Played the Easter Sunday to a very good business. Had a large matinee. Played April 9-10.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

HOTEL IMPERIAL: Isa Miranda, Ray Milland—

This foreign importation, Miranda, is very easy on the eyes. The picture is just fair and that is something from Paramount.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

I MET HIM IN PARIS: Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young—This was a good picture but failed to draw at the BO. We think the title had something to do with it. It was silly in spots but the patrons who came liked it. We played it rather old but the print was in fair shape. Running time, 86 minutes. Played March 28-29.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

JUNGLE PRINCESS, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland—One of the best jungle picture we ever played. The acting by Ray Milland and Dorothy Lamour was outstanding. We did extra business, and to our opinion a very good show. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 31-April 1.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing Minn. General patronage.

KING OF CHINATOWN: Akim Tamiroff, Anna May Wong—Picture broke all low records for this change. Double billed it and still didn't go. Running time, 59 minutes. Played May 19-20.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

MEN WITH WINGS: Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Louise Campbell, Andy Devine—Good picture but something is missing in it. When it's over you feel you've missed something. Business far below normal. Played May 17-19. Running time, 105 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

NEVER SAY DIE: Martha Raye, Bob Hope—Most people said it was silly but it did average business. Played May 22-23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaal, Shirley Ross, Edward Everett Horton, Akim Tamiroff—Good show with usual Crosby attendance. Songs went over OK and the story kept them laughing. Didn't do as much as I figured it would do but was well pleased. Running time, 87 minutes. Played April 23-24.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

PERSONS IN HIDING: Lynn Overman, Patricia Morison—Good melodrama. Miss Morison is splendid. Played May 6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Republic

BILLY THE KID RETURNS: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Smiley Burnette—We consider this one of the best western pictures ever played. Acting, direction and setting very good. This boy Rogers sure coming to the front fast. Two or three more pictures like the first two will put the star ahead of all the western stars. Running time, 58 minutes. Played April 7-8.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

NIGHT RIDERS, THE: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Doreen McKay, Ruth Rogers—This one was not as good as the previous Mesquiteers. Weak story and too much fist fighting. Terhune dummy does not act much in this one. Running time, 58 minutes. Played April 14-15.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

STREET OF MISSING MEN: Charles Bickford, Nana Bryant, Harry Carey—Racketeer after leaving prison decides to take revenge on newspaper head responsible for his conviction; instead, saves the publishing company from being destroyed by another band of racketeers. Good material for week ends. Running time, 63 minutes. Played May 12-13.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ALMOST A GENTLEMAN: James Ellison, Helen Wood, Ace, the Wonder Dog—The title fits the dog perfectly and vice versa. A good family picture. Can be played any time. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Mal 12-13.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

FISHERMAN'S WHARF: Bobby Breen, Henry Armetta, Leo Carrillo—A good picture for Bobby. Pleased okay but drew only fair crowd. Played May 13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GUNGA DIN: Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—Too bad such a magnificent production should fail dismally at the box office. What ails the public taste, anyway? The women turned thumbs down. Played May 11-12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patrongae.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS: Anne Shirley, Ruby Keeler, Fay Bainter, James Ellison—Here is a perfect picture for Mother's Day. We played it to a very nice business. Many patrons remarked about the acting of the picture and we could not have picked a better picture for Mother's Day. Running time, 82 minutes. Played May 14-15.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

PACIFIC LINER: Victor McLaglen, Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie—Keenly disappointed. We should have cancelled this one. Pretty dull story in spite of excellent cast to tackle it. Played May 10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STORY OF VERNON AND IRENE CASTLE, THE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Edna Mae Oliver, Walter Brennan—Here you are, boys, a sweet little show, big enough for extended runs in any spot and clicking all the way. Running time, 93 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHARLIE CHAIN IN HONOLULU: Sidney Toler, Phyllis Brooks—A picture good for Pal Nights or double bill. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 16-16.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN HONOLULU: Sidney Toler, Phyllis Brooks—About the best Chan I have seen. Toler is good in the part and adds pep that wasn't there before. This series doesn't go too well here but they liked this one. Running time, 67 minutes. Played April 25-27.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

CHASING DANGER: Preston Foster, Lynn Bari—Program action picture which failed to draw average business. In a small town they will not accept these little action pictures on Friday and Saturday in place of westerns. Played May 26-27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, THE: Richard Greene, Basil Rathbone, Wendy Barry, Nigel Bruce—Very good detective yarn. No special drawing card for us, however. Satisfied those who came. Played May 17-18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENT: Dolores Del Rio, June Lang, George Sanders—We played this off our last year's contract. Very pleasing business. Based on the war in China.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly—A definitely class A attraction. The casting was most satisfactory, and each one outdid their usual good work. Color was excellent. Played May 4-5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly—Best business of last two months on third run. They're still coming to see it. Played May 13-16. Running time, 106 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott, Slim Summerville—Very good show. In my opinion about a third as good as "Kentucky." Tyrone Power is good but Henry Fonda steals the show. As usual, Slim Summerville furnishes the laughs. The scenery is beautiful; color very good. Think my theatre was the last one within three hundred miles to run this show so the box office was nothing to write home about. Running time, 106 minutes. Played May 9-11.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Sybil Jason—Obviously Shirley's best production. She really gets a chance to act in this one and comes through splendidly. Sybil Jason rates a creditable job also. Played May 14-15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MEET THE GIRLS: June Lang, Lynn Bari, Robert Allen—Pretty bad. Story was weak. Action was slow and forced. There is no reason to spend time and money on one like this. The public would have walked out only I had a good feature with it that they wanted to see. Running time, 66 minutes. Played May 12-13.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, THE: Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda, Young Sisters—This is one of the biographical pictures that are in the offing. We played "Pasteur," "Zola" and did business. This picture is not big and did not do normal business. So far below it that it played at a loss. If Fox thinks that Ameche is a Muni, they are a long way off the mark. I have an open mind on any innovation in this business. But the lack of support for this picture has us wondering.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Charles Farrell—Nancy Kelly's superb and sympathy-arousing portrayal of the bereaved sweetheart saved this show from complete dullness. Worth seeing just for Nancy Kelly. No business. Played May 7-8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell—Kind of a washout at the box office. Business was below average. Picture is fair with streaks of action but not what they want in a flying picture. Anyone who has seen an airplane will recognize the models in the race scenes. Running time, 84 minutes. Played May 14-15.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

SAMUEL GOLDWYN'S production

"THE HURRICANE"

with Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith, Thomas Mitchell, Raymond Massey, John Carradine and Jerome Cowan

Directed by JOHN FORD

RELEASED THRU UNITED ARTISTS

THREE MUSKETEERS: Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers, Gloria Stuart, Binnie Barnes—Patrons complained about casting the Ritz Brothers with Don Ameche, declaring that they liked him but just couldn't stand the silly Ritz Brothers. This hurt our business, even on bargain night. The picture is pretty good and the Ritz Brothers are not in it often enough to hurt, but these picture patrons are plenty picture wise.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Ritz Brothers, Don Ameche, Gloria Stuart—A good comedy that attracted little patronage. Played May 6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers, Gloria Stuart, Binnie Barnes—I only saw about a third of this one but that is a third more than most people saw. Much ado about nothing that did not make film rental. Running time, 74 minutes. Played May 17-18.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

United Artists

ALGIERS: Charles Boyer, Hedy Lamarr, Sigrid Gurie, Joseph Calleia, Alan Hale, Gene Lockhart—Entertaining. Pleased those who saw it. Business poor. Extended run, no. This manager says good "B" product. Running time, 87 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STAGECOACH: Claire Trevor, John Wayne, Andy Devine, George Bancroft, Thomas Mitchell, Louise Platt—This is a good western. Not an epic, however. Satisfied most of my patrons and did Gene Autry business. Running time, 96 minutes. Played May 14-16.—K. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

Universal

BIG TOWN CZAR: Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Ed Sullivan—A good programmer that will please the average theatregoer. Ed Sullivan appears in the picture and should not be overlooked in your campaign. Running time, 66 minutes. Played May 14.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

LITTLE TOUGH GUYS IN SOCIETY: The Little Tough Guys, Mary Boland, Mischa Auer, Edward Everett Horton—Excellent. We should have spotted to better advantage. How it would have tickled our Wednesday fans. Played May 9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PIRATES OF THE SKIES: Kent Taylor, Rochelle Hudson—Nothing big-nothing bad, just an ordinary programmer. Played May 16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THAT'S MY STORY: Claudia Morgan, William Lundigan—Even if you double bill this one you are still cheating the fans. Running time, 62 minutes.—G. Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN: W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—Another picture that never would have been missed. Just plain words, my friend, too silly and the biggest sensation in walkouts since "Hitting a New High." Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 4-5.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Victor Jory—Very good picture which did above average business. Good cast, plenty of action and beautiful color. Should be box office in any spot. Played May 26-27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID, THE: James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane—Very good. A swell western picture. James Cagney is a tough hero in this one, which makes him excellent with my patronage. That's the way they like them. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 1-13.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

SECRET SERVICE OF THE AIR: Ronald Reagan, Irene Rhodes, John Litel—Picture had quite a bit of action, some good flying and was fairly well liked. Could have done nicely without it though. It is different from the usual story and OK for the end of a double bill. Running time, 63 minutes. Played May 19-20.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

A-DUCKING THEY DID GO: Three Stooges—A good comedy. A good short comedy saves the show. Ain't it the truth nowadays? Running time, 17 minutes.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

CHUMP TAKES THE BUMPS, THE: Charley Chase—As usual, you can always depend on Charley for laughs. Running time, 17 minutes.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

LONE MOUNTIE, THE: Krazy Kat Cartoon—Fair cartoon.—C. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

MUTTS TO YOU: Broadway Comedy—The usual slapstick. Our folks like it, however.—L. A, Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NIGHT IN A MUSIC HALL, A: Pinky Tomlin—Very fine single reel. Good music, lots of dancing, action and pep all the way through.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

NOT GUILTY ENOUGH: Andy Clyde—Very good short subject. Why can't some of the other companies produce shorts like Columbia does. Haven't seen a bad one yet and have run them all.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

PIE A LA MAID: Charley Chase—Best Chase yet. This one is a riot and kept the audience howling. Don't miss it.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

THREE LITTLE SEW AND SEWS: Three Stooges—If your public likes the Stooges, this one is good. Our patrons liked it very much. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

VIOLENT IS THE WORD FOR CURLY: Three Stooges—Very funny slapstick comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre, Stanwood, Wash. Small town and farm patronage.

Educational

RHYTHM SAVES THE DAY: Song and Comedy Hits—Just a filler. Kids very good. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BURIED TREASURE: Captain and the Kids—This is the best Captain and Kids cartoon to date. Is more like what they should be. People used to laugh because they got the habit from the funny papers but they really liked this one.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

COURTSHIP OF THE NEWT, THE: Robert Benchley—Not even funny. Benchley is usually pretty fair but this one fell completely through.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

DUEL PERSONALITIES: Our Gang—Excellent. The only complaint I ever hear from the Gang Comedies is they all want to hear Alfalfa sing. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HONDURAS HURRICANE: Captain and the Kids—Just fair. Disney spoils us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LITTLE GOLDFISH, THE: Cartoons—Great. Am glad they are making this series again for they are tops. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MONEY TO LOAN: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Like the rest of this series, this one is very good. Deals with the loan shark racket and really tells them about it.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

PENNY'S PICNIC: Pete Smith Specialities—Preparing a picnic lunch by a California lake. Beautiful color but we'd rather have a comedy. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SOMEWHAT SECRET: Musical Comedies—A very good two-reel musical. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

STORY OF DR. JENNER: Passing Parade, No. 4—Fairly entertaining scientific reel.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WANTED: NO MASTER: Cartoons—Just fair but better than the Captain and the Kids series. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WEATHER WIZARDS: Pete Smith Specialties—Pete Smith is always good and this one on the citrus growers' problems is excellent. Running tiem, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ALWAYS KICKIN': Color Classic—Excellent.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BUSSE RHYTHM: Headliner—About average.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CHAMPAGNE MUSIC OF LAWRENCE WELK: Headliner—Excellent.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CUSTOMERS WANTED: Popeye Cartoon—Only fair stuff.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FROLICKING FROGS: Sportlight—An unusual and interesting subject relative to trained frogs.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LEAVE WELL ENOUGH ALONE: Popeye Cartoon—Poor and very short on running time.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MUSICAL MOUNTAINEERS: Betty Boop Cartoons—Best Betty Boop cartoon in a long time. Betty meets the mountaineers and they dance and play hillbilly music. The grownups liked it better than the kids.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ODD OCCUPATIONS: No. 5—Average reel of its type.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ON WITH THE NEW: Betty Boop Cartoon—Okay enough.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT PRESENTS HOAGY CARMICHAEL: Headliners—Very good orchestra reel. —E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR MEETS ALI BABA AND THE FORTY THIEVES: Popeye the Sailor—Played this with "College Holiday." We put this in as a double acction and which met with a great success. Played the Easter Sunday to a very good business. Had a large matinee. Popeye sure pleases the children. —Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: No. 3.—Average scientific reel.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RAISING CANINES: Paragraphic—Very interesting class in canine instruction.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SO DOES AN AUTOMOBILE: Betty Boop Cartoon—Funny and original.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RKO Radio

MARCH OF TIME, THE, NO. 7: Young America, Mexico's New Crisis—Think series are the best screen fan fare you could play.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ROMANCING ALONG: Headliners—We noticed several exhibitors recommending this short. Take a tip from us. Don't play it. Phil Harris tries to act. It's pathetic.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BARNYARD EGG-CITEMENT: Terry-Toons—Excellent colored cartoon. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FROZEN FEET: Terry-Toon—Just fair.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Pinacook, N. H. General patronage.

STRINGBEAN JACK: Terry-Toons—Very good cartoon in beautiful color. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THREE BEARS, THE: Terry-Toons—Good colored cartoon. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Universal

BABY KITTENS: Lantz Cartunes—Satisfactory.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BEAUTY SHOPPE: Mentone Musical Comedy—Quite poor.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GOING PLACES: No. 60—Subject matter is not so hot and neither is the reel. Just fair. Tennessee Tweetsie and manufacture of armor are the subjects and a trifle far fetched so far as we are concerned. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LITTLE BLUE BLACKBIRDS: Lantz Cartune—A funny cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SIDE SHOW FAKIR: Mentone—Fairly good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION, NO. 59—Entertaining.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

CHAINED: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure" Series—These shorts have always been outstanding to my patrons and like all the others that I have played this one is very good. Running time, 11 minutes.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

DAFFY AND THE DINOSAUR: Merrie Melodies —When a producer runs out of material he had better stop making product rather than a cartoon such as this. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DAY AT THE ZOO, A: Merrie Melodies—Very good cartoon in colors.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE, THE: Historical Featurettes—Good short. Not quite what our public expects in the way of entertainment.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HIGH PERIL: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure" Series—A very good Gibbons with plenty of suspense. Running time, 11 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LINCOLN IN THE WHITE HOUSE: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—Enough praise cannot be given a short such as this. It can only be spoken of in superlatives. Absolutely tops. Running time. 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LONE STRANGER AND PORKY, THE: Looney Tunes—Here is a good cartoon and don't forget it. Sequence equals any we have seen. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MERLE KENDRICKS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—This is an excellent musical short. The tunes are varied and rendered in a capable manner. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation and Education, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MURDER WITH RESERVATIONS: Broadway Brevities—Another two reel that is punk. The story is bad, the acting and actors are worse. Didn't hear any laughs to speak of. Only good part of it is a dance that lasts about two minutes.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

RUSS MORGAN AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Very good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook. N. H. General patronage.

TOYLAND CASINO: Broadway Brevities—Our audience received this with perhaps the greatest enthusiasm shown any short subject this season. It sure is a dandy. Plenty of compliments on this one.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

To Study Duties On Printed Matter

A study of the import duties charged by some foreign governments on printed advertising matter sent from the United States is being planned by the Export Advertising Association of which S. F. Woodell is president. In many cases the association feels that these duties are not only burdensome but also discriminatory.

As an example, the association cited Australia's new general tariff rates. The revised tariff rate now in effect is 4½ a pound, or 70 per cent ad valorem, whichever returns the largest amount to the government. The old additional primage duty of 10 per cent is retained. Argentina and some other countries have comparable rates.

The amount of printed matter sent by American film companies to foreign countries depends chiefly on the import duties. In countries like Australia and Argentina, where the rates are exceptionally high, the printing is done locally although based usually on samples from the home offices in New York. In fact whenever import duties rise to a point that it becomes unprofitable to send printed matter from this country it is printed locally.

However, when facilities of foreign countries for the printing of some special matter are insufficient it is printed here and the companies feel that the resultant advertising is well worth the added cost of import. Most of the advertising matter for smaller countries is printed here.

ACCIDENTS RISE, SO DO RATES FOR INSURANCE

Increase of Cost to Exhibitors as High as 66 Per Cent; Claims Grow

As a result of rate increases which have gone into effect nationally, exhibitors will be required to pay more for their liability insurance beginning this week. In some instances, the increase runs to as much as 66 per cent.

Says Claims Have Increased

The National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, which fixes the rates, says that the experience tables prove the number of claims has risen and the cost per claim has also gone up. It is also said that calculations were faultily made when rates were changed in 1935 from a seat to an admission basis.

Insurance companies base the rise on experience tables drawn from policies written between May, 1935, the date of the latest increase, and December 31st, 1936, the raises being according to the number of accidents in theatres, principally to patrons.

Boston theatres are hit hardest with a raise from 15 to 25 cents per 100 admissions. Kansas City and St. Louis houses will pay 21 cents instead of 15 cents. In New York City, except for the borough of Richmond, the rate rises from 11 to 18 cents. On the basis of estimated insurance company seat and attendance figures, the rates have risen in New York City from 40 cents per seat in 1927 to 51 cents in 1935, to 71 cents per seat at present.

Each State Has Own Rate

Experience tables are predicated on particular localities, since each state has its own rate, and large cities within the states have their own separate rates.

During the experience period (policies written between May, 1935 and Dec. 31, 1936) 1,736 claims arose from 336,300,000 insured admissions in New York City, or approximately 5.2 per million.

No basis of comparison exists, because prior to 1935 insurance was written on a seat basis. In 1929, 10.9 claims resulted from each 10,000 seats insured. In 1930, 17.9; 1931, 23.5; 1932, 23.9; 1933, 26.8; 1934, 23.0; first part of 1935, 29.9.

The cost per claim filed, however, affords a basis for comparison, according to Motion Picture Daily. In 1929, the average cost per claim was $187; 1930, $105; 1931, $138; 1932, $165; 1933, $159; 1934, $132; 1935, $141; 1936, $182.

As a minor compensating factor to the rate rise, is the fact that property damage insurance (clothing, etc.) has been reduced from two cents per 100 admissions to 1 cent.

Representative Increases

Increases in some representative states follow. All rates are for minimum $5,000-$10,000 coverage for personal injury public liability policies. The tabulation indicates the rate in cents per 100 admissions.

In some states, such as New Jersey, Connecticut, Ohio, Michigan, Alabama, Florida, Oregon, Minnesota, and Texas, rates remain the same.

In accordance with the decision of the New York Allied convention questionnaires have been mailed to members of Allied and the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York for data concerning policies and amount of coverage. Arthur Pelterson, of the Mitchell May, Jr., office, prepared the questionnaires and will present a proposal for a cooperative solution of the problem of increased rates based on the answers received. Mr. Pelterson will work with a joint committee of Allied and the ITOA.

"AMERICANISM WEEK" AT FOX THEATRES

A new form of Americanism observance for theatres was used in the 11 Fox theatres in Denver, last week, in the form of "Americanism Week," marked by suitable ceremonies on the circuit's stages, culminating, on the final night, with the marching of Legionnaires in full dress uniform to the stages, as the audiences arose and sang the National Anthem. At the conclusion, the Legion's color guards presented American flags to the theatres and they were accepted by the manager.

Following the stage ceremonies, a patriotic short in color was flashed on the screen, and the audiences were asked to pledge allegiance, with the words appearing in the short. On one morning a special "Americanism" show was held for children, no admission or ticket being required, but each youngster had to wear or carry a flag, any size.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., Plans Comeback

Carl Laemmle, Jr., out of the motion picture industry three years, is anxious to "come back again." (Picture in Pictorial Section)

His plans are hazy, but his determination is firm, the son of the founder of Universal Pictures said this week at the Hotel Pierre, New York, on a visit East, partly business, mostly pleasure.

"Pictures were my first love," he said, "I was born in the picture business, and I'll be back in it one of these days—I hope."

If he lines up any story properties worth making pictures from, he will lease a studio, Mr. Laemmle said.

He said he had acquired the right to make a picture about the life of the late Texas Guinan, New York night club hostess of the "20's".

The young ex-producer has been in New York visiting the World's Fair, as a commissioner of the San Francisco Fair and representative of Governor Culbert L. Olson of California, and has been seeing stage plays in New York, possibly to acquire picture rights or to finance legitimate shows, if he can find "the right ones." He declared that he owned part of the current New York stage success, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye."

E. L. Alperson and C. C. Ezell have formed Contestnite Corporation, which will produce musical short subjects for distribution through franchise holders, to be used as the basis for "You Title the Song" contests. Six subjects have been completed, using Sue Hastings marionettes photographed in color, original music by Mort Greene and Hal Borne being scored by Borne and his orchestra.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly

"Old-Fashioned, Ditch-Digging Sweat"

Omaha in Nebraska recently sponsored a Golden Spike celebration in honor of "Union Pacific." Responsible largely for the sensationally successful world's premiere, which involved an expenditure by all participating factors of one-half million dollars, were two Tri-States theatremen, Evert R. Cummings, district chief, and Ted Emerson, advertising head. Miles away a few weeks later, in South Orange, New Jersey, an unique Spring Film Music Festival was put over resoundingly at the subsequent-run Cameo Theatre, by Manager A. L. Barber.

Previous issues have endeavored to tell somewhat of the gigantic campaign guided by the Omahans. On another page is outlined the job done by the Jersey theatreman. Judging by the size of each campaign, obviously there is little basis for comparison. But in one important respect, they are similar and startlingly so.

Both are examples of top-flight showmanship that demand the accolade for campaigns conceived and executed in the sweat of their creators. "Sweat" is the word gentlemen—plain, old-fashioned, ditch-digging sweat without which the fanciest flight of exploitation is worth less than a plugged nickel at the boxoffice.

Now, keep your seats, folks. At this stage of the game, your Chairman is not going venerable to the extent of marking the blackboard with copy-book maxims on the virtues of labor. But, with permission of the membership, we would like to point out that only by the actual work done by the man in the field can showmanship be rated fairly in concrete boxoffice terms. If ever that can be proven to the satisfaction of every important industry factor, then it follows that the able theatreman must perforce be counted as the top man of the business, and rewarded accordingly.

This industry has always been plagued with a multitude of difficulties from every source. In the welter of doubt, argument, accusation and counter-accusation, as directly concerns the theatreman, two criticisms live longest. The first is of insufficient grosses; the second, which stems from the first, is of proper remuneration for the manager. In other words, one of the most frequent reasons given in refusing salary rises, is that business is not good enough. And if that be so, as it so often is, then it follows that if every manager bestirs himself to bring in more business, eventually he must remove that most serious obstacle in the way of his financial betterment.

Let it be said immediately, that the fastest-thinking showman averse to doing the necessary chores must take a poor second place behind his less gifted brother who gets out and sweats to translate ideas into boxoffice action. It is the doing of it that rings the bell.

We are prepared to meet the issue immediately raised by hard-working dissenters who will argue that their conscientious labors have yet to bring tangible rewards. The quickest answer to that is, the hardest worker does not automatically fall heir to the bigger monies. But with everything else equal, rises rarely go to men who have not earned their spurs through obvious toil. Even the toughest bossman must respect the manager who gives his physical most to the job.

The stand-outs in any line are those who devote themselves entirely to keeping in shape so they can remain at the top. The theatreman who hopes to go ahead, must too by habit plus everyday endeavor while he is on the job, condition himself to be eligible for a step-up. And your thinking showman knows that his efforts are often regarded with serious attentions from other bosses, if not his own who may rate him as just another piece of machinery to be used.

There never was, nor ever will be a time when every manager everywhere did, or will do his everyday utmost to increase the takings. But the sizeable number of theatremen who are so doing to their own advantage, as well as their boxoffices, offers reassuring proof that obstacles and discouragements in the way of a better financial break in other sectors, can be removed by those also willing to sweat as profusely to remove them.

KING OF THE NEWSBOYS
LEW AYRES · HELEN MACK
A First Run Action Hit

Constructed by Nick Todorov, publicist for his bossman Charlie Bierbauer, at the W & V Colonial, Allentown, Pa., was the front for "King of the Newsboys." Entire boxoffice was covered with compoboard on which were mounted front page tearsheets of various tabloids.

Above is reproduced display built by Spence Pierce, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla., to plug his "Cavalcade of Hits." Entire setpiece is indirectly lighted, bottom so constructed as to permit the interchanging of panels as the picture is either booked or dated. Making an ever-changing display, the first cost aside from the panels, is the last. The top is a revolving cylinder as large as a barrel on which the theatreman inserts five cards on his coming attractions not yet dated, these cards one sheet size.

Sponsored by Manager P. E. McCoy, at the Georgia Theatre, Athens, Ga., was a beautiful legs contest held for opening of "I'm from Missouri." In this case, however, the beautiful legs belonged to the mules and through the cooperation of co-eds from the local University of Georgia, the girls acted as judges. Nags were lined up on street alongside theatre where the judging atracted plenty of attention and was covered by local dailies.

If the folks of Akron, Ohio, weren't aware of the fact that "Dark Victory" was playing at the Colonial Theatre, it was not the fault of Manager Rhodes who flew one of the Goodyear blimps over the city trailing a banner with title, cast and playdates. Round Tabler also had a loud speaker system in the ship with large horns over which announcements were made from air which could be heard clearly by pedestrians. Entire stunt was costless.

Hollywood Trip Tieup Featured by Holland

Planned by Sid Holland, Elkhart Amuse. Co., city manager, Elkhart, Ind. is a public stage wedding of a popular local couple at the Elco. Bride and groom will receive everything from the ring and bridal outfits to the honeymoon trip, living quarters for a month, golf club privileges, etc. All these will be promoted from cooperating merchants. Leading merchant will also provide the wedding supper. Stunt will be widely advertised by the theatre and stores going in on the tieup.

Also arranged for by Holland will be a series of bathing beauty contests with eliminations, etc. To run for five weeks, grand prize will be a trip to Hollywood in addition to gifts for runnersup.

"WHAT ARE YOU PLANNING FOR SUMMER"

Taylor to Tiein with Conventions in Buffalo

Charlie Taylor, ad chief for Shea's Buffalo Theatres reports his summer institutional campaign already under way with huge art pieces in each theatre selling the big summer shows, colors being brightened as the season advances. Pictures are arranged for newspaper use selling local personalities with the air conditioning machinery, showing the immensity of the various plants. Feature stories are arranged for special writers who are taken on a trip through the cooling plant, also to be planted are shots of the ushers and musicians when they don their summer uniforms.

Summer parades highlighting the various conventions held in Buffalo are often sniped with banners, heralds distributed at convention meetings and addresses frequently made before gatherings of convention visitors. Copies of the Circuits Movie Guide are distributed to Canadians crossing the border and heralds handed out at the exist of bridge and ferry landings. Repeated tieups are made with local radio stations to broadcast theatres' cool copy and the theatre regular Saturday evening radio program sells plenty of good copy for summer business. With the appearance on his screens of stars linked up with radio programs, Taylor uses an announcement on summer comfort copy.

Brien Announces Theatre As Summer Club Quarters

For his summer buildup, Lige Brien of the Prince, in Ambridge, Penna., contemplates making the theatre the headquarters for various organizations, especially children groups. Clubs will be started with various merchants promoted as sponsors. Striking displays will be featured stressing the cool angle, street ballys engaged in and attractive window displays planted. Brien also aims to tell folks how best to utilize their money by use of such catchlines as "It's smart to be thrifty," "our low prices," etc. etc.

With his population about 80 percent foreign, the theatreman plans booking outstanding language films with different churches sponsoring each feature. And the theatre staff will be instructed to boost the theatre among their friends and at all gatherings and to be particularly alert and courteous during the dog days.

This first paragraph is addressed particularly to those "Right People" who supported us so generously on the occasion of our last venture with an "unusual" program.

The success of that first program has encouraged us to venture in presenting another, though this time of a somewhat different character.

We feel now that there is a great interest in really worth-while motion pictures, and we take pride in the announcement of our first Spring Film Music Festival, to be presented, for four days beginning Monday, May 8th, in connection with the observance of National Music Week.

The programs for these four days, (listed on the inside cover) are designed not alone for the music lover, but also for all lovers of fine film entertainment.

The combination of the two Arts, Music and the Screen, is reflected in the selection of the programs presenting some of the world's greatest music, interpreted by splendid artists of both these fine cultural arts.

Cameo Theatre
South Orange N. J.

FRONT PAGE OF BARBER'S PROGRAM

Music Festival Tied by Barber to Music Week

A wide step in the direction of business from outside the theatre's usual drawing area was accomplished recently by Manager A. L. Barber, of the Cameo, a subsequent-run in South Orange, N. J., in the form of a Spring Film Music Festival that marked the observance of National Music Week. Four attractions were selected to make up the Festival which ran four days, starting on a Monday, each attraction single-featured for one day showing, and each having a distinct musical background. They were, "Lives and Loves of Beethoven," "100 Men and A Girl," "Moonlight Sonata" and "Maytime." It was something that had never been done before in the situation and although certain risks were involved, Barber found the experiment very worthwhile, though the appeal was confined to class patronage and difficulties experienced in the way of obtaining the right product.

Contacts All Music Lovers

Early contacts were established with music dealers, radio and record shops, musicians and music teachers, including the county association of music teachers. Also contacted were supervisors of music in grade, junior and senior high schools in a wide area, as were music and art departments of leading women's clubs. The entire list of organizations contacted personally by the Round Tabler are too numerous to mention, but it is evident he did not miss any that counted, including P.T.A.'s, Motion Picture Councils, lunch clubs, etc.

The campaign was vigorously waged in house program, on screen, in additional newspaper space. The lobby was given special treatment with a 40 by 60 art display and all lobby and sidewalk frames carried special art strips. Editorial and special attention in the nearby Newark papers was obtained, the motion picture critic of the Ledger devoting an entire column to a resume of the program on the first day of the Festival.

Special Program Features Drive

Worthy of comment, is Barber's special four-page six-by-nine program on behalf of the Festival, front cover carrying copy headed, "Culture, Inc., Pays a Dividend" (see cut), a dignified job of selling the event to the "right people." Inside two pages were a spread of cuts and copy for the four different attractions and the back page was given over to further thoughts from Barber's pen under the heading of "Candid Comments." These had to do with selling the temporary policy of single features during the Festival and comments on each feature.

The program was mailed widely to select lists, distributed at the annual high school concerts, at leading stores, through lending libraries, public libraries, popular restaurants, and in laundry packages. Music stores additionally gave window displays. Further prestige for the occasion was had through generous mentions of the Festival by an authority on music appreciation during the course of his lectures a week ahead of the date.

FURTHER REPORTS FROM MEMBERS ON PLANS FOR SUMMER BUSINESS

Additional Campaigns Detailed On Activities Now Scheduled By Round Tablers; Outdoors Opposition to Be Challenged

by A-MIKE VOGEL

THE spread in last week's issue on what the boys have arranged to pick up any slack in summer grosses is now added to on this page and the following, wherein is set down some more of the same from other sources. What the members intend doing, and how, makes interesting reading, and where summer is a problem, it appears that the many exploitations already in work are in a fair way to solve boxoffice difficulties in the heated period.

It is to be noted in these pages that Round Tablers are going far and wide to strengthen business sources, to the extent of tieing in with city projects, university sessions, convention committees, etc. Read about them now.

New England Loewmen Stressing Ideas to Attract Juvenile Trade

Concerning ideas for building up summer business, both Mr. Shaw and myself have gone into the situation and offer the following as stunts and ideas which would tend to increase the box office.

Special stress to be made on parents and their children through trailers, lobby posters and radio that the best place for the young ones while school is closed is in the theatre. Idea being to sell parents that to protect their children, send them to the pictures every week.

In several spots we have instituted bathing beauty contests. Most charming girl selected through ballots and personal appearance on the stage. Through tie-up with merchants, prizes are promoted for winners. This contest runs for a period of weeks and in the past has proven itself as a great business builder during the warm weather.

Plan to turn to the radio more than ever this year through promoted time, both spots and 15-minute periods. These special announcements and program are intended to tell the people that there is a cool theatre and excellent entertainment in Loew's theatres.

Many of our towns are located near beaches and summer resorts. These are the people who, during the winter, reside in town. Our plan is to make these people movie conscious and keep drilling into them, through circulars or cheap programs, that for their best relaxation and entertainment they should attend Loew's theatres. In the past we have gone after these summer colonies with great success as far as the boxoffice is concerned.

Every manager in our circuit has been instructed to go into the "promotion" business. We are urging everyone to promote ice cream, candies, flowers, etc., for early morning matinees. We are going after the other attractions such as carnivals, lawn parties, etc., for announcements telling what our theatres are playing.—Lou Brown, Advertising and Publicity Manager, Loew's Poli-New England Theatres.

Theatre Promotes City Pool For Combination Ticket Tie-in

We will do one thing for certain this summer and that is make a tie-up with the city and their swimming pool, we plan to make arrangements with them where their customers at the pool can buy a combination ticket, a swim and a show for 40 cents. They will be cutting their price from 25 to 20 and us from 30 to 20 and we split the 40. However these tickets must be used on the same night as purchased, which will mean that we will get the people from the pool for our second show each night. The pool has agreed to close at nine, so this will be a big help to our evening business.

We have a big deal coming up to start the second week in June and run for nine to ten weeks where we give a $50 bike away each week. This tie-up is with ten of the biggest merchants in town. The contest is open for anyone from 7 to 70, so we have quite a range to work with in selling this idea. We tried the stunt before, three years ago, and it certainly did plenty to build our kid business. Now with the bike craze going on with the adults as well as the children we are looking forward to a fine business from both classes.

To Increase Street Ballyhoo

Getting away a little from grosses and still holding up profits we plan to cut our advertising budget about fifteen per cent, but in doing this we will use the street ballyhoo more, such as banners at the ball games, swimming pool, picnics, etc. Banners and our public address system do not cost us very much and since we have not used this type of advertising so much the past year it should do quite well in advertising our pictures.

We will probably open up with a new series of Amateur programs (under a different name) some time during the summer months. These have always been a drawing power for us and as long as we can furnish good local entertainment we get the public in. This year we will probably make a weekly Revue out of it, using a small local band as a back with about six good acts each week. We always put our Amateur shows on our poorest night as they usually do very well.—Jimmie Redmond, Advertising Manager, Bonham, Fairbury, Neb.

University Accepts Offer For Summer School Matinee

Athens is a college town, the University of Georgia being located here. Naturally our business depends largely upon its students and faculty members. The regular school session closes June 10 and Summer session begins. Though past Summer sessions have proven to be something of a life saver to us, we cannot help but feel a little skeptical toward this coming one, due to the fact that the Summer school is attended mainly by teachers of the state schools. This year many schools were forced to close early and teachers are owed two or three months back salaries, due to the present state of finances.

For this reason, we have worked out a plan with University officials, which, we hope will offer much encouragement to those who will attend. The theatres are offering a special block ticket to the students and faculty members. The tickets will sell for seventy-five cents each and are good for one matinee showing per week, Monday through Wednesdays, for a period of six weeks. In return we hope those attending the early shows will be sold via our screen prevues on seeing our ace attractions, which will be played the latter part of each week. The University has expressed its heartiest appreciation to the theatre management in conceiving the idea and states that they feel quite sure that every student and faculty member will take advantage of it. Further states that the offer has been printed on the programs sent out over the state and should build up abundance of "good will" between the theatres and the students. Tickets will be sold through the Registrar's office on the University campus.

With a lineup of superb pictures, which we have booked, our theatres boosting the only refrigerating plants in surrounding territory and backed by good publicity week after week, we hold high hopes of giving the bowling alleys and skating rinks and such, "absolutely hell."—Newman Corker, Lucas & Jenkins City Manager, Athens, Ga.

WARNER-MEN IN OHIO SET TO BEAT-THE-HEAT

Managers in Nat Wolf's Division Prepared to Do Business in Hot Months, Reports Wright

by DICK WRIGHT

Zone Manager, Warner Ohio Theatres

June and the summer months following call for increased energetic activities in the selling of our attractions. It will take only a few weeks of the new season to determine which managers are victims of a summer slump and which are the real go-getters driving for business in spite of seasonal obstacles.

To overcome outdoor and sports opposition, more serious this year than in the past, due to a number of towns now having night baseball, and a greatly increased number of soft ball games in every community, we must add every conceivable means at our command to exploit and sell our attractions as well as our theatres. It is up to us to make our shows more attractive to more people than the games in the ball parks; by diverting interest from such games to our theatres and by taking every advantage of the crowds gathered for these sports to get our selling message across to the amusement minded public.

Last year the boys in Nat Wolf's Ohio Division of Warner Theatres put over a Stunt-a-Day Contest which proved out very successful in the stimulation of exploitation ideas and special promotion. This year each manager is again putting into action plans and ideas to hold up grosses to beat the summer heat. The following paragraphs will give a few of the highlights of the methods of attack.

In Frank Harpster's district comes word from City Manager Bill Dworski of Mansfield that plans are under way to promote an electrical organ and start Community Sing Nights. Bill is again concentrating on Benefit Ticket sales tieing in with attractions whenever possible. Bill says the advertising medium of having these people approach the public on forthcoming attractions cannot be beaten. On "Dark Victory" practically every manager in the Ohio Division put over a benefit ticket sale in conjunction with an advance reserve seat premier this past month. So successful were these that the boys are already lining up benefits on "Juarez."

Institutional Advertising Stresed

Dworski is a firm believer in institutional advertising and has already set his plans which include contacts with parks which will net tie-ups that will advertise special attractions to all children enrolled. Sport pages will carry news of the Warner Theatre Golf League and tie-ups with the various clubs have been made to promote the theatres on the links. Grattan Johnson at the Madison Theatre is giving further diligent concentration on his Saturday Kiddie Shows, offering prizes and serials, Westerns, cartoons and games, to offset playgrounds and swimming pool attractions. He is now bending every effort to make his annual Marty Hogan Revue, a kiddie revue, break all past records when it is presented the third week in June. Wayne Williams, skipper at the Majestic, has an uncanny knack of selling space in heralds to cooperating merchants who likewise assist in their distribution as well as promoting free cool drinks for his patrons.

Louis Lamm, manager at the Palace Theatre, Lorain, is arranging a Hollywood Hair Style Show in which local girls resembling the stars appear on his stage. Type of coiffure represents that as worn by the star they represent. Lamm is also arranging for an automobile giveaway, cost to be defrayed by local merchants by giving coupons with purchases. He further plans to run a Harmonica Contest in conjunction with his Saturday Kiddie Shows and a free one-week expense trip for two to New York and the World's Fair, representing a cash outlay of $200 per couple for three couples. Julius Lamm, at the Cleveland Uptown, runs a large kiddie club every Saturday.

Marvin Samuelson is taking a very active part in the formation of plans of the merchants at Shaker Square, Cleveland, in their celebration of the tenth anniversary.

"Cooling" Copy Found Important

Lou Milder has a new cooling plant in his Variety Theatre and is going the limit in publicizing it in his neighborhood. Lou says "Through every possible medium I intend to plug my cooling plant with my patrons—every piece of advertising I use, will carry a slug on the cooling system. I believe that in establishing the excellent quality of my system with my patrons, I will go far in maintaining a high level of business throughout the summer. It is also my intention to contact the various organizations in my neighborhood which continue their activities during the summer months, to offer them the use of my lobby during the weekday afternoons as the 'Coolest Spot on the West Side' for their meetings."

Harry Bodie and Don Jacobs in Coschocton concentrate on outdoor advertising at this time of the year. They have found that giant still display boards, planted away from the theatre, create a lot of attention in their town and bring the rural trade in.

Each of the theatres in the Warner Ohio territory equipped with a cooling plant stresses the comforts through every medium, while those theatres not similarly equipped do everything in their interior and exterior lighting, poster treatment and general appearance to suggest cleanliness and comfort.

Extra selling ideas on specific attractions following the general trend of the Stunt-a-Day Campaign will give added push to individual engagements throughout the summer months. With the proper concentration on bookings, service, and house operation we expect every man to meet the challenge of the summer months.

Gilman Planning For Added Grosses From Conventions

Our new cooling plant will be quite a means for us to get some extra business this summer. Being the capitol of Pennsylvania, there are many conventions scheduled here during the summer months. To these people we plan to sell in advance our cool theatre while enjoying a show. We are working on a plan similar to Mr. Barron's in Washington. From the Chamber of Commerce we have received a list of the conventions due here in the next few months. Letters are being prepared to send to the committees of these different conventions, offering our services while here in Harrisburg. We will suggest theatre parties for the women in a nice cool theatre while the men are sweating over their convention problems.

There may be a possible chance that in return for a good sized theatre party we may offer our cool theatre for a meeting hall before show hours. We are trying to work out a plan whereby they will hold their meetings in the morning and then remain for the first show, for regular admissions, of course.

Being on a direct route to the World's Fair and most likely a very popular stopover place, we are planning to go after some of that business. This can be done through hotels, and cabins along the road. We are presently working on a plan to contact all owners of cabins along the highways near Harrisburg and place cards on the walls or throwaways on the tables or something like that to get them to stop at our theatre and cool off while they enjoy a perfect show.—Sam Gilman, Manager, Loew's, Harrisburg, Pa.

"WHAT ARE YOU PLANNING FOR SUMMER"

Binstock Fills His Week With Special "Nights"

Numerous special nights have been planned by Paul Binstock, Warner's Lyric, in Hartford starting with Mondays which will be known as "Surprise" nights. A different attraction will be featured weekly such as amateur nite, kiddie show, professor quiz, old fashioned picnic, plantation colored show, bathing beauty contest, etc. etc. with merchants sponsoring each show.

Wednesday night is known as "Uncle Ezra's Country Store." For this Binstock has tied up with a chain grocery concern to supply him with $100 in groceries, food stuffs, pies, cakes, fruits, etc., each week for 14 weeks. This all at no cost to the theatre, merchant receiving a one card trailer and mention on the display in lobby. Paul acts as master of ceremonies, dressing in farmer's outfit with all of the trimmings.

Friday nights, known as "Stage jamboree, fun festival and gift night" is also proving successful for the Warner Man. Through tieup with local jeweler, 15 prizes have been promoted for a 10 week period. Also put on is an Auction Sale with the gag of buying articles from patrons and paying cash for them. Other games such as baby milk bottle drinking contest, balloon blowing, pie eating, cracker eating contest, etc. are engaged in.

WHAT WINNERS DID TO TAKE DOWN "FORTNIGHTERS" IN LAST PERIOD

Exploitations Of All Kinds Are Vigorously Executed By Round Tablers In Third Preliminary As Second Quarter End Nears

On this page and next are detailed most of the ideas reported by entrants for the last Fortnight period to win Appointments in the third preliminary which marks the half-way point in the Second Quarter of the 1939 Quigley Awards. Three Fortnights remain before the next judging for the Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations to be decided early in July.

Comprehensive "Union Pacific" Tieins Click for Members on Various Dates

Calgary, Alberta recently celebrated its first "Orange Week" and since the citrus fruit was transported via Union Pacific, Manager F. Tickell, at the F-PC Capitol seized upon this for the foundation of his campaign on "Union Pacific," tying in with the "week" in many ways. All grocers used window banners and counter cards plugging the "week," as did five-and-tens and all counters where orange drinks were sold.

The arrival of the Union Pacific exploitation train in Cincinnati allowed "Dinny" Dinerman full opportunity to exercise his magic upon the local press for ample publicity in advance of "Union Pacific" at the local RKO Theatres. Topping the publicity was a layout showing the train and in costume, the Hollywood players who accompanied. Another break was obtained by a series of cartoons of the attending Paramount executives and players.

Dinerman had this unique exploitation stunt liberally publicized in all other local papers, in most instances eight column art spreads, featured stories and other liberal mention by newspaper film commentators.

Mayor Proclaims Week

Thor Hauschild, at the Paramount in Marion, Ind. for the same picture arranged to secure from the studio study charts and a copy of the autographed script which was presented to the high school library before a general assembly at which time, appropriate plugs were given the picture. Mayor issued a proclamation on "railroad week" in conjunction with the opening and capitalized on the fact that that week was the 70th anniversary of the "golden spike" ceremony. Advance screen advertising consisted of trailerette inserted into news reels two weeks in advance. Telephone cards were tacked on poles along main highways and plastered all over town, flash lobby and foyer displays were arranged for and jumbo telegraph blanks used in all branch windows.

Playing "Union Pacific" day and date with the release in key cities, Boyd Braithwaite, Pinney Theatre in Boise, Idaho, was unable to promote displays, miniature trains, etc., from the railroad, but undaunted he secured from them about 100 spikes which he gilded and tagged with tiein copy. These were placed on top of the magazine and newspaper piles in all newsstands around the city, others were given to officials, planted in banks, on hotel writing desks, etc., etc.

The Union Pacific traveling agents were so impressed with the idea that they contacted Twin Falls and Nampa to use the spikes in that territory. The cost is small for the paint and the finished product is an effective and inexpensive selling weapon, reports Boyd, who says the railroad will be glad to cooperate in obtaining the spikes for exhibitors.

"PYGMALION" TIEIN BRINGS ADOPTION

The Cinderella gag used by showmen in the field for their "Pygmalion" dates was topped by Ted Emerson for that engagement at the Omaha, in Omaha, Neb. So well did the Round Tabler succeed in planting his publicity stories on the "lady for a day" tiein that a local matron became interested in winner to the extent of adopting the girl, guaranteeing her a home and education. This unexpected happening brought further art and human-interest yarns which ran daily throughout run of the picture.

Scouts Tiein with Bob Cox On March of Time Short

As the Dexter, Maine, Boy Scouts were conducting a drive for money for tent equipment coincident with his booking of the March of Time subject dealing with Scout activities, Bob Cox at the Park Theatre arranged with Scout leaders to have exhibits placed in theatre lobby for a week ahead, consisting of flags, banners and samples of handiwork which attracted much attention.

Boys sold tickets house-to-house and publicized the events to come by means of window cards, one sheets and store window banners, theatre also receiving a quarter column in local paper gratis. Show was held on stage showing every phase of scouting with explanations by district commander. Night of showing, boys paraded through town with banners proclaiming the fact that they were going to the Boy Scout Jamboree at the Park.

Fulton Promotes Beery Wires To Local Police on "Madden"

With two local police officers retiring from the Waterloo, Iowa force after 27 years of active service coincident with the opening of "Sergeant Madden" at the Paramount, Manager Bob Fulton arranged for the MGM studios to send each of them a wire from Wallace Berry. These telegrams were delivered to the officers on the day of their retirement at which time, Fulton took them to a local clothing store where he purchased each of them a five gallon hat supposedly donated by Beery. Following this, the men posed for photos which broke in local paper with art and story on the stunt.

Newspaper and Stores Cooperate With Rubin on Easter Egg Hunt

The third annual Easter egg treasure hunt sponsored by the local News-Dispatch, merchants and Harry Rubin at the Tivoli, in Michigan City, Ind., was put over with the theatreman promoting all prizes from cooperating store heads, making up the signs and planting the eggs. Newspaper ran two full page ads in which they plugged Rubin's forthcoming attractions.

Children met at the theatre and marched down the main streets to the park where the hunt began. Each egg had the name of a merchant on it, which when found and presented to the newspaper office entitled child to a gift from that merchant. Rubin says the stunt which is an enormous good-will builder cost him but 39 passes, a banner and purchase of candy Easter eggs.

Tully Ties Local Auto Agency To Parade Campaign for "Dodge"

Local Dodge agency of Biddeford, Maine aided Ralph Tully on his "Dodge City" opening at the Central by running a five column full page ad two days in advance of opening. In addition, agency turned the sales room into "Dodge City" headquarters, displaying stills, signs, etc., etc. Also featured was an auto parade at noon, midafternoon and evening, cards bannered with picture copy and playdates covering entire city. All campaign expense was borne entirely by the agency and so successful was the tiein, reports Tully, that they are willing to repeat when the opportunity presents.

Merchant paid for and imprinted photos of Errol Flynn which were distributed week ahead and decorated store counters with the pictures which were given with each purchase. In addition, full sheet display was planted in main window with prominent title, cast and playdate mention. Also arranged for was the distribution of heralds, entire printing and distribution cost met by merchant's ad on reverse side.

Coates' "Amusement Weekly" Given Guaranteed Distribution

Issued by Manager C. C. Coates at the Elks Theatre, Prescott, Arizona, is the "Amusement Weekly," a four page affair with a circulation of approximately 2400 weekly. 2000 are sufficient to cover the town thoroughly and the other 400 are mailed to the rural districts. Coates reports the cost runs about $30 per each issue for printing and distribution, but the revenue from outside advertising covers cost and ofttimes a small profit.

Mats are used freely, current and forthcoming attractions are plugged and the distribution of the Weekly is handled by the theatre. The town is blocked off into seven sections with a delivery boy responsible for each section. An emergency delivery service is also maintained whereby anyone who fails to receive his copy, may do so simply by calling the theatre and requesting it. A record is kept of all calls of this nature, and each month, a bonus is given to each route boy who hasn't had any calls for his section.

PAST "FORTNIGHT" EXPLOITATIONS

Birthday of Leading Kid Club Celebrated by Pollock with Paper

To help celebrate the fourth anniversary of the local Democrat and Chronicle's Uncle Dan's Birthday Club, Les Pollock, Loew's, in Rochester, put on an early morning show tying in with "The Hardy's Ride High." Uncle Dan joined in the celebration by making it an honest-to-goodness birthday party with games. Paper gave 3,500 lines of gratis space.

The daily also instigated a children's fashion show through cooperation of leading department store. Joan Harding, fashion editor of the paper and commentator for the store's fashion broadcasts, acted as mistress of ceremonies on "what the well dressed child should wear." The revue not only presented fashions, but offered educational tips on overcoming awkwardness, etc., in conjunction with wearing the right type of clothes. Store entered the celebration to the extent of staging the revue, giving theatre a floor display in their children's department and radio plugs on their programs.

Children in the audience participated in games such as pinning the tail on a donkey, pie eating contests, drinking chocolate milk from nippled bottle, dunking doughnut contests, etc., etc., for all of which promoted prizes were awarded.

Williams Offers Street Photos On Unique Bally for "Gunga Din"

Three young men dressed as stars of "Gunga Din" worked the streets of Whiting, Ind., with a shill and photographer as part of Rex Williams' campaign on that picture's opening at the Hoosier Theatre. The stunt, reports the Round Tabler, was a natural bally in itself, but the fact that folks could have their picture taken with the "stars" and receive it as a souvenir made it a stronger draw. Hundreds of these photos mounted in cardboard frames with theatre copy were distributed, and rain or shine, the photographer and his cohorts made the rounds with crowds milling round waiting their chance to have their pictures "took."

Johnson Transforms Theatre Lobby Into Shooting Gallery for "Kid"

Since his circuit has under lease but does not operate a small theatre in the center of the business district of Goshen, Ind., Roy Hanson at the nearby Jefferson opened two of the front doors of the dark house, put up a counter on the sidewalk blocking the entrance and turned the front and lobby into an old fashioned shootin' gallery for "Oklahoma Kid." At 25 feet from the street in the theatre lobby was placed a target, a regular one-sheet backed up with steel. Over Cagney's heart was a three-inch circle and to anyone hitting the circle, guest tickets were awarded. Hanson reports 2,500 shots being taken with only 36 tickets handed out.

Young lad dressed as "The Oklahoma Kid" was in charge, with only one pistol, a 22, used so that he had but to watch one person at a time, thus making the stunt safe. Each person was allowed one shot and the gag was used three days in advance.

BEAUTIFUL LEGS JUDGED IN GEORGIA

The Corrigan influence hit Manager P. E. McCoy at the Georgia Theatre, in Athens, Ga., when he sponsored a beautiful legs contest for "I'm From Missouri" with the co-eds from the University of Georgia gleefully cooperating. Contest was held on street outside the theatre with local police on hand to handle the crowds. Newspapers carried stories, event was plugged at theatre in advance and heralds regarding the contest were distributed at the campus and about town generally. Promoted prizes were awarded and photos of the event run by the local press.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The beautiful legs belonged to mules and the attractive co-eds from the University were the judges.

Scott's Miniature U. P. Train Proves Ace Bally for Date

Month ahead of opening of "Union Pacific," at the Grand, in Columbus, Ga., Manager E. M. Scott prevailed upon a friend of his connected with the local iron works to construct a miniature Union Pacific train. The engine measured four and a half feet in height by seven feet in length and was equipped with a model A Ford motor. In the cabin there was room for the driver and one passenger. Stories were planted in papers building up interest in the stunt.

When completed, the train properly bannered was driven around town for two weeks ahead of opening, making its appearance at the various schools at recess, engineer inviting the kids for a ride. When train was not being driven around, permission was obtained from the police to park it in front of the theatre. Scott reports that such large crowds gathered, it was necessary to move it about to keep folks from blocking traffic. Newspaper photographers were on hand to take pictures which broke in dailies together with featured stories.

Deering's Mothers' Day Tiein Brings Guest Dinners and Show

Mother's Day was promoted with the Houston, Texas, Press by Francis Deering, at Loew's readers invited to write letters on "what my mother means to me" and mail them to the contest editor. One hundred top letter writers were chosen, winners invited with their mothers to attend a dinner party at cooperating restaurant and later attend a theatre party at Loew's.

Each day, newspaper ran a certain number of letters until the entire 100 had been printed, the publicity starting three weeks ahead. Generous treatment of the tiein by the daily featured page one breaks over the entire period.

Local Scouts Take Over Theatre On Shannon's Serial Campaign

Under the guidance of Chuck Shannon, Belmar Theatre, Pittsburgh, the local Eagle Scout was selected to fill the post of manager for a day at the opening "Scouts to the Rescue." At the end of the first show, several of the scouts acted as ushers to insure the safety of the children leaving the theatre. Contest was planted in local newspaper, wherein contestants were required to identify the old Indian symbols and the present day ones.

Arrangements were made with the District Commissioner to have a first aid demonstration by one of the troops from the stage opening day. Incidentally, at the end of the demonstration, Shannon was presented with a Scout pin and made an honorary member in Troop 24 of his community. Entire troop paraded to the theatre carrying banners announcing the opening of the serial and for his special lobby display, Shannon secured a complete set-up of camp equipment, covering everything from pup tents to eating utensils. In the background was draped the American and Troop flags and to the left hung the Scout Law or Oath carved out of wood. Also featured was a display of various rope knots.

Rouda "Vanishes" His Own Lady On Magic Stunt in Store Window

Since the plot of "The Lady Vanishes" introduces a magician, H. M. Rouda, Roseland, Chicago, engaged the services of one to stage a vanishing act in the window of one of the leading local furniture stores. As most of the picture action takes place in a train, the magic man constructed a small coach 30 inches high, 18 inches wide by 30 long, into which a young lady was placed. After the usual hocus-pocus, and sticking swords through the car windows and roof, the doors were opened and the lady had vanished.

The exhibit was given at 15-minute intervals, afternoon and evening three days previous to opening and Rouda reports the crowds fought for ringside seats to see the stunt which whetted their appetites sufficiently to induce them to deposit their money at the box-office.

Johnson Seeks Popular Girl Student As Top Stunt for "Ice Follies" Date

Search for the most popular girl in local high school was instituted for "Ice Follies" by Hobson S. Johnson at the Pal, in Millen, Ga. Cooperating newspaper ran stories to the effect that all attending show on a certain night would receive ballots with the names of the girls in the junior and senior classes. Window cards were planted in cooperating merchants' stores, and tied on light and telegraph poles ten days in advance, announcements were made in schools and free readers planted in paper. Superintendent of Schools made the announcement of the winners on stage, making presentation of gifts promoted by Johnson and much good-will was engendered since the Round Tabler gave a small percentage of the receipts to the senior class fund.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Col.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as offically given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

an event of WORLD importance!

To many millions of radio listeners the night of June 26 will be a memorable one.

A thrilling page in radio history will be written when the famous Magic Key of RCA for the first time devotes its full hour to one entertainment theme—Irving Berlin's SECOND FIDDLE!

That night marks a change in the Magic Key schedule from Sunday afternoon to Monday at 8:30 to 9:30 P. M., EDST. Because an outstanding program was needed to change overnight the dialing habits of countless listeners, RCA drew upon the overflowing entertainment richness of SECOND FIDDLE.

Exhibitors alert to the latest in showmanship will do well to tune in. Every amazing feat of air-wave wizardry will be employed to make the SECOND FIDDLE broadcast one of radio's most breathlessly exciting events . . . an unprecedented advance build-up for the picture!

Make a note of it!

NEW VISTAS

PRODUCTION is on the high road to adventure, tossing away precedents of four decades of the screen, to take for the camera whatever may strike the picture maker's fancy. The programs of Hollywood for the coming season are laden with picture materials that only yesterday would have been called fantastically impossible.

Fresh upon your editor as this is written in the flower-bowered Ambassador, scene of the Paramount Picture Corporation sales convention, closed within the hour, is the announcement that it is to make such whimsies as "Dr. Cyclops," a matter of strange effects to be had from processes and montages, and a full length cartoon narrative of "Gulliver's Travels."

Departures, in other directions but as definitely departures, are indicated by such materials as Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," currently playing, and its "On Borrowed Time," yet to be disclosed.

The liberation of the screen from the literal has been a long time coming, it seems to many of its impatient critics, but in point of fact has been coming rapidly indeed as time runs in the progress of the arts.

Fantasy flamed up in the years of the screen's beginnings, in such products as M. George Melies' "Trip to the Moon," his stop motion comedies, the Edison-Porter "Goldylocks and the Teddy Bears." But fantasy lost ground again as the camera learned to tell the heart throb and love stories which pleased the most people the most of the time, through the developmental years, developing both the art and its audience.

HE-AND-SHE will always be the staple subject of the screen, as it is of all the popular arts, but the time has come at last when the makers of the movies are experimenting with the idea that there may be a profitable audience that now and then can be concerned with something else. That will not be at any time a majority, but we are in the beginnings of a period in which Hollywood, by the force of many pressures, will be setting about serving some sizeable minorities as soon as they can be identified and located.

This change of approach by production will involve changes not only in materials but also in social viewpoints, in techniques, in all that bears upon the process of telling.

Inescapably this is also to bring to exhibition and the theatres new problems. More than ever before will it be necessary for the exhibitor to know all about his merchandise. Old formulae of presentation will not be found always fitting the new product to come. Again how the picture is sold will be counting often as much as what the picture is. That means, too, that more selling will have to be done, all the way from studio to box office.

NOW IS ALWAYS THE TIME

IT has long been considered by most showmen that the best place to sell a seat is at the box office. Of late the motion picture industry in its advertising has been straying a bit off the pattern, seeking wholesale one-shot selling jobs. So there will be interested approval in the region of the theatres in the announcement of Paramount through Mr. Robert M. Gillham, that preponderantly its expenditures will be in the newspapers. The newspaper advertising can be and commonly is point of sale advertising, and also point-of-time. When-and-where has to mean here-and-now to the picture consumer, to get the quarter that is in his pocket today.

PERFORMANCE DECIDES

CONCERNING a quest of the British Broadcasting Corporation for American short subjects for television, Mr. E. T. Carr is quoted: "I am opposed to giving any aid to television which would make it a stronger competitor for London theatres than it already is."

Mr. Carr is United Artists' joint managing director in England, and a member of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America television committee. He would give television only films "so old that everyone must have seen them already."

While appreciating Mr. Carr's film patriotism, it must be realized that the arts and sciences have a way of making their own way, regardless.

Television will, like all men and the things they make, work its will according to its strength, which is to say public demand.

At the moment one may recall the 1912 assertion of Mr. William A. Brady, stage exponent, that "we have the movies on the run." In 1914 the movies had Mr. Brady on the payroll.

THE newspapers are enjoying considerably the astronomical figures of the statistics in Mr. Will Hays' latest opus entitled "Film Facts," and most especially they like to print that the industry's annual payroll is $368,560,000. It's a nice figure, but we'd also like to see the annual expense account.

IT IS THE "KNOW HOW"

THE observation of Mr. Cresswell O'Reilly, chief censor for Australia, that eliminations from British pictures are "still nearly double" the percentage from American pictures, brings to mind the fact that British production has available, abundantly and with welcome, access to the cooperation of the American Production Code and its machinery of operation. Decency is not patented.

Commenting, Today's Cinema of London says: "The Australian censor complains of lack of imagination in last year's pictures. Has he considered that this might be due to a 'safety first' policy forced upon producers by over-severe censorship in the past?"

Has Today's Cinema considered that adequate powers of imagination in production, or other creative communication, have ever been able to tell the story, despite limitations on the medium?

The world's best pictures are rarely censored.

This Week

Trade Practice Week

This was trade practice week in the motion picture industry. Focussed on the national convention of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, in Minneapolis, the attention of the film world was occupied with a study of the final draft of the trade practice program on which a ballot of exhibitor interests, affiliated and independent, was to be taken at that meeting. The final draft incorporates the new arbitration clause which was released in New York several weeks ago together with changes in other clauses demanded by exhibitors and urged by industry lawyers. It is the fourth to be written since the negotiations between distributors and exhibitors began last year, and it carries the promise of most of the major interests on the distribution side to abide by it. Twenty-four exhibitor leaders told the HERALD they felt that the draft should be given a "fair trial."

The story of the completion of the draft is on page 13, the complete text starts on page 27, exhibitor opinion as expressed in telegrams starts on page 13, and on page 28 is an explanation of the arbitration provisions. The Minneapolis meeting is reported on page 16.

Disappointment

Tentative concessions made by Sir John Simon, British chancellor of the exchequer in that section of the new budget dealing with film import and excise taxes were "utterly disappointing" to heads of newsreel companies who have contended that enforcement of the levies would force them out of business. Under the new provisions it is estimated the newsreel companies would pay an aggregate tax of approximately $425,000 annually.

The amendments provide a rebate of three pence per square foot on stock used for newsreel prints. Imported single prints not used for duplicating will pay two pence instead of six pence. Several negatives for color film will count as one negative.

Sir Gordon Craig, executive director of British Movietone News said newsreel profits were still impossible under the amended budget.

"It Can't Happen Here"

The New York Times, in a Hollywood dispatch from Douglas W. Churchill, dated June 9th, says:

"'It Can't Happen Here,' Sinclair Lewis's novel on an American dictatorship, has again been shelved by Metro. While no official explanation was offered by the studio, the action was attributed to the reported disinterest of the customers in propaganda films."

Signs and Marquees

A committee representing 769 film houses in New York City met with the City Planning Commission this week to oppose enactment of the proposed regulation and elimination, in some cases, of electrical signs, marquees and other outdoor advertising. Joining in the protest were legitimate theatres.

Total assessment of the houses is $221,955,000 with $6,333,221 in realty taxes paid annually in addition to many other taxes.

Theatres in New York pay approximately $2,250,000 annually for current for electric signs and the total maintenance cost is approximately $5,500,000.

Present were Senator Henry Walters, John O'Connor, RKO Theatres; C. C. Moskowitz, Loew's; Harry Brandt, Independent Theatre Owners Association; Louis Frisch, Randforce Amusement, and Thomas Lamb, architect. James F. O'Reilly, executive secretary of the League of New York Theatres, and Milton Weinberger, League attorney, represented the legitimate stage.

"Spy" to Russia

Russians may see "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," if the deal reported between Warner Brothers and the Russian Government's American agency, Amkino, becomes concrete. The agency has asked Warners to ship a print to Russia for perusal by high officials there.

If the deal becomes official, it will be the first time in several years that Russia has imported an American film. The Russians buy the negative, and make positives in their own country.

"Young Mr. Lincoln," Twentieth Century Fox's opus, is also considered a "good bet" by Amkino, which is reported recommending its purchase by Moscow.

Federal Judge Vincent Leibell was shown "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" at the Warner offices in New York Tuesday, to enable him to decide upon the application of Fritz Kuhn for a temporary injunction pending trial of his $5,000,000 damage suit.

For Fight Films

A bill proposing the repeal of the 1912 Federal law prohibiting interstate shipment of fight films, was passed on Tuesday by the United States Senate, without debate. The bill is sponsored by Senator Warren Barbour of New Jersey. In hearings before the bill was submitted to the Senate, various figures, including ex-prize fighter Jack Dempsey, and Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, called the law unfair, out-dated, and a peril to the telecasting of boxing matches.

Newsworthy

The fight in Hollywood courts between the rebellious members of the Local 37, technicians' union, and the international officers of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands and Employes, took a briefly newsworthy turn last week when an attempt was made to bring in the name of Harry Bridges, West Coast CIO leader, who often has been accused of Communism. It was brought out that Bridges' name appeared several times in the records of the meetings of the local board of directors.

The suit, which has been instituted for control of the union, by deposed officers of the local against the international officers of the IATSE, has uncovered the following facts, among many:

That the membership of Local 37 reached 6,200 paid members, under international supervision, according to testimony of Lew Blix, the local's secretary.

That in 1938, when autonomy was partly restored by the IATSE to the local, there was $110,000 in the treasury, also according to Mr. Blix.

That more than 60 per cent of the membership had voted for home rule in collective bargaining, rather than international representation, according to testimony of W. C. Graves, certified public accountant.

Telephone Report

The Federal Communications Commission this week submitted its final report on its $150,000 investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, more than four years after the inquiry was initiated. Largely a re-write of the 1200-page "proposed report" written by Commissioner Paul A. Walker, in charge of the investigation, which was made public April 1, 1938, after the most vital parts had "leaked" out of the commission, the document sent to Congress as the commission's final effort was a 916-page review of the history, development, magnitude and operating practices of the telephone industry and its ramifications, including those in the motion picture business.

So far as the motion picture and radio fields were involved, the major recommendations of the commission were that the Bell System be required to license all comers to use its patents, on reasonable terms, so long as they did not interfere with its communication service, and that the Communications Act of 1934 be amended to give the FCC, among other things, greater authority over the telephone company's charges, practices, regulations, etc., with respect to wire lines furnished for chain broadcasting. The report referred at length to the company's sound motion picture activities and said, "It might be said in this connection that circumstances forced the Bell System into the sound motion picture field, due to the failure of outside promotors to carry on in accordance with their commitments." The company resumed its status as licensor as soon as possible, or as soon as the sound motion picture industry was firmly established, it was pointed out.

WPA Theatre Dropped

The appropriations committee, reporting the relief appropriations bill to the House of Representatives on Wednesday, ordered the abandonment of the Federal Theatre project and refused to make any provisions for activities of the United States Film Service. The film service had asked the committee for $335,840 for the coming fiscal year. With this money it was planned to put the service on a permanent basis, with Pare Lorentz as director at $10,000 a year and with a chief of production, motion picture director, and director of photography each receiving $9,000 annually.

It was disclosed during hearings on the bill that the Film Service is engaged in the production of a picture on industrial America to cost $165,000 and a picture on public health to cost between $50,000 and $75,000. "The River" cost about $60,000 to produce and "The Plow that Broke the Plains" cost $20,000.

Thomson Talks

Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors' Guild, in New York to attend the television jurisdiction meetings of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent union of the entertainment industry unions, told trade press reporters that the Screen Actors' Guild is opposed to any move by Actors' Equity to claim jurisdiction in the television field; that it opposed the "one big union" idea, so long advanced by advocates of economy; that licensing agreements with actors' agents were near completion and would be signed soon; that his organization favored strengthening of the "4-A's" along specific, but different lines than "one big union"; that the proposed reduction of the Screen Actors' Guild extra ranks to some 3,500 would be accomplished before the year's end; and that the dissension within the screen actors' unit caused by some extras had been eliminated.

Japanese Hold Mayell

British authorities in Tientsin, China, this week were trying to effect the release of Eric Mayell, Fox Movietone newsreel photographer, from the Japanese, whose sentries had arrested him as he attempted to photograph Japanese soldiers searching civilians entering and leaving the British concession in that city, the United Press reported. The Japanese had blockaded the concession.

Mr. Mayell is still a British subject, but will shortly become an American citizen. He will be remembered as one of the newsreel men aboard the American coastal ship Panay, when it was sunk by Japanese planes near Nanking on Dec. 12, 1937.

Television Holdout

The caution with which the motion picture industry regards its possible rival, television, took tentative form this week. The National Broadcasting Company, engaged in extensive search for program material to supply its television broadcasting outlet, complained bitterly that motion picture companies were refusing to allow current, worthwhile film product to be used and were demanding too high rates even for old material. To supply needed motion picture product the broadcasters were reported turning to 16 mm. film. One of the first protests against motion picture cooperation with the new medium, from Allied States Association of New Jersey, was answered by George Schaefer, president of RKO, with the statement that his company had not supplied prints of "Gunga Din" to be televised as had been charged, but only a trailer advertising the picture.

These and other developments are detailed on page 60.

Radio Censorship Hit

Troubles of the Federal Communications Commission at Washington over its recent orders that international broadcasting stations must radiate only messages of good will piled up this week with an attack upon the order by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem., Mont.), chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, to which the commission must go for all legislation.

Bringing the matter to the floor of the House Monday, Senator Wheeler declared that, under the order, the FCC could order even a Senator off the air if it was held that the address he was to make did not meet with its definition of "culture."

"This is a form of censorship which Congress never contemplated when it passed the law," he asserted. "On the contrary, it was specifically provided there should be no censorship."

"If the rule is upheld," he said, "Congress should pass legislation more stringently prohibiting censorship."

Senator Hiram Johnson (Rep., Cal.) joined with Senator Wheeler in criticism of the rule, declaring that "we want no censorship of any sort in this country."

Copyright Change

The committee which has been working on a revision of the Copyright Act of 1909, representing film and radio interests, among others, has sent notice to Senator Elbert D. Thomas that its revisions and suggestions for change, after a year of work, are nearing completion.

A final and completed draft of the plan is expected in the near future.

"Land of Liberty"

THE history of the United States, source during the motion picture industry's years of an uncounted multitude of hard riding adventures and epic romances for the entertainment of the screen's millions, has been synthesized and given a broadly patriotic thread of continuity in a fourteen reel picture, created entirely from sequences edited from more than a hundred features, short subjects, newsreels and documentaries out of the industry's vaults. The film, completed this week after months of viewing, editing and cutting and titled "Land of Liberty" is to be shown daily without admission charge in the Federal Hall at the New York World's Fair and at the San Francisco Exposition.

The project began as a contribution of the organized industry to the two Fairs and was sponsored by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America whose secretary, Carl E. Milliken, suggested the idea. Before actual work began Arthur DeBra of the MPPDA office examined more than 2,000,000 feet of film to select suitable material. The selections, taken from 115 different features and shorts, represent the product of virtually every company in the industry. Cecil B. DeMille supervised the ediiting, assisted by Herbert L. Moulton, William H. Pine and Francis S. Pine. James T. Shotwell of Columbia University was historical consultant.

The film opened Wednesday at the New York Fair where it was shown to an invited audience of distinguished guests. It is reviewed on page 50.

FINAL TRADE PROGRAM REACHES EXHIBITORS

Trade Practice Clauses Won't Be Changed, Say Majors; Arbitration Plan Subject to Suggestions for Improvement

The motion picture industry's trade practice program for self-regulation of distribution-exhibition has been completed. (The official text starts page 27.)

Leaders of exhibitor organizations the country over started to receive printed copies of the final draft on Tuesday morning. Mailing started Monday afternoon from the Broadway Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offices of the majors' negotiating committee chairman, William F. Rodgers.

As for Changes

The agreement as forwarded is the fourth to be written since distributor and exhibitor representatives started negotiations to establish "fair trade practices," last August. It will not be changed, the majors say, because, in their words, it represents everything they can give. Rather than enlarge the provisions of the code, the companies "will of necessity have to take our chance on legislation." The pact, however, is subject to Department of Justice approval.

With the arbitration agreement accompanying the code, the arbitration system to be used for adjudicating disputes under the code, the situation differs. Whereas the code, as mentioned, has gone through ten months of negotiations, conferences and bargaining between distributor and exhibitor representatives, the arbitration pact only made its appearance on May 25th, when arbitration copies were first sent to the owners.

Conceding that the arbitration system as set up is not perfect, the majors are willing to listen to recommendations for changes. That changes will be made is certain, as witness official expressions already being received from exhibitor organizations, demanding, for the most part, stronger representation for independents on the arbitration boards. Expressions from 24 exhibitor leaders appear in the adjoining columns and succeeding pages.

Gather at Minneapolis

In the first public mass attention given the new code by organized exhibition, owners from both sides—affiliated and independent, MPTOA and Allied, gathered this week in Minneapolis for a "secret ballot" on acceptance or rejection. (See page 16.)

The principal difference between the trade practice pact as finally written and the third revised form, of March 30th, is in phraseology, although some additional clauses were inserted and a few were eliminated at the request of various exhibitor groups. Quite evident is the reduction of legal phraseology which exhibitors claimed burdened the previous forms and made a lot of their meanings vague.

The agreement is effective immediately for those who want it, is retroactive on all 1939-40 contracts already signed, and is to remain in force two years, in somewhat of a test. After the given period both sides will in all probability have recommendations for changes to effect even smoother relations between distributors and exhibitors in their contractual relations and between exhibitors in their competitive relations, the two basic reasons for the code.

Stressing the need for Governmental approval

Majority of Exhibitor Leaders So Far Favor "Fair Trial" for Trade Programs

With the national Motion Picture Theatre Owners' organization committed in favor of the new trade practice program,—its president, Edward L. Kuykendall, urging all to "enter wholeheartedly in the program,"—and the national Allied States Association determining its attitude this week through a "secret ballot" at its national convention in Minneapolis (see page 16), state exhibitor organizations, collectively and individually through their leaders started this week to give official opinions on acceptance or rejection of the new code and the arbitration agreement which goes with it.

Little time is being lost in formulating official exhibitor attitudes toward the pact following the sending, by the majors, of the completed draft of the new arbitration agreement to exhibitors, on May 25th, and the sending of the final trade practice draft Monday. Of a score or more of opinions obtained this week, the majority have a generally receptive attitude, based, for the most part, on a desire to give the code a fair chance. Many, however, demand changes in the personnel construction of arbitration boards.

The majors believe that their code of self-regulation will receive the acceptance of most exhibitors, and are prepared to win adoption by individual owners, even "if we have to go out personally and canvass every theatre owner," getting signatures through the sales staffs in the field.

Moore Reports Yes Vote in Southeast

The Southeastern Theatre Owners Association of exhibitors in Florida, Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee stand fully in accord on the trade program, Milton C. Moore, president, reported from his headquarters in Jacksonville, this week. (See page 29)

Chicago Exhibitors Favor Arbitration

The arbitration provision of the code may "not be a panacea for all the ills of the industry" but it does represent "substantial progress," Morris G. Leonard, president of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago, said this week, and added, "It is sufficient proof that the forum for adjusting industry problems is within the industry, as opposed to governmental agencies and regulation by same."

Arkansas Expects More Concessions

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas anticipate more concessions later, but believe the present move is "a move in the right direction." The above comment was made by R. X. Williams, Jr., president of the organization, who termed the managers' new arbitration agreement "not entirely what the exhibitors want" and declared "the success of the present arbitration depends entirely on the personnel of the arbitration board."

Lazarus Wants Federal Arbitration System

The government should supervise arbitration and the present system, as defined by the code, is not enough, said Henry Lazarus, president of the Allied Theatre Owners of Louisiana. The industry "needs" an arbitration system under the government, Mr. Lazarus said.

Carolina Exhibitors Would Rather Have Conciliation

The Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, through Lyle M. Wilson, their president, this week declared that they have "always been in favor of conciliation rather than arbitration."

"We withhold our opinion on the new arbitration agreement until the complete and final drafts," Mr. Wilson wired.

"Michigan Allied Optimistic": Branch

Ray Branch, president of the Allied Theatre Owners of Michigan, said early this week that the final rules of arbitration were not known to the organization, but that, inasmuch as Allied of Michigan had had a member serving in the negotiations with the majors, it "obviously" was in sympathy with the program, would "welcome the adoption of a fair trade practice program," and did "hope that something practical can be accomplished."

However, Edward E. Kirschner, an Allied leader of the same state, added that he

(which approval need not necessarily concern the Government's trust suits against the majors), Mr. Rodgers, speaking officially for the committee, in a letter accompanying the code to exhibitor leaders, advised them: "The enclosed draft resulted from conferences had between the distributors and the various exhibitor groups representing most of the theatre operators throughout the country, and it is understood that any final agreement with respect thereto is subject to the approval of the Department of Justice; again we renew our previous suggestion that a joint conference be held with the Department at the earliest possible date for the purpose of obtaining its approval of these trade practice proposals and considering the methods of putting them into effect. Following the same course as before (with the three previous revised forms), we are sending a copy of this letter and enclosure to the Department in accordance with assurances of counsel that the Department would be kept informed of the results of our industry conferences."

Seven Committed to Adherence

Seven of the eight majors are committed to adherence to the agreement, Columbia, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, Radio-Keith-Orpheum, Twentieth Century-Fox, Universal and Warners being included, and United Artists, excluded.

"This is the first full and complete plan of arbitration submitted to the industry," said Tyree Dillard, MGM legal representative on the negotiating committee. "After much discussion, it comes as near being complete as anyone can make it."

Among the few more or less minor changes from the March 30th form of the trade practice proposals is the following addition to the provision on allocation of features:

"After the notice of price allocation of a feature for a particular theatre has been given by a distributor to an exhibitor, such price allocation shall not be changed for such theatre except by mutual agreement between the distributor and the exhibitor."

Other Changes

Study of the completed draft, starting on page 27, this issue, discloses that other changes include the complete rewriting of the section governing arbitration of disputes arising out of license agreement performance, the substitution of a new section, No. 15, "Agreement to Arbitrate," additional expansion of the clause covering the agreement's term and additional changes in arbitration regulations.

In the clause pertaining to arbitration awards for non-performance of a license agreement, the addition provides that if the distributor has arbitrarily and wilfully withheld a feature, or violated "run" or clearance, the exhibitor can collect damages in excess of the liquidated damages provided in the license agreement.

Another added provision states: "Each signatory who carries on business in a jurisdiction where arbitration awards cannot be made legally effective, covenants that he will nevertheless abide by and perform in good faith any award that may be made hereunder or under said rules of arbitration."

The distributors are pledged to obtain the full cooperation of affiliated circuits or theatres in which they are interested, but over which they have no control. Exhibitor groups signing the code likewise are pledged to endeavor to secure the cooperation of all members and theatres operating in their areas.

The distributor involved in an arbitration award on overbuying is made bound by the decision.

Disputes relating to overbuying are kept on a two-party basis, with no right to the distributor to name an arbitrator. Disputes involving clearance are kept on a three-party basis, with the distributors, as a group, entitled to name an arbitrator in addition to the opposing exhibitors.

Cancellation Privilege

Answering the proponents of federal legislation to outlaw block and blind selling, as now proposed by Senator Neely in Congress, the code, while not abolishing the block booking practice, does give certain freedom to exhibitors to exclude, without the loss of rentals, those features offensive on moral, religious or racial grounds, and to exercise a limited choice of the features offered him.

Under the commercial privilege of exclusion, the code would give exhibitors the right to exclude from 10 per cent for the larger houses to 20 per cent for the smaller of the total number of features contracted for, without payment of the license fees involved. Special substitution privileges are given. The code would also make provision to meet other complaints of the exhibitors, particularly the smaller ones, was for arbitration if it were "fair to both sides." He continued: "Arbitration boards should have discretion similar to that of courts to decide cases on their merits, instead of strictly following rules of contracts, and there should be a reasonable amount of leeway for handling all cases."

Northern California Owners Vote This Week

The Independent Theatre Owners of Northern California will render an opinion on arbitration this week, reported the president of the organization, H. V. Harvey.

Galston Endorses Boards With Only Film Members

Albert Galston, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California and Arizona, claims the arbitration boards should contain only film men; no laymen; and especially, no attorneys. He pointed at the "success" of the local arbitration board, which comprises only film men.

Cincinnati Exhibitors Like Trade Code Idea

In Cincinnati, Harold Bernstein, president of the Greater Cincinnati Motion Picture Theatre Owners, endorsed the new code, "provided" that it is not "simply" a contract enforcement plan.

Maurice White, president of United Theatres, favored the code and arbitration, provided "the right people" were back of them, and said he favored self regulation for the industry.

Willis Vance, an independent, also endorsed the trade practice program.

Wood of Ohio Backs Myers' Code Opinions

P. J. ("Pete") Wood, general manager of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, wired this week that "our opinion of the new arbitration agreement coincides with that of Mr. Myers," general counsel of the National Allied States Association.

Oklahomans Rumored To Favor Conciliation

Though full discussion of the code and its arbitration provisions will not be held until the convention on June 26 and June 27, there is some sentiment favorable to conciliation rather than arbitration among the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, according to Mr. Loewenstein, president of the organization. He then said: "The general opinion is that the trade practice agreement is a good beginning for a broader understanding without resort to governmental regulation, so actively sponsored by some, and which would endanger the entire industry. Leading exhibitors here are unalterably opposed to the Neely Bill."

Oklahoma Allied Said To Veto Arbitration

The Allied Theatre Owners of Oklahoma organizing committee last week instructed its delegates to the Allied Minneapolis national convention this week, to vote "No" on the arbitration rules of the trade code.

Wehrenberg Will Call Mass Meeting To Vote

Fred Wehrenberg, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, said this week that he was sending each exhibitor member a copy of the new arbitration proposal; and would call a mass meeting to find out organization sentiment, when the exhibitors had had time to study the rules.

MPTO of Virginia Reserves Decision

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia, in convention this week, in Roanoke, decided not to accept the code until after further study of it in completed alleging that the distributors discriminate in favor of circuit theatre managements.

PLAYING TIME DESIGNATION LIMITED

Each distributor shall make a general trade announcement, which is not binding, about the features completed or in production for each season. If the exhibitor wishes to license an unbooked feature for which there is exceptional public demand the distributor will offer the feature together with such a lesser number of features as may be agreed upon or as may be determined by arbitration.

The distributor will not exercise the right to designate features for preferred playing time where the license fee is a flat rental or a flat guarantee. If an exhibitor claims a feature designated for preferred playing time is unsuitable the question, if seven days' notice is given, is to be decided by agreement or arbitration, unless the distributor defaults by failing to reject the claim; if held unsuitable, the distributor may change the designation or substitute another feature.

Other subjects of arbitration shall include performance of license agreements, disputes over clearance of a feature from a theatre, disputes over overbuying but not license fees and other terms and conditions.

All distributor, exhibitor and organized group signatories, when signing adoption of the code, "bind themselves to the observance of the principles, policies and practices set forth herein (in the agreement) in the licensing, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures in continental United States." Canadian markets are not included, of course.

Specifically, the trade practice code embraces 17 clauses:

1. Exclusion Privilege, of from 10 per cent on rentals in excess of $250 to 20 per cent on rentals not exceeding $100.

2. Trade Announcement, to be made generally by the distributor at or prior to the beginning of each new season, giving such information as it may be practicable to give of all features completed or actually in production then intended for release during such season.

3. Public Demand for Exceptional Feature, whereby the distributor under certain conditions, gives to an exhibitor the opportunity to license for a run features having such an exceptional and outstanding appeal as to create a natural and spontaneous public demand.

4. Preferred Playing Time, governing preferred playdate concessions, both on flat rentals and guarantees, and embracing features unsuitable for preferred playing time.

5. Some Run Available, intended to meet objections of certain exhibitors to so-called "exclusive selling" to their competitors.

6. Regular Customer, by which the distributor agrees not to sell away from a regular exhibitor customer to a circuit operating in competition.

7. Short Subjects, Newsreels, assuring that shorts and newsreels shall not be forced with the sale of features; likewise, trailers, serials, reissues, westerns or foreign features.

8. Score Charges, providing for the consolidation of score charges with flat rentals on such sales; there shall be no separate score charges.

9. Allocation of Features, concerning distributors' notification to exhibitors of the price allocation within 14 days after national release.

10. Form of License Agreement, whereby each distributor will use its best efforts to simplify its respective form of license agreement.

11. Selective License Agreement, requiring exhibitor to notify of selection of pictures within 21 days, where exhibitor has such form of agreement.

12. Playing Features in the Order of Release, providing conditions for exhibitor playing pictures in order of release and distributor not withholding subsequent releases when an exhibitor has not played previous release.

13. Coercing Contracts, whereby distributor agrees not to coerce or intimidate an exhibitor to enter into any license agreement by threatening to build or otherwise acquire a theatre in competition.

14. Other Subjects of Arbitration, listing specific subjects to which arbitration shall apply, including, besides most of the clauses already mentioned, (a) Clearance, (b) Overbuying, license fees, etc.

15. Agreement to Arbitrate, setting forth the agreement.

16. Effective Date, from January 1, 1939.

17. Term, running for two exhibition season, commencing with 1939-40.

form. A board of director's meeting declared that the code in present completed form did not appear to be as originally promised.

Gold of Jersey Allied Criticizes Arbitration

George Gold, president of the Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey said that the rules of arbitration in the revised code are "fair," but were also faulty "in providing in disputes relating to clearance that affiliated theatre and distributor each appoint one arbitrator," and added:

"The complaining exhibitor thus must convince the two neutral arbitrators for a decision in his favor; whereas the affiliated exhibitor and distributor need convince only one of the neutral arbitrators."

Code "Helpful," Says Hayman of New York

Belief that the code as it is is "better than" no code at all, was the gist of the message of A. C. Hayman, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, western zone, who stated:

"Our organization is in favor of the arbitration agreement, but we feel there is room for improvement. However, it is better than what we are operating under today. We feel that the producers are sincere and if sincerity of purpose exists, the evils, if any, will be removed."

Northwest Operators Impressed By Code

Members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the Northwest were reported "favorably influenced" by the trade proposals, according to their president, L. O. Lukan, who also pleaded lack of time to make a "proper study." Mr. Lukan did see, however, "great benefits to the entire industry" if the code "is finally adopted in suitable form."

Hyman: "New Plan Goes a Long Way"

The present plan "goes a long way" towards appeasement and "we should start with it," in the words of S. J. Hyman, president of the West Virginia Managers' Association, who added that "there will always be some differences to be ironed out, but the will to work in harmony is all we need in the future."

KMTA Praised Majors For Code's Creation

The 21st annual convention of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association, in Kansas City, several weeks ago, declined to officially approve the code, as it was then. However, it did resolve that "the KMTA commends the major companies in attempting to work out a fair trade practice code."

"A Commendable Attempt," Says John Wolfberg

John Wolfberg, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, Kansas City, Mo., said that the program is "a commendable attempt to solve some of the differences between distributor and exhibitor." He added, however, "Promises, like new-product announcements, are not always fulfilled. The time for comment is a year from today."

ITOA of New York Liked Trade Code

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York were the first exhibitors' organization to make public notice of their opinion on the code. Harry Brandt, organization president, announced acceptance "with reservations" some weeks ago at an organization meeting in the Hotel Astor, New York City. He said at the time that the arbitration procedure should give more representation to the independent exhibitor.

ALLIED DEBATE BOILS OVER AT LAUNCHING OF CODE

New Final Draft Hotly Attacked By Steffes at Minneapolis Convention After Rodgers' 8,000-Word Discussion of Pact

by TERRY RAMSAYE

in Minneapolis

As of midweek the Allied States Association convention was in a turmoil of controversy over the presentation of the trade practice code offered by the majors with what appeared to be an excellent probability that the proffered program would be rejected and that the controversy would be continued indefinitely—forever.

The opening day of Allied's convention, Tuesday, was occupied by a reading of the last, near to next, almost final draft of the trade practice program by Sidney Samuelson, former national Allied president, and an analytical discussion of its clauses, clause by clause, by Nathan Yamins, former Allied national president, Fall River exhibitor and, incidentally, a lawyer with a Harvard degree.

Heat and More Heat

A heated Wednesday session was leading up to a more heated Thursday session with a dozen conferences in a dozen suites laboring through the night in preparation.

Definitive action was promised for late Thursday, with the largest probability that no such action could be taken.

There were questions whether or not the convention delegates could pass on the issues, whether the Allied board could pass on them, or whether the members, so many not being in attendance, should be polled.

Six Men in a Boat

The most picturesque of the suggestions came from Al Steffes, Allied leader these many years, and now president of the Northwest Allied, that each side, Allied and the majors, should each put three men in a boat and set the six of them adrift, then send the Coast Guard for an answer, or set up a new crew.

The close of the Wednesday session, being what it was, it was expected that William F. Rodgers of MGM on Thursday would take the floor for a "Custer's last stand" in behalf of the majors' contention.

Meanwhile overnight the convention had this to consider from Mr. Rodgers:

> "From the majority of theatre owners' organizations the consensus of opinion is that they want the code. Our only problem now is to find the legal machinery for its adoption. . . . We hope that Allied will join. . . .

Abram F. Myers and W. A. Steffes

> "Allied as such, important as they may be, will not deter us from our plan of procedure and, with or without Allied, we are going forward. . . ."

Mr. Rodgers' projected Thursday program on a "last stand" was a sequel to his appearance of Wednesday when he shared the floor and the program with such emphatic figures as Gradwell L. Sears of Warners, from the dais and, theatrically, from the floor, Mr. Steffes and Mr. Yamins.

The best shindy of the day was between Mr. Steffes and Mr. Sears in a superheated discussion of trade practices in the Minneapolis territory, including the charge by Mr. Steffes that the trade practice code was being abundantly violated.

Among those who were to be heard Thursday were Neil Agnew, Austin Keough and William Scully.

Tenth Anniversary Setting

Allied States Association's tenth anniversary convention, in Minneapolis this week, coincided with the tenth anniversary of intermittent attempts by the large companies to effect a program of trade practices to regulate relations between distributors and their exhibitor customers, and among competitive exhibitors.

'Twas on December 10, 1929, that representatives of the producers, distributors and exhibitors met at the Union League Club in New York in a session out of which grew the famous "5-5-5" conferences, which in turn, early in 1930, following negotiations in New York and Atlantic City, resulted in "a new standard exhibition contract, designed to eradicate various problems and disagreements between distributors and exhibitors and to promote more harmonious and workable relations between these two branches of the industry."

The majors completed their program of concessions to exhibitors on Monday afternoon in New York, and on Tuesday morning Allied States, anticipating that completion, assembled in Minneapolis' Nicollet Hotel to dissect, on the open floor, the document for self-regulation which had just been presented to exhibitors of all or no affiliations.

Boiling Arguments

The convention, under the aegis of William Alvin Steffes, convention manager and "war horse" of Allied, had arguments boiling over the code, for and against.

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the prime worker among the distributors for the document, told, in 8,000 words, the reasons for favoring it.

Mr. Steffes, for Allied, attacked.

Then came, for or against, Abe Montague, of Columbia Pictures, voting yes; Col. Henry Albert Cole, Allied president, citing Allied's legislative efforts; Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, insisting upon the "strict neutrality" of personnel of arbitration boards under the code; Nathan Yamins, Allied of New England, former Allied national president, voting "no," against the code; Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager of Warner Brothers, taking a strong stand in behalf of the measure; Harry Brandt, heading the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, accepting the code as "the best that could be done at the present time."

Other Opinions, Too

There were other opinions, many for, many against.

It appeared at the very outset that the document would not receive a favorable vote from the floor, and, as if in anticipation, Mr. Rodgers told the convention before its scheduled "secret ballot": "I do not believe that the proposed plan of voting on the code will be of any material benefit, either for or against, because you do not have the number of people qualified to register a national choice."

The convention drew the greatest cross-section of industry opinion in years. The majors were well represented, as was organized exhibition from "the other side," headed by Edward L. Kuykendall, MPTOA president.

Rodgers Explains Code

William F. Rodgers, attending the convention as representative of the seven major companies, excluding United Artists, delivered an 8,000-word statement, recommending the endorsement of the code, and explaining and defining its principles.

He said that the distributor-producer invasion of the field of exhibition was first adopted only as a measure of protection, and while there may be some isolated cases where this statement seemed far-fetched, "I can tell you," he said, "that for every one of such isolated instances, there were ten others where there was only one course left open for a distributor to protect his interests, and that was the acquisition of show windows for his merchandise."

Mr. Rodgers claimed that the code is not too complicated; that it is practical. Said he:

"I have no hesitancy in telling you that this proposal, in my opinion, is one that, if adopted, will contribute more to the progress of this industry than any move contemplated since the inception of motion pictures as the world's greatest entertainment. If it is not perfect, it is nevertheless a great improvement over the existing unsatisfactory condition."

Protests Neely Bill

He attacked the Neely Bill, saying that the bill in itself would force exhibitors and distributors to do that which is unsound.

Mr. Rodgers attacked section four of the Neely Bill, in particular. He urged exhibitors to wire their Senators, on the bill. He added:

"Of course, we want to see the code accepted; but, if to secure its adoption, additional concessions are asked, beyond those which have already been agreed to, you may rest assured no distributor, whether affiliated or otherwise, will agree to any expansion of its already broad policies.

"And as a matter of fact," he continued, "there is a great deal of apprehension on the part of some as to whether or not they can operate profitably under the proposed plan."

The MGM sales manager then termed the convention the most important in years, adding:

"And, although I do not believe that the proposed plan of voting on the suggested code would be of any material benefit, either for or against, because you do not have the number of people here qualified to register a national choice, nevertheless the fact remains that it is in your hands, whether or not you want to adopt the code."

BROKERS ASK FOR CODE REVISION

Accredited ticket brokers in New York recognized under the ticket code are formulating demands to be presented to the League of New York Theatres when negotiations for next season's code agreement start in July. The brokers, who have been waging an unsuccessful fight for abolition of the code, claim that brokers who refused to sign last year have succeeded in obtaining better choice of seats.

Meanwhile, the League and Actors Equity are studying methods for more stringent enforcement. Equity may refuse to sign the code unless it can be proved that the code is stimulating theatre attendance. Brokers point out that they have been hampered by the fact that non-accredited agencies have been able to continue in business although the code forbids the allotment of tickets to them. In addition, they say, the public has not benefited.

Mr. Rodgers said that reports from a majority of other theatre owner organizations, either in individual units or associated with a national organization, seemed to bring a consensus favorable to the code.

"We hope Allied will join," he concluded.

Steffes Attacks Code

"Fighting Al" Steffes Wednesday afternoon made a scathing attack on the code, charging that the document handed to him at the opening of the convention Tuesday, presumably by Mr. Rodger's committee, "was nothing like the code" given to him a week ago, or like the one he helped draft at New York and Chicago during negotiations with the majors' committee.

Mr. Steffes declared that it was his understanding that the code would be drafted without the help of the lawyers and that now it was all the work of the lawyers, to the extent that "no one can understand it."

The lawyers, he declared, had "torn down overnight everything that had been accomplished by the industry in years."

He defended Allied's aid to the United States Government in its investigations of the industry, adding that there was no sincerity in the code.

"The motion picture is too blank, blank highly legalized," he said.

"Chiseling has already started locally" (presumably in his Minneapolis territory) under the code, with majors' branch managers making their own interpretations of the clauses in the document. He believes in "throwing out the code and getting down to brass tacks and arbitrating now!"

Three Allied representatives and three producer representatives should be put on a boat and sent out to the middle of the ocean—and if they do not arrive at a satisfactory result in arbitrating within a month, they should be ordered to "pull the plug and sink," he added. Then, he continued, another commission of six, mixed Allied and majors, should be sent to sea, and another, and another, until results are obtained.

Abe Montague, general sales manager of Columbia, and a distributor member of the code committee, staunchly defended the code.

Mr. Steffes concluded the hour by violently attacking the code's cancellation clause, giving indications at the moment that Allied would reject the trade program.

Brandt Accepts Code

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, was another Wednesday afternoon participant in a general discussion on the code, highlighting his remarks with the observation that, while he was not entirely satisfied with the document, he felt it was the best that could be done at the present time, adding: "If this business gets into the hands of the politicians, it would have the same troubles as the radio business."

ARBITRATION PLAN IS FAIR: MYERS

who with Mr. Brandt had been conferring with Mr. Rodgers at length on the code's contents just before its completion, last weekend, also voiced approval of the document.

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager of Warner Brothers, appeared before the delegates in behalf of the code and its immediate enactment.

Allied's Nathan Yamins at about this point voiced opposition.

Myers Calls Arbitration Plan Fair

Abram F. Myers, general counsel to the National Allied States Association, spoke on late Tuesday afternoon, and called the arbitration plan, as presented in the revised code, fair, with a few reservations. He asserted that the arbitration rules, in the main, coincided with his own ideas.

"It is perfectly obvious that no matter how fine and fair an arbitration system we have," Mr. Myers added, "it would not mean anything unless the provisions of the code itself have some definite meaning, are important, and will have some pronounced effect on the trade practices of the industry."

Then he said: "When it comes to decide on the question of acceptance or rejection of the code, the question you must resolve will have more to do with the code itself than with the arbitration system."

Mr. Myers' chief point on arbitration was the necessity of keeping the exhibitor representation on the boards strictly independent. The affiliated exhibitors' panel, he advised, should be for affiliated exhibitors and distributors.

Col. Cole Opens Convention

Colonel Henry Albert Cole, of Texas, the president, opened the convention on Tuesday, with a speech in which he went back into Allied history, traced its battles, and concluded that some of the organization's bitterest enemies were beginning to sympathize with it.

The Colonel then asked for continued support of the Neely anti-block booking bill, "essential," as he called it; and predicted passage of the bill within one year.

He then defended the bill, especially those parts of it which may mean Government control.

Allied was not originally in favor of the legislation and litigation policy it now stands for, the Colonel said; originally, it wanted conciliation and negotiation; however, he traced the progressive disillusionment of the organization, with the distributors, and stated that the organization was forced, six years ago, into its present policy, by the distributors' threat of exclusive selling.

He inferred that the National Allied had been responsible for the North Dakota "divorcement bill," now defunct, and the Neely Bill and other similar efforts to regulate the industry.

When told that W. A. Steffes, president of the Allied Northwest, favored acceptance of the code as is, "with reservations," Colonel Cole said that such a stand was "an individual matter, after all."

In his speech, the Colonel made one remark, which conventioneers regarded as a definite answer to the critics of the Neely Bill, especially its provisions which might mean more Governmental supervision. He said that the objectors should likewise object to the Sherman anti-trust law and the Clayton Act. He added:

"Hardly an industry in our complicated economic structure is free today from some regulatory law."

Again, in his speech, the Colonel cited those industries which have regulation: drug, food, banks, construction, oil, and others. He asserted that "no regulation at all" means "chaos."

A. A. Kaplan and George Grandstrom of St. Paul, and Henry Morton of Winnipeg.

The Colonel did add that he thought laws as they were, are sufficient for protection of the industry; but that if courts ruled otherwise, those in the industry that needed it, must have special legislation.

Yamins and Samuelson Speak

Nathan Yamins, of Fall River and a New England director, and Sidney Samuelson, of Newton, New Jersey, a national director from New Jersey and a leader of the Eastern Pennsylvania unit, on Tuesday, at an "educational meeting," analyzed the code, provision by provision, and stressed the fact that endorsement of the code for what it contained might also be interpreted as an endorsement of it for what it did not contain.

On the provision for exceptional features, Mr. Yamins expressed this view:

"If an exhibitor had open playing time for 20 features, and one exceptional picture is wanted, 19 others would probably have to be taken along with it. Then his playing time would be completely locked up, so that if a second exceptional feature came along, he would have no room for it."

Resolutions Committee

The first committee to be appointed, on Tuesday, was that on resolutions. Its members were Jack Kirsh, Chicago; Max Cohen, New York; Moe Horowitz, Cleveland; L. C. Tidball, Texas; James C. Quinn, California; Herman Blum, Maryland; Abe Kaplan, Minnesota.

Before the convention opened, Allied set forth a convention credo in its convention program, entitled: "Allied's Credo for Protection."

What Allied wants was pointed out, succinctly, thus: A national appeal board consisting of an equal number of distributors and independent exhibitors, to hear appeals from the rulings of local arbitration boards in contract cases, and to have original jurisdiction in matters of general importance.

The statement further said that Allied wants the following problems solved: Compulsory block booking, unreasonable protection, undue theatre expansion, the "right to buy," contract revision, designated play dates, allocations, nondelivery of pictures, and radio competition.

No Action on Code By Virginia MPTO

The new draft of the trade practice agreement will have to be further clarified by the distributors before acceptance by the Virginia Motion Picture Theatre Owners, according to a decision reached at Monday's meeting of the exhibitor group at its annual midsummer convention, in Roanoke, Virginia.

A closed meeting of the board of directors decided on the need of further study before complete acceptance. The membership went on record as being opposed to the Neely bill.

Ed Kuykendall, national MPTOA president, telegraphed regrets of his inability to attend, due to changing of his plans. Harry Brandt, head of the Independent Theatre Owners of New York, wired that his organization had found fault with several clauses in the arbitration set-up of the new code, but advised that conferences were being held to iron out the differences with distributor representatives.

Colonel Robert Barton, counsel for the Virginia Association, warned members to keep a sharp look-out for adverse state legislation.

President L. W. Conrow of Altec and William Hardman of RCA agreed to readjust sound service charges for independent exhibitors who were members of recognized organizations to a similar basis with those of major circuit operators.

Officers of the Virginia MPTO are W. F. Crockett, president; Benjamin Pitts, vice-president; Harold Wood, secretary, and Sam Bendheim, treasurer.

Allied in Illinois Asks for Relief

Threats to close their theatres, at least for several days of each week, resounded throughout the Chicago meeting room where last Friday Allied Theatres of Illinois held a special meeting to seek some relief from the problems that confront them.

Half of the 72 exhibitors present, representing 106 theatres, made the threats to close if the distributors did not offer some relief in film rental reductions.

Another cause for complaint was the refusal of the major circuit there, Balaban and Katz, to cooperate in establishing a single feature policy. The Allied group is, according to its president, Jack Kirsch, 97 per cent in favor of single features and would return to this plan at once if the circuit would do the same.

In a move to get action, Allied sent a telegram to Paramount officials in convention in Los Angeles, "Allied Theatres of Illinois in session assembled today voted in favor of single features. Your subsidiary, Balaban and Katz, is the only stumbling block that prevents 95 per cent of the smaller subsequent run theatres from operating in the "black" and Balaban and Katz absolutely refuses to cooperate in any way. Can you for the sake of future sales to these theatres, do anything to help not only the smaller theatres but Balaban and Katz themselves as well as doing something for the entire industry."

COMPLETE TEXT OF CODE OF "FAIR TRADE PRACTICE"

Preamble

The signatories hereto, being distributors, exhibitors and organized groups of exhibitors of motion pictures, hereby severally adopt the following as a code of fair trade practice, hereby severally binding themselves to the observance of the principles, policies and practices set forth herein in the licensing, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures in continental United States.

Herewith appears the full text of the fourth and final draft of the "code of fair trade practice," as presented to the exhibitors by the distributors.

The rules for the proposed new arbitration system were presented in the* Herald, *issue of June 3, starting on page 48. They are subject to further revision.

I. Exclusion Privileges.

(1) Exclusion as a matter of right. Whenever an exhibitor shall have entered into a license agreement for all of the feature motion pictures ("features") offered[1] at any one time by a distributor for a run in any situation[2], such exhibitor shall have the right to exclude therefrom, without payment of the license fee therefor, not to exceed twenty per cent. of the total number of features contracted for, if the average of the license fees for all features contracted for shall not exceed $100.00 per picture; fifteen per cent., if such average is in excess of $100.00 and not in excess of $250.00; and ten per cent., if such average is in excess of $250.00.

In determining the number of features that may be excluded, fractions of one-half or more shall be counted as one and fractions of less than one-half shall not be counted.

In computing the average of the license fees for all features contracted for the license fees of features based in whole or in part on a percentage of the gross receipts of exhibition shall be included at the average of the license fees of all the distributor's features of the preceding motion picture season which were exhibited upon a percentage basis for the same run in such a situation. If none of the distributor's features was so exhibited during the preceding season, then such average of license fees shall be agreed upon by the distributor and the exhibitor and included in the license agreement.

For the purpose of determining the rights of exclusion of an exhibitor hereunder, so-called "Westerns" (as such term is understood in the motion picture industry),[3] reissues and foreigns (except such as may have been produced outside of the United States in the English language by an American producer or distributor or subsidiary thereof) shall not be included in the number of features offered or contracted for as above provided, but shall be deemed to have been offered in separate groups and, if contracted for, the features in each such group shall be subject to exclusion on the basis set forth above and, if included with other features in the same license agreement, shall be separately listed.

The right of an exhibitor to exercise his exclusion privilege herein provided for shall be subject to the following terms and conditions:

(a) a first run exhibitor shall give the distributor written notice with respect to each feature he elects to exclude within fourteen days after the mailing by distributor of the first notice of availability thereof; any other exhibitor shall give such notice within fourteen days after the close of the first exhibition of such feature in the city or town in which his theatre is located or the mailing of the notice of availability thereof, whichever is later, provided that if such feature is not exhibited on a prior run in such city or town and notice of availability shall have been previously mailed to such exhibitor, the distributor shall mail to such exhibitor a new notice of availability thereof and notice of exhibitor's election to exclude such feature shall be given within fourteen days after the mailing of such new notice;

(b) the exhibitor shall not, at the time of giving such written notice, be in material default under the license agreement[4];

(c) exclusions shall be made proportionately among the several price brackets provided for in the license agreement[5]; but any number of exclusions to which an exhibitor is entitled may be made from the lowest price bracket;

(d) if any exhibitor, having the right to do so, fails to exclude one or more features from higher brackets, he shall, for each such feature, have the right to exclude one feature from the lowest bracket; provided, however, that if at the time there are no unplayed available features in the lowest bracket, he may exclude a feature from the next to lowest bracket.

Upon the exclusion of any feature under this Section (1), the license therefor shall terminate and all rights thereto shall revert to the distributor, and such exclusion shall be charged against the number of exclusions to which the exhibitor may be entitled, whether or not a new license agreement for the exhibition of such feature is subsequently entered into by such exhibitor.

All disputes growing out of the exercise or attempted exercise by an exhibitor of the exclusion privilege provided for in this Section (1) shall be subject to arbitration.

(2) Exclusion for cause. An exhibitor shall have the right, in addition to the exclusion privilege provided for in Section (1) above, to exclude from any license agreement any feature which may be locally offensive on moral, religious or racial grounds, provided he shall give the distributor written notice, not later than fourteen days after the conclusion of its first exhibition in the exchange territory in which the exhibitor is served, of his desire to exclude such feature, specifying the reasons therefor. Upon the exclusion of any feature under this provision, the license therefor shall terminate and all rights thereto shall revert to the distributor. Any dispute as to whether or not a feature is in fact so locally offensive shall be subject to arbitration. The arbitrators shall not, in deciding such dispute, take into consideration the decision of any arbitrators with respect to the same feature except only that they may do so if such decision concerns the same feature in the same local area in which exhibitor's theatre is located.

II. Trade Announcement.

Each distributor shall make a general trade announcement at or prior to the beginning of each of its seasons, containing such information as it may be practicable to give of all features completed or actually in production then intended for release during such season, it being understood that the completion of such features actually in production and the making of such other features which it is intended to produce are subject to the hazards and uncertainties of the business and they may not be completed or produced, as planned.

III. Public Demand for Exceptional Feature.

If in any town or in any city, or section of a metropolitan city, an exhibitor shall request of a distributor the license for a run in any situation[6] of a feature, having such an exceptional and outstanding appeal as to create a natural and spontaneous national public demand and for which there is a spontaneous and natural public demand in the town, city or section of the metropolitan city in which his theatre(s) is located, and which would not be shown in such town, city or section unless licensed for exhibition to exhibitor, and the distributor offers to exhibitor a greater number of features than exhibitor because his playing time will be so absorbed by previous commitments for features can without altering his operating policy reasonably exhibit in such situation, the distributor will then offer to such exhibitor such lesser number of features, including such requested feature, as may be agreed upon or, in the event of a dispute, such number as may be determined by arbitration to be the maximum number of features which can reasonably be exhibited by exhibitor in such situation; provided that the distributor shall have the right at any time before the arbitrators shall have made their award to

[1] An exhibitor contracting for a portion of distributor's features shall be deemed to have contracted for "all of the feature motion pictures offered" if the distributor shall have offered only such portion to exhibitor.

[2] An exhibitor shall be deemed to have contracted "for a run in any situation" if the contracts for the right to exhibit each feature for a particular run either at a specified theatre or upon an "or" basis, i.e., at one of two or more specified theatres.

[3] Only "Westerns" which are not of the usual character and type of, and are inexpensively produced as compared with, the distributor's general line of features for the particular season in question.

[4] Without limiting the generality of the term "material default", an exhibitor shall in any event be deemed so to be in material default if, at the time of giving notice of exclusion, he has failed to pay the license fee due for any feature theretofore exhibited by him or if, at such time, he has failed reasonably to perform the license agreement with respect to the playing of features theretofore made available to him thereunder.

[5] Example: If the agreement licenses forty-eight features, of which eight are in the highest bracket, twelve are in the next to highest bracket, sixteen in the next to lowest bracket, and the remaining twelve in the lowest bracket, and, if the exhibitor has the right to exclude ten per cent. (five features), then not more than one feature may be eliminated from the highest bracket, not more than one from the next to highest bracket, not more than two from the next to lowest bracket, and the remaining one feature from the lowest bracket; or all five or any lesser number may be eliminated from the lowest bracket.

[6] "For a run in any situation" as defined in Section (1) of Article I, footnote 2.

PREFERRED PLAYING TIME CHANGES

offer or license all or any of its features to any other exhibitor.

An exhibitor who has been a customer of a distributor and who has refused to contract for such distributor's features for the situation involved shall have no right to attempt to use this Article to compel such distributor to license to him from time to time its outstanding features.

Any dispute as to whether such requested feature is an "Exceptional Feature" as above described or as to the maximum number of features which can reasonably be exhibited by exhibitor in such situation or as to whether exhibitor is so attempting to use this Article, shall be submitted to arbitration by exhibitor within fourteen days after the refusal by distributor to license to exhibitor the number of features requested by the exhibitor.

IV. Preferred Playing Time.

(1) Flat rentals and guarantees. A distributor will not exercise the right to designate features for preferred playing time which it may have under a license agreement with respect to any features, the license fee for which is either a fixed sum or is computed in whole or in part upon a percentage of the gross receipts of exhibition with a fixed minimum sum guaranteed.

(2) Features Unsuitable for Preferred Playing Time. If a distributor shall exercise the right to designate features for preferred playing time which it may have under a license agreement with respect to any feature licensed solely on a percentage basis, which feature is claimed by exhibitor to be unsuitable for such playing time and if exhibitor shall give distributor written notice of his objections thereto and the reasons therefor within seven days after the mailing of notice of such designation in case of a first run in a city in which an exchange is located or in any other case within seven days after the close of its first exhibition in the exchange city from which exhibitor is served or the mailing of the notice of designation, whichever is later, the question of such suitability shall be determined by agreement between distributor and exhibitor or, in the event of a dispute, by arbitration. Unless distributor rejects the claim of exhibitor by mailing notice to exhibitor within seven days after the mailing by exhibitor of such notice of objections as above provided, distributor shall be deemed to have withdrawn such designation. Should distributor, however, reject such claim, exhibitor shall commence arbitration proceedings to determine the dispute within seven days after the mailing of such notice of rejection.

If the feature is determined, by agreement or arbitration, to be unsuitable for the designated preferred playing time, or the designation thereof be deemed withdrawn as above provided, distributor may, at its option, either (a) designate the feature to be exhibited upon the same license terms on other days of the week or (b) then or thereafter substitute another feature to be exhibited on preferred playing time upon the terms designated for the feature objected to; in the latter case the license fee for the feature originally designated shall be such as may be designated by the distributor within its right under the license agreement.

Nothing in this Section (2) shall decrease or increase the number of features in each bracket as set forth in the license agreement.

V. Some Run Available.

To meet objections of certain exhibitors to so-called "exclusive selling", an exhibitor shall be able to obtain from a distributor a run of its features in any situation, the run to be designated by the distributor, provided (a) distributor and exhibitor can mutually agree upon the number of features to be licensed and other terms and conditions; (b) the exhibitor's theatre(s) (i) is not of an obsolete character, (ii) is in good condition and (iii) is operated under a policy that is not destructive and (iv) is operated under a policy which will not substantially reduce the distributor's revenue from any other run[7]; and (c) exhibitor is of good reputation as a theatre operator and customer or, if he has not been an exhibitor theretofore, is of good reputation and financially responsible. Any dispute arising under provisos (b) or (c) hereof shall be subject to arbitration. No dispute under proviso (a) hereof shall be subject to arbitration; but each distributor states that it will be its policy not to request unreasonable license fees or other terms or conditions from an exhibitor for the purpose of defeating this Article V.

VI. Regular Customer.

To meet objections of certain exhibitors to so-called "selling away to a circuit", a distributor will not refuse to license its features to its regular customer who is not a "circuit customer"[8], in order to license them, for the same run in the same competitive area, to another exhibitor for the sole reason that such other exhibitor is a circuit customer, provided such regular customer (a) has substantially performed his previous license agreements with the distributor, (b) maintains and operates his theatre in a modern manner, and (c) is financially responsible. Any dispute as to whether a distributor has so refused to license its features to such regular customer shall be subject to arbitration. Should distributor elect to license its features to an exhibitor (other than its then current customer) who is a circuit customer, distributor shall, if its then current customer is not a circuit customer, give him notice by telegraph of its election so to do. Should such current customer fail to commence arbitration proceedings within five days after the sending of such notice, he shall be deemed to have waived all claims, if any, in connection with such features under this Article VI.

VII. Short Subjects, Newsreels, etc.

No exhibitor shall be required to license short

[7] A policy shall not be deemed destructive or one which will substantially reduce such revenue if it is a policy established under methods of competition normal and fair in such situation.

[8] A "circuit customer", as that term is used in Article VI, is a customer who is, or is a part of, a circuit, a buying combine, a booking combine or a cooperative.

Arbitration Awards Enforceable by Law In Thirteen States on Status of a Judgment

Forty-six of the 48 states, Oklahoma and South Dakota excepted, have provisions on their books concerning the arbitration of disputes in business.

Arbitration clauses in commercial contracts such as those provided in the film industry's new agreement for arbitrating disputes under the majors' new trade practice program of self-regulation are made enforceable by law in 13 states: Arizona, California, Connecticut, Louisiana, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Wisconsin. (Text of the film industry's new arbitration agreement appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on June 3rd, page 48-50; text of the new trade program starts on preceding page.)

While jurisdiction varies somewhat in the aforementioned 13 states, the procedure is basically the same as that obtaining in New York: after an arbitration award is given by the industry's board, a simple motion in the state supreme court gives the award the status of a court judgment.

In some other states, not having such laws, one cannot enforce an arbitration award in the courts when such arbitration agreement was entered into before any dispute arose, enforcement usually coming through disciplining action within the industry.

There are two general types of arbitration agreements: (1) The agreement to arbitrate future disputes, which agreements are valid in the 13 states already mentioned; (2) The agreement made after the dispute, which agreements are valid in those 13 states and are generally enforceable also in Colorado, Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, Utah, Washington, Wyoming, Georgia. Evidently the film industry's arbitration agreement can be entered into either before or after a dispute.

The second type of arbitration, i.e., the agreement made after a dispute arose, can be made enforceable in the following states when it is by rule of the court (meaning, an action must be taken through the courts): Arkansas, Florida, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Montana, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia.

In certain states, such as Indiana, Kansas, South Carolina and Washington, the filing of a bond may be necessary to insure performance of the award.

There is a Federal Arbitration Law, applying only to those cases in which an amount over $3,000 is in dispute, and then only in interstate or maritime commerce. It is enforceable in much the same manner as New York State's arbitration law.

COERCION OF CONTRACTS BARRED

subjects, newsreels, trailers, serials, re-issues, "Westerns" or foreigns,[9] (hereinafter collectively referred to in this Article as "Shorts"), as a condition of licensing other features.

An exhibitor shall have no right to assert any claim that the licensing of such features was so conditioned unless he shall have mailed to the distributor at its Home Office notice in writing of such claim and the grounds therefor within forty-eight hours after delivery by exhibitor of his signed application for such "Shorts". Any dispute as to whether the licensing of such features was so conditioned shall be subject to arbitration. The powers of arbitrators in any such dispute shall be limited to:

(a) a finding as to whether or not the licensing of such features was so conditioned; and, if the finding be in the affirmative, then,

(b) an award cancelling the license agreement or agreements for (or to the extent that they relate to) such "Shorts."

VIII. Score Charges.

Score charges, if any, for flat rental features for the 1938-1939 exhibition season shall be added to and consolidated with the license fees therefor. Commencing with the 1939-1940 exhibition season there shall be no separate score charge for features licensed on either a flat rental or a percentage basis.

IX. Allocation of Features.

Under license agreements authorizing a distributor to allocate features to particular price brackets, distributor, on giving notice of the availability of each feature, shall notify exhibitor of the price allocation thereof, except that such notice of price allocation shall be given not later than fourteen days after the national release date thereof to first-run exhibitors in those cities which the distributor may designate as "Key Cities". After the notice of price allocation of a feature for a particular theatre has been given by a distributor to an exhibitor, such price allocation shall not be changed for such theatre except by mutual agreement between the distributor and the exhibitor.

X. Form of License Agreement.

Each distributor will use its best efforts to simplify its form of license agreement.

XI. Selective License Agreements.

Whenever an exhibitor shall have the right under a license agreement to select a number of features out of a larger number, he shall exercise such right by written notice of selection or rejection of each feature to which he may be entitled under such agreement within twenty-one days after the mailing of the notice of availability thereof. Failure of exhibitor to give such written notice with respect to any feature within such period shall constitute a selection thereof by exhibitor.

XII. Playing Features in the Order of Release.

If under any license agreement an exhibitor is obligated to play features in the order of their release, the distributor will not withhold features from exhibitor because features previously released have not been exhibited by him if his failure to exhibit them was due to the failure of distributor to make them available. Any dispute hereunder shall be subject to arbitration.

XIII. Coercing Contracts.

No distributor shall coerce or intimidate an exhibitor to enter into any license agreement by threatening to build or otherwise acquire, or by falsely representing that any other person will build or acquire, a motion picture theatre for operation in competition with such exhibitor.

An exhibitor shall have no right to assert any claim that he has been so coerced or intimidated unless he shall have mailed to the distributor at its Home Office notice in writing of such claim and the grounds therefor within forty-eight hours after delivery by exhibitor of his signed application for such license agreement.

Any dispute as to whether exhibitor was so

Moore Commends Herald for Reporting for "Rank and File"

Approval of the new trade program and arbitration agreement was voiced this week by owners in Florida, Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee who belong to the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association, and expressed through their president, Milton C. Moore.

Mr. Moore, in a letter to the editor from his headquarters in Jacksonville, commended MOTION PICTURE HERALD for giving wide circulation among the "rank-and-file" of exhibitors to the facts pertaining to and negotiations on the formulation of the new agreement.

The new program, he said, was voted by his organization as "practical, enforceable and a great step forward to promote harmony and peace in the motion picture industry both as to distribution and exhibition and offers the only solution to the many problems confronting this great industry and without which we are sure to face regulation by the Federal Government, which none of us want, and which all of us realize will place the industry in the hands of men and women who do not understand the workings of this business and who would only serve to disrupt the industry entirely and work hardships on both distribution and exhibition which we would never survive."

First, said Mr. Moore, "I appreciate the interest of MOTION PICTURE HERALD in your unceasing work on behalf of both the exhibitors and the distributors in trying to promote goodwill and harmony in the industry and by your constant effort to carry publicity on all steps taken by both groups in this great undertaking. I have always found the HERALD in its editorials and its writeups to be impartial and to carry all sides of any dispute regardless of whom the dispute may be against.

"The HERALD should be appreciated by everyone, regardless of affiliation or belief, for only in the widespread circulation that you have can the facts be presented to the rank and file of the exhibitors of this nation who do not belong to any organization and who are unable to attend conventions. Frankly, one-half of the independents do not belong to any organization whatsoever and have no way of knowing what is going on except through the HERALD."

"If every exhibitor and distributor would enter into the agreement as to trade practices and arbitration with a determination to make it a real live thing and believe in it 100 per cent we would immediately solve every problem which we have. Any person who will take the time to read the entire agreement carefully and impartially will have to admit that there is little left undone.

"But, by the same token, if the code and arbitration agreement is not lived up to by the entire industry it will serve no purpose except to throw us even further back and destroy what little confidence there is left in exhibitors. And, it will leave the industry wide open to federal and state regulation, because there will be absolutely no effort on the part of the majority of exhibitors to ever take part in any other discussion between any group regardless of its merits, and it will tear down the organization of every group of exhibitors in the United States, both local and national.

"If for any reason the work that has been done in perfecting this agreement should fail," continued Mr. Moore, "it would be many a long year before any such move could be started again.

"I am one of the men who sat with Ed Kuykendall and Sidney Kent and his committee and I personally am firmly convinced that there is a very honest and sincere effort on the part of every distributor who is a part of this agreement to do everything they possibly can to see that it is lived up to by their various companies. Every exhibitor should take the same attitude."

COVERS TWO EXHIBITION SEASONS

coerced or intimidated shall be subject to arbitration. The powers of arbitrators in any such dispute shall be limited to:

(a) a finding as to whether or not the exhibitor was so coerced or intimidated; and, if the finding be in the affirmative, then,

(b) an award cancelling such license agreement.

XIV. Other Subjects of Arbitration.

(1) Performance of License Agreements. A dispute arising out of a claim by either party to a license agreement that the other party has breached any provision thereof shall be subject to arbitration. The powers of arbitrators in any such dispute shall be limited to:

(a) a finding that the provision involved has been breached; and, if the finding be in the affirmative, then,

(b) an award of

(i) specific performance of the provision involved; or

(ii) the amount of actual and compensatory damages with respect to each feature involved, which amount shall not, except as provided in (iii) below, exceed the liquidated damages provided therefor in the license agreement; or

(iii) if, in an arbitration against a distributor, the arbitrators find that the distributor arbitrarily and wilfully and without color of right, repudiated the license agreement by refusing to deliver to exhibitor the features licensed thereunder, or caused the exhibition of any feature in violation of the provisions of the license agreement with respect to "run" or "clearance," the amount of actual and compensatory, but not punitive, damages with respect to each feature involved.

(2) Clearance. The parties hereto recognize: that clearance, reasonable as to time and area, is essential in the distribution and exhibition of motion pictures; that an exhibitor has the right without restriction to license for any theatre any run for which he is able to negotiate with any distributor; and that, subject to Article VI hereof, a distributor has the right without restriction to license for any theatre any run for which it is able to negotiate with any exhibitor.

Any dispute as to whether or not the existing clearance, under the conditions involved in the particular instance, is unreasonable shall be subject to arbitration.

The powers of arbitrators in any dispute relating to clearance shall be limited to:

(a) a finding as to whether or not the theatre or theatres whose clearance is complained of, or any of them, is entitled to clearance; and, if so, then,

(b) an award of the reasonable maximum clearance to which such theatre or theatres is entitled.

(3) Over-buying. A dispute arising out of a complaint by an exhibitor that another exhibitor has contracted for the license for exhibition of a greater number of features than the latter reasonably requires for exhibition in his theatre or theatres, with the intent and effect of depriving the complaining exhibitor of sufficient features to operate his theatre or theatres, shall be subject to arbitration.

In determining such dispute, the arbitrators shall, among other things make due allowance for a sufficient number of features reasonably to protect the exhibitor complained against from non-delivery of features and failure to make features available and give due regard to the type and operating policy of the theatre or theatres operated by such exhibitor. In no event shall an exhibitor be deemed to be "over-bought" if his minimum commitments do not exceed by more than fifteen (15%) per cent. his maximum requirements. If the arbitrators shall find that over-buying exists as herein provided, they shall specifically find by what number, if any, the exhibitor complained against shall have over-bought and such exhibitor shall then be permitted a period of fourteen days from the date of the arbitrators' decision to obtain the release of such excess number, if any, from his license agreement(s); if such exhibitor does not obtain such release, in whole or in part, then the arbitrators shall make an award apportioning among the distributors with which such exhibitor has entered into license agreements, the number of features to be released by them, respectively (being in the aggregate the number of features "over-bought" less such number, if any, the release of which such exhibitor shall have obtained) to the complaining exhibitor,[10] provided that no such award shall be made unless adequate assurance shall be given to each distributor that it will receive from the complaining exhibitor, in respect of its features to be so released, no less in license fees and no less favorable other terms than were provided for in its license agreement with the exhibitor complained against.

START CAMPAIGN AGAINST BILLBOARDS

The Kansas City, Kan., city administration has instituted a drive against unsightly billboards, and against posting in areas zoned against the practice. Theatres are large users of billboards.

(4) License Fees, Other Terms and Conditions. Neither license fees, nor (except in the respects and to the extent specifically provided in this code) other terms or conditions upon which motion pictures may be licensed by a distributor to an exhibitor, shall be the subject of arbitration for any purpose under any Article hereof, each of the parties hereto recognizing that such matters are to be determined only by mutual agreement between distributor and exhibitor.

XV. Agreement to Arbitrate.

Each signatory hereto agrees to submit to arbitration in the manner provided by and subject to the provisions of the Rules of Arbitration annexed hereto and made a part hereof any dispute subject to arbitration hereunder or under the Rules of Arbitration, between such signatory and any other signatory or signatories hereto and, at the time any such dispute arises, to take such other and further action and to sign such documents or instruments as may be necessary or desirable in order that the award of the arbitrators may, so far as is permitted by law, have the status of or become a judgment enforcible by judicial process. Each signatory further agrees that if the law or practice relative to arbitration in any jurisdiction in which such signatory carries on business prescribes a different form of agreement to arbitrate than that set forth in this Article, such signatory will sign an agreement to arbitrate in the form prescribed in such jurisdiction and file the same with the appropriate Permanent Arbitration Board established under the Rules of Arbitration. Each signatory who carries on business in a jurisdiction where arbitration awards cannot be made legally effective, covenants that he will nevertheless abide by and perform in good faith any award that may be made hereunder or under said Rules of Arbitration.

Distributors signatory hereto controlling theatre circuits pledge the full cooperation of such theatres and will use their best efforts to obtain the cooperation of theatres in which they have an interest, but which are not controlled by them.

All organized exhibitor groups signatory hereto will endeavor to secure the signature hereto of all their members and also of all other exhibitors operating theatres in the respective areas where they have members.

XVI. Effective Date.

The provisions of this code shall apply to all contracts made after January 1, 1939, for 1939-1940 product and the product of subsequent years so long as this agreement shall be in effect.

XVII. Term.

The term of this code shall be for two exhibition seasons[11], commencing with the season 1939-1940, and thereafter indefinitely.

Any signatory hereto may withdraw herefrom at the end of the second exhibition season or at the end of any subsequent exhibition season by giving written notice of such withdrawal to each distributor and organized group of exhibitors, signatory hereto, and to the secretary of the Permanent Arbitration Board in each exchange territory in which such signatory transacts business, at least six months prior to the end of such exhibition season. If any distributor or the operator or operators of a substantial number of theatres, signatory hereto, so withdraws, any other signatory may also withdraw herefrom at the end of the same exhibition season by giving similar written notice of such withdrawal prior to the end of such exhibition season.

Any signatory may also withdraw herefrom at any time by giving written notice of such withdrawal to said distributors, said organized groups of exhibitors and said secretaries: (a) in the event that any legislation enacted after the date hereof shall be inconsistent with this Code or any provision thereof or shall require a substantial change in the method of carrying on its business, provided that such withdrawal shall be effective only in the territory governed by such legislation; or (b) in the event that the order, judgment or decree of any competent tribunal, entered after the date hereof, shall declare invalid or illegal, or enjoin the observance of, this Code or any provision thereof, or any provision of any license agreement identical or substantially identical therewith, or shall require a substantial change in the method of carrying on its business. If any distributor, or the operator or operators of a substantial number of theatres, signatory hereto, withdraws for the reasons specified in clause (a) or clause (b) above, any other signatory shall have the same right of withdrawal, whether or not such legislation or such order, judgment or decree shall affect it, upon giving written notice of such withdrawal to said distributors, said organized groups of exhibitors, and said secretaries.

[10] The rights of exclusion, if any, under Article I, Section (1) hereof, of an exhibitor found by the arbitrators to have over-bought, shall be determined and computed on the basis of his license agreement(s) as modified in consequence of such finding.

[11] An exhibition season for the purpose of this Article shall be deemed to commence September first and end August thirty-first next following.

FIELD STAFF TO MEET SCHAEFER FOR FIRST TIME AT CONVENTION MONDAY

Program of More Than 50 Features Will Be Announced At International Gathering At Rye, N. Y.; Talent Named

RKO Radio Pictures' international sales convention, at which 250 field representatives in assembly will meet President George Schaefer for the first time, opens on Monday morning at the Westchester Country Club at Rye, N. Y. Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of world sales, and Jules Levy will disclose the company's 1939-40 feature program of more than 50 features. It is the last of the new season's sales conventions to be held by the majors.

The seventh annual and fourth international gathering follows the George Schaefer Drive and the entire sales staff is rewarded with the trek to New York and its World's Fair. June 22nd is RKO's Fair Day.

From RKO Radio offices in fifty-four countries under the management of Phil Reisman will come delegates headed by Reginald Armour, general European manager. Others who reached New York this week include Ralph Hanbury, United Kingdom; Ralph Doyle, Australasia; Nat Liebeskind, Southern South America; Gus Schaefer, Central and Northern South America; Bert Reisman, Peru; Max Gomez, Mexico; Pedro Saenz, president Cia. Cubana de Peliculas, S. A.; Leon Britton, Far East; Bruno Cheli, Brazil; Fred S. Gulbransen, Panama; Ned S. Seckler, Cuban home office representative; Gordon New, Trinidad.

From the Coast will come Anna Neagle, who has just completed "Nurse Edith Cavell," and Herbert Wilcox, its producer.

Announcement of product for the season of 1939-40 will be made next week. S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity, has prepared the annual book outlining the program. It is already known that RKO Radio has purchased screen rights to "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "The American Way." It will produce "Hunchback of Notre Dame."

Producer-directors will include George Stevens, Gregory LaCava, Gene Towne, who will produce four a year, and Max Gordon and Harry Goetz.

With RKO's season starting in August, features completed and nearing completion include the "Bachelor Mother," co-starring Ginger Rogers and David Niven, and "The Kind Men Marry," with Carole Lombard, Cary Grant and Kay Francis, and "Career."

Walter Branson, Midwestern district manager, who headed the George Schaefer Drive, will be a speaker at the convention. The Walt Disney organization, March of Time and other companies affiliated with RKO will have representatives present. A. A. Schubart, heading the operations of the 38 offices in the United States and Canada, will speak, as will Harry J. Michalson, in charge of short subject sales; E. L. McEvoy, eastern and Canadian sales manager, and Cresson E. Smith, western and southern sales manager.

The program will be headed by such talent as Ginger Rogers, Carole Lombard, Anna Neagle, Barbara Read, Wendy Barrie, Lucille Ball, Sally Eilers, Alice Eden, Cary Grant, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., James Ellison, Lee Tracy, Victor McLaglen, Chester Morris, George O'Brien, Tim Holt, Bob Burns, George Sanders, John Archer, Richard Dix and Joseph Calleia.

The directors will include John Cromwell, Garson Kanin, William Dieterle, John Farrow, Lew Landers, Jack Rively, Les Goodwins, Leigh Jason, David Howard and William Seiter.

Among the producers are Pandro S. Berman, in charge of production; George Haight, Lee Marcus, Robert Sisk, Cliff Reid, Bert Gilroy, P. J. Wolfson and William Sistrom.

Columbia Pictures have set four conventions to be held among its foreign sales force. J. A. McConville, manager of foreign sales, will attend each one. He sailed this week for England, to attend the first convention, that of the United Kingdom sales force.

Columbia will, after the English convention, hold its first South American convention in Havana, for the sales forces of Central America and northern South America. This will be followed by a large scale convention in Buenos Aires.

There will then be an Australasian convention in Sydney, New South Wales.

220 To Attend World's Fair Tribute to Films By Chile and Teatro al Dia

The Chilean Government and TEATRO AL DIA, the Quigley Pan-American publication, on Friday will jointly pay the first tribute to the American motion picture industry at the New York's World's Fair, from the Chilean Pavilion, in observance of the industry's contribution to the trade development of Chile.

Noted Chilean officials, Will H. Hays, Martin Quigley, stars of the screen and important executives of the American motion picture industry will attend. Some 220 have accepted invitations, which were signed by His Excellency, the Ambassador of Chile to the United States, Alberto Cabero; the Commissioner General of Chile to the World's Fair, Senator Rodolfo Michel and the Chilean Consul General in the United States, Anibal Jara Letelier.

Arrangements are being handled by Alfonso Merlet, Chilean delegate to the Fair, and H. Alban-Mestanza, editor of Teatro al Día.

Columbia Broadcasting Company in a special short wave arrangement, will broadcast, stations in Chile, Argentina, Peru, Brazil and Uruguay rebroadcasting the pickup.

Mr. Quigley, sending greetings to the Latin American countries, observed, "It is fitting that the first Pan-American gathering of motion picture men should be held on the occasion of the World's Fair, under the auspices of Chile, a people who have a record of uninterrupted and genuine friendship for the United States of America.

"In the motion picture industry, particularly, Chile stands out as a progressive nation," he added. "I am sure the American industry shall always seek to preserve and safeguard this relationship."

The official program at the Chilean Pavilion will be as follows:

2:00 P.M.—Address of welcome by Senator Rodolfo Michel, Commissioner General of Chile to the World's Fair.

2:15 P.M.—Tour of the Chilean Pavilion, conducted by Luis Nagel, Executive Director of the Pavilion.

3:00 P.M.—Special short-wave radio broadcast through the international stations of the Columbia Broadcasting System. Alfonso Merlet, Delegate to the Chilean Pavilion, Master of Ceremonies.

Waukegan Citizens To Honor Benny

Citizens and officials of Waukegan, Ill., have designated the days of June 21st through June 25th as "Waukegan Celebrity Days" in honor of Jack Benny, who was born there. Benny and Mary Livingstone with the entire Jello radio program cast will broadcast their air show from the stage of the Genesee theatre in Waukegan Sunday June 25th as the gala event of the world premiere of Benny's newest Paramount film, "Man About Town."

Visual Education Conference Opening

The status of the non-theatrical motion picture business and the problems of that field and of visual education will be taken up, starting Monday, at the four-day, ninth annual Conference on Visual Education of the DeVry Foundation, at the Francis W. Parker School in Chicago.

Fifty-four speakers and demonstrators of progress in the field will appear at the sessions, which will open with an address by Edward J. Kelly, Mayor of Chicago.

Extend Preservative Film Treatment to West Coast

The Peerless-Vaporate film treatment which has been offered by the Bell and Howell film laboratory throughout the middle west for the last two years, is now available from their Hollywood laboratory, the company announced this week. A complete Vaporating installation has been placed in the Bell and Howell Hollywood headquarters, 716 North La Brea Avenue. The same service and price schedule for the preservation of film prevails as in Chicago.

Columbia Assets Are $15,244,884

Grand National to Get New Financing

Educational Pictures and Grand National Pictures have retained the New York firm of Pelt and Company to provide for a plan of readjustment of the corporate and financial structure of these companies.

It is understood that the new funds to be provided for under the Pelt and Company plan will provide both for production and working capital, and will aggregate approximately $1,000,000.

Hits Target with Both Barrels By Using Herald Ideas

Exhibitor Finds Theatre Operation Suggestions Pay

To the Publisher of the Herald:

For many years I have been a subscriber of Motion Picture Herald, during which time I have received many useful and profitable suggestions from its different departments.

I have, for the most part, been content to let the other fellow make all the helpful suggestions on theatre operation, perhaps for no other reason that that I felt he could do a better job.

However, in your issue of May 13 appeared an article pertaining to better presentation of motion pictures, seeing them as the author intended—from the beginning instead of from the middle backwards.

Clue to Showman

I was much impressed with the article since on my desk was the ad copy for "Wuthering Heights," a picture which, owing to its type, I felt was set to prove a flop here. Having seen this fine picture I realized that I must discover some way in which I could impress upon our patrons' minds that here was a picture of exceptional story value, but one that must not be treated as just another picture or a drop-in attraction, in order to get out of it the entertainment which the producers have built into it.

With the substance of the above mentioned article fresh in my mind I wrote a letter to the editor of my local paper. Result: Instead of "Wuthering Heights" receiving the brutal treatment expected at the boxoffice it did better than usual business for this type of picture and with no boxoffice stars to sell, all of which proves that the public still reads the newspapers and that better returns can be obtained from certain types of pictures if the advertising copy is tailored to fit the picture.

Well Rewarded Again

Further perusal of my copy of the Herald led my attention to a page ad on the Universal picture "East Side of Heaven" with Bing Crosby, rated as a Music Hall attraction, which is prestige for any picture. But since Bing Crosby's advent on the air he has ceased to be a boxoffice attraction with us, and I was more or less skeptical of using up too much of my advertising appropriation on this, his latest picture.

My idea of spending money on "Wuthering Heights" was one of approaching the patrons from a different angle, or at least one that had not been used here in some time, and I believe that is what put the picture over. Then why not tell them about the importance of the world's finest theatre attraction, "East Side of Heaven"?

While I could not reproduce the ad in full, I borrowed sufficient from the Herald layout to make up my own ad, and again I was well rewarded as our business on the opening day of this picture was better than the preceding Sunday when we had what I considered a stronger show.

These two illustrations on exploitation, made possible through reading the Motion Picture Herald, not only proved profitable but have served to stimulate my interest in advertising in the belief that the right kind of exploitation, today as ever, does pay.—W. B. SMALL, Manager, Victoria and Palace theatres, New Smyrna Beach, Fla.

Virginia Theatre Owners Study Code At Semi-Annual Meeting in Roanoke

Officers of the Virginia Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association, who presided at the summer convention in Roanoke this week, above, are: Benjamin T. Pitts, vice-president; Col. Robert T. Barton, counsel; Harold Wood, secretary; Sam Bendheim, treasurer; W. F. Crockett, president, and Elmore D. Heins, convention chairman. The proposed trade practice code was the chief topic of discussion at the meeting but no definite action was taken pending further study. The membership went on record as opposing the Neely bill and heard Colonel Barton warn against possible adverse state legislation. L. W. Conrow, president of Altec, and William F. Hardman of RCA agreed to readjust sound service charges

Fox to Broadcast For Berlin Film

Twentieth Century-Fox will launch a widespread exploitation campaign for Irving Berlin's "Second Fiddle" with an international broadcast emanating from three continents to be carried over the NBC Blue network throughout the United States and by short wave to Cuba and South America. The company says it will be the first broadcast of its kind ever arranged for a motion picture and will be a departure from the type of radio programs the company has used in the past, namely the Kentucky Derby broadcast over CBS and the recent radio show from Springfield, Ill., which was used to launch "Young Mr. Lincoln.."

This international broadcast, which will inaugurate the new Monday night series of the Magic Key of RCA on June 26th from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. EDST, will be picked up from Norway, London, Buenos Aires, New York and Hollywood. It will feature music and scenes from "Second Fiddle" and will present the stars of the picture, Sonja Henie and Tyrone Power, as well as Rudy Vallee and Mary Healy, also members of the cast, and Darryl Zanuck, the producer, Irving Berlin, the composer, and Sidney Lanfield, the director.

A feature of the program will be a long distance air scene between Sonja Henie and Tyrone Power, separated by more than 7,000 miles. Miss Henie, who sailed from New York last week, will be in her home in Oslo, Norway, and Power will be at the Twentieth Century-Fox studios in Hollywood. As a lead-in to the love scene, Miss Henie and Power will hold a three-way radio conversation in which Irving Berlin in New York with Rudy Vallee, will join. Another international aspect of the broadcast will be a round-the-world pickup of Victor recording orchestras, playing in Hollywood, New York, Buenos Aires and London. These orchestras will play the new tunes which Irving Berlin wrote for the picture.

Louis Silvers' Twentieth Century-Fox studio orchestra will play the music for the Hollywood portion of the broadcast and Dr. Frank Black's orchestra and chorus will furnish the musical background for the New York part of the show.

In planning the program Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity, and Irving Berlin, who wrote all the music for the picture, arranged to blend all the elements of a musical picture with the magic of radio to bring a show from scattered cities on three continents to a world-wide listening audience.

Exchange Union Elects

The Exchange Employees Union of New Haven, Conn., has elected Catherine Fitzgerald business agent, Jack Mullen, president; Jerry Massimeno, vice-president; James Mahan, recording secretary; William Nutile, treasurer and Robert Hoffman, Henry Brunig and Edward Canelli, executive board. Installations of new officers will be held at the August meeting of the union.

"Angels" Setting Record

Columbia reports that "Only Angels Have Wings" has proved to be the fastest booking picture the company has produced. The company says that in the first two weeks of release, from May 25th to June 8th, the film has had coverage in 231 key cities and first runs, and has been booked in over 2,000 situations.

Sound Service Rates

In establishing a new schedule of service rates, Dominion Sound Equipments, Ltd., at Montreal has discontinued a $6 rate formerly offered with certain kinds of equipment when installed in theatres under 500 seats. The HERALD on May 27th indicated that this rate continued in effect.

George W. Parr, owner of the Imperial Theatre, Lancaster, South Carolina, has filed plans for a new theatre in the town on a site adjoining the Imperial. The theatre is planned for an opening in the Fall.

Warners Sell to National's Rivals

Warner Brothers this week actually started to sell away from National Theatres, following the statement of two weeks ago by Gradwell Sears, general sales manager, that Warners would not trade with National because of that circuit's double billing policies.

Warners on Tuesday announced that it had signed and approved 11 product deals calling for the playing of the complete 1939-40 line-up of Warner First National and Vitaphone pictures in 11 independent situations in the midwest district.

These deals, which were closed by Ben Kalmenson, southern and western sales manager, are situations operating in opposition to houses of the National circuit. The independents who bought the Warner line-up are:

Howard theatre, Arkansas City, Kansas; Casino, Booneville, Missouri; Civic, Brookfield, Missouri; Main Street, Chanute, Kansas, Electric, Kansas City, Kansas; Family, Kirksville, Missouri; Mary Lou, Marshall, Missouri; Sosna, Mobile, Missouri; Cozy, Pittsburgh, Kansas; Vogue, Salina, Kansas, and the Broadway, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Mr. Sears is calling in his western branch managers for a conference Friday in Hollywood on plans for selling the company's product away from FWC circuit. Ben Kalmenson, western and southern division manager, is also in Hollywood to participate in the conference.

Branch managers who will take part in the meeting are: E. A. Bell, Denver; Jack Brower, Los Angeles; V. Stewart, Portland; William F. Gordon, Salt Lake City; A. Shmitken, San Francisco and William Shartin, Seattle. W. E. Callaway, coast district manager, will also participate in the meetings.

J. G. Von Herberg, president of the Jensen and Von Herberg circuit, and John Danz, head of the Sterling circuit, have arrived in Hollywood to discuss deals under which they will acquire Warner films.

Now It's "Popcorn Week" at Theatres

Theatres using popcorn are being urged this week by manufacturers of popcorn equipment and popcorn and supplies to join in "National Popcorn Week," now on. Among the sponsors, through "The Kernel," their journal, are Advance, Chicago; Britzius, Dover, Minn.; Cretors, Chicago; Dickinson, Chicago; Dondanville, Chicago; Finnegan, Morris, Ill.; Indiana, Muncie, Ind.; Huisinga, Deland, Ill.; Krispy Kist, Chicago; Miller, Maroa, Ill.; McBride, Deland, Ill.; Northern, Garvin, Minn.; Peppard, Kansas City; Reist, Lancaster, Pa.; Shultz, Olney, Ill.; Tuttle, Spencer, Ia.; Weaver, Huntington, Ind.; Wyandot, Marion, O.

They are making available to exhibitors advertising material, outlines for displays, contests and sales campaigns.

Wilmer and Vincent Sign Warner Product

Warner Brothers has closed a deal with the Wilmer and Vincent Theatres, whereby the circuit will play the entire line-up of Warner Brothers-First National Pictures for the 1939-'40 season, including Vitaphone short subjects and trailers, according to Carl Leserman, assistant general sales manager.

MAJORS' TALKS WITH U. S. OVER TRADE PRACTICES NOW UP IN AIR

Second Meeting of Leaders With Hopkins, Reported for Early This Week, Is Not Held; Abandonment Denied

There is some delay in continuing the conferences started last week in Washington between the United States Secretary of Commerce, Harry Lloyd Hopkins, and ranking officials of the motion picture business, headed by Will H. Hays, on some "broad problems affecting the industry in its relation to the general economic structure."

Second Meeting Understood Plan

With only a few hours' advance announcement to the public, the government and film leaders gathered in Mr. Hopkins Commerce Department office on Tuesday a week ago. The general understanding on the outside was that a second meeting, beginning a series, was to be held early this week. If such a subsequent meeting was to have been held, and there was no denial or verification thereof, something happened to it—either postponement or abandonment.

Specific subjects discussed at last week's conference were not disclosed, but in Washington observers mentioned as being on the agenda everything from a consent decree in the New York anti-trust suit of the Department of Justice to the Department's anti-trust campaign in the field, the industry's new trade practice code and system of arbitrating trade disputes, labor problems, Hollywood films as an international trade medium, and whatnot.

No Effect, Says Murphy

Following the June 1st meeting, Frank Murphy, attorney general, declared that the discussions would have no effect on the Department's suit. However, he added, "We will view with great respect and consideration any recommendations that Secretary Hopkins may make, and know he will only try to be helpful." The conclusion from Mr. Murphy's remarks was that Secretary Hopkins might be acting, possibly, as an intermediary, and negotiator for a consent decree in the trust case.

Then, on Monday, possibilities that efforts of Secretary Hopkins to iron out differences between the motion picture industry and the Department of Justice would prove unavailing, as did similar efforts on behalf of the oil industry, were seen in Washington as a result of the disclosure that a second conference with representatives of the major companies had been postponed.

At the Department it was said postponement was due to the fact that additional time would be required to compile the motion picture information which was asked for by Government officials. Officials refused to hazard a guess as to when the meeting would be held, but expressed hope that it would be within a week or 10 days.

Deny Negotiations Bogged Down

Reports that negotiations which were to lead to a consent decree for settlement of the New York suit had bogged down were denied, but Department officials refused to comment further.

It was learned, however, that Department of Justice officials had been represented as determined to force the film industry to "reform" and had made it known that the only consent decree they would consider would be one giving the Government nothing less than everything it sought in its bill of complaint, and preferably more.

EFFICIENCY MOVE, DECLARES ARNOLD

Thurman Arnold, assistant United States attorney general, said in Chicago this week that government "is not interested in trust-busting for the mere sake of busting one or another of the great monopolies, but is attempting to bring the efficiency of mass production down to the consumer."

He was one of the three speakers who discussed "Freedom and the Economic System" on the University of Chicago round table broadcast over a nationwide network.

"We can bring mass production down to the consumer only by removing the combinations which stand in the way of, and interfere with, the free distribution of goods," Mr. Arnold said, adding: "We are engaged in clearing away the log-jams that are interfering with the distribution of goods. By enforcing competition and breaking monopoly control lower prices can be obtained. This is not an attack on freedom. By restricting the freedom of few, greater freedom can be given to many."

With all of the cross-opinion, however, the Department of Commerce in Washington said Tuesday that it was still working on the industry conferences, and had assigned Ernest Tupper, chief statistician of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Commerce Department, to go to New York this week to confer with J. H. Hazen, vice-president of Warner Brothers, regarding certain statistical information which the industry was asked to compile for Secretary Hopkins during last week's session.

Mr. Tupper was to confer with Mr. Hazen on Friday. It was reported early in the week that if the information he gathered was "sufficient" a meeting would be arranged for next week between Mr. Hopkins and industry leaders.

Both Mr. Tupper, with Secretary Hopkins, and Mr. Hazen, with the film executives, attended the initial conference. Also on hand were, besides Mr. Hays, Nicholas M. Schenck, president, Loew's, Inc.; Harry M. Warner, president, Warner Brothers, and George J. Schaefer, president, RKO Radio Pictures. Others at the meeting were Willard L. Thorp, economic adviser to Secretary Hopkins, and Nathan D. Golden, Chief, Motion Picture Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

In spite of earlier denials by the Department of Commerce that the conferences would be expanded to include exhibitor organizations, Dr. Thorp on Wednesday telegraphed invitations to Col. H. A. Cole, president of Allied States Association, and Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, to conferences in Washington next week. The meeting with Col. Cole will be on Tuesday and with Mr. Kuykendall on Wednesday.

Motion picture sources in New York explained this week that the conferences with Secretary Hopkins had not brought out the subject of the majors' yielding to the Department of Justice by means of a consent decree, adding that last week's parley was purely a "business meeting." It was further explained that the statistics now being gathered for presentation to Mr. Tupper for Secretary Hopkins are intended to impress upon the Government, in business rather than legal aspects, the significance of the motion picture business, both nationally and internationally.

There are some in the industry in New York who believe that the majors have a chance of turning the conferences into some profitable channel, despite the understanding in Washington that Secretary Hopkins is facing the same situation with respect to films as he did with oil, that is, the refusal of the Department of Justice to consider any compromise in its suits against the industry. Secretary Hopkins had held similar conferences with oil executives.

Added to all the developments, and lack of developments, apparently highly imaginative is the possibility reported that the Commerce Department-film conferences might even eventually become an "international motion picture economic conference," which would bring to New York or Washington worldwide film experts in an unprecedented attempt to break down economic trade barriers, readjust film quota laws.

More Money for U. S. Trust Suits

Plans of Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, for establishment of a chain of regional offices of his anti-trust division across the country, were stopped short this week by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Rejecting Mr. Arnold's plea for a further increase in funds, advanced by the House from $780,000 to $1,300,000, the committee in effect gave him additional money for the prosecution of anti-trust suits by revoking the approval given by the House to the establishment of regional offices.

In addition, the committee demanded that all cases brought by the anti-trust division be prosecuted in cooperation with the Federal District Attorneys of the districts in which they are filed, and that the Department of Justice discontinue its practice of appointing experts and special assistants, requiring that all positions paying a salary of $5,000 or more a year shall be filled by Presidential nomination, subject to confirmation by the Senate.

Commends Hopkins Move

The committee placed its seal of approval upon the efforts of Secretary Hopkins to aid industry in the solution of its economic problems, giving him $225,000 "for the purpose of providing a highly qualified executive staff in the department to participate with the Secretary in appraisals of the larger problems that affect the commerce and industry of the country, in assisting Congress in drafting and considering legislation affecting business, in maintaining contact with various agencies of the Government dealing with particular phases of the national problem having a bearing on affairs of industry, and for developing and carrying through new constructive work, that will be welcomed by businessmen, directed toward improvement of business conditions at the earliest possible moment."

The committee's action gives formal standing to the efforts of Secretary Hopkins to act as intermediary between industry and various Governmental agencies, particularly the Department of Justice, first steps in which were the conferences now going on with representatives of the motion picture industry. Previous conferences were held with groups from the oil and phosphate industries and other industries under Department of Justice fire are expected to be called in the near future.

Arnold Protests Majors' Tactics

Bitterness over the tactics adopted by the major companies to slow up progress in the New York suit was expressed by Mr. Arnold before the Senate Appropriations Committee, it was disclosed this week with release of the testimony on the Department of Justice appropriation bill.

Mr. Arnold charged that the companies "filed motion after motion" in the New York court, each of which took considerable time to fight out and, by securing orders requiring the Government to file additional information, had succeeded in setting trial of the case back five or six months. To meet such situations, which are presented in practically every suit against a major industry, he suggested establishment of a special court which could pass upon motions speedily.

More Anti-Trust Suits Are Filed

Two more anti-trust suits were filed this week. The Landis theatre, Vineland, N. J., filed a monopoly action against Warner Brothers Theatres and major distributors in federal court in Philadelphia, and Paul Prugh Scott, former owner of the Varsity theatre in Dallas, filed suit in federal court there against the Interstate Circuit and others for $465,000 plus $10,000 attorney fees under terms of the Sherman anti-trust Act.

In the Philadelphia action, co-complainants with the theatre are virtually all civic officials of the Borough of Vineland and surrounding Landis Township. They filed the suit, it was said, in behalf of the welfare of the community, but not as a corporate act of the borough.

Eugene Mori, operator of the Landis, claims discrimination in favor of the Grand and Globe, circuit houses. The plaintiff seeks an injunction restraining the defendants from acquiring competing theatres, and directing Warner Brothers Theatres to divest itself of interest in the Globe and Grand, and asks that alleged illegal conspiracies in restraint of trade be broken up.

Mr. Scott, in the Dallas suit, charged that he had been driven out of business in Dallas and could not enter anywhere in Texas under the monopolistic system now in operation. He said Interstate through its far flung operations had harassed him until he was forced to sell his theatre for $55,000 when it was worth $125,000.

He said Interstate had threatened to erect a theatre near his Varsity, had talked with his landlord about his leases and had caused film companies to put restrictions on releases to him.

Split Even on New York Moves

The major company defendants, in the anti-trust action by the United States Department of Justice in New York, on Monday won their demand, in New York City federal court, that the government submit a more detailed bill of particulars. They received a setback, however, in the granting to them by Federal Judge Bondy, of only part of their demands; and he flatly turned down their request for 60 days from the filing of a further bill by the government, to prepare and serve answers.

Judge Bondy ordered the companies to file answers within 10 days after receipt of a further bill from the Government. Columbia and United Artists, however, were not affected by the ruling.

In requiring the government to expand its bills of particulars already filed, Judge Bondy directs it to define more exactly an affiliated theatre; to state whether the term "exhibitor-defendant" in the original complaint means "exhibitor-producer-defendant"; to name each defendant engaged in allegedly unfair trade practices; to state exactly what unfair practices had been used against exhibitors.

On Tuesday of this week counsel for the majors met at the offices of the MPPDA in New York, to map further strategy in defense against the Government accusations.

Federal Judge John Clancy was expected to hear, on Friday, in New York Federal Court, the application of Columbia Pictures for a more detailed bill of particulars from the Government, inasmuch as Federal Judge Bondy's decision did not affect the Columbia situation.

Oklahoma and Chicago Actions

Hearing on the A. B. Momand anti-trust suit motions is set for Friday in Judge A. P. Murrah's Federal Court for the Western District of Oklahoma, Oklahoma City.

Hearing will be on motion to dismiss by the defendants, major producers, distributors and Griffith circuits. Both sides have previously filed briefs bearing on the question of assignability raised by the motion which will be decided by Judge Murrah at Friday's hearing.

Momand's case asks $4,500,000 damages for anti-trust violations and is the oldest of similar type cases now pending in the courts.

The Federal government has subpoenaed exchange managers and Balaban and Katz circuit executives to appear before Chicago's Master in Chancery Edgar Eldredge on June 22nd at the hearing in the government's suit against B. & K. and the majors.

Committee Plans Eckhardt Dinner

A committee meeting was held this week in Chicago to arrange details for the Clyde Eckhardt Silver Anniversary testimonial dinner, which will be held Monday, July 17, at the Congress Hotel.

Co-chairmen for the event, which promises to be one of the biggest in Chicago's theatrical history, are John Balaban, Jack Kirsch and Jack Osserman.

General Houston Sues On "Man of Conquest"

Republic Pictures thinks that its "Man of Conquest," based on the life of Sam Houston, "speaks for itself" in refutation of a $1,000,000 suit against it, filed at Houston, Texas, against Republic, the Interstate circuit and the Horwitz-Texan Theatre Company, by Brigadier General Andrew Jackson Houston, 84, only surviving son of Sam, who charges the picture libeled his father and mother.

Actual damages of $500,000 and punitive damages of $500,000 are sought in the suit.

Application for a preliminary injunction to halt exhibition of the picture was turned down on Wednesday.

Paramount Holds Preview On "Man About Town"

A preview of the new Jack Benny film, "Man About Town," was held for the press Wednesday night at the New York Paramount Theatre, preceded by a dinner and floor show at the Paramount Hotel.

In Waukegan, Illinois, the premiere of the film, on June 25th, is planned so that there will be simultaneous showings at all theatres in the town, in conjunction with the Jello radio program.

B and K Dividends

A dividend of 75 cents on the common stock and the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the preferred stock, payable June 30th, were declared Wednesday by Balaban and Katz. The last disbursement was a 50 cent dividend on common stock on March 30th.

Kent to Trinidad

Sidney R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox president, and Walter Hutchinson, head of foreign distribution for the company, sailed from Rio de Janeiro Wednesday for Trinidad to attend the Central Amberican convention. Mr. Kent is due back in New York June 26th.

BLOCK SALES BILL SHOULD NOT BE ENACTED, NEELY COLLEAGUES REPLY

18-Page Analysis of 19-Page Report Finds Senator's Proposals Unworkable and Unfair; Says It's Price Measure

United States Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely's 19-page report submitted to the Senate on June 3rd in defense of his bill to outlaw block and blind selling by Federal statute, a report in which he went forensic on the "pernicious effects" of the practice, was answered this week by a three-man minority of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee in an 18-page analysis, contending that the bill should not be approved by the Senate.

Passing the Barbour bill removing the ban on the interstate transportation of fight pictures, the Senate on Tuesday deferred action on the Neely bill until June 21st when the measure will be taken up for consideration and vote.

Postponement of debate on the block booking measure was requested Tuesday by Senator Neely when the bill was reached during a call of the calendar.

The Senator explained that it would be impossible to dispose of the legislation under the five-minute rule, operative during consideration of unobjected bills, and named the date on which he would move for its imediate consideration without limitations on debate.

Summed up, the subcommittee minority's report, made public last Thursday, found the bill an attempt to legalize the order issued by the Federal Trade Commission in the Famous Players-Lasky case in 1927, which was invalidated by the courts, also to be an effort to fix prices for pictures, and, if enacted, a constant threat over the heads of producers and distributors.

Charges Threat of Injustice

Two of the minority signers were members of the Interstate subcommittee which had charge of the bill, Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, the subcommittee's chairman, and Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., of Maine, ranking subcommittee Republican member, who were joined by Senator Chan Gurney, of South Dakota, a member of the full interstate committee.

"We cannot recommend a bill which it is conclusively shown would not work out in actual practice, and which would do injustice to one of America's most important and essential arts and industries," it was concluded.

At the very outset of their report, the minority expressed doubt of the good faith of the bill, declaring that much of the testimony at the hearings in April had centered around the question of morals in films, "yet there is nothing in the bill that prohibits or declares unlawful the showing of any of the motion pictures or types of motion pictures that are thus criticized, nor of a motion picture that is clearly immoral or indecent."

"It was pointed out at the hearings that the worst type of sex and vice expose pictures that have been shown in the past could easily comply with all of the provisions of this bill as they are invariably sold one at a time, not in blocks, and only after the picture is fully completed and ready for screening. In other words, it appears to be undisputed that there is no compulsory block booking or blind selling in the distribution of this type of offensive motion picture. It is also undisputed that this type of picture is not produced or distributed or exhibited by the companies referred to as the Big Eight."

The report showed little patience with the Congressman Boren Would Recognize All the Mechanics of the Film Business

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Complete reorganization of the mechanics of the motion picture industry is provided for in legislation now being drafted by Representative Lyle H. Boren (Dem.) of Oklahoma.

The bill is said to go "all the way" in dealing with practices which have been complained of. Possibilities are that, if the Neely bill is taken up in the House this session, the Boren bill may be offered as a substitute, thus short-cutting the route which otherwise it would have to travel as new legislation.

His Own Brainchild

Neither the integrated industry nor the independent exhibitors have had any hand in the formulation of the legislation, it was declared by the Congressman. Instead, he has for the past two years been engaged in a study of the industry himself, and has accumulated a mass of data regarding block booking, blind selling, affiliated houses and industry practices.

The last remaining hurdle before it can be introduced is the wording of a section under which Mr. Boren seeks to divest large theatre circuits of their buying advantages, which the Department of Justice is seeking through its anti-trust suits.

First requirement of the bill, it was learned, will be the divorce of exhibition from other branches.

In the drafting of the divorcement provision consideration has been given to the possibility of breaking down large chains into smaller groups, Congressman Boren feeling that while simple divorce would have beneficial results it would not guarantee a satisfactory degree of competition in exhibition, since large independent chains are known to resort to "even more vicious competitive methods" than the affiliated groups.

Would Modify Synopsis Provision

Both block booking and blind selling would be prohibited by the bill, but in the writing of these sections Mr. Boren has given some thought to the protection of the distributors as well as the exhibitors. Accordingly, block booking would be equally unlawful for distributor and exhibitor. A synopsis provision similar to that of the Neely bill is provided as a prohibition against blind selling, but the Congressman is giving consideration to the inclusion therein of a stipulation that the synopsis need not be made a part of the contract for any picture which an exhibitor sees before buying.

The purpose of these provisions, it was explained, is to avoid giving the exhibitor any unfair advantages.

Another section of the bill deals with cancellations and exclusive privileges, and other provisions are designed to take from the large circuits the advantages which it is declared they possess over competitors, and to insure to independents owning single houses the same conditions of purchase of films as are enjoyed by the groups. It is also to be provided that the prices of pictures offered individually shall not bear an unreasonable relationship to their prices when offered in groups.

"The motion picture industry exemplifies the distance we have already traveled from a competitive to a dominated and controlled system of economy," he said.

"Consumers at last have come to realize that they are not permitted to exercise any choice in the selection of pictures to be shown in their neighborhoods.

"The five major companies are vertically integrated, owning production, distribution and exhibition facilities. They operate 13 per cent of all the theatres in America. In addition to this, through agreements with so-called independent theatre chains they control a major portion of the best theatres which they do not directly own.

"Currently, the major companies are attempting to secure exhibitor approval of so-called trade practice proposals designed to make some concessions on controverted subjects, to avoid interference with their operations by the Government or the courts. These proposals, however, fall far short of the relief to which the independent exhibitors and the public are entitled."

MINORITY ATTACKS NEELY MEASURE

ambiguous contentions which it said had been put forth by proponents of the bill.

"The phrase 'community freedom of selection' in relation to motion pictures shown throughout the land, and throughout the world, is a slogan; a catchword," it declared. "The proponents of the bill in connection with this slogan have offered other appealing slogans and catchwords. For instance the statement that 'the bill is founded on the American principle of home rule,' and to the effect that centralized control of education is repugnant to the American public, that public schools are indigenous to the local communities which they serve; and that motion pictures are an important medium of education, from which the proponents conclude that the industry should come under the regulations of the bill.

"Slogans and phrases should, before being accepted as conclusive, be examined and analyzed to see what they have as their inarticulate premises. Nowhere in the testimony of the many witnesses before the subcommittee is it claimed that at present there is a lack of community selection' or no 'home rule' in motion-picture entertainment, nor is there attempted an appraisal of how much there is of whatever is meant by these labels and how much there is not. * * *

"The sponsors do not claim that the people of the community are forced or compelled to attend motion-picture threatres to the exclusion of other forms of entertainment offered, or that they are compelled to attend at any particular performance, or compelled to attend at any particular theatre. It is usual in all communities of the United States, even in the very smallest, that there are several theatres. What then is meant by the phrase 'community selection'? The word 'community' is not defined."

Finds Assumption Meaningless

Similarly, the minority found meaningless the contention that the exhibitor is the "only point of contact between the community and the motion picture industry"; that idea must be emphatically rejected, it was declared.

"The problem of selectivity for different persons in any given community is met entirely by the achievement of an industry which makes available all over the United States expensively produced motion pictures at a low cost which permits their display at all places, and gives the public so many pictures to choose from," it was held.

Getting into a discussion of block booking, the three Senators asserted that the statistics "flatly refute" the independents' charge that they must take all or none of the pictures offered by the Big Eight. Those statistics, it was declared, showed that there were wide variations in the number of theatres taking the pictures of the various companies, and that every company had pictures which secured four to five times as many bookings as other pictures produced by it in the same season.

Have Wide Selection

"These facts and figures seem to be conclusive that contrary to the assertions of the sponsors of the bill, the theatres actually have a wide selection of the pictures released and sold by the eight wholesale distributors of motion picture films listed as 'the Big Eight' by the sponsors of the bill, and are not required to play all or none of the motion picture films produced and distributed by these companies.

"It may be significant to note that since this legislation was first introduced 10 or 12 years ago, and under the 'monopolistic and burdensome trade practice' complained of, four new companies have established national wholesale distribution systems for motion picture films. These are known as Republic Pictures, Monogram Pictures, Grand National Pictures and Gaumont British Pictures. None of these new distributors are listed as 'the Big Eight'."

Further, the report continued, the charge made by sponsors of the bill which, it was pointed out, was unsupported by any evidence, that the producer-owned theatres have much broader rejection privileges than independents, was not borne out by the evidence.

Calls Position Impossible

Application of the block booking prohibition would place the distributors in an impossible position, it was held. "The provisions operative in price negotiations are claimed by the sponsors of the bill to be inserted for the purpose of preventing a distributor from attaining by indirection the result sought to be outlawed; namely, that of refusal to deal with an exhibitor unless he contracts for all offered, but a careful reading of the language must make it plain that the section does more than that. It operates to fix prices at which motion pictures in groups may be offered for contract. The section is complained of as being vague and indefinite and as failing to provide a standard to which the distributors' sales representatives may conform in its application to their negotiations with exhibitors on pain of criminal punishment."

Meditating upon the fact that the block booking section followed so closely the abortive order of the Federal Trade Commission, the minority felt that "it is singular that although 12 years have elapsed since the language embodied in Section 3 was first promulgated by the Federal Trade Commission, despite the attack thereon ever since, no measure has been drafted except in terms identical with that voided by the court.

Call It a Price Measure

"It is a price measure and only a price measure," the report said, adding the warning:

"Legislation which would venture into the perilous regions of price regulation in the field where price determination is subject to so many varied factors which differ in each negotiation ought to be at the least sufficiently certain and definite so that those who are directed to give obedience to the legislative mandate under pain of criminal sanctions may be apprised of the standards of conduct to which they must give obedience.

"This second clause of Section 3 (1) provides no such standard."

"What is block booking and when is block booking compulsory," the minority asked? "These are patently matters of degree dependent largely on the mind of the exhibitor party to the negotiations. * * * This clause sets up no standard, definite or even approximate, to which conduct must conform on pain of criminal punishment. It is without direct precedent—although it may be compared with clauses in contracts pursuant to the mandate of the German Reich Film Chamber which requires contracts to provide that such contracts 'shall be interpreted in the sense of national socialism'."

Synopsis Demand Protested

Equally dangerous and indeterminate are the provisions of Section 4, prohibiting blind selling. "The measure makes it criminal not to furnish to each exhibitor the synopsis prescribed at the time of the making of a contract for the exhibition of a picture, notwithstanding the fact that the picture may be completed and available for exhibition and even seen by the exhibitor. This seems unconscionable."

If the picture is available for screening, why should the exhibitor need the synopsis, the Senate trio wondered, and wondered also how much good the synopsis would do the exhibitor.

"The number of scenes and incidents depicted in a motion picture runs into the thousands," it was commented. "Motion pictures are moving scenes which dissolve one into another. As for treatment of scenes and dialogs of vice, crime or suggestive of sexual passion, nobody yet has been able to comprehend what the statement describing such manner of treatment would look like in connection with any motion picture now currently being exhibited on the screens of theatres throughout the country. It is doubtful whether the draftsmen knew what it should contain.

Calls Formula Impracticable

"According to the testimony nobody who has ever produced a motion picture or written a script for one, or had knowledge of how motion pictures are produced, could have devised such a meaningless and impossible formula for a prescribed synopsis of a motion picture either to be produced or already produced."

The synopsis requirement applies even in the case of pictures produced, reviewed in the press and seen by the exhibitor, it was pointed out.

"How much better can an exhibitor be given information of the contents of a motion picture than by providing opportunity for the exhibitor to see the motion picture?" it was asked.

Finally, the minority held, "the producer would always be under the fear that, if the motion picture he produced did not in all respects correspond to the synopsis furnished by his distributing agency at the time of negotiation for a contract, he would be accused of having made a knowingly false statement in the synopsis, and therefore liable to incarceration.

"The destruction and injury to the industry apprehended by those engaged therein might conceivably be justified if there were present evils which subject the American public to vicious or immoral motion pictures and the measure had relation to the eradication of such evils."

Calls Penalty "Too Large"

The last point brought up by the minority was the ace card of exhibitor proponents of the measure, that under the bill the exhibitor would no longer have the block booking alibi for showing undesirable pictures.

This, the report declared, is a "tenuous hypothesis." "It seems too large a penalty to pay entirely to disrupt an important part of the Nation's economy, aware of its responsibilities, in order to isolate an exhibitor from what is frankly acknowledged to be an alibi so as to expose him to a higher degree of local responsibility," it was felt.

"We are of the opinion that the enactment of this bill into law would result in decrease of employment both in production and distribution and an increase in cost to the theatre owner and the public."

National Decency Legion Classifies 10 Pictures

Of 10 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, three were approved for general patronage, four were listed as unobjectionable for adults and three were cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Boys' School" (Les Disparus de St. Agil) (French), "Southward Ho!" "Trapped in the Sky." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Charlie Chan in Reno," "Five Came Back," "It Can Happen to You," "The Sun Never Sets." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Maisie," "Panama Lady," "The Zero Hour."

IN HARRISBURG AND PROVIDENCE—

Everybody Wanted to Know—WHO IS MAISIE?

Both M-G-M test campaigns created a lot of talk and good-natured kidding—but the public knew "Maisie" was on the way! It played Loew's Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa. and Loew's State, Providence, R. I., where even the people in the stores were asking "Who the H . . . is Maisie?" Exploit "Maisie" on a note of hilarity! Don't overlook a bet!

NEWSPAPER PUBLICITY AND ADVERTISING: Commencing two weeks in advance, when the picture was booked, the columnists of the three daily newspapers, the Patriot, Evening News, and Telegraph, started kidding "Maisie" in their columns, and have not missed a single day until the regular advance stories commenced. "Maisie" sent the columnists flowers, candy, arm-bands, and other gay presents, all of which were acknowledged in the columns in a good-natured joshing fashion.

On Thursday, Friday, Saturday, before opening, personals were used in the papers, seeking information as to the whereabouts of a girl named Maisie, known as an explosive blonde, and asking that readers telephone Slim, at the theatre number. The theatre cashiers report that they actually received up until Saturday night 76 telephone calls offering to help in response to these ads. Commencing Monday before opening Maisie replied in these personal columns that she had seen Slim's ad and would meet him at Loew's Theatre on Thursday (the opening day of engagement).

Commencing with the first ad, on Saturday before opening, the Harrisburg Telegraph started a contest asking readers to read the ads in the series and write their opinions of them for cash awards, stating that it is a brand new picture and that the picture company is anxious to know if they are the kind that will make people want to see the picture. This contest runs until after the opening day.

The advertising campaign commenced on Saturday before opening, with a 2 column by 4 inch teaser ad, and builds up to the opening.

The newspapers are giving ample space, stories and art in their regular picture columns.

KIDDING THE TITLE: A campaign was started by the employees of the theatre, school children, etc., in fact everybody with whom we could get into contact, by telephone or otherwise, to make a nickname of "Maisie."

STICKERS: 10,000 stickers, bearing the legend "Who Is Maisie?" were used on lamp-posts, buildings, fences, telegraph poles, etc.

BUMPER STRIPS ON AUTOMOBILES: 50 of these were used on the Harrisburg taxicabs. First time used in over a year.

'MAISIE" BADGES: Ribbon-badges were worn by the cashiers and ushers of the theatre and the clerks of Murphy's Dime Store, commencing a week in advance.

NEWS-STAND DISPLAYS: For fifty news-stands in Harrisburgh the attendants were furnished with sun helmets, also paper-weights the size of bricks, and red wooden chairs—all with "Maisie" ad. News-stands are on street corners, and the chairs are placed so that legend on back can be read by pedestrians crossing the street and by automobilists in passing; also the fronts of the backs are lettered, so that if attendant is standing legend can be read there also. It is submitted that this is a humane stunt in this weather, and that the news-stand-attendants have taken hold of it with eagerness and appreciation.

TIME-HONORED SUNDAE: No campaign is complete without a sundae named for the picture, but look at the coverage they get. In Rolle's Restaurant, on Market Street (main shopping street), which is having a "Maisie" sundae, streamers announcing it are placed at the soda counter, and also in every booth on mirrors (the tables are in booths), on the walls of the restaurant, and on the menus. Murphy's Dime Store also has a "Maisie" sundae.

LETTERED NAPKINS: Rolle's Restaurant is distributing 10,000 napkins with legend.

COOL WINDOW CARDS: 100 cards, 14x17, placed in windows, bearing the legend, "It's comfortably cool at Loew's. I'll see you Thursday, 'Maisie'."

WESTERN UNION BOYS DELIVERING POSTER: Five Western Union messenger boys, carrying hand-lettered posters, 30x40, with strip across top reading "Deliver to Loew's Theatre", are riding on busses, street cars, and walking on main streets, for four hours a day, commencing Monday before opening.

GIRLS ON BICYCLES: Six girls on bicycles, each with a letter of the title on her back, rode up and down main streets of town day before and opening day.

GIRLS WITH CUT-OUT LETTERS SIX FEET HIGH: Six girls, dressed in shorts, each carrying a cut-out letter six feet high, in single file, patrolled main streets of town, day before and opening day.

GIRL IN FORD STATION WAGON: Girl, dressed in cowgirl costume, with shorts, and sombrero, and with wagon bannered, drove about main streets, day before and opening day. Wagon is being supplied by Ford dealer.

"MAISIE" CANDY KISSES: 10,000 candy kisses, in cellophane bag, bearing legend, "A Kiss from Maisie", are being distributed by girls, at street corners, from attractive wicker baskets.

GOOD OLD BLOTTERS: 10,000 blotters, bearing the legend "This will blot your letters. 'MAISIE' will blot your cares away," etc., are being distributed in office buildings, stores, and in the buildings on "Capitol Hill" (State employes).

TRICK FOLDERS: 10,000 small oblong folders, with front bearing legend "What I know About Men, by MAISIE", two center pages blank, and playdate on back, are being distributed, and enclosed in packages by one of the stores.

GROCERY BAGS: 10,000 of these bags, imprinted, are being used by the Isaacman Brothers Grocery Stores. These stores have a tremendous circulation.

THE OLD RED SPOT CARD: Cards bearing the legend (containing red spot in center) with word "CONFIDENTIAL" at top and rest of lettering small—"If this spot turns black, see your doctor at once. If it does not, see 'MAISIE'," etc. 10,000 of these are being distributed in every conceivable place.

BENCH IN FRONT OF THEATRE: A bench is being placed in front of theatre, two days before opening, with boys sitting on it and large sign on the back, bearing the legend "We Are Waiting to See 'Maisie'," etc. The bench was borrowed from the Park Commission. The boys will be extra ushers.

GIRL WITH SUITCASE: Blonde girl, in shorts, carrying suitcase, with the legend, "I'm 'MAISIE', the explosive blonde, on my way to Loew's Theatre", will patrol the downtown streets for several hours day before opening.

GIRL IN BED STUNT: This is the honey of them all. Arrangements have been made with Kade's Furniture Store to have a window furnished as bedroom. In the bed will be a blonde girl, apparently asleep; on table beside her will be a clock, with placard bearing the legend: "This is 'MAISIE'. When will she awaken? Step inside and make your guesses. Fifty coming nearest will receive passes to see 'MAISIE'," etc. The police will let this stunt ride until it blocks traffic too much. It will be done the afternoon before the opening of the picture.

RADIO BROADCASTS: Loew's Theatre conducts a daily broadcast in the morning, at nine-thirty o'clock, over Station WHP. "MAISIE" has been "plugged" on this, commencing over a week in advance.

Station WKBO conducts a "man on the street" broadcast, Monday, Wednesday, Friday. "MAISIE" was used on this broadcast on all three days last week, and will be used again the three days of this week.

Paul Walker, columnist of the Harrisburg Telegraph, conducts a daily newsbroadcast, on Station WKBO. He has been kidding about "MAISIE" on his broadcast for over a week.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Modern Themes

History won't repeat itself so often on the screens during the next few months. Modern, up-to-date stories, based on events taking place in the world today, are liberally sprinkled through all programs as the pendulum of production has swung to the making of films which concern themselves with headline happenings and incidents of national and international interest.

Modern stories on the MGM program are "These Glamour Girls," the background of which concerns the activities of society debutantes and the exclusive collegiate set. International intrigue is the setting for Greta Garbo's "Ninotchka," and the doings of the aristocratic smart feminine sets of today are the substance of "The Women." Production as well as thematic detail of "Thunder Afloat" pictures modern naval operations.

Paramount plans "Heil, America," an up-to-date story of American politics and politics and business conditions are the story substance of "Our Leading Citizen." "F.O.B. Detroit" will be a timely story of the automobile industry, and "The World on Parade" is a topical romance melodrama.

Columbia's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" will tell the story of a simple homespun youth who was catapulted into the United States Senate. Walter Wanger's "Winter Carnival" is modern romance melodrama told against a background of collegiate winter sports, and Selznick's "Intermezzo" is likewise a modern romantic melodrama with a musical background.

Warners' "Give Me a Child" has to do with the problems of modern domestic and married life. Auto racing is the background of "The Devil on Wheels."

Life in modern India is the background of "The Rains Came," 20th Century-Fox. Other uptodate subjects on the company's roster are "20,000 Men a Year," "Elsa Maxwell's Hotel for Women," and "A Briton at Yale."

Monogram Sets Three

Three features are being made at Monogram this month. The first to go, "Mr. Wong in Chinatown," third in a series of four productions based on the James Lee Wong stories, features Boris Karloff. The next Tex Ritter musical western has Ed Finney producing and Al Herman directing. This will be followed on June 22nd by E. B. Derr's "The Girl from Rio," in which Movita will be featured. This is the last of a series of eight productions which Mr. Derr made for Monogram on the 1938-39 program.

Production Normal

In this period which marks the turnover time from old to new season production, Hollywood started 10 pictures while finishing nine. With only an exception of two, the new work concerns itself with material for the 1939-40 season.

Three companies started two pictures each. At 20th Century-Fox, a series picture, "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," went into work. It will feature Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Ida Lupino and Alan Marshal, with Terry Kilburn, E. E. Clive and Lionel Atwill. Its companion piece, "Heaven with a Barbwire Fence," is a vehicle for newcomer Glenn Ford, and Nicholas Conti, Jean Rogers and Raymond Walburn.

STARS OF THE SILENT DAYS IN NEW FILM

Famous screen personalities of moviedom's silent days era, including Mack Sennett, Buster Keaton, Chester Conklin, Ben Turpin and scores of others, were back before the cameras this week as Irving Cummings started "Hollywood Cavalcade."

Among the oldtime film headliners who will reenact scenes that made them famous are Jack Costello, George O'Hara, Crete Sipple, Phillip Sleeman, Marshall Ruth and Midgie Dare. Also acting in the picture are Frank Hall Crane and Barry Johnson, both actors in the days when Cummings was a hero in silent films.

Mack Sennett, who contributed much to the picturesque history of Hollywood, will have a double role in "Hollywood Cavalcade." He not only acts in one or two sequences but also is the film's technical advisor. Malcolm St. Clair, who worked for Sennett in the old Keystone comedies, will be back with his old mates when he handles the direction of a silent comedy to be used as a movie within a movie.

Warners started "On Your Toes," in which Eddie Albert, who was outstanding in "Brother Rat," will be featured. The supporting cast includes Zorina, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, James Gleason, Queenie Smith, Gloria Dickson and Berton Churchill. Winding up their contract with the studio, the Dead End Kids began work on "The Dead End Kids at Military School." The group will be supported by John Litel, Cissie Loftus, Frankie Thomas, Aldrich Bowker and Selmar Jackson.

Paramount Starts Two

Despite the excitement over the annual sales convention, Paramount found it possible to start two productions. William Henry, Judith Barrett, William Collier, Sr., Richard Benny, Minor Watson, Dorothy Tree and John Eldredge will be seen in "The World on Parade." Joe E. Brown and Martha Raye are teamed in the leads in "$1,000 a Touchdown." Eric Blore, John Hartley and Sid Saylor head the support.

MGM's contribution to the new work is "These Glamour Girls." It will present Lew Ayres, Anita Louise, Lana Turner, Marsha Hunt, Ann Rutherford, Mary Beth Hughes, Tom Brown, Richard Carlson and Owen Davis, Jr.

Monogram started "Mr. Wong in Chinatown." Boris Karloff is the star and Grant Withers, Marjorie Reynolds and Lotus Long will be featured.

The screen's youngest new star, Sandy, the baby who scored a hit with Bing Crosby in "East Side of Heaven," heads the cast in Universal's "Sandy Takes a Bow."

20th-Fox Completes Three

On the completed side of the book, 20th Century-Fox removed three pictures from the active list. The most important of the group is "Elsa Maxwell's Hotel for Women." In it will be seen Miss Maxwell, Linda Darnell, James Ellison, Ann Sothern, Katherine Aldridge, Lynn Bari, Amanda Duff, Jean Rogers, June Gale, John Halliday, Alan Dinehart, Joyce Compton, Chic Chandler and Gregory Gaye. "Chicken Wagon Family" will star Jane Withers with Leo Carrillo, Spring Byington and Marjorie Weaver. Robert Kellard, Jean Rogers, William Frawley, Helen Freeman, Jay Word and Cora Sue Collins will be in "Harmony at Home."

Two pictures were completed at RKO-Radio. "Memory of Love" will present Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, Kay Francis, Charles Coburn, Helen Vinson, Katherine Alexander, Jonathan Hale and Nella Walker. Lee Tracy is the star of "The Spellbinder,"

Fine Arts finished "Isle of Destiny." Produced in color, it will feature William Gargan, Wallace Ford, June Lang, Gilbert Roland and Katherine DeMille, with Etienne Girardot, Ted Osborne, Grant Richards, Tom Duggan and Harry Woods.

"Escape from Alcatraz" was completed at Columbia. The cast includes Brian Donlevy, Jacqueline Wells, Joseph Crehan, Paul Fix, George Lloyd and Richard Fiske.

Paramount completed "Disputed Passage." It will offer Dorothy Lamour with Akim Tamiroff, John Howard, Gordon Jones, Judith Barrett, Elisabeth Risdon, Oscar O'Shea, Elizabeth Patterson and William Collier, Sr.

New Writing Talent

While every studio continues intensive search for new screen faces, MGM is turning its hunt for new blood to the writing end. The studio began its campaign to develop fresh story ideas by selecting ten college graduates to take a junior writing course under the direction of Kenneth MacKenna, head of the studio story department.

With Richard Schayer, film writer, in a supervisory capacity, the junior writers on Thursday embarked upon a six months' training period during which they will be given opportunity to learn the methods of motion picture production in all departments. Story construction will be concentrated upon. Later, provisional actual screen writing assignments will be made. The candidates, all of whom have been signed to term contracts, include Thomas Seller of Yale; Hunter Hendee, Harvard; Bernard Straub, University of Washington; Joy Davidman, Hunter; Ethel Frank, Vassar; Walter Doniger, Harvard; Robert Metzler, USC; Virginia Rooks, Manhattanville, and John T. Southwell of Grinnell College.

Land of Liberty

(MPPDA)

World's Fair Special

It was a frankly skeptical turnout of professional critics who foregathered at the Carthay Circle theatre in Hollywood to behold what manner of film this gift of the motion picture industry to the nation's World's Fairs might be, and it was a frankly thrilled crowd of Americans who nodded mutual agreement, after it was over, that this is really something, among the most legitimately worthwhile somethings that visitors of either Fair may have opportunity to gaze upon. It is quite the most thorough and rounded and commanding historical document ever spread upon the screen, a stunning item of Americana and a glowing tribute to the narrative power of the cinema.

As has come to be reasonably well known, "Land of Liberty" is composed entirely of sequences from motion pictures produced for the entertainment screen during the past quarter century. A total of 115 feature pictures and short subjects, plus uncounted newsreels were drawn upon for the material assembled and edited by Cecil B. DeMille and his assistants, Herbert L. Moulton, William H. Pine and Francis S. Harmon, to form a connected story of the United States of America during the 150 years ending now. Prepared in consultation with Dr. James T. Shotwell of Columbia University and integrated by excellent narration written by Jeanie Macpherson and Jesse Lasky, Jr., this compilation consumes two hours and 18 minutes of screen time and touches every high spot in American history interestingly, informatively and entertainingly. It also touches the low spots and illuminates the background, all fairly and impartially, winding up with a brief but potent glimpse into the future via the circumstances of the present. It is a striking dramatization of the nation's history and belongs, when the World's Fairs are over, in every American institution of learning and perhaps in every theatre.

A partial list of the players seen in the film names 128 stars and featured players of the present and past. Naturally, these merely enter and leave the picture as the characters they played in the pictures drawn upon appear in the story of the nation and pass on. Presidents Franklin D. and Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, Chief Justice Hughes and others who have lived within the era of the cinema are seen in newsreel bits, the present chief executive opening and closing the film in shots from public addresses which might have been composed for the purpose.

A synopsis of the picture is impracticable. Its incidents span a century and a half of national development, explain and depict the wars and peaces, the territorial purchases, the economic ebb and flow, the natural disasters and the geographical drafts, the personal experiences and the scientific advancements of a people. To tell the history of the United States fully and fairly by means of scenes and sequences from films in the storage vaults was a monumental order. Mr. DeMille made a monumental success of its execution.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Compiled from 1,000 sequences taken from 115 features and short subjects produced by the theatrical motion picture industry. Edited by Cecil B. DeMille assisted by Herbert L. Moulton, William H. Pine and Francis S. Harmon. Historical consultant, James T. Shotwell. Narration written by Jeanie Macpherson and Jesse Lasky, Jr. Sponsored by Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., Will H. Hays, president. P. C. A. certificate No. 5400.

Man About Town

(Paramount)

Comedy and Spectacle

With a keen understanding of the popularity of the Jack Benny radio program, the producer, Arthur Hornblow, Jr., director Mark Sandrich, story writers Morrie Ryskind (who also did the screenplay), Allan Scott and Z. Meyers, abetted by the composers, Matty Malneck, Frederick Hollander and Frank Loesser, the Merriel Abbott Dancers, Malneck's orchestra and The Pina Troupe, designed Jack Benny's "Man About Town" to be a visual conception of a Benny broadcast. The story plot is similar to the running story plots of the weekly air shows. It has Benny in a jam and Benny the butt of the jokes and gags. And, as is sometimes the case on Sunday nights, Rochester (Eddie Anderson) steals the show. He does it with his characterization, dialogue and the two comedy dance sequences in which he is solo featured.

The thematic content, following the radio formula, is amusing. The musical interludes, solos by Dorothy Lamour and Betty Grable and a Miss Lamour-Phil Harris duet, are pleasing and the spectacular glamour girl episodes staged by LeRoy Prinz possess plenty of eye lure.

Running 85 minutes, the various incidents in "Man About Town" are so scheduled that the full entertainment value of each is worked to the limit before proceeding to the next. The whole business was plotted to amuse, and the assurance that it will do so is the item to capitalize on in exploitation that also recognizes the publicity value of the names Benny, Miss Lamour, "Rochester," Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes and Betty Grable.

Previewed at the Paramount Theatre, Hollywood. Upstairs and down in the house, it was evident that the patrons were enjoying the show. —GUS MCCARTHY.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Produced by Arthur Hornblow, Jr. Directed by Mark Sandrich. Screen play by Morrie Ryskind. Story by Ryskind, Allan Scott and Z. Meyers. Music and lyrics by Matty Malneck, Frederick Hollander and Frank Loesser. Music-dance numbers staged by LeRoy Prinz. Victor Young musical director. Holly Morse assistant director. Boys' School

(Columbia)

School Mystery

"Les Disparus de St.-Agil," French production voted the most unusual picture of the year by the Academie du Film in Paris, is being released in this country by Columbia under the title "Boys' School."

The cast is well known to the French cinema audience in the United States. Erich von Stroheim, featured as the German officer in the picture "Grand Illusion," plays the sympathetic and understanding teacher who is misjudged by the rest of the faculty and the students. Armane Bernard, a favorite comedian of the Parisian stage and screen, carries on as the janitor. Serge Grave will be remembered for his performance in "Generals without Buttons" and as the adolescent Guitry in "The Story of a Cheat." Michel Simon, for his characterization as the rum-soaked teacher, was awarded the Pierre Batcheff Prize for the most unusual performance of the year by the Academie du Film.

Three school boys, in a secret club, plan to run away to America, but before their plan can mature "Sorgues" disappears after telling the other students of having seen a man appear and disappear in a classroom late at night. The teaching staff suspect "Herr Walter." Soon afterward "Macroy" disappears as inexplicably as "Sorgues." "Lemel," the intoxicated teacher, is mysteriously murdered. "Baume," the leader of the club, turns sleuth and uncovers a counterfeiting ring of which "Lemel" was a member. The counterfeiters are holding "Sorgues" because he also has discovered the gang. "Baume," "Herr Walter" and the boys rescue "Sorgues" and break up the ring. "Macroy" is returned to the school by the police after

Three Texas Steers

(Republic)

Western Melodrama

The Three Mesquiteers return in a lively story with many twists. John Wayne, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune are the hard riding trio with Carole Landis in the leading feminine role.

Starting with a circus, the story moves on to a ranch and then to a trotting race at the county fair, where Max Terhune drives the circus horse to victory.

"Nancy's" circus is destroyed when her business manager "Ward" sets fire to it in an effort to make her sell a ranch she has inherited. "Ward's" plans are ruined when the Mesquiteers, after much difficulty, save the ranch and return the money which "Lullaby" has lost and later won back for her in the race.

Max Terhune makes little use of his ventriloquism, but his adventures with the tame circus gorilla are humorous. Roscoe Ates, the stuttering comedian of the stage and screen, is the sheriff.

Reviewed in the Republic projection room in New York.—G. S.

Produced and distributed by Republic Pictures Corp. Associate producer, William Berke. Directed by George Sherman. Original screen play by Betty Burbridge and Stanley Roberts. Based on characters created by William Colt MacDonald. Production manager, Al Wilson. Photographed by Ernest Miller. Film editor, Tony Martinelli. Musical Score by William Lava. P. C. It Could Happen To You

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy Melodrama

If, as is often the case at this time of the year, you are shopping around for audience entertainment pictures, which have fresh showmanship potentialities, don't overlook "It Could Happen to You." It made a hit with those who saw its preview in the FWC Uptown theatre and it's a fair bet to repeat in the same way almost every place it plays. There may be some objection in some places because a little too much attention seems to have been devoted to drinking and getting drunk, yet this treatment is necessary to the development of the plot.

For about half the way the picture is a domestic comedy and for the balance it is a mystery melodrama. Everything on the screen seems real and natural, and to heighten the interest, all that happens is what has happened or easily could happen to anyone.

"Mac Winslow," ad company employee, is a simple, trusting fellow, the kind ordinarily known as a sap. He always can come up with great ideas, but instead of profiting himself he permits "Barlow," sharpshooting co-worker, to reap the glory and pay raises. The efforts of his wife, "Doris," to knock some selfish sense into his head are futile. However, attending a party as an uninvited guest, he wins a measure of recognition from the boss. Then he and "Barlow" celebrate with numerous drinks. To this point the story is first class domestic comedy melodrama. But with the finding of a woman's body in his car, the yarn turns mystery melodrama although comedy is not forgotten. Circumstantial evidence forces "Mac's" arrest and his fairweather friends desert him. Only "Doris" remains loyal. Turning detective, she digs up evidence that leads to the arrest of the real killer and, of course, in the ways that women have of doing things, convinces the boss of the advisability of appointing "Mac" to a high paying executive job where he will have an opportunity to demonstrate his abilities.

What the preview audience thought of the show has been noted.—G. M.

Produced and distributed by 20th Century-Fox. David Hempstead associate producer. Directed by Alfred Werker. Screen play by Allen Rivkin and Lou Breslow. Original story by Charles Hoffman. Yankee Doodle Goes to Town

(MGM)

Passing Parade

In this John Nesbitt Passing Parade subject the nebulous character, Yankee Doodle, is created and shows how "he" (spirit of democracy) has carried on since '76, moving ever forward. On the other side of the picture a dyspeptic old gent will have nothing to do with progress, contending that the world is going to the dogs and never will be the same. He appears in each important period of American history always with the same lament. But Yankee Doodle meets every crisis and democracy continues to go forward. The subject is well done and has magnificent background sequences covering the Revolutionary War, Civil War and other important periods in American history. Running time, nine minutes.

Leith Stevens and Orchestra

(Vitaphone)

Variety Program

For those who enjoy swing music Leith Stevens gives his audience his rendition of popular songs. Melvin Allen as the announcer introduces Bobby Hackett's Swing Band, songs by Nan Wynn and Leslie Lieber producing modern tunes from a toy whistle.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Pest from the West

(Columbia)

Keaton Comedy

The poker faced comedian, Buster Keaton, here performs in the manner to which, lo these many years, he has accustomed us. The setting is a Mexican port and the story involves Keaton with a Mexican girl and her two boy friends. Part of the comedy revolves around the changing of native costumes by Keaton after each ducking he experiences. The climax comes when the two Mexicans challenge Keaton to a duel. As expected, the Mexicans dispose of each other, but the comedian's happiness is short-lived, for another Mexican appears on the scene and turns out to be the girl's husband. The cast includes Lorna Gray, Gino Corrado, Richard Fiske, John Tyrrell, Forbes Murray and Bud Jamison. Running time, 18 minutes.

Cousin Wilbur

(MGM)

Our Gang

Spanky and Alfalfa are concerned over the low state to which the club has fallen. Porky and Buckwheat are the only other members. Into this scene steps Alfalfa's cousin Wilbur. Alfalfa and Spanky are a trifle skeptical about Wilbur and his cultured manners but in the interest of the club gladly fall in with the insurance scheme proposed by Wilbur. It's Wilbur's idea to insure members for black eyes. The membership advances rapidly until Butch proceeds to hand out black eyes indiscriminately, thus depleting the treasury. Wilbur comes through handsomely by thrashing Butch and he too hurries to join the club and be insured. Running time, 10 minutes.

Polar Pals

(Vitaphone)

Looney Tune Cartoon

The latest color cartoon of Porky has him at the North Pole living in an igloo and self-appointed protector of the Arctic wild life. A hard hearted hunter invades the domain. Porky drives the menace from the polar regions and sinks his ship. The actions of Porky, the animals and the landscape of the frozen regions are drawn with the usual cleverness of the series.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Lucky Pigs

(Columbia)

Cartoon

This is a clever color cartoon that kids good-naturedly the experiences of sweepstakes winners. Mama and papa pig are very poor. When they win the sweepstakes they go haywire spending the money. They buy a colossal mansion and invite high society of animaland, but they reckoned without the tax collector. He and his men descend like locusts. When the tax collector leaves, the pigs are back where they started. Running time, seven minutes.

Hobo Gadget Band

(Vitaphone)

Color Cartoon

A group of hoboes, vagabonding around the country on a freight train, are forcibly routed in front of a broadcasting station. With their hobo orchestra equipment they enter an amateur contest and win a contract. As they are about to sign a train whistles, the contract is destroyed and they continue to see the country. An entertaining and amusing cartoon.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Prophet Without Honor

(MGM)

Miniature

Little known outside of maritime circles is the story of Matthew Fontaine Maury, a Tennessean by birth, a naval officer by vocation, and the author of many authoritative books on ocean meteorology. Here is pictured Maury's story. Running away from home he joints the Navy and eventually becomes a lieutenant. At 25 he meets with an accident and is crippled for life. He is assigned to the Depots of Charts and Instruments office and there finds a new interest, that of compiling a comprehensive chart of winds and currents, which to a large extent is still used today. The discovery of the Northwest Passage and the United States Weather Bureau system of operation is attributed to him. A southerner, he joins the Confederacy in the Civil War and because he serves as a foreign envoy fails to receive a pardon. Later through the efforts of General Robert E. Lee, Maury is pardoned and ends his days teaching in Virginia. Running time, 11 minutes.

Benchley

This newest in the personal experiences of one Bob Benchley finds the busy critic with time on his hands. So, since he's at the office, the natural thing to do is to go home. It is bridge day at the Benchley home and Bob just doesn't know what to do or where to park. In the cellar, there's a collection of bottles on a shelf and with nary a slip betwix the cup and the lip The Benchley, fortified, disperses the bridge players forthwith. Running time, nine minutes.

Screen Snapshots—Series 18, No. 10

(Columbia)

Film Colony

This issue of the Screen Snapshots is given over to one subject, a charity ball sponsored by Mrs. Basil Rathbone and held on the Rathbones' Bel Air estate. Shown first are preparations for the affair, in which many screen stars participate, including Hedy LaMarr, Rosalind Russell, Dolores del Rio and Claire Trevor. The affair itself is attended by practically all the well known screen personages, who are filmed on arrival, at their tables and while dancing. Running time, 10 minutes.

Spare Time

(GPO)

British Documentary

Students of the British scene will learn more about the British working class from this brightly treated essay on the proletariat at play than from almost any number of films in the ordinary entertainment category. Three industries are treated, coal, cotton and steel, each of them regional in setting. They are typical of Britain at large, however, and American audiences, no less than British, will relish the glimpses of Lancashire kazoo bands, of whippet enthusiasts, Saturday night dancers, Welsh miners' choir and so forth. The picture has form as well as style, is very well photographed and is a glimpse of real life as the Britisher knows it. Cavalcanti produced and Humphrey Jennings directed—and it will be shown at the World's Fair.—Aubrey Flanagan.

Men In Danger

(GPO)

Documentary

Here's another GPO production, again produced by Cavalcanti and this time directed by Patrick Jackson. Designed to record the contemporary battle against occupational disease, the documentary does more than that. It paints with realism and humanity—and no small humor—a vivid picture of industrial Britain, its work, and more especially its workers, photographs its subject with skill and sympathy, and puts over its message with an honesty and directness which mask the artistry behind. Indeed, it is difficult to believe such a subject could have been woven into a film which is not only an accurate picture of industrial Britain and Britons, but a picture which will hold most audiences by its sheer entertainment. Also to be shown at World's Fair.

Angel of Mercy

(MGM)

Passing Parade

Here are depicted some of the highlights in the career of Clara Barton, who was responsible for the formation of the American Red Cross. In the Civil War Miss Barton tried to enlist in the army as a nurse but was refused. Regardless she gathered together some volunteers and established a field hospital. While in Switzerland in 1869, Miss Barton was made an honorary member of the International Red Cross. Miss Barton's efforts to have the United States authorize a Red Cross unit were not realized until 1882, when her persistence finally won out. Sara Haden portrays Miss Barton. The cast also includes Ann Rutherford and Emmet Logan. Carey Wilson is the narrator. Running time, 10 minutes.

Old Glory

(Vitaphone)

Americanism Short

Different from other Porky cartoons "Old Glory" portrays America's fight for freedom since the Revolutionary War. Porky, tired of trying to learn the Pledge of Allegiance, falls asleep. Uncle Sam appears in Porky's dream and shows him the undefeatable and pioneering spirit of the American people through the centuries. Porky awakes and is happy to learn the pledge.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Man-Made Island

(Columbia)

Exposition Island

The Golden Gate International Exposition, situated on a 400 acre man-made island in San Francisco Bay and appropriately called Treasure Island, is shown in highlight in this subject. The shots are many and varied and include a tour of the amusement area. Photographed in color. Running time, 9½ minutes.

The Broadway Buckaroo

(Vitaphone)

Musical Comedy

Red Skelton, master of ceremonies in his New York night club, inherits a fortune with the understanding that he will make good on a ranch. The will does not say where the ranch must be, so Skelton opens a dude ranch night club in Manhattan. For entertainment the Condos Brothers dance, Hank Lawson and his Texans produce the cowboy atmosphere with songs, Maidie and Ray entertain with a trick roping and dancing act, and Red Skelton adds the humor with his chatter.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Community Sing No. 10

(Columbia)

Romantic Songs

The Community Sing series, with the King Sisters and Danny Webb, has in this number tunes, romantic and sentimental, including "All I Do Is Dream of You," "Among My Souvenirs," "I'll See You in My Dreams," "Thanks for the Memory," and "There's a Rainbow Round My Shoulder." Directed by Del Lord. Running time, 10 minutes.

Radio Hams

(MGM)

Specialty

A Pete Smith Specialty, this subject glorifies amateur radio broadcasters, known as "hams." The subject opens with a view of a 14-year-old boy deep in work at his amateur radio station. From there the scene flashes to several factual occurrences in which "radio hams" figured prominently. The subject has been handled in the usual Smith manner and is very entertaining. Every Smith subject has a certain amount of comedy, and this is no exception. In the cast are Jack Carlton, Eleanor Counts, Phillip Terry and Barbara Bedford. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Technique of Tennis

(Columbia)

Sports Issue

The sports subject starts with a tennis match between Lloyd Budge, a professional instructor, and his brother Don, former world's amateur champion and now recognized as the professional number one player of the world. Don's proficiency is attributed partly to Lloyd's instruction. Here Lloyd demonstrates for the beginner the forehand and backhand grips, the shots and the serve. Footwork, timing, and other tennis technique and an exhibition at the net round out the subject. Running time, 10 minutes.

Hollywood Hobbies

(MGM)

Miniature

Tourists in Hollywood take sightseeing buses in which a guide points out the homes of stars. This is a somewhat similar trip except that instead of a bus the vehicle is an open car and instead of pointing out the various homes the commentator points out the stars and their hobbies. And instead of the usual tourists the sightseers are Joyce Compton and Sally Payne. The stars encountered on the tour are Clark Gable, Reginald Denny, Robert Young, Allan Jones and a score more at the charity baseball game between leading men and comedians. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Right Way

(Vitaphone)

Patriotic Subject

Starring Irene Rich, Henry O'Neill and Gabriel Dell, the subject deals with Americanism. A widowed mother who lives with her only son finds that he is a member of a secret organization. Her influence over the boy is lost until the image of her deceased husband appears and tells her how to put the boy on the right path. After an argument the son realizes that his mother is right.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Jockeys Up

(Columbia)

Sports Issue

A jockey's life is not all the riding of thoroughbreds in a race. There are the long hours of training, as this subject points out. To many the most interesting part of the reel probably will be the rigamarole for reducing avoirdupois. Small and many of them weighing less than 100 pounds, they nevertheless go through a severe process of reducing. The subject winds up with a horse race. Running time, 9½ minutes.

For Your Convenience

(Vitaphone)

Unusualities

Another in the series of Color Parade shorts, this is divided into four parts. First, there is a Bowery beautician who, using paints and medicated pigments, recolors black eyes to make them unnoticeable. Parachute packing is a delicate business that must be exercised with the greatest of care. The camera shows just how it is done by an expert. Grinding and brewing coffee in the home by modern electrical methods is described in the third sequence. Finally, in a subject that should interest most women, is depicted a method of removing excess weight from the body by means of rollers, pulleys and other unusual gadgets.—Running time, 10 minutes.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Nurse Edith Cavell

(RKO-Radio)

Biography

The story of Edith Cavell, English nurse, is probably one of the best known episodes of the World War. While the period in her life that the picture will embrace includes the years 1907 to 1919, the theme mainly will concern the inspiring career of a woman who put her love of humanity above either patriotism or the laws of war. The major locale is Belgium and the picture will detail, faithfully and impartially, how Miss Cavell, after first aiding the wounded and hunted son of an old friend, widened her activities into the thousand and one details of an underground railway that smuggled hundreds of fugitive soldiers to safety under the eyes of the enemy. The picture will also narrate the betrayal, her trial and condemnation to death, the efforts made to intercede, and finally her entombment in England's martyr shrine, Westminster Abbey.

Anna Neagle, noted British actress who starred in "Queen of Destiny," "Victoria the Great," "Nell Gwyn" and "Bittersweet,'" will be in the title role. The supporting cast lists Edna May Oliver, George Sanders, May Robson, Zasu Pitts, Sophie Stewart, a Briton who was seen in "Scarlet Pimpernel" and "Things to Come," H. B. Warner, James Butler, Halliwell Hobbes, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Lucien Prival, Rudolph Amendt, Bert Roach, Robert Coote, Frank Reicher and Egon Brecher. Herbert Wilcox, who has guided Miss Neagle in most of her successes, is producing and directing "Nurse Edith Cavell."

Release date: To be determined.

Girl from Nowhere

(Monogram-Derr)

Melodrama

Exhibitors may prepare themselves for a campaign exploiting "Girl from Nowhere" if they realize that its primary appeal is to women. In theme it will tell a story of unscrupulous persecution and attempted criminal blackmail practised upon an innocent girl, a doctor who became her husband, her foster parents and an unfortunate women who had the girl's welfare at heart. This type of plot has long been recognized not only for potent entertainment value but also for showmanship merit.

Therefore, despite the presence in the cast of such able players as Anne Nagel, Warren Hull, Mayo Methot, Lester Mathews, Sarah Padden, Robert Elliott, Weldon Heyburn and others, it seems logical that the show itself would be the basis of exploitation efforts.

In the story, an attempt to take advantage of the secret that the heroine was born in prison brings turmoil into the lives of many. It intensifies the fight between the girl's doctor husband and a rival doctor for medical honors, it precipitates an attempted murder wherein the life of an unscrupulous physician is saved by his rival. Evidence that might bare the secret of the girl's birthplace is destroyed.

The story used is an original screen play prepared by Gayl Newbury and David Silverstein. It is being directed by Lambert Hillyer.

Release date: June 10, 1939.

Miracles for Sale

(MGM)

Mystery Melodrama

Acute understanding of the weird entertainment pattern from which this picture is being cut will be had if one recalls that the list of credits of Tod Browning, the director, includes such features as "The Unholy Three," "Hypnotist," "The Mystic," "13th Chair," "Dracula," "Mark of the Vampire" and "The Devil Doll." The picture is an adaptation of Clayton Rawson's "Death from a Top Hat," a best selling mystery novel of the 1938-39 season.

Fundamentally the story is murder mystery. All but one of the characters are magicians, spiritual mediums, card manipulators, mind readers or devotees of some other form of mysticism. One, a believer in demonology, is slain under weird circumstances. Many are suspected but the one who had been seen last with the victim was slain himself two hours before the killing. A retired magician, who fights magic with magic, solves the crime. Camera and production tricks will accomplish the illusions.

Name value will be represented by Robert Young and Florence Rice, both of whom have been prominent in recent MGM productions, Frank Craven, Henry Hull, Lee Bowman, Cliff Clark, Astrid Allwyn, Walter Kingsford, Frederic Worlock, Gloria Holden and William Demarest.

Release date: July 28, 1939.

The Star Maker

(Paramount)

Career Story

The 1939-40 screen will picture the factual biographies of many notable figures. "The Star Maker" will be the romantic biography of Gus Edwards, writer of song hits, producer and star maker. It will tell the story of a man and his wife, both of whom knew heartache and heartbreak, of a man who never lost faith, who took the good with the bad, and whose career has become a tradition. The story will be songs and music, comedy and melodrama, triumph and disappointment, and in it, along with Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks, Laura Hope Crews and the maestro, Walter Damrosch, will be Charles R. Rogers' new find, 13-year-old Linda Ware.

It should hardly be necessary to remind anyone of the unusual exploitation potentialities in this story idea or in the presence of Mr. Damrosch. Besides, the picture will have Bing Crosby, repeating his success in "East Side of Heaven," singing old and new songs, his romance with Miss Campbell and the comedy which Sparks and Miss Crews will provide. There will be scores of youngsters doing some of the funniest things the screen ever has seen as the star maker searches for talent, and there will be exquisitely voiced Linda Ware, whose range of songs runs from opera and classical to topical and modern lyric numbers.

The Paramount sales force, in convention here, was assured that "The Star Maker" is one of the company's certain-to-click entertainment and commercial prospects.

Release date: August 25, 1939 (tentative).

The Underpup

(Universal)

Girls in Camp

In the "Underpup," it is plain to see that Joe Pasternak has star making ambitions for 11-year-old Gloria Jean. This Scranton, Pa., girl was discovered by the producer a year ago. Her charming simplicity, intelligence and singing voice, plus the quickness with which she takes hold of things, give every indication that she is of the material of which stars are made. Mr. Pasternak is Deanna Durbin's mentor.

The photoplay in which Gloria Dean will make her debut is based on a story by I. A. R. Wylie, which appeared in Good Housekeeping magazine. Grover Jones, who is credited with more than 300 screen plays, did the adaptation. Direction is in the hands of Richard Wallace, maker of "Shopworn Angel" and "The Little Minister," and "The Young in Heart." The story, which will be embellished by considerable music to be sung by Miss Jeans—classics, marches and modern melodies—will trace the adventures of an underprivileged girl in an exclusive summer camp.

The picture is being produced on the same scale as all Mr. Pasternak's pictures. The company chosen will feature Nan Grey and Robert Cummings, both of whom were in "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," Beulah Bondi, now in "On Borrowed Time" and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Virginia Weidler, Margaret Lindsay, C. Aubrey Smith, now in "The Sun Never Sets," comedian Billy Gilbert, Ann Gillis, remembered for "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," Shirley Mills, who is also a screen newcomer, Raymond Walburn, Paul Cavanaugh and Samuel S. Hinds.

Release date: To be determined.

The Spellbinder

(RKO-Radio)

Personal Melodrama

The story of the wily lawyer, adept at devising tricks to win unjust acquittals for his criminal clients, is an old melodramatic entertainment property. Equally old is the story of the lawyer who, tricked by fate, sacrifices his own wellbeing to shield that of one he loves. That, substantially, is the theme of "The Spellbinder." The lawyer concerned kills a murderer, whose freedom he has obtained, so that she will not have to go through life carrying the stigma of being married to a murderer. In the courtroom the unwritten law prevails.

Lee Tracy, who recently made "Fixer Dugan" for his company, will be seen in the leading role. For support he will have Barbara Read, given her first leading role; Patric Knowles, Allan Lane, Morgan Conway, Linda Hays, one of the discoveries in the "Gateway to Hollywood" radio picture talent quest, John Laird, who came to pictures via the same route, and Pierre Watkin.

The story, an original by Joseph Anthony, was adapted by Joseph Fields and Tom Lennon, both of whom have several RKO-Radio writing credits in the records, and it is being directed by Jack Hively, whose two previous efforts were "They Made Her a Spy" and "Panama Lady."

Release date: To be determined.

DELEGATES HEAR BALABAN, AGNEW ON SALES AND GRIFFIS ON FINANCES

Gillham Explains Advertising Plans to Paramount Sales Meeting; Company's Debt Cut $30,000,000 in 3 Years

Exhibitors will be hearing almost immediately what the Paramount sales force heard throughout its optimistic sales convention, last Wednesday through Saturday, on the broad acres of the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, concluding with the dinner which began Saturday night.

The news of the closing and near-closing hours of the annual sales conference, attended by 260 from the field, the studio and home office, was the urge for a new, a stronger sales policy, made by Barney Balaban, president; instructions in the workings of the new trade program, given by Neil Agnew, general sales manager, together with the company's promise to live up to that agreement; insights into the company's financial structure, including the disclosure that half of an original $60,000,000 debt had been paid off in three years, presented by Stanton Griffis, chairman of the Paramount executive committee, and a report by Robert Gillham, advertising director, on the company's advertising and publicity plans for 1939-40.

New Selling Methods

Motion Picture Herald last week, starting on page 26, reported in full on the nature of the 58 features and 85 shorts to be produced in the new season by the company, with the added announcement that $30,000,000 will be spent on the product. Also reported at that time were Mr. Balaban's remarks concerning the company's decision to further its plans for obtaining public likes and dislikes in pictures and talent through polls conducted by exhibitor customers among their public. Listed, too, were the star, player and director rosters lined up for 1939-40 pictures.

New situations demand new methods of selling, Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, told the convention. The Paramount sales organization, he emphasized, should be prepared for "an entirely new method of selling."

He continued: "Government suits, anti-trust actions, trade practice concessions, state and federal legislation, contraction of foreign markets, and uncertainties in the domestic market all affect film revenue and thus the entire industry.

"The situation existing today is a new one. We must find the solution in new formulae. It is my belief that we face an entirely new method of selling—not this year, perhaps; but it is not too early to plan."

Mr. Balaban also told the convention that the studio had reorganized its operations and effected economies so that it is "prepared to meet any emergency that may arise."

Half of $60,000,000 Debt Paid

Paramount has paid approximately half of the $60,000,000 debt it had upon emergence from reorganization, Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, told the convention. This has been accomplished in the last three years. He predicted retirement of the last $2,000,000 of the company's six per cent debentures still outstanding of an original issue of $26,000,000, and reported that $10,000,000 of preferred stock had been converted into common.

SATURDAY NIGHT BOOM GONE, SAYS WINSHIP

R. R. Winship, Phillipsburg, Kan., showman, visiting the RKO Radio's Exhibitors Lounge for World Fair visitors last week, said that Saturday night was passing as a boom night for business in a small town even as the Saturday night bath is one with Nineveh and Tyre.

"They don't flock in any more on Saturday night," he said, "and grosses for several evenings equals the one-time boom night."

Mr. Winship was associated in the theatre business with his father as far back as 1905. It was a few years later before the Winships turned from road shows and converted the opera house into the first film theatre in the town. He operates the Majestic, sole house in the town of 2,000 persons.

Mr. Griffis denied, publicly, that his company officials had "fantastic" salaries or that there were "politics." Said he:

"There are no politics in Paramount today. We have no fantastic salaries at the top. Paramount is owned by 50,000 individuals and institutions, and no single shareholder has as much as two per cent of its stock."

Mr. Griffis also devoted time to Paramount's part in the promotion of the DuMont Television company activities; he then declared that television was not a competitor to motion pictures, but an aid.

Agnew on Trade Practice Program

Neil Agnew, the company's general sales manager, pledged Paramount to obey the trade practice program, when it is approved by the exhibitors, the government, and when it goes into effect. Mr. Agnew spoke on Saturday, the closing day of the convention. He also analyzed the new product, for the sales possibility angle. Mr. Agnew, while talking about the code, added that managers would instruct their salesmen in code matters; and he and Austin Keough, vice-president and general counsel of Paramount, then analyzed, for the benefit of those present, several clauses of the code.

At a closed meeting, Mr. Agnew, Mr. Keough, Charles Reagan, J. J. Unger, Oscar Morgan, and district and branch managers discused the effect of the code on sales policy.

Paramount may, under economic pressure in the countries served, be forced to close some foreign offices, Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board, warned the convention. Then he said:

"That places a greater selling burden upon you fellows here at home, and upon the studio production force in giving you better product to sell. We know that the studio has done its part in giving us the best product in a dozen years, and we are confident that the sales and distribution forces will match their performance."

Mr. Zukor asserted that foreign exhibitors liked the same product as domestic exhibitors. He also asked that greater attention be given by the sales force to the servicing of second run theatres. These theatres, he said, were important because people, in the large cities from which much revenue comes, are reluctant, in recent times, to go "downtown" to the first runs.

Paramount, faced by the "quota" situation in England, met the challenge, and is now receiving dividends; it was done by making quality pictures in England with an international appeal, according to Russell Holman, eastern production representation, who added that "it had required a large investment and the establishment of a large production unit in England.

"Now that large investment is proving not only a substantial economy but a payer of dividends," he concluded.

"The Beachcomber" and "French Without Tears" were cited as two productions of the type Mr. Holman termed "all-purpose."

Gillham Explains Ad Plan

Robert Gillham, director of advertising and publicity, did not name the amount of money to be spent in the new season, for advertising, but declared that "if it's a Paramount Picture, the ultimate consumer will have read about it in the newspaper ads by the time it comes to town.

"We have proved to our satisfaction," he said, "that newspapers provide the best medium for motion picture advertising. The greater portion of our 1939-40 appropriation will be for newspaper space."

Mr. Gillham cited the run of "Union Pacific" in Boston as evidence of experimentation. The picture played the Metropolitan, the Fenway, and then went into the subsequents. The advertising was split among the three types of engagements instead of being "shot" on the first run, Mr. Gillham said, and added that if the returns on the experiment prove it satisfactory, it would be used again.

Mr. Gillham asserted that magazines would be a secondary medium of advertising to newspapers; and also, in remarking on the ballyhooed opening of "Union Pacific" at Omaha, declared that this had attracted so much attention that it would again be used on important pictures.

Others of Paramount's publicity and advertising staffs, who spoke, were Terry De Lapp, publicity director, and Cliff Lewis, advertising director at the studio; Al Wilkie, publicity head and Alec Moss, advertising manager, at the New York home offices; and A. C. Dillenbeck, of Buchanan and Company, advertising agents for Paramount.

De Mille Signs Again

It was announced that Cecil B. De Mille had been signed again as a producer, for four more years, at the end of which he will have been with Paramount for 30 years in that capacity. The announcement, by Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president in charge of studio operations, was cheered by the assembly.

Max Fleischer's feature color cartoon, "Gulliver's Travels" is more than half completed, it was announced; and Lou Diamond, head of Paramount's licensee department on this feature, announced the signing of contracts with 22 additional manufacturers who will sponsor novelties based on characters who will appear in the picture.

Lloyd Douglas, author, was a guest speaker. "Disputed Passage," now under production, is his work. Excerpts from the picture were shown the delegates.

The convention "wind-up" was at the Cocoanut Grove in the Hotel Ambassador. The evening, also "in comemoration of the 50th anniversary of Edison's invention of the motion picture camera," was broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System. Jack Benny was master of ceremonies.

TELEVISION GETS FIRST EXHIBITOR PROTEST; MAJORS REFUSE PRODUCT

Schaefer Tells New Jersey Allied It Has Been Misinformed in Assuming That RKO Is Providing the Films

Even as the New Jersey Allied unit made the first public exhibitor protest against the use of films by television, and even as exhibitor leaders were foreseeing competition to theatres from new television set entertainment in cafes and hotels, the National Broadcasting Company, providers of the first regular daily television service in the New York area, was turning to 16mm films to keep its programs going. Also, the television industry was threatened with a "boycott" by the major motion picture companies.

Available—at a Price

As in the case of the anti-radio campaign, the exhibitors' charges are that television is a competitor to theatres; and that motion picture companies should not aid a competitor to their accounts.

The "boycott" is entirely unofficial. Television executives have been told they may obtain old pictures—at a price they are unwilling to pay. The only companies offering films at a comparatively low price to the television industry are the independents; and their material has not been deemed entertainment-worthy; not enough, at least, for an industry that must "click" with the public in the first year, in order to create a market; and, which must create that market to lure sponsors into paying huge sums for programs, and to convince the Federal Communications Commission that television is big enough to warrant commercial licensing.

The endeavor to supplant 35 mm with 16 mm film for television use has gone this far: the NBC has ordered, from the Holmes Projector Company, of Chicago, a special 16 mm projector adapted for television. The narrow gauge film will be bought from amateur commercial and other sources; there may even be special production. There are several hundred thousand feet of 16 mm. film in NBC vaults now.

Reduces Hours

The lack of enough and suitable, 35 mm film has forced the NBC to reduce the hours of film telecasts weekly. The original schedule called for about 23 hours weekly of "test" programs, consisting of film. These test programs were for demonstration of sets in stores; installation and repairing of sets in the home. The film material was old, commercial, and otherwise dull. In any event, it has been used up, and cannot bear too much repetition. Since April 30, the opening telecast day, the NBC has used about 1,000,000 feet of 35 mm.

This lack of enough 35 mm material has also forced the NBC to increase the hours of "live" telecasts, from the original two hours per week to the present (at the beginning of this week) 10 hours per week.

The television committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America has formulated no policy. The motives mentioned govern the attitude of the major companies individually. On the television committee of the MPPDA are Harry Buckley, of United Artists; Charles Moscowitz, of Loew's; and Paul Raibourn, of Paramount.

C. W. Farrier, television "coordinator" for the NBC, last week protested the unofficial "boycott" of television by the majors, in this fashion:

"The time for the film companies to work with us is now, when we are shaping our program policies. They ought to come in and get their feet wet, as we are doing. . . . The film companies should not expect to reap rewards upon our efforts alone. The two mediums should work together. The film industry's share of the cost would be a fraction of our own."

16 MM. NON-THEATRICAL ASSOCIATION FORMED

With a public declaration of friendliness towards the 35 mm. entertainment industry, the Allied Non-Theatrical Film Association has been formed in New York. Its purposes are to promote the use of "visual education," to distribute information, and to otherwise aid the non-theatrical field. The association is reported chiefly concerned with use of 16 mm. films in schools and other places where 35 mm. is not feasible.

Officers are Bertram Willoughby, president; Harry Kapit, first vice-president; William K. Hedwig, second vice-president; Thomas J. Brandon, executive secretary; Harry Post, treasurer.

He said that the NBC is now spending $500,000 per year on television.

The NBC is expected, in adapting 16 mm. to use much foreign "tourist propaganda," inasmuch as there is much available in that width.

The exhibitor protest against the use of films by television broadcasters for their programs was in an open letter to RKO released by George Gold, president of Allied States Association of New Jersey, which said:

"It has come to our attention that RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., has been furnishing films for use over television systems. We are greatly surprised that any producer should provide a source of competition to its exhibitor customers.

"We strongly oppose such action by any distributor-producer, and urge that you discontinue this practice."

Schaefer's Office Replies

Mr. Schaefer's office replied this week in a letter that Mr. Gold was "misinformed" in assuming that RKO was furnishing films to television; and that the trailer was for use of a new medium for exploitation of features product. He then said:

"Please be assured that we are fully conscious of our responsibility to our exhibitors. We are naturally interested, just as you are, in the progress of television and in the effect which it will have upon the entertainment field. At the present time we do not know of any case where a theatre in this country is equipped to project television pictures and inasmuch as we understand that less than one thousand home sets have been sold in the metropolitan area since the official beginning of telecasts, the present outlook of threat to the motion picture theatres seems very small indeed. Because of the fact that there are so few home sets in use, that regular telecasting is confined in this area to two hours a week and that many technical problems remain yet to be solved before there is any possibility of chain telecasting (President Lohr of NBC has estimated that it will be at least five years before chain telecasting will be possible), we do not feel apprehensive at the present time of encroachment by television on the motion picture theatre.

"Naturally, as an important company in the amusement field, we cannot ignore the fact that television is now an actuality. The interest of the exhibitors is our own interest and our efforts to understand and keep abreast of developments in the field of television are toward the end of protecting and coordinating our joint interests."

Moss Cites Competition

B. S. Moss, New York theatre operator, last week declared that television was a competitor and that exhibitors should think, now of combatting it.

In New York, the Baird Television Corporation, which has installed its equipment in the Gaumont British offices at 1600 Broadway, in order to demonstrate the practicability of large screen television images in the theatre, announced that the equipment "shortly" will be ready for display. The Baird system is used in many English houses; and upon large Baird theatre screens over there have been seen prize fights, crew races and the Derby.

Installations Increase

The New York theatres in increasing numbers have been installing television receivers in their lobbies. Demonstration of their appeal to the public came two weeks ago, when the Baer-Nova fight was telecast, the first such telecasting of a prize fight in this country. The lobbies and lounges of the Paramount, Little Carnegie, Earle, and other New York theatres were jammed with patrons, for the event.

In New York last week, also, Donald Hunter Munro, at the Columbia Broadcasting System offices, and a "loan" from the television section of the British Broadcasting Corporation, declared that television directors should not worry about program material.

Department Store Network

The American Television Corporation announced in New York last week its plans for a television network of department stores; this would use the system tried in Bloomingdales, whereby mannikins and the like demonstrated before a television receiver in a room on one floor, and the scene was received on sets placed throughout the store. Ira A. Hirchsmann, vice-president and sales director of that store, and a noted merchandising figure, has spoken highly of the idea.

The plan provides specifically that leading stores will be equipped with "tele-sales," the apparatus including cameras that scan filmed as well as living subjects. A filmed continuity promoting the products of several national advertisers will be shown hourly in each store so equipped.

While motion picture industry leaders debate the threat of television, and television heads debate the practicability of other mediums than 35 mm film, the program directors of television go ahead with new "live talent" programs, and in the last several weeks have produced several "firsts," other than the Baer-Nova fight.

Telecast on Friday evening last was "Television's First Cabaret," featuring Ella Logan, Buck and Bubbles, Bob Neller, and others. A typical cabaret setting was used, and the talent was well known.

Another "event" in the short life of television as entertainment was the telecast from the "Sun Valley Carnival" at the New York World's Fair on last Thursday afternoon. The international ice revue, and various noted skaters and ski jumpers were seen.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

WE'VE JUST LEARNED about the swell invention of the Rochester, Minnesota, Chamber of Commerce. Rochester, as you know, is the home of the Mayo brothers hospital, and a perfectly well person is almost as great a rarity there as a native New Yorker is in Manhattan. But on to the invention, for the benefit of those movie moguls who have been to Mayo, and for those contemplating a visit. . . .

It's a "post-operative vest," equipped with a zipper panel, which when raised discloses with graphic fidelity the results of the surgeon's work, complete with scars and stitches hand-painted on flesh-colored cloth.

Seems that almost every one who leaves Rochester wants to recite the details of his operation. He not only wants to talk about it, but, like a good salesman, he wants to visualize his presentation by exhibiting the scars down to the last suture.

There's nothing more boring than to have to listen to the story of another person's operation when you want to talk about yours. So the important thing is to be faster on the draw—and that's why they have developed this neat little ever-ready weskit with a patented zipper panel. While the other fellow is tugging at his vest buttons, you merely give the zipper a pull and say, "four and a half hours on the table and 168 stitches——."

James H. Harper, a temporarily inactive short-subject film producer, out on Long Island, got a hankering for an Alaskan husky-dog, some two years ago, and bought one from a breeder in Nenana, Alaska, but the dog was too young and died.

A few weeks ago, he happened to write the breeder and mentioned how tough things had been. Next thing he knew he got a letter telling him he ought to have a couple of huskies to cheer him up, and so the breeder was sending him some as a present. Came the dogs—and a $99.45 express bill. They're now both reposing in stalls at the Speyer Hospital for Animals, courtesy American Express Company, pending payment of expressage.

TRENCHES AND VAULTS READY AT WEMBLEY

While new treaties, accomplished or projected, are repelling if not dispelling the war shadows over Europe, the film industry in England continues making plans for any eventuality. Should there be a conflict, the companies would move their base of operations to Wembley, a suburb of London, where trenches have been dug and precautions taken against air raids.

Twentieth Century-Fox has built 30 vaults where negatives, prints and company records will be stored in case the company is forced to evacuate its London headquarters. Also, Truman H. Talley, Movietone News executive, believing that war will break out in North Africa, where Italy is seeking French possessions, has set up headquarters at Tripoli, where Ettore Villani, Rome supervisor, is training a staff. Mr. Talley has been in Madrid, where he reestablished Spanish headquarters.

Herman Wobber, Twentieth Century-Fox sales head, said on returning from Europe recently that "as long as the element of uncertainty exists we have something to worry about and we here must increase our efforts to offset it."

It was really hot for the patrons of the Lyric theatre at Plattsburg, Missouri, the other evening. On one of the hottest nights of the year, Tom Wilhoit, Lyric owner, found someone had deposited a string of dead fish in the alley in back of the theatre, which made it highly impracticable to turn on the air conditioning system, which draws its air supply from that region.

Photography-is-a-wonderful-thing Dept.

A "photo-fit" method said to permit perfect fitting of suits and other garments on a person by utilizing his or her silhouette is the subject of a patent (No. 2,159,035) awarded to Edward J. McGrath, Jr., of Cleveland, Ohio. The need for trying on a number of suits is eliminated, according to the claim. The person stands in front of a translucent screen. A light in the rear casts a full-sized silhouette on the screen. On the opposite side of the screen is a series of patterns which correspond to various standard suit sizes. Both the screen and the silhouette may be manipulated so as to superimpose the person's shadow within the nearest pattern for visibly indicating the conformance of the person's outline to the standard pattern or size suit. Alterations in the suit can then be made accordingly.

The silhouette so superimposed upon the pattern may be photographed so as to have a permanent record of the original fit.

BEEFSTEAK in capsules, golf in the comfort of bed and education by hypodermic injection will be among the possible wonders of the future to be dramatized by Bristol-Myers Company as a part of its World's Fair exhibit.

Outdoing both Buck Rogers and Grover Whalen in one fell swoop, Bristol-Myers has devised a fantastically humorous preview of "The World of Day After Tomorrow," consisting of a motion picture of civilization as it might be in 6939 A. D.

With script by Fred Allen, who broadcasts weekly for the company, and designs by Donald Deskey, the presentation does more than amuse by including seven Bristol-Myers products, just by way of advertising.

All food will be taken in capsule form 5,000 years hence, if Bristol-Myers has consulted the right crystal-gazer. Knives and forks will be replaced by tweezers. Houses will be made of whatever is developed to replace glass, and doorbells will be unnecessary because visitors will be able to look inside to see if anybody is home.

Automobiles will be almost obsolete due to developments in aerial transportation, but Allen has conceived a three-deck car for the old-fashioned few who may still cling to motoring in 6939. Golf in bed will be achieved through the miracle of television and mechanized clubs with which hooks, slices and missed putts are impossible.

What happens in the advertising business when an irresistible force (a space salesman) encounters an immovable object (a space buyer) is being recorded on film for The New Yorker and posterity.

The new commercial film, being produced at the Astoria Studios of Audio Productions, stars Marc Connelly, the playwright, and Franklin P. Adams, the newspaper columnist who sometimes doubles as a radio star.

Mr. Connelly plays the role of a salesman with a one-track mind, who is out to sell a bill of very good goods to FPA, who knows all of the answers and most of the questions. As usual, the space buyer gets the verdict.

R. H. Fleischmann, publisher of the New Yorker, hopes to have a print of the film entombed in the Time Capsule at the New York World's Fair, as a warning to space buyers of 6939.

J. A. Tanney, president of S.O.S. (Sales on Sound) Cinema Supply Company, in New York, receives some rather unique mail from the inlands, from exhibitors inquiring about equipment for their theatres. One such arrived the other day from a small town in Florida. Seems that the exhibitor, still using silent films, had contemplated changing over to sound, after these ten years of sound, and had written his order for equipment to S.O.S., setting down style numbers and whatnot from the S.O.S. catalogue he had in hand. But his theatre burned to the ground, taking with it all of his records, including the order to S.O.S., the catalogue and S.O.S.'s address. Stumped, he went out and asked the Post Office Department in New York to search for S.O.S., and the job was done in a jiffy.

Some More New Taxation Proposals

Even as Governor Herbert H. Lehman, of New York State, signed a bill which virtually assures a tax on theatre admissions in that state, exhibitors of Michigan kept a wary eye on their legislature, which has received several proposals for similar attacks on the boxoffice.

Admission Tax for Housing

The New York State threat comes with the signature of the Governor on three slum clearance and low rent housing measures, which permit taxation of admissions to raise revenue. Since such a method seems easiest to law makers and public officials generally, it is feared they will adopt it.

The bills do have a taxation "ceiling" of one cent on 50-cent admissions; admissions of more than this, bring a levy of two cents. The bills provide for other means of taxation; however, they also provide that any or all means of taxation be used.

In Detroit, the adjournment of the legislature at the end of the month is expected to aggravate, rather than alleviate, the taxation threat. A three per cent tax was defeated four weeks ago; however, it was by close vote; and, inasmuch as all of the politicians admit more money is needed by the state, a special tax bill may be rushed through on the last day, or a special session be called to consider a new tax bill.

Governor Heil of Wisconsin has abandoned the sales tax idea for a substitute measure which includes a three per cent theatre admission tax.

Film Carriers Affected

In Illinois, the Senate has passed a bill prohibiting trucks from using main highways on Sundays and holidays, to prevent congestion of traffic. The bill applies to film carriers. The Senate also has under consideration a bill prohibiting film shows longer than two hours, unless there is an intermission of 15 minutes at the beginning of each hour in excess of two hours.

In Quebec, it appears as if the closing of all of the city's theatres in protest against the imposition by the city of a 10 per cent tax, has not made the city surrender; and, in fact, J. Arthur Pacquet of Auditorium, Ltd., an exhibitor leader, stated this week that the use of films in halls and schools without payment of the tax would precipitate a "real" fight. Mr. Pacquet last week proposed that the city government pay exhibitors the losses they sustain in operation under the tax.

The Nebraska legislature, adjourned after 111 days' session, having defeated industry bills calling for theatre divorcement, exchange taxes, compulsory booth toilet installation, and use by motion picture people of their right names. The legislature also defeated the amendment to the fair trade act, outlawing free shows, but it did pass a bill outlawing walkathons and the like.

In Hartford, Connecticut, the exhibitors' representatives this week were awaiting the Governor's signature to a bill legalizing Bingo for non-profit institutions, upon local option, a measure which excludes use of Bingo by the exhibitors.

Bureau of Mines Revises Four Films

The Bureau of Mines, U. S. Department of the Interior, has completed the revision of four films on petroleum. The films, which have been brought up to date, present material pertaining to the manufacture of gasoline, the manufacture of lubricants, the proper use of lubricants in the operation and care of automotive equipment, and a study of the evolution of the oil industry.

Copies of the films, which are all silent, are available in 16 mm. or 35 mm. size for schools, churches and the like.

Research Council Hits Double Bills

Announcement of an official stand against double bills by the Motion Picture Research Council was made by Ray Lyman Wilbur, president, at the Open Meeting of the board of directors and the Coordinating Committee of organizational representatives, held in San Francisco.

Dr. Wilbur pointed out that this action had been taken mainly due to the fact that a survey of weekend programs showed that fewer than one-quarter of these were entirely of "family" suitability. "The problem thus created for parents and teachers who wish to guide the motion picture choices of young people is a serious one," he said.

"For a study we listed every feature picture shown at 47 neighborhood theatres in San Francisco on the Saturdays and Sundays of one year. These pictures were then grouped according to the preview ratings provided by various previewing organizations.

"A total of 3,916 programs (nearly 8,000 pictures) shown in the 47 theatres were analyzed with a view to determining what proportion of them was suitable for family audience.

" . . . only 21 per cent of the programs analyzed would have received a clear bill of suitability for family audiences by the previewing groups. One out of five programs was composed of films considered not suitable for children to see, and four out of five programs contained material considered definitely unsuitable. Thirty-seven per cent of the programs, or more than one out of three, contained material which made them suitable only for adult audiences in the opinion of the reviewers listed."

Film, Radio Heads In Fund Appeal

More than 300 members of the film industry, stage, radio, music and allied amusements attended a luncheon at New York City's Hotel Edison Monday in honor of Benny Goodman, orchestra leader, and staged in behalf of the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees.

The affair launched the efforts of the Amusement Division in carrying on the expanded program of the three major Jewish agencies for overseas needs: the Joint Distribution Committee, the United Palestine Appeal, and the National Coordinating Committee.

Eddie Cantor acted as toastmaster, with other speakers, including Ben Bernie, chairman of the luncheon; Rabbi William Rosenblum of Temple Israel, and Mr. Goodman.

Among those on the dais were David Bernstein, chairman of the Amusement Division; Albert Warner, co-chairman; Jack Cohn, vice-chairman; William Morris, treasurer; Commissioner Paul Moss, Arthur M. Loew, Louis Nizer, Phil Baker, Harry Hershfield, Henry Samstag and Lou Holtz. Other committee leaders are Barney Balaban and Nate J. Blumberg, both of whom are vice-chairmen.

The Amusement Division's quota is $225,000, with Mr. Cantor announcing generous contributions from Nicholas M. Schenck, Murray Silverstone, Barney Balaban, Albert Warner, David Bernstein, Arthur M. Loew, Lee Shubert, Al Jolson, Motion Picture Art Fund for German Refugees, Herman Robbins, Benny Goodman, Ben Bernie, Jack Robbins, Arthur Mayer, Harry Goetz, William and Harry Brandt, Arthur Murray, Columbia Pictures (Harry and Jack Cohn), Louis Bernstein, Warner Bros. Pictures, Donald Flamm, Al Goodman, Jewish Theatrical Alliance, William Morris, family of the late Sol Brill, Leo Brecher, Jack Goetz, Harry Goodman, Mrs. Benny Goodman, Louis Frisch, Sam Rinzler and Carole Saxe.

Stage, radio and screen stars contributed their services to the Christian Refugee Benefit held at Madison Square Garden Thursday night, including Mary Martin, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Ethel Waters, William Gaxton and others.

The benefit, broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System network, was sponsored by the American Committee for Christian German Refugees, of which Harry Woodburn Chase, chancellor of New York University, is chairman.

A stage show in the New York Winter Garden Thursday night inaugurated the Christian German Refugees' drive to raise $600,000.

Among those who were to appear in the show are Eddie Cantor, Sophie Tucker, Victor Moore, Tallulah Bankhead, Raymond Massey, William Gaxton, Fredric March, Florence Eldridge, Kitty Carlisle, Ethel Waters, Sheila Barrett, Bill Robinson, Mary Martin and Hildegarde.

Independents Organize

Hollywood independent producers are planning an association, to handle producers' relations with guilds and unions. At a pre-organization conference, the following companies were represented: Victory, Reliable, Metropolitan, Supreme, Arcadia, Gateway, Colony, Excelsior, and C. C. Burr.

The Esquire theatre, operated by H. and E. Balaban in Chicago, is the subject of an entire page in the latest issue of the Encyclopedia Britannica, which has just come out. The Esquire is represented as an outstanding example of modern, motion picture architecture.

LIMITING ROYALTY COVERAGE TO ONE CAMERAMAN DRAWS NEWSREEL IRE

Expected Rota System in Canada; Hoped to Show Its Handicaps in U. S., But Washington Adopted It

The European system of "rota," the limiting of the coverage of a newsreel story to one cameraman to represent all five newsreels, which long has plagued the newsreel editors of Europe, but has been popular with the governments of the dictator countries, apparently received tremendous impetus in this country as a result of the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England.

Newsreel Records

The coverage of the Royal visit, however, by the various related media: newsreels, radio and television, did set up some records: (1) The newsreels used more men and more footage on the King and Queen than on any visiting out-of-country celebrities in the history of the screen; (2) Radio sent broadcasts to every small corner of the globe; (3) The King and Queen were telecast for the first time on these shores. Besides, the newsreels rushed prints of the Thursday to Saturday coverage aboard Saturday afternoon's trans-Atlantic clipper, and London saw the pictures Monday night.

Regardless, many a newsreels executive in New York complained of the "rota" system. Newsreels in this country have fought the practice except in those few instances, such as in an airplane or a submarine, where physical reasons restrict the shooting to one cameraman. When plans were first being laid for the coverage of the King and Queen in Canada, both newsreels and newspaper photographers were told that, following the precedent set in England, the Canadian coverage had to be rota save for the far shots that mean little.

Limited in Washington

When the coverage in Canada had been set, the newsreels went to work on plans for coverage in this country, in the hope of doing such a fine and complete job that it would show by example the handicaps that rota coverage enforced on news media. However, the rota idea already had reached Washington, the newsreels found, and many of the best shots were limited to one cameraman, shooting for the all the reels. These included the locations in the station, where the President first received the King and Queen, the location at the White House on the arrival of the royal party, the riding shot along with the car of the King and Queen, and the location in the Garden Party.

When it came to coverage in New York the newsreels were more successful in fighting for the right of individual coverage, the reception at Columbia University being the only part of the story with coverage restricted to one man except for long shots. As a result, when it came to issuing the special on Saturday, the interchange of blue prints held many of the newsreels up on their releases, and those that got out immediately had to release without the Columbia material.

The precedent set by the enforced rota arrangements had its effect in causing several of the newsreels to combine on the entire story and interchange material gathered both in the New York and Washington locations.

The system is criticized by theatre folk on the grounds that it tends to make all the newsreels the same, scene for scene and story for story, while cameramen say that in addition to cutting down the number of men that would have been used to one fifth the number, it robs the coverage of the competition and initiative needed for a good picture.

MARCH OF TIME REEL INTERPRETS VISIT

March of Time—Number 11—interprets the visit to the United States of King George the sixth and Queen Elizabeth as one aspect of a concerted effort on the part of England to win America's friendship.

Starting with the World's Fair, at which Great Britain has exhibits said to occupy a greater area than any of the other 58 nations participating, the reel traced the 20 years leading up to the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia at Munich and the new "Peace Front" strategy, as well as England's current rearmament program.

Whether the United States should give assistance to any nation in the event of war, the March of Time emphasizes, remains up to the American people.

Movietone News

A special newsreel subject of the visit of the King and Queen of England to the United States, scored in seven languages and rushed to every part of the world by the fastest means of transportation, was made by Twentieth Century-Fox Movietone News.

As the various scenes of the trip were rushed to the New York headquarters of Movietone News, General Manager Edmund Reek had them recorded in the language of the country for which the prints were designated. The specials for South and Central America were scored in Spanish and Portuguese and the negatives for Germany, France, Italy, Spain and the Orient in the language of those countries.

To get the most complete coverage possible of the King and Queen's visit, camera units were brought east from as far west as Kansas City for the job. Emile Montemurro, mid-western supervisor operating from Chicago, was brought east, with Jack Barnett from Kansas City and Webber Hall from Memphis. Al Waldron was called up from Miami as was M. D. Cooke of Norfolk, Va. Larry Ellis, New England Supervisor, also was brought to the scene of activity. These men supplemented the regular New York and Washington camera units composed of cameramen Jack Painter, Carl Larsen, Al Gold, William Story, Larry Kennedy, Jess Kizis, John Tondra and Sol Roizman. Sound engineers handling the recording were Lew Walz, James Foreman, James Gleason, Philip Gleason, Louis Girolani and E. M. Williams.

News Editor Jack Haney had personal charge of the units photographing the Royal visitors, aided by Associate Editors A. A. Brown, Art Sorenson and Jack Gordon in New York and Tony Muto, Washington supervisor.

Fourteen Movietone News camera units and six sound engineers covered the activities in Washington and New York.

News of the Day

The largest detail of cameramen ever assigned to a public event covered the American journey of King George and Queen Elizabeth for News of the Day, the newsreel claims. Twenty photographers and soundmen, representing the New York, Washington, Philadelphia and Boston staffs of the newsreel were stationed at strategic points at the Capital, Red Bank, New Jersey; New York City, the World's Fair, and Hyde Park, N. Y., to film the highlights of the British rulers visit to the United States.

More than 20,000 feet of film were taken of the American journey of the British monarchs. Films were shipped across the Atlantic by airplane. The Pan-American liner No. 21, sister-ship of the Yankee and Atlantic clippers, left Port Washington, N. Y., at 3 p. m. on Saturday, June 10, with News of the Day's print of the visit to America of the British rulers. The material included the pictures of the two day's stay in Washington, the arrival at Red Bank, N. J., and the Battery aboard a U. S. destroyer, the journey through New York and two or three shots of the World's Fair visit. The P.A.A. 21 arrived at Marseilles at 3:12 p. m. Monday, June 12 (11:12 a. m. EDST.). The print was subsequently flown to London and shown to the British public on Monday night. A double shipment of the film was sent by steamship in case of emergency.

The newsreel coverage was headed by the following cameramen and soundmen: U. K. Whipple, Irving Korenman, Teddy Rickman, James McKeon, Rhody Green, Kenneth Upton, John Bockhorst, Chic Peden, all of the New York office; James Seeley of the Philadelphia office, Nemo Gaskill of the Philadelphia office and Charlie Mack and Tommy Bills of the Washington office. The cameramen, working under the direction of M. D. Clofine, Editor; Charlie Mathieu, Managing Editor; Walter Bredin, City Editor, and with Eugene Boyd, Morton McConnachie and Carl Leo as contact men.

Scenes of President Roosevelt's greeting of their majesties at Union Station on Thursday, the parade along Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House, the garden party at the British Embassy, with such distinguished guests as J. P. Morgan present, were photographed from every advantageous position. Similar preparations were in force in New York and at the World's Fair. Cameramen arrived at the crack of dawn at Red Bank, N. J., and at the Battery to take pictures of the arrival at those points. There were also photographers aboard the coast guard cutter accompanying the destroyer and in special stands at the Battery.

Photographers were stationed along the West Side Highway, in Central Park, at 96th Street and at various locations at the Fair. There were 12 cameramen and soundmen at the World's Fair, stationed in Perylon Hall, on the roof of the New York City building, on the roof of the Food Building North on Constitution Mall, on the roof of the Yugoslavia Building, on an official stand in the Court of Peace, in the Federal building, on another official stand erected especially for newsreel cameramen in front of the British Pavilion and in and outside of the garden of the British Pavilion.

Contact men Boyd and McConnachie and Leo were busy for a week arranging the details of the New York City coverage.

Among the pictures which the cameramen obtained were those of the King and Queen and the President and Mrs. Roosevelt outside the church at Hyde Park.

HOW NEWSREELS COVERED ROYALTY

my Craven, at Union Station, covered the arrival of the Royal train,

Hugo Johnson was the only newsreel cameraman allowed to cover the traveling shots from the station to the White House. He had to dress in an army uniform so that his position on the tank accompanying the Royal Car would be in harmony.

Lou Hutt and Urban Santone covered the King receiving the 21 gun salute. Phil Coolidge, Al Mingalone, Eddie Morrison and Arthur Menken covered the route from the station to the White House from specially constructed platforms at various spots and Jack Blum covered the arrival of the party at the White House, a shot made from the rear of the White House with the fountains, the troops and the wide lawns shown.

All of this film was shipped in sections as made and planes were held so that these shipments could reach New York in time to be made up into a full length reel on the reception in Washington. This reel was playing in the Broadway theatres in time for the last show and several reels were sent out to the coast, reaching there in time for screening on Friday.

On Friday most of the same crew who covered Thursday's activities covered the King and Queen on their visit to Mt. Vernon, the CCC Camp and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington.

On Saturday Craven, aboard a Coast Guard Cutter, covered the entrance to New York Harbor and the arrival at the Battery, where the coverage of the most colorful day of the visit began. Every available cameraman, both staff and freelance, was on duty with a helper assigned to each to rush the film in as fast as it was made. Douglas Dupont was on the stand at Pier A and Hugo Johnson up in the Whitehall Building covered the arrival at the Battery. Sanwald and Morrison covered from locations along the West Side Highway and Phil Coolidge was in Central Park.

Arthur Menken caught the procession as it came out of the park and went along 96th Street and then the men who had been sent out to the Fair picked up the story. Al Mingalone, Jack Blum, Henry DeSiena, Urban Santone, all at special locations on the different buildings between the entrance gate and the Federal Building pictured the enthusiastic welcome that the crowds gave the Royal visitors.

After this, Hugo Johnson and Tommy Craven went on up to Hyde Park and covered the few activities that newsreel men could get in on.

RKO Pathe News

The visit of Britain's King and Queen to their Canadian empire and to the United States has been reported pictorially in seven issues of Pathe's newsreel. Cameramen Bob Donahue, Howard Winner, Tommy Baltzell, George Dorsey and Bill Deeke shared the honor of filming the royal couple.

From coast to coast, as Canadian subjects and American friends welcomed the King and Queen, the highlights of the trip were brought to theatre screens within a few hours of their occurrence. Among the most interesting newsreel shots were those of the Blackfoot Indian tribes of Alberta staging a reception for the royal pair; the French-speaking people of Quebec welcoming their sovereigns; Her Majesty renewing old friendships at a Canadian veterans' hospital; the King pleading for peace at the dedication of a war memorial in Ottawa.

Universal Newsreel

The visit of the King and Queen was covered by 12 Universal Newsreel cameramen. At the first announcement of the visit of Their Majesties, the planning got under way. First, camera positions were chosen.

As Their Majesties passed each cameraman and went on towards the White House, the scenes that he had made were rushed to waiting planes at the airport and early Thursday afternoon the film was ready for a script to be written and to be voiced by Graham McNamee, Universal Newsreel's Talking Reporter.

Their Majesties' arrival in New York at the Battery and the trip through the streets to the World's Fair was covered in a similar comprehensive manner—this time with fifteen cameramen lining every strategic point along the route.

The ceremonies at the Fair itself were covered with an eye to putting the negative film on the Pan American Clipper Ship, PAA-21, leaving her Port Washington base that afternoon. The huge flying boat arrived at Marseilles on Monday with 25,000 feet of newsreel material that was rushed by charted plane to releasing centers throughout Europe.

The final chapter in the Newsreel coverage of the visit was at Hyde Park, where informal pictures and their attendance at the President's church were filmed.

Russell Lowden, cameraman employed by the Canadian Government, has received a pair of gold cuff links from King George the Sixth in appreciation of the private screenings arranged for the royal couple.

"Captain Fury," Hal Roach film dramatizing the colonization of Australia, will be screened for King George and Queen Elizabeth aboard the Empress of Britain on their return to England.

Domino Productions Has First Ready

"Straight to Heaven" is the initial release of the new producing company, Domino Productions, Inc., which will hold screenings this week for Negro theatre exhibitors in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New England, Baltimore and Washington. After a public premiere in New York's Harlem in July, the picture will be available for general release early in August. Two group previews for the Southern states are being planned for the next two weeks.

Nina Mae McKinney, Jack Carter, and ten-year-old Jackie Ward are the leads in the new film. The director is Arthur Leonard, formerly with Warner's Brooklyn studio. The script is an original by Buddy Freeman and Cyrus Wood, Jr., with four song numbers by Bob Maxwell and Joseph Myrow.

Pictures for the 800-theatre U. S. Negro market are promised as follow-ups to "Straight to Heaven" by George O. Walbridge, business manager of Domino.

Foreign distribution will include Canada, Cuba, Mexico and South America.

New theatre plans were reported this week in Texas and the Southwest. Interstate started construction on three theatres in Houston, all 1,000 seaters, and Karl Hoblitzelle, Interstate president, was going over plans for another. The R. E. Griffith Theatres will open the New Tower Theatre in Carlsbad, N. M., June 30th, and Interstate will open its New Alamo Theatre in San Antonio the end of June.

Griffis Acquires Paramount Stock

Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee of Paramount, reported acquisition of 3,000 shares of Paramount common stock to the Securities and Exchange Commission in April it was made known in Washington this week. This amount represented his entire holdings in that class at the close of April.

Other April transactions reported included the acquisition of five shares of Loew's Boston Theatres common stock by Loews, Inc., bringing its holdings to 99,692 shares; disposition of 400 shares of Loews, Inc., common stock by J. Robert Rubin of New York, officer, reducing his holdings to 33,075 shares, and acquisition of 10 shares of Universal Pictures first preferred stock by Preston Davie of New York, director, bringing his holdings to 120 shares.

A report on transactions in Warner Brothers stock showed that Jack L. Warner, officer, disposed of 210 shares of preferred during the month, reducing his holdings to 14,884 shares, and that the three Warner brothers exchanged their optional six per cent convertible debentures for new debentures, the transaction involving 1,739,000 debentures held by Albert Warner, and 5,460 held through a holding company; 1,379,000 held by Harry M. Warner and 1,183,000 by Jack Warner.

Film Approved by PCA Is Rejected

The week remained comparatively quiet on the legislative and censorship fronts. Censors banned two films and passed one.

Overruling the Production Code Administration, the New York State Board of Regents on Monday disapproved "Polygamy," a picture dealing with a multi-wife religious cult in Utah. The decision sustained a veto of the state's censors, headed by Irwin Esmond.

The film already has had showings throughout the country, and will be presented in New Jersey soon.

This week has been set by Philadelphia's Judge Otto Heiligman for the Pennsylvania Censor Board to show why "Ecstasy" was disapproved. Eureka Productions of New York brought the action, contending the the film was rejected by an illegally constituted Censor Board. The film had been banned on May 3rd, at which time no member of the new Censor Board had been confirmed.

A bill providing for a State Board of Censors in New Jersey has been ordered killed in the New Jersey Assembly.

The New York State Censor Board has banned "Le Roi" in addition to "Polygamy." The film was imported by the Film Alliance of the U. S. The New York censors, however, have passed "The End of a Day," also a French film, imported by Juno Films.

AFM CONSIDERS TAX FREE MUSIC PLAN TO GET JOBS FOR MUSICIANS

ASCAP Warns of Future for Enterprise Receiving No Payments for Music and No Royalties for the Writers

by KENNETH FORCE

in Kansas City

Posed this week before the American Federation of Musicians assembled in 44th annual convention in Kansas City's Municipal Auditorum, is a proposal to put musicians back to work on the wholesale by making some tax-free music available to theatres, radio stations, night clubs and other places of public performance when such an establishment employs AFM members.

"Tin Plan Alley" Skeptical

The Federation in the past several years has spent tremendous sums in various efforts and campaigns to alleviate its unemployment problems, and even has tried to force reemployment on the motion picture theatres.

Presumably the premise of the new plan is to make such an offer attractive to exhibitors, broadcasters and others who pay royalties to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. However, the "Tin Pan Alley" music publishing business of Broadway received the news with pessimism, in view of the virtually complete inability of almost any public music performer to conduct a performance without using some form of ASCAP—controlled music, and, therefore they would still have to pay royalties to ASCAP. In the case of the thousands of theatres not using "manual" renditions, such as in stage shows, orchestras or organs, they are still liable to royalty payments to the society by virtue of their reproduction of ASCAP music on the sound tracks of the pictures they screen.

Spokesmen of the Society on Tuesday answered the challenge with the observation that "any tax-free publishing project will soon find the impossibilities of conducting an enterprise which receives no payments for the music it publishes and no royalties for the writers of the songs they write," adding that with radio having reduced phonograph royalties 80 per cent and sheet music sales 90 per cent, the royalties from public performances remain the only sizeable income medium to both publisher and song writer.

Tried by Exhibitors League

Projects in the music business seeking to make tax-free music available to theatres and other public performers have appeared variously down through the years, the last recognizable venture in the motion picture business appearing in 1920 and 1921 when Sydney Cohen's Motion Picture Exhibitors League put up $75,000 for such an organization.

The American Federation of Musicians, through Joseph M. Weber, its president, has been conducting negotiations for months with the heads of the large motion picture circuits in unsuccessful attempts to induce the circuits to reemploy musicians in large numbers.

The opening session Monday of the annual convention of the Federation showed 1,100 delegates in attendance.

A number of resolutions were presented at the opening, and these, along with President Joseph Weber's recommendations, indicated the matters of most concern to delegates.

The principal resolution recommends that the Federation in the U.S. and Canada buy outright "all music owned by publishers, composers, and authors, and by all other copyright owners, who are willing to sell the property at a price set by the AFM, providing it is good enough to be approved by a committee of the federation for publication. The resolution also suggests an invitation be sent to all composers and authors to send their works in to the federation to be examined for the purpose of being published by the committee. "All music to be tax free to all radio stations, theatres, night clubs and to all other establishments, and to all individuals approved by the AFM who employ musicians who are members of the Federation in good standing. Also that the AFM of the U. S. and Canada go into the recording business for the purpose of retailing said recordings to the general public." The resolution was submitted by representatives of nine locals.

To promote the interests of legislation in which the Federation is interested, one resolution asks that a field man be appointed to assist "the various conferences in their legislative efforts . . . compile a complete list of all musician legislation passed and pending, and that the president be empowered to spend funds of the federation to further the interest of our members by passage of suitable laws."

Another resolution asks "that our legislative representative be instructed to work for an amendment to the Social Security Act, so that one or more employees will be covered by the unemployment compensation insurance, instead of the eight employees required at the present time."

Pension Plan Considered

Another resolution would "empower the International Executive Board to study the feasibility of an old age pension scheme and if it sees fit to create the necessary machinery for putting same into operation."

In order to force hotels to a policy of a closed shop in order to secure the services of orchestras, another resolution asks "that members of this Federation be not permitted to render services in any hotel wherein non-member or unfair orchestras are permitted to perform."

Another resolution was aimed at orchestra booking agents who operate orchestras of federation members, and in addition book shows, acts, etc., into places of entertainment which have been declared "unfair." The resolution asks that such booking agencies be not permitted to book acts or entertainers into an "unfair" spot.

A change in the by-laws governing the theatre defense fund of 1 or 2 per cent was recommended to exclude "extras," members not regularly engaged by a theatre, from collection of the tax.

Would Amend Copyright Law

Because of the increase in use by restaurants and other public places of coin phonograph machines, the federation was asked in one resolution to join with ASCAP and ask the next congress to amend the copyright law to require establishments "making use of slot machine phonographs also be required to pay royalties to composers, publishers and the like, for the use of their copyrighted music."

Another resolution calls on the federation, "fully recognizing the benefits gained by it (the Wagner Act), and clearly realizing the danger of trying to change it," to go "on record as strongly opposed to any change in the Act."

Another resolution asks the federation to recommend the ironing out of labor difficulties between the two big unions, AFL and CIO, and requests a copy be sent to William Green and John L. Lewis.

Weber's Proposals

President Weber's recommendations included the following:

A change in federation laws to 5 days instead of the present 6 or 7, to qualify an orchestra as a "traveling" group when away from its local jurisdiction.

A reduction in the percentage which traveling orchestras playing radio engagements may be taxed. "Concerning this question, will say that the traveling orchestras, with few exceptions, are no longer able to demand and receive the high remuneration for services which they formerly did, hence one of the reasons why they were heavily taxed for the playing of radio engagements does no longer exist. . . . The tax should be reduced so as to afford us the opportunity to consistently defend same." The recommendation: a reduction of the schedule, now 100, 75 and 25 per cent, to 50, 35 and 15 per cent.

President Weber interpreted the federation's rules regarding 15-minute recordings for electrical transcriptions. For this task, the charge is $18. For each half-hour program, it is $24. Weber's interpretation is that two 15-minute programs do not constitute a half-hour program.

In order to clear up misunderstandings relative to the making of phonograph records and the rehearsals therefor, President Weber recommended the federation lay down rules similar to those covering the making of transcriptions. At present the law reads: "One session, not to exceed two consecutive hours of 40 minutes' playing time in each hour . . . $24; Each additional playing time per half or fraction thereof . . . $6; Contractor to receive double price." President Weber recommended the following change in the law: "Phonograph Recordings. For 3 hours recording, not more than four 10-inch master records to be made . . . $30; for 3 hours recording, not more than three 12-inch master records to be made . . . $30; for each additional 10-inch record, per man . . . $7.50; for each additional 12-inch master record, per man . . . $10."

BAR COMICS IN SALVADOR

Representatives in Panama of United States newspaper feature organizations have been notified by El Salvador that General Jose Tomas Calderon, Minister of Government, has prohibited publication of a number of comic strips and features that have been transferred into Spanish.

"Bringing Up Father," "Charlie Chan" and seven other features are on the proscribed list. Publication of "Popeye," "Betty Boop," "Mickey Mouse," "Mutt and Jeff" and a number of others will be permitted for the present.

There was no word as to whether the film versions of the strips were included.

Maxie Rosenbloom, former boxer, will be featured in a series of Warner Brothers short subjects. The first will be called "Slapsie Maxie."

A SMASH FROM COAST TO COAST

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

LAW OF THE TEXAN: Buck Jones, Dorothy Faye—Buck Jones still retains many of our rural farmers' enthusiasm and is capable of holding his half on a dual bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

First National

CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY: Edward G. Robinson, Francis Lederer, Paul Lukas—Not "What the picture did for me," but rather what the picture did to me. This picture holds the record for all time low at the box office. Don't play it. Played May 31-June 3.—J. A. Meredith, Garden Theatre, Sigourney, Iowa. General patronage.

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Make no error on this one. It is a picture. Superbly directed. A poignant love story that is not overdone. There is a restraint in the emotional scenes that showed the deft touch of a master director, and the cast that was perfect. Miss Davis at her very best and this goes for Bogart, Brent, and the girl that stayed by Bette in her dark moments deserves a word of praise, Miss Fitzgerald. The small town does not want to undersell this picture. I probably would have done that except for the fact that I had personal reports of its quality. I still contend that a good picture will do business even with business apparently slackening. It is not all recession. A lot of it the preponderance of cheap, shoddy pictures that have come through and had to be played to fill bookings.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MGM

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald, Lew Ayres, Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter—The biggest nose dive we have ever taken on one of MacDonald's pictures. What is wrong we know not, unless she is singing too much opera. Better let her sing popular or folk songs and get away from the high brow stuff for small towns. Ayres certainly is tops in this; in fact, the entire cast is superb, but an absolute flop at the turnstiles. Running time, 106 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald, Lew Ayres, Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter—Good picture but a little too long. Business was poor, as it will probably be in all small towns. Played May 28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CALLING DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Lynne Carver, Jo Ann Sayers—MGM certainly has got something in this series. It is the kind of picture that everyone will love. The patrons will thank you for running it. I ran this picture on Sunday and business was above the average, which speaks for itself.—Bud Davis, Ritz Theatre, Roanoke, Ala. Small town patronage.

FAST AND LOOSE: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—Not a special as sold to me. Just what a program picture should be; no more.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

FLIRTING WITH FATE: Joe E. Brown, Leo Carrillo—Best Joe Brown in a long time. A barrel of laughs. He's still tops with the kids. Played June 2-3.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Una Merkel, Kent Taylor, Ann Rutherford, Alan Marshal—Good, interesting story that did about the usual amount of business. Played May 29.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939, THE: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres, Original Ice Follies Cast—Nice picture that did average business. The color sequences were beautiful. Played May 12.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Clark Gable, Norma Shearer, Edward Arnold, Burgess Meredith, Joseph Schildkraut, Charles Coburn—After running this picture I became convinced that Metro should elevate the "Our Gang" contingent to producer ranks and thereby decrease the probabilities of making pictures of this type. In these days of low grosses, this still established a new low. I agree with Mr. Beaton that Hollywood needs new producer brains to take us out of this tailspin. Played April 30-May 1.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

LET FREEDOM RING: Nelson Eddy, Virginia Bruce, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Victor McLaglen, Guy Kibbee—Here is one grand picture that you owe it to yourself, your country and your own customers to give preferred playing time. A swell story with an appeal to all. A wonderful cast, singing that will ring in your heart for years to come and a patriotic motif that will leave you and everyone who sees and hears this story a better American in days when all good Americans are needed to renew that patriotic fervor that is in such serious danger of being throttled by those who are selling their soul and that heritage of freedom won by our fathers. Too bad the trailer does not sell this picture better but you can go out and shout to the skies on its merits and the picture will not let you down.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

SERGEANT MADDEN: Wallace Beery, Tom Brown, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day—Very good action picture for weekend.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Barton MacLane—Very fine action picture. Beery and Taylor do great work together. Pleased the masses. Played June 4-5.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Monogram

BAREFOOT BOY: Jackie Moran, Claire Windsor, Marcia Mae Jones, Ralph Morgan—A very fine picture enjoyed by everyone but lacked stars so did only average business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MR. WONG, DETECTIVE: Boris Karloff, Evelyn Brent—This picture did not go over here. I guess my patrons do not like Karloff. Running time, 57 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ROSE OF THE RIO GRANDE: Movita, John Carroll—Can you imagine this picture being sold to us at the same price as "Jesse James?" It's no wonder the salesmen have gall trouble. Business below average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WHERE THE BUFFALO ROAM: Tex Ritter, Dorothy Short—Good western. Tex sings a little too much in some of his pictures. Running time, 62 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

ARTISTS AND MODELS ABROAD: Jack Benny, Joan Bennett, Mary Boland, Yacht Club Boys—Pretty good picture. Got by OK. Not as bad a picture as many exhibitors claimed. Running time, 96 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BEACHCOMBER, THE: Charles Laughton, Elsa Lanchester—An indifferent picture that did a poor business. Not worth running on a double feature. Played May 8.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

CAFE SOCIETY: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Shirley Ross—Not even a good program picture. This did not make any money. Running itme, 83 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HOTEL IMPERIAL: Ray Milland, Ian Miranda—So-so. Not good and not bad. The war angle in this hurt the picture. Running time, 75 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

KING OF CHINATOWN: Anna May Wong, Akim Tamiroff—Quite interesting. Running time, 59 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LADY'S FROM KENTUCKY, THE: George Raft. Ellen Drew, Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts—Everyone that saw this picture seemed to enjoy it. Paramount has made so many sorry pictures this last season. George Raft and Ellen Drew turned in a good performance. Paramount will certainly have to redeem themselves before patrons will go for their pictures.—Bud Davis, Ritz Theatre, Roanoke, Ala. Small town patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaal, Shirley Ross, Edward Everett Horton, Akim Tamiroff—Pretty good program picture that flopped at the box office. It seems as if Mr. Crosby is not near the drawing card he used to be. Paramount don't seem to give him any supporting cast and good stories. They seem to think if Crosby is in it that's enough. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaal, Shirley Ross, Edward Everett Horton, Akim Tamiroff—Very well done. Plenty of laughs. Something they all enjoyed. One of the best Crosbys. Played May 29-30—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

PERSONS IN HIDING: Lynne Overman, Patricia Morison—Lowest Sunday and Monday in 13 years.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

RENEGADE TRAIL: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—Played with "On Trial." These two made a good little show that pleased generally.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

RIDE A CROOKED MILE: Akim Tamiroff, Frances Farmer, Leif Erikson—This did not go over so good. There are altogether too many pictures of this type made. Running time, 78 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SILVER ON THE SAGE: William Boyd, George Hayes—Good western to only fair business. I can't understand why these Hopalongs don't go better in our town. Running time, 62 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE: Donald O'Connor, Billy Cook—Nice little picture. Just the type for Friday-Saturday business.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

UNION PACIFIC: Joel McCrea, Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman—If one picture would vindicate Paramount for the greater number of poor ones they have turned out this season, this one would be it. It is great in every way. Though it deserved to stand out, business did not occur due to conditions that are current at the present time, the socalled Recession. It is long in footage, but I don't see where it could have been cut.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

UNION PACIFIC: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman—Grand production. Extended runs under all conditions. One of the best ever produced. A grand tonic for your summer box office. Running time, 136 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Republic

BLUE MONTANA SKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Gene Autry—Good picture; good business. Autry outdraws Jeanette MacDonald in the sticks. Played June 2-3.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CALL OF THE YUKON: Beverly Roberts, Richard

Arlen, Lyle Talbot—One of those outdoor adventure stories that pleased, although played same very late. Good entertainment for my patrons. Running time, seven reels. Played May 25.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

HIGGINS FAMILY, THE: James, Lucille and Russell Gleason—A great start. Hope we have more of this family. Many favorable comments. Played June 2-3.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MY WIFE'S RELATIVES: James, Lucille and Russell Gleason—Another good Higgins family picture and sold at a decent price.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

RKO Radio

FISHERMAN'S WHARF: Bobby Breen, Leo Carrillo, Henry Armetta—Good picture to only fair business. It looks as if Bobby has lost his drawing power. Running time, 76 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PACIFIC LINER: Victor McLaglen, Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie—Lost my shirt on this one. Could not get them in. I guess too much engine room and noise. Would not recommend it for small town. Running time, eight reels. Played May 18.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

PACIFIC LINER: Victor McLaglen, Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie—Too rough and gruesome. I have yet to play a sea picture that did well at the box office. Running time, 76 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TARNISHED ANGEL: Sally Eilers, Ann Miller, Lee Bowman—Good programmer. Sally Eilers always plays her part well. Running time, 68 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Cesar Romero, Arthur Treacher—And what a sweet picture it is. Everyone should see it.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RETURN OF THE CISCO KID, THE: Warner Baxter, Lynn Bari, Henry Hull, Cesar Romero—Good picture; good business. Played May 29-30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ROAD DEMON: Henry Arthur, Joan Valerie—A good action picture for weekend.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Al Jolson—Good picture but business was only fair. Pleased those who came. Played May 21-June 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, THE: Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda, Young Sisters—One of the finest pictures of the year but no draw. For some reason or other lacks box office.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell—Everybody knows these girls can't fly so why try to fool the public. Alice Faye can sing. So why didn't they let her. Second day a flop. And they had the cast for a real picture.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

United Artists

DUKE OF WEST POINT, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Fontaine, Richard Carlson—Very good program picture. Running time, 109 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

KING OF THE TURF: Adolphe Menjou, Dolores Costello, Roger Daniel—Good B product; pleased all. Stand alone in small spots; second half in big spots. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MADE FOR EACH OTHER: Carole Lombard, James Stewart, Charles Coburn, Lucille Watson—Excellent picture. Business fair.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MADE FOR EACH OTHER: Carole Lombard, James Stewart, Charles Coburn, Lucille Watson—They maybe were made for each other but the picture certainly wasn't made for this town. Poor business and plenty of walkouts. Played May 16.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

STAGECOACH: Claire Trevor, John Wayne, Andy Devine, George Bancroft, Thomas Mitchell, Louise Platt—Excellent feature that did a better than average business. Played May 19.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

TOPPER TAKES A TRIP: Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Billie Burke, Alan Mowbray—Good B product; not strong enough for extended runs. Pleased generally. Running time, 85 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TOPPER TAKES A TRIP: Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Billie Burke, Alan Mowbray—This picture did extra business but do not consider it an outstanding attraction by any means.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TRADE WINDS: Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern—Very good. The title was against the picture. Running time, 94 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

CODE OF THE STREETS: Frankie Thomas, Harry Carey, "Little Tough Guys"—One of the best gangster pictures we have run. But Hollywood is giving us too many of these this season so it failed to hit at the box office. One or two of these a season from each product is enough and we can name them by the dozen this season. As a result we are hitting a slump. Running time, 69 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GHOST TOWN RIDERS: Bob Baker, Fay Shannon—Pretty good. Baker no drawing card here.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HIS EXCITING NIGHT: Charles Ruggles, Ona Munson—Fair program picture. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SWING, SISTER, SWING: Ken Murray, Ernest Truex, Kathryn Kane, Johnny Downs, Ted Weems and His Orchestra—For jitterburg enthusiasts, it was enthusiastically received. Personally, I enjoyed it very much. It did no extra business. Kathryn Kane was very lovely. Capable of making one unhappy. Ted Weems' orchestra very appreciated. We're waiting for your picture, Pearce Parkhurst.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven, Donald Crisp—Very fine picture that did quite well at the box office. Another hit from Warners. Running time, 103 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

OFF THE RECORD: Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, Bobby Jordan—Pretty good program picture that drew only fair at the box office. Well, Warners have done so well I guess we should not kick if they make a few program pictures. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

OFF THE RECORD: Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, Bobby Jordan—Nothing much to get excited about. Just a fair program offering that didn't do much business. Played May 5.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID: James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane—Excellent action drama that packed the house. And does that Cagney guy go to town as a western bad man. He's the tops. Played May 26.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID: James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane—Here is a picture that I was a little bit skeptical of after running "Jesse James." But you won't be embarrassed to stand at the door when the patrons come out because they will all be pleased. Plenty of action and that seems to be what the small town likes.—Bud Davis, Ritz Theatre, Roanoke, Ala. Small town patronage.

ON TRIAL: John Litel, Margaret Lindsay—Played with "Renegade Trail." These two made a good little show that pleased generally.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL: John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, "Crime School Kids," Claude Rains—Good picture of its kind. Not much of a drawing card. Running time, 92 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—A good aviation picture that was a disappointment at the box office. Played May 23.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

Shorts

Columbia

GOOD OLD AMERICAN HOME: Music Hall Vanities—Terrible. Shelve it. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LITTLE BUCKAROO: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Quite pathetic.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Educational

CALLING ALL CROONERS: Song and Comedy Hits—Just another single reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

MGM

HAPPILY BURIED: Musical Comedies—A just fair musical. Will get by.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MEN OF STEEL: Musical Comedies—We can't for the life of the industry understand Metro turning out such an attempt in making a musical such as this. A good boost, Maytag Washers.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SYDNEY, PRIDE OF AUSTRALIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Wonderful, as are all of this producer's work. Could not be better. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WANTED: NO MASTER: Cartoons—Black and white cartoon which is only fair.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GREAT ADVENTURES OF WILD BILL HICKOK, CHAPTER 12: Gordon Elliott, Kermit Maynard —Personally, I cannot stand serials but on interviewing our farm patrons they seem more than enthusiastic. SPIDER'S WEB, THE: Warren Hull, Iris Meredith —"The Spider's Web" features a mysterious character, the "Octopus," whose identity is unknown. This formula of maintaining suspense and keeping patrons guessing until the last chapter as to the identity of the "Octopus" follows old traditions. The Columbia script writers forgot, however, the importance of having as the "Octopus" someone who participated actively in the play. Who is the "Octopus"? He is revealed as a character who appeared in a mob scene in the first episode; we got a back view of him in the fifth episode and another mob scene in the 13th chapter. This man, then, is the "Octopus." Our audience really didn't care. The "Octopus" might just as well have been "Charlie McCarthy" or my very good friend, Sidney Rotstein. An English novelist was on the road to fame because he had written a book depicting the vigorous struggles made by a worthy character to win the hand of "Pamela." The book was enjoying tremendous success. But the author made one dreadful mistake. He forgot to make "Pamela" a sweet, alluring girl. So that when a reader pointed out "yes, he won Pamela, but what of it?" the book fell flat.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Hotel Greeters See Waldorf-Astoria Film

The latest in a group of Waldorf-Astoria service films on hotel operation was previewed this week in the Grand Ballroom of the New York hotel. The film, titled "Front Office Procedure," and filmed in the Waldorf and at the Twentieth Century-Fox New York studio, depicts the various situations that may develop at the registration desk of a hotel and the manner in which the Waldorf believes these situations should be handled.

The film was produced and directed by Luther Reed. Lowell Thomas is the narrator and the cast is made up of professional actors as well as members of the regular staff of the hotel. The first sound film sponsored by the hotel, it had its first official presentation at the Annual Convention of the Hotel Greeters of America in Seattle this week.

Mayer Named in Damage Action

Louis B. Mayer, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in charge of production, and 10 other persons were named defendants in a $930,000 damage suit filed in Los Angeles this week by William H. Neblett, former law partner of ex-United States Senator William G. McAdoo. Mr. Neblett charged the defendants conspired to wreck his law business by engendering false and malicious complaints for prosecution against him.

Others accused are John B. Elliott, Democratic Party leader; Alfred A. Cohn, former United States Collector of Customs in Los Angeles; Glen E. Arbogast, industrialist; J. E. P. Dunn, one-time head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Los Angeles; S. S. Hahn and Michael Rudolph, attorneys; Peirson M. Hall, former United States Attorney; J. J. Irwin, former deputy attorney under Hall; Carl Pustau and Howard Philbrick.

Dismissal Application Withdrawn

An application of Paramount Pictures, Inc., Henry A. Schatzkin and Mortimer W. Loewi, trading as Schatzkin-Loewi and Company and Stanton W. Griffis, to dismiss the suit brought by the executors of the estate of A. L. Leeds and Harold Spear, has been withdrawn with the approval of Ernest L. Hammer, New York supreme court justice. The complaint is based on the proceeds obtained on the sale to Paramount of a 50 per cent interest in the stock of the DuMont Television Company.

Two Suits Dismissed

Federal Judge John C. Knox in New York this week dismissed two suits involving unlicensed film exhibitions because of failure to prosecute. The first suit was brought by Paramount against Trio Amusement Company, Inc., and Jack W. Springer for $13,000 for showing Paramount News, 1935 and 1936, and the second by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer against Spuyten Amusement Corporation and Jack Springer for showing "Live Ghosts" in 1935.

Republic Suit Filed

Republic Pictures filed suit in federal court in New York this week against Federal Film Company, Inc., and Frank J. Whittle charging that defendants distributed plaintiff's films without authority. The complaint claims that the films involved were assigned to Republic by Cajo Company, Inc., in April, 1937. Immediate impounding of the films is sought. Ten pictures are involved.

Settle Plagiarism Suit

The plagiarism suit for $250,000 damages by Gerald K. Rudulph against Columbia Pictures Corporation has been settled in the United States district court in New York.

Reserve Fox Decision

The United States circuit court of appeals this week reserved decision on the appeal of Trust Company of Georgia from an order of former Judge Martin T. Manton which refused to grant priority to the Trust Company claim against Fox Theatres Corporation. The claimant originally sought $1,053,646 for rentals of Atlantic theatre properties, but this was reduced to $400,000.

OBITUARIES

Owen Moore Dies In Beverly Hills

Owen Moore, actor, who was the first husband of Mary Pickford, was found dead in his apartment in Beverly Hills, Cal., June 9th. Dr. Karl Lewis said death might have been caused by a hemorrhage. He was 52 years old. Mrs. Kathryn Perry Moore, the actor's wife, said Mr. Moore had been brooding recently because of his inability to find work in pictures.

He entered motion pictures in 1910 after 10 years on the stage. His last role of consequence was that of "Chick Clark" in the Mae West film, 'She Done Him Wrong." Mr. Moore married Miss Pickford, then 17 years old, January 17, 1911, in Jersey City. Six years later they separated and in March, 1920, Miss Pickford obtained a divorce in Minden, Nev. Mr. Moore married Kathryn Perry in 1921. His brothers, Matt and Tom, also were early stars.

George Fawcett Dies

George D. Fawcett, 77, stage and screen actor, died in Nantucket, Mass., June 6th of a heart ailment. He started his stage career in 1886 and had appeared in many pictures.

Elmer Fleming

Elmer Fleming, 50, personnel director for Warner Brothers in Chicago and Wisconsin, died at his home in Chicago June 7th of a heart attack. He had been personnel director for seven years.

Marquis De Sales

Marquis De Roussy De Sales, 87, former chairman of the board of motion picture censors of the Province of Quebec, died in Paris June 11th. Three of the Marquis' sons and one daughter live in Canada. They are the Comte Michel De Roussy De Sales, commercial director of France Film; Bernard, in the office of the Commercial Attache in the French Legation at Ottawa; Gerald and Jacqueline.

Jack Osterman

Jack Osterman, 37, New York night club master of ceremonies and a stage entertainer, died in the Atlantic City Hospital June 8th of pneumonia. He bought his first vaudeville act from Eddie Cantor for $10. At the height of his vaudeville success a few years ago, he was reported to be receiving $2,500 weekly. He also wrote and played for the radio and appeared in several films, including "Talking It Over" and "Wanted Men," and the English film, "The Wolves."

Mrs. Pauline Harrison

Mrs. Pauline Harrison, 67, mother of Robert Harrison, radio advertising manager of Motion Picture Daily, died June 9th at Reconstruction Hospital, New York, of injuries sustained when she was struck by a truck.

in London

Gracie Fields with Sidney Howard who plays her father in the Twentieth Century production "Shipyard Sally" being filmed at Islington Studios, England.

Production Deal

A production deal has been completed between Anglo-American and British National Films. It calls for the production of a series of films by John Corfield, managing director of British National, for distribution by Anglo-American.

Negotiations are still afoot for certain of the subjects, but meanwhile an immediate start will be made at the M. P. Studios, Elstree, on the first four. These include "Mr. Walker Wants to Know," in which John Baxter will direct British radio star Syd Walker; "Sons of the Sea," a naval film to be made with Admiralty co-operation and directed by Maurice Elvey; "Mother Riley Joins Up," in which the music-hall team, Lucan and McShane, will continue their association, and "Gas-Light," which David Macdonald will direct from the Savoy Theatre play.

Asher's New Series

Irving Asher, producer of the highly successful "Spy in Black" and "Q Planes," made at Denham for Columbia release, has started the first of the four pictures which he is to make for that organization in the 1939-40 season. It is tentatively titled "Ten Days in Paris," is directed by Tim Whelan, director of "Q Planes," and has as its star the British comedy actor, Rex Harrison.

The story is a comedy thriller and deals with the fantastic adventures of a young man who awakes in a Paris nursing home, where a bullet has been extracted from his brain, remembering nothing that has happened to him for several weeks.

A feature of the film is a new discovery by Mr. Asher, an unknown girl who, it is claimed, will be a screen success. She has not yet made a film.

Associated in production with Mr. Asher is his erstwhile colleague from Teddington, Jerome J. Jackson. Bernard Browne is cameraman, and the script is by John Meehan and James Curtis.

"Hornleigh" in Work

"Inspector Hornleigh," radio favorite of Britain's BBC program, "Monday Night at Seven," is on the trail again, with Gordon Harker playing the leading role and Alistair Sim as his Scottish assistant. The Inspector is now clearing up another mystery at the Gainsborough Studios, where "Inspector Hornleigh on Holiday" commenced a week back.

Among the artists engaged to support the star in this mystery comedy are Wally Patch, Edward Chapman and Kynaston Reeves.

Action is said to be the keynote in the film, which has been written by Sidney Gilliat and Frank Launder, literary team who were responsible for the script of "The Lady Vanishes."

Walter Forde is directing the film for Twentieth Century Productions, Ltd., while Maurice Ostrer fills his usual office of chief in charge of production.

Cameraman Jack Cox, under a new contract, is lighting the picture, which is to be distributed by Twentieth Century-Fox.

"Poison Pen" Finished

Work has concluded at the Elstree Studios of Associated British on the Flora Robson melodrama, "Poison Pen," adapted from Richard Llewellyn's play.

In it Miss Robson plays the part of Mary Rider, sister and housekeeper to the vicar of a little Devonshire parish, a rustic Arcady, the peace of which is shattered by an anonymous letter writer who translates it into a hotbed of gossip and suspicion. As a result of these letters an innocent girl is driven to suicide and an equally innocent middle-aged man is murdered by a jealous husband.

Paul Stein directed the film, in which are also Reginald Tate, Ann Todd, Geoffrey Toone, Athole Stewart, Belle Chrystall, Robert Newton, Wally Patch and Edward Chapman. Phil Tannura was at the camera.

Jack Hawkins, playing the role of a mischievous member of the Mayfair set heading a gang of dope smugglers, has already "murdered" two men in the fortnight upon which "The Flying Squad" has been on the floor in another section of the Elstree Studios. He has "slain" his nervous assistant, Manning Whiley, who threatened to leave the gang, and later disposed of a half-mad musician who witnessed the crime.

The film is an adaptation of an Edgar Wallace thriller, and is being directed by Herbert Brenon. Others in the cast include Sebastian Shaw and Phyllis Brooks.

Elsewhere on the Associated British lot Freddie Carpenter, terpsichorean expert, has been arranging spectacular dance numbers for the Tommy Trinder musical comedy, "She Couldn't Say No." Greta Gynt, previously a ballet dancer before taking up a screen career, will be featured in these routines, one of which is a golfing burlesque.

Second Sax Picture

Sam Sax goes into production at the Teddington Studios of Warner-First National with his second picture for them, "Dressed to Kill." The leading role will be played by Tamara Desni, and Roy William Neill will direct.

Work has been concluded on the Ben Lyon-Jane Baxter film, "Confidential Lady," in which Athole Stewart, Jean Cadell, Stewart Rome, and Gibb McLaughlin lend support.

Huth Director

Harold Huth, stage and film actor who was for some time casting director for Gaumont British, is to direct the English version of "Alerte en Mediterranee," which is to be produced by Walter Mycroft at Elstree.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

She's "Boom Boom"

At this writing, we know little about M-G-M's "Maisie." But as an exploitation attraction, it appears that the feature is setting the stage for an old-fashioned blast of ballyhoo to be heard nationally. Our immediate authority is an outline from Billy Ferguson of the recent campaigns put over in Harrisburg and Providence. Evidently, everything but the kitchen sink was used with profit by Loew-men Sam Gilman and Ed McBride, assisted respectively by M-G-M exploiteers, Jim Ashcraft and Bert McKenzie. And it further appears that by the time the showmen washed up, only the toddling young and the very aged were not concerned with "Who Is Maisie", the tag line for the drive in both situations.

All attractions may not be so exploitable. All situations may not allow for such extensive coverage. But the campaigns already put on indicate there is no lack of cash customers to respond to the terrific "boom boom" of ballyhoo created by vigorous, determined hands.

There is considerable talk, of product, of heat, of this and of that. Loud talk it is, and rising in volume. But to be noted, rising mainly where no exploitation "boom boom" is sounded to reduce such loud talkings to a comparative whisper.

WELL-EARNED RECOGNITION

There is an event of importance now taking place at the United Artists Theatre, in Pasadena, California. It's "Junior Manager's Week," designated so by Manager Stan Meyer, in honor of his assistant, Jerry Ureles and the staff. For that period, operation of the house is exclusively in the hands of the junior members. It's their party, the unusual distinction earned, according to Meyer, because of the cooperation given in making possible the theatre's achievements in the past two years. Thus, the splendid opportunity for the personnel to "demonstrate their ability and qualifications for advancement."

Meyer's method of expressing appreciation for such teamwork stamps him immediately as a wise and long-visioned operator. For there is no more assured procedure in establishing a theatre's wellbeing than that which encourages every member to do his utmost at all times. One immediately recognizes a house so blessed. There is an ease which typifies perfect service. The staff is well-groomed, courteous and smiling, in the manner of a gracious host. Everything is clean, in place. Lobby and front decorations show careful thought and handling. Advertising and exploitation reflects the important part every man plays in performing assignments.

In that kind of an operation, the manager guides. He never drives.

It is unfortunate there still are managers who regard assistants as interlopers, the house staff as personnel to be kept under the strictest surveillance and the tightest of rein. Something is regretfully wrong with the theatreman who would assure you such handling is necessary. Your manager who realizes his rating rises in accordance with the effective functioning of his staff, trains his subordinates as associates rather than mere employees. Or, as Meyer says:

"Without the aid of a capable assistant and his staff, it would have been impossible to make the remarkable progress that we have."

Obviously, the Round Tabler has long learned the successful theatre is definitely known by the company it keeps.

SIMONS STARTS HEAT WAVE

The effectiveness of fighting fire with fire is not limited to flaming forests. Theatremen employ the same procedure, especially in the summertime by running a boxoffice temperature a bit hotter than the weather. For instance, Round Tabler Jack Simons, in Hartford, tells it this way:

"To turn on the heat is our aim to beat the heat and hold up grosses while holding down expenses. We are doubling and tripling our efforts to sell our shows without spending an extra dime. The best of all sources, the newspapers, is our main objective. That costs nothing. The heat hurts, but but we're going to fight heat with a heat wave of our own".

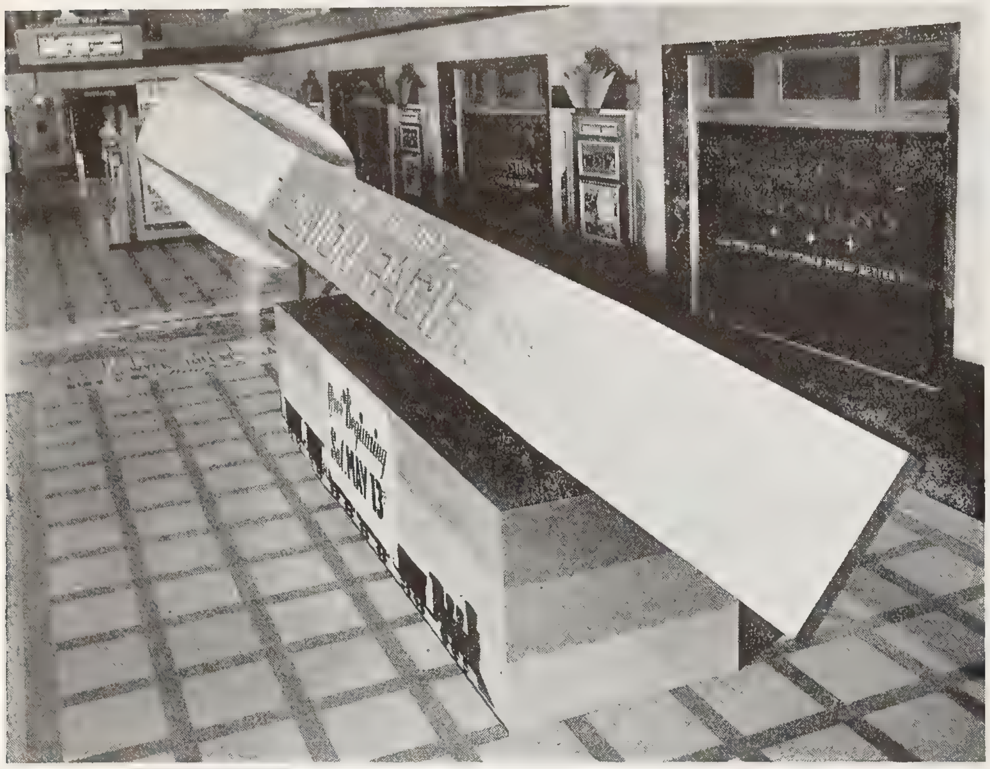
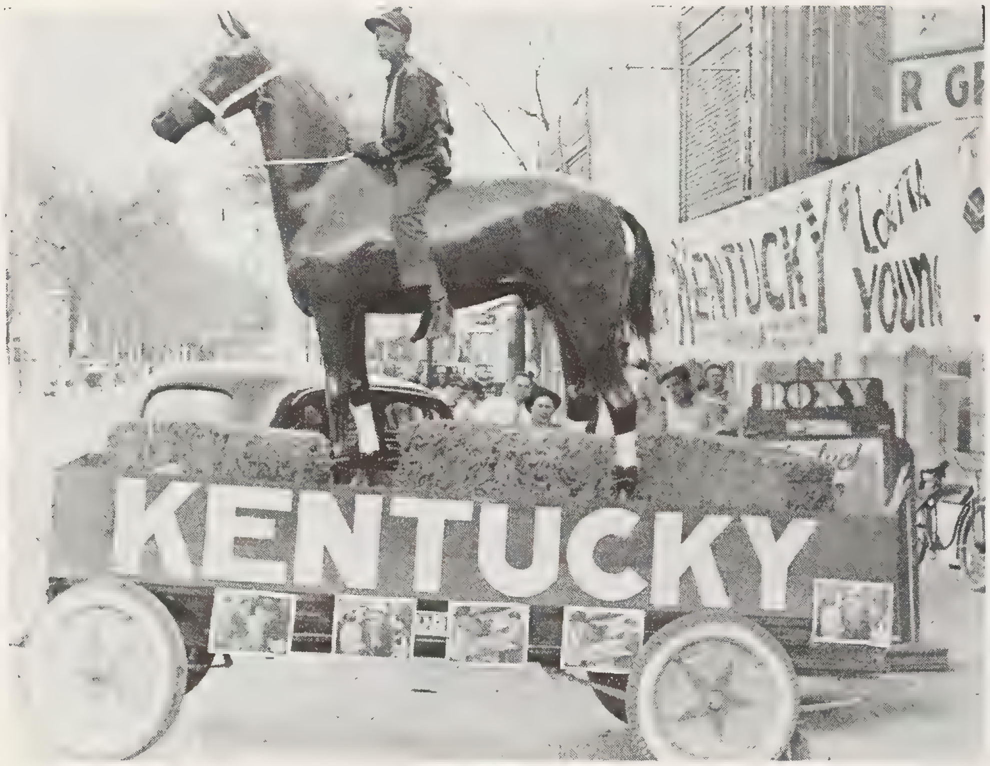
Round Table in Pictures

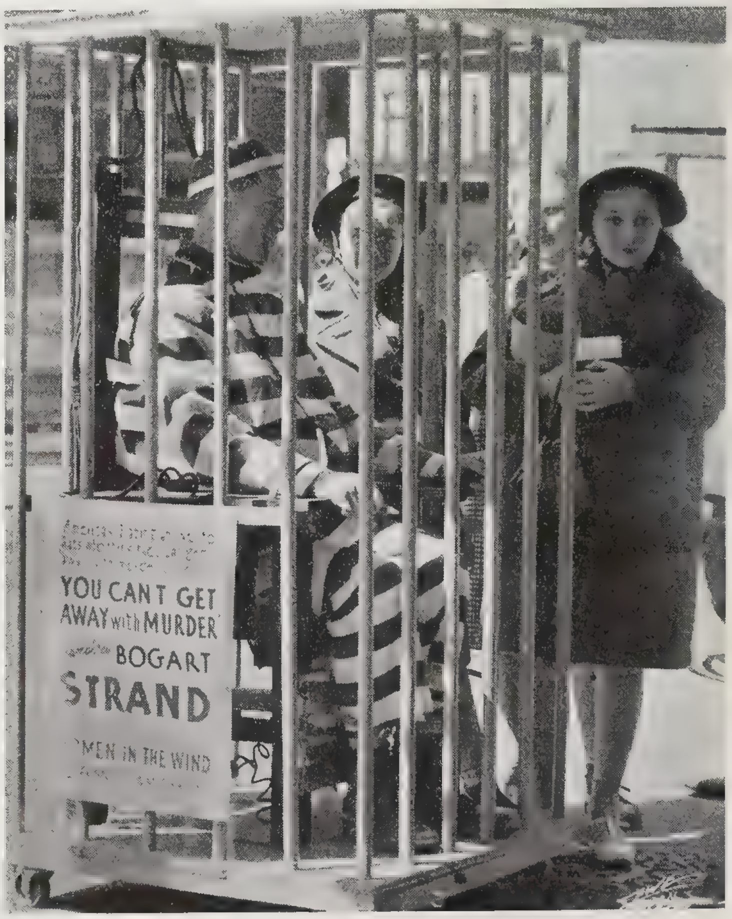


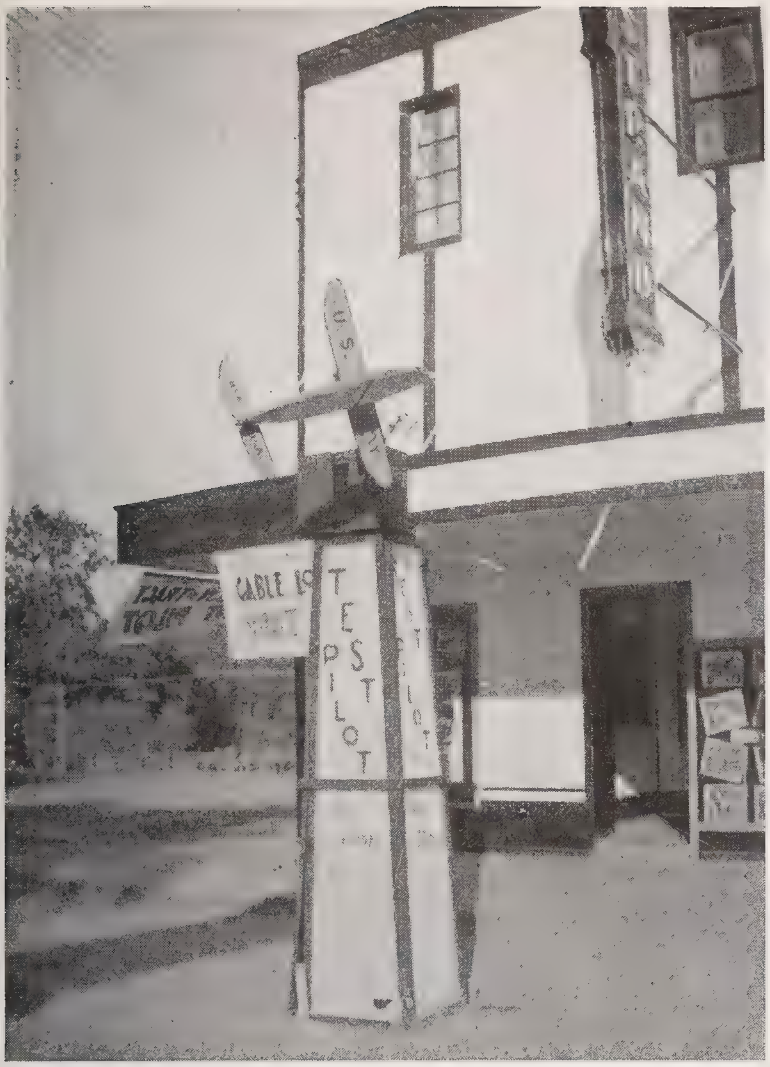
Above is City Manager Moon Corker, L & J Theatres, Athens, Ga. shown presenting a silver loving cup to an R.O.T.C. student of the University of Georgia. The cup is an annual award given by the theatres to the student who has been judged as best drilled for first year basic cadet. . . What is claimed to be the largest railroad spike in the world was built by the Saenger theatre, in New Orleans to advertise the forthcoming engagement of "Union Pacific." Arranged by Manager Bob Blair, the spike reproduced at left was placed on display in the lobby week ahead and during run of the picture.



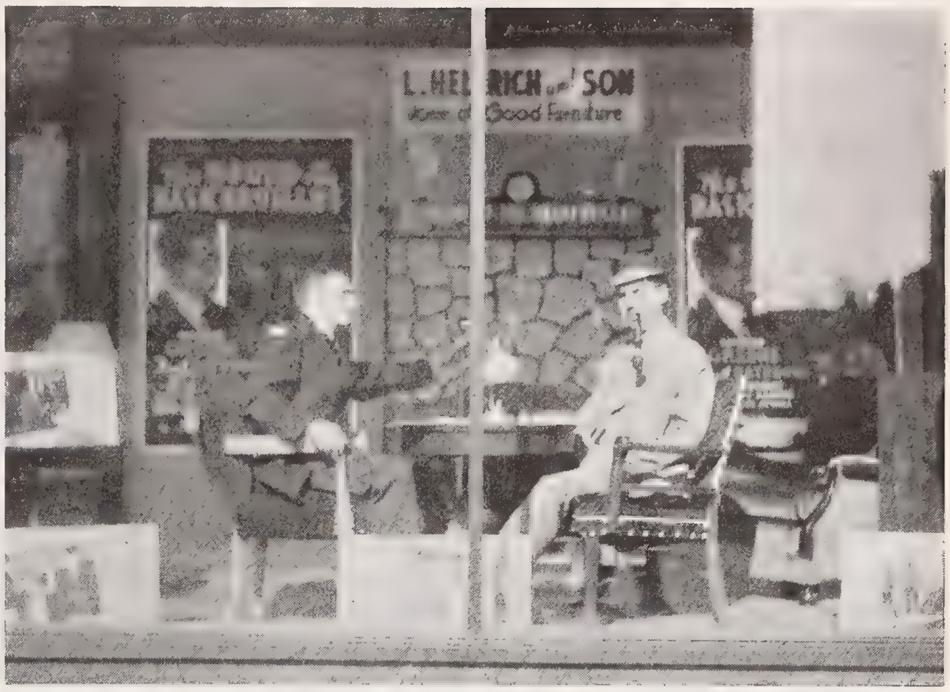
Made from plaster paris was the horse planted atop bannered trailer by Manager Bryant Williams at the Roxy Theatre, in Cochran, Georgia for his engagement of "Kentucky." Lad dressed as jockey was stationed on the horse, sides of truck were covered with title and scene stills. This street bally was driven around entire section ahead and during run of picture.

Out of scrap lumber, old pipe, odds and ends, etc., etc. Manager John La Due, of Warner's Strand, in Akron, Ohio constructed the electric chair and cell shown at left for street bally on "You Can't Get Away With Murder." By mounting it on large casters it was moved easily about the streets by one of the staff.

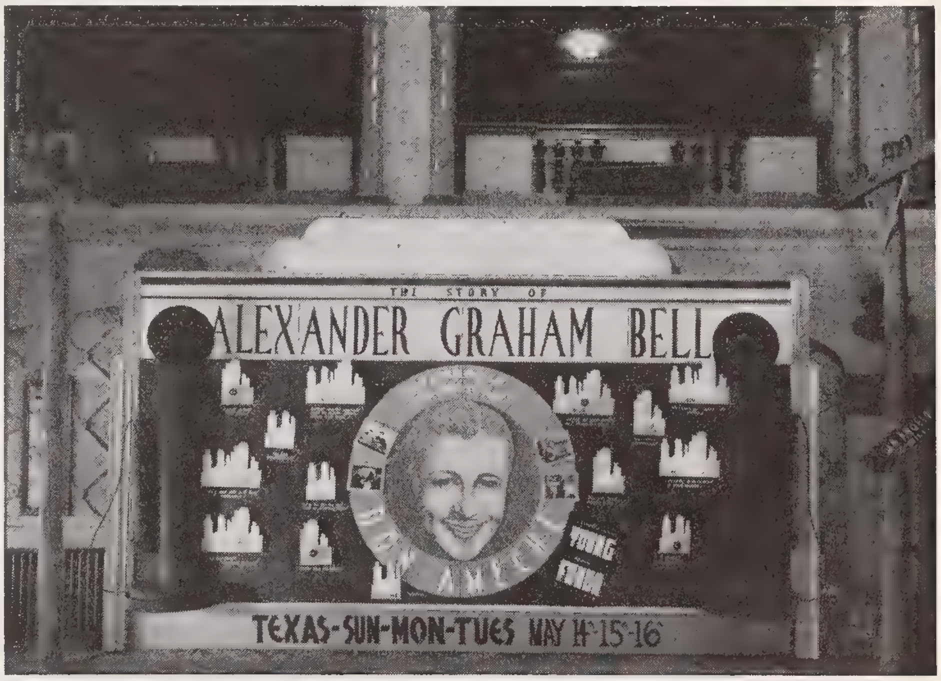




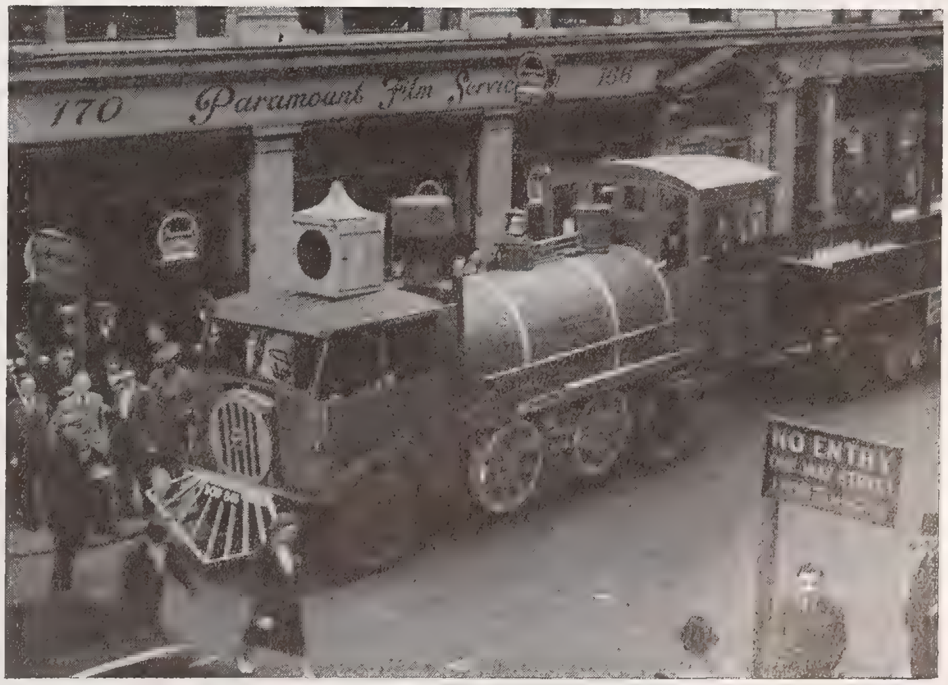
Week ahead of "Test Pilot" playdate at the Strand, in Uniontown, Ala., Manager J. N. Fendley constructed the race pylon illustrated above which was planted in front of theatre. On top of this was a small airplane which raced around the pylon on which were title, cast, and playdates. Several weeks ahead, a model airplane contest was started in the local weekly newspaper which carried stories and art on the stunt. Models with proper credit cards were displayed in lobby.



Between strategic moves on a chess board planted in store window for "Hound of the Baskervilles," City Manager Sid Holland for the date at the Elco had Sherlock Holmes and his friend Dr. Watson map out plans to capture the culprit who was making life miserable for the Baskervilles. Microphone and loud speaker did the job while onlookers watched the dramatic episode from the street.



Flanked on either side by six foot pine telephone poles which were lit at night was 17 feet long and 10 feet high lobby display created by John D. Jones for the "Alexander Graham Bell" date at the Texas, San Angelo. Stressing what critics said about the picture all over the country, key cities were highly colored and illuminated from behind. Three colors of neon lights, promoted from local dealer were planted atop entire setpiece. Jones reports much favorable comment on the display.



Realistic model of a wood-burning locomotive closely resembling that seen in "Union Pacific" was built by the Paramount Theatre art department for that opening in London. Under its own steam, the train travelled the countryside near and at Epsom Downs where it is reported thousands saw the ballyhoo. At left the locomotive is seen stationed in front of Paramount's office. Stunt was conceived and executed by Earl St. John, managing director of Paramount's London theatres and T. C. Reddin, advertising manager in London.

Lampe Ties Floral Display To Schine Theatres Publicity

With Syracuse having one of the finest rose gardens in the world, Gus Lampe, City Manager, RKO Schine's Theatres, is arranging with the Syracuse Journal when the flowers are in bloom for stories and publicity offering free admission to the Keith to the first 50 people coming to the theatre on opening day with a half dozen roses. These flowers will be turned over to hospitals and charitable institutions.

In state parks, Lampe intends putting on various contests such as driving, swimming, and awarding merchandise gifts and cups to winners, cups to be inscribed with star name of current picture. Newspaper will also sponsor a golf driving contest just before school closing for high school boys and girls with the prizes promoted, this too will be tied with stars whose pictures are dated in the theatres at the time.

"WHAT ARE YOU PLANNING FOR SUMMER"

Tomber Inaugurates "Summer Sport Nite"

To be arranged by Stuart Tomber, Fargo Theatre, Sycamore, Ill., will be a weekly "Summer Sport Night," at which an outstanding golfer, swimmer, tennis player, etc., will appear on stage and give some demonstrations together with proper accompanying shorts. Having the benefit of a small lighted park next to the theatre, Tomber plans demonstration to be held there after show hours for those possessing admission receipts in a certain quantity.

Among other stunts planned is a "stay off the streets" club for children with a weekly matinee meeting. A combination theatre and swim ticket to the local pool will be issued. The usual plugging of air-conditioning and relaxation in comfort will be carried out with a few new exploitation angles whereever they might develop.

"WHAT ARE YOU PLANNING FOR SUMMER"

Emerson Reports Tri-States Doings

Advertising and publicity director Ted Emerson, at the Tri States theatres in Omaha forwards details of the activities of the various men in that sector. In Grand Island, Wally Kemp, manager of the Grand Island Theatre for "Little Princess" put out 4,000 four page newspapers five days in advance. Sufficient ads were obtained for the back page of the section to practically pay for the printing and distribution. Tieup was also effected with large department store handling Shirley Temple dresses, whereby the store purchased tickets from the theatre and gave them away with each dress sold.

On "St. Louis Blues," starting week ahead, Kemp used a boy dressed in tuxedo and top hat to walk down the aisles at each show playing the well-known tune on a hot trumpet. Kemp also tied up with the high school paper and received plenty of publicity on a contest whereby tickets were awarded to those correctly assembling scattered letters in various merchants names which spelled out picture cast.

In Hastings, Nebraska, Orville Rennie of the Rivoli Theatre, obtained a full page break on "Union Pacific" together with plenty of publicity space in both the local paper and high school paper.

Ace Contests Aid Holland Campaign On Clean-up Week

The civic heads of Elkhart, Ind., as in many other towns, promote a clean-up and paint-up week each spring. However, since this year they were a little slow on the draw, Sid Holland, Indiana-Illinois City Manager, started the project himself for his theatres with the usually conservative daily paper getting behind the campaign.

Numerous contests were held among which boys from the high school art classes lettered and painted a picket fence in front of the theatre in full view of the public. Each picket represented one of the theatre's 21 points of the week, such as "mow your lawn," "paint your house," "scrub your sidewalks," "wash your windows," etc., etc. After lettering a part of each of the 21 points, the boys stopped to give onlookers an opportunity to list what they believed the 21 points would be when completed. A three-month pass to the Elco was presented to the winner with additional tickets going to others.

Other Houses Tied to Project

Though the Elco is the "A" house of Sid's district, other projects were tied in to the remaining spots, the Bucklen and Ritz. For the Bucklen, public school authorities endorsed an essay contest for children in which entrants were required to write 100 words on how they would proceed to cleanse and beautify the city. Announcements were made in all English classes and entries sent to the Bucklen. For the Roxy, a tin can matinee was held, every boy presenting 15 cans being admitted gratis to the show. The practical illustration of the week took place at the Bucklen, where a crew of young men set to work on a Saturday morning scrubbing the front of the theatre, the walks, gutter and street in front. Street bally consisted of two boys with back banners, one reading "I am clean," the other "I am dirty." Dressed accordingly, the lads covered main streets during the drive.

Roller Skaters' Bally Helps Exploit "Castles"

Street ballys were the order of the day so far as Dave Whyte's "Castle" dates at the RKO Alden in Jamaica was concerned, with couple on roller skates covering entire downtown district carrying overnight bags, front of which carried title, cast and playdates copy. A 1905 model car was promoted, properly bannered and driven about town.

For his lobby display, Whyte promoted large machine over which the hit tunes from the picture were played. Numerous window displays were secured by the theatreman, music counters in five and tens featured the picture's hits, counter cards plugging the song sheets. Letters were sent to leading dancing schools, urging students to see the picture, and in this connection, special 40 by 60 dance displays were planted in the largest dancing schools.

High School Holds Regular Sessions At Harris Theatre

Due to the tearing down of the high school auditorium to make room for a new addition to the school building in Findlay, Ohio, faculty and students faced the prospect of eliminating certain lecture courses and other important curricular activities. It was a serious situation until brought to the attention of Manager Glenn Nelson, of the local Warner Harris who saved the day by proffering and having accepted his immediate offer of the theatre facilities at no charge to the school. Sessions were held in the mornings before opening, starting at 8:15, and although this meant additional work for the staff the results proved very worthwhile, even though the original offer was tendered only as a goodwill gesture.

Of greatest benefit, reports Nelson, was the decision of the school board to change their plans for projection equipment in the new addition from the previously agreed upon 32mm. to 16mm. This eliminated any possibility of local groups or outside sources using the new auditorium to present 32mm. motion picture shows in competition with the Harris. In addition, the contacts brought about a closer, friendlier and more understandable relationship between school heads and the theatre; impressed the theatre upon the consciousness of the 800 students involved as an integral part of their scholastic educations. Further, the theatre name was brought repeatedly into the homes of all the attending students and was continually kept in print through publication in the local newspapers of the daily school activities.

School Board Honors Nelson

That the students were properly appreciative was indicated by a series of theatre photos in the high school annual, including close-ups of the Round Tabler, a first-time, Glenn writes, that any commercial establishment has been so accepted in the history of the school publication. And although much of the cost of the annual is covered by merchants' advertising, the school board refused to accept paid advertising offered by Nelson on the grounds that he had already done more than his share.

Additionally significant is the side-light reported by the theatreman, that due to the stage equipment and theatre atmosphere at the sessions, school authorities credited the unusual setting for one of the most successful courses in the subject matter covered by the lectures, as attested by the interest displayed by the students.

Kalberer Uses Ingenious Ads

Various merchants cooperated with A. J. Kalberer and helped sell his opening of "You Can't Take It With You" at the Indiana Theatre, in Washington, Ind. Each merchant took a full two-column ad highlighted by cut of Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd supposedly engaged in gag balloon conversations on the merits of the particular store's merchandise.

As a reminder to the non-participants desiring to enter in the remaining Fortnight periods of the Quarter, and those following, it is to be stressed that the Quigley Awards are now judged on the excellence of individual exploitations or promotions and not on complete campaigns, as heretofore. Entries may be on any phase of theatre advertising, publicity or exploitation, including institutional and similar activities.

Local Kid Drummer Aids On "Some Like It Hot"

Since Joseph Shepra, America's youngest swing drummer and a protegee of Gene Krupa is a resident of Syracuse, Earle Wright arranged for the lad to help in exploiting the "Some Like It Hot" date at the Paramount. For his street bally, the theatreman used a platform truck covered with green mats on which were planted a complete set of trap drums, lad drove about city doing his stuff after which he wound up at the theatre where he gave a demonstration. Barker took up spiel and Wright reports the crowd followed on into the theatre.

Window tieup was arranged in leading music store with a new pearl set of Krupa drums, life size cutout of the drummer with scene stills and tieup copy. Shepra was also used in the window playing over a public address system. Five jargon dictionaries were distributed among students at the Syracuse University, government postcards sent to all fraternity and sorority houses and window cards with ten different jitterbug slang catchlines were distributed in stores around university, high schools and dance halls. Station WSYR had the studio swingsters play tunes from the picture daily for a week, giving the picture a plug each time and for eye-attractor in front of theatre Wright used a film can with title lettered in fiery red which was frozen in a cake of ice. Card atop read "Some Like It Hot, but we are keeping it cool," etc. Also used was dry ice in another film can which smoked continually and was placed on top of ice with can frozen in it.

Local Annual Bike Parade Tied to Theatre by Boucher

Through the efforts of Frank Boucher, Schine's Glove, Gloversville, N. Y., Montgomery-Ward has tied in with the theatre on their annual bike parade. Each child attending a show at the Glove receives a lucky number ticket which entitles him to a chance at winning one of the many bikes awarded by the company. Newspaper ads and heralds distributed by the merchant call attention to the giveaway at the Glove.

In connection with the booking of "Smooth Approach," Boucher held a special golf matinee at his house at which time Doug Turnesa, one of the famed Turnesa brothers, appeared on stage to explain the intricacies of golf. Free lessons and golf balls were awarded lucky patrons at this matinee. To help publicize this special show, Frank circularized entire membership of local golf clubs and players.

'DIG DEEP, THINK HARD,' IS RECIPE FOR SUMMER

Round Tabler Discusses Virtue of Giving a Personality to Theatre to Build Grosses

by BILL HARWELL

Manager, Warners' Ohio, Canton, Ohio

Somewhere in the columns of this worthy publication I believe I have read that in the show business there is very little new in exploitation. As I see it, the proper selling of a motion picture does not necessarily require a brilliant idea or the mind of a genius, but honest-to-goodness plugging at all times, and a juggling around of the fundamental principles of showmanship so that they may be presented in a different manner on different occasions. A careful study of the picture to determine what angle to use to reach the proper audience, and then a well planned campaign to carry your message to the maximum number of people is what counts. So what I shall say will not be new, but the repetition may have some value.

The summer months are coming—summer with its formidable opposition composed of numerous out-of-door amusements that spring up to cut into our box office receipts. How can we meet this increased opposition? How can we continue to draw them in—away from the swimming pools, amusement parks, baseball games, the golf links, and what-not? That is the big question that confronts each one of us.

In one respect, summer and winter are the same. A continuous hammering in order to create and keep alive interest is imperative, with undoubtedly a little more earnest thinking, a little deeper digging throughout the summer months.

"Clean Up and Paint Up" has now become a permanent feature of spring, and we of the theatre most certainly should join the parade—not necessarily a reconditioning of the entire theatre but certainly a touching up where it is needed most, particularly in the outer lobby. Colors should be changed from dark to pastels, from warm shades to cool ones. By the same token lights in the auditorium should be changed to cool colors. Green and blue are such.

Calls for Broader "Thank You"

Since admittedly it is true that we must dig deeper and think harder in the summer, why not pay a little more attention to what to me is the most important thing in the show business—courtesy and attentiveness with the attendant smile. Why not make the "thank you" a little louder and the smile a little broader during these strenuous months. All of us know the importance of that. But how many of us are taking for granted that our employees know it and are applying it regularly and constantly? Remember, always, that we are selling entertainment and that we must do more than bring them in with our clever advertising campaigns. We must give them something when we get them there, and by our very manner and movements make them conscious of the fact that we are glad they came, and are solicitous of their comfort and interested in their complete enjoyment. That gives a theatre a personality, and a theatre with a personality will assuredly do business. I remember when I first came to Canton and called my first staff meeting. I debated in my mind whether or not I should bring up the subject of courtesy and politeness, since, of course, every other manager had instructed them along those lines and my harping on it again would only be superfluous. Several days later I was summoned to a regional meeting in Cleveland to hear a talk from our general manager, Mr. Bernhard. The subject of his talk, among other things, was courtesy. He dwelt at length on just what I had known was of fundamental importance but had hesitated to stress again.

"Never forget," Mr. Bernhard said, "that we have only entertainment to sell, and that everything we do and say should tend to put our patrons in a frame of mind to properly receive what we have to offer."

In my opinion, summer calls for out-door campaigns—tack cards, posters, window cards, and street ballyhoo—for that's where the people are to be found. By this I do not mean that such a campaign should be used on every picture. Since not every picture can be great, it follows that not every picture should be made to look great. For my part, though there's a difference of opinion here, I shout my loudest on the big ones. Some managers call them naturals, and feel that the picture in itself will draw the maximum business without the attendant hullabaloo. "Sell the weak ones," they say, "and let the good ones take care of themselves." I do not agree. It is my contention—and I have proved it to myself—that the big ones can be made to do more by the proper merchandising. And most certainly, if your campaign clicks and they do answer your call, you have helped yourself in more ways than one.

Must Emphasize Big Pictures

To really put over a big picture, I think, the idea must be sold that something out of the ordinary is going to happen, an event of importance is to take place. There are various means of doings this. One very excellent one is to open with a reserved seat premiere. We have just proved that in Canton with "Dark Victory." Such an opening, with accompanying lights, flares, pennants, program, flowers, and cashier and manager and assistant in formal, gives the picture prestige and unquestionably insures extra business for the entire run. That is one thing that might help lick some of the hot days, so we are planning another such opening on "Juarez."

In summing up, may I say that what I have tried to tell in the foregoing paragraphs is not so much what the Ohio of Canton is doing but rather what we would like to accomplish. We should give ourselves a goal to shoot at, and let it be our earnest endeavor to approach that goal as nearly as is possible.

More Fortnight Winning Ideas In Past Period

The sixth annual Erie Times-Warner refrigerator show in Erie, Pa., held on the stage of the Erie by Manager Ken Grimes got underway recently with a special 16 page section of the paper devoted entirely to the exhibit. Scattered throughout were art and story breaks on the current attraction at the theatre. Running for a full week, displayed in lobby were various models which revealed the giant strides made in the development of automatic refrigeration toward a new and refined expression of the American standard of living. All merchants tied to the event plugged the show storewide.

Samartano Hooks "Hardy" Date To Campaign for "Mothers' Day"

Selling his attraction "The Hardy's Ride High" as a tribute to American mothers since the engagement started on Mother's Day, Joe Samartano, Loew-Poli Palace, in Meriden used a special leader for his regular trailer week ahead announcing a special treat in store for patrons and definitely stressing the "bring mother" angle.

Newspapers cooperated with a front page story on a gardenia giveaway, special cooperative ad also planted with the florist who donated the blooms. Paper also gave a feature story on the theatreman's honoring the typical mother, plus the selection of five local families invited to be the guests of the management. Numerous tieups were made with local merchants tying in Mothers' Day gifts, in each case store devoting window to special displays. In addition, personal letters were sent to the 1,000 heads of families, names of which were taken from the membership in the Hardy Family Club.

Johnson Turns Theatre Over To Scouts on M of T Short

The March of Time short devoted to the Boys Scouts of America enabled Bill Johnson, Opera House, Millinocket, Maine an opportunity to tie up with both local troops to take over the running of the theatre for a day. Boys appointed a staff from manager to ushers, the theatreman taking pictures of the youths for publicity breaks.

Trailer was run in theatre to the effect that percentage money realized from ticket sales would go to the Scout camp fund; night before show heralds were distributed in the name of the scout manager-for-the-day thanking the public and requesting their attendance. Johnson then wrote out a series of stories for the newspapers, which were turned over to local correspondents for planting in Bangor, 90 miles distant, since Millinocket has no paper of its own.

Dummy Convict on Marquee Stunt Proves Crowd-Stopper for Blieden

What is reported to have been a crowd-stopper is the marquee stunt used by Mel Blieden, at the Forsythe Theatre, in East Chicago, Indiana for "Devil's Island." Store dummy dressed in striped convict's uniform was suspended from a large board jutting out about ten feet from the top of the marquee. Over all was a large sign carrying picture title and playdates.

What the Usher Should Know In Doing His Theatre Job

Second Article of Service Series Details Further Staff "Do's" and "Dont's"

by RUDOLPH A. KUEHN
District Manager, Warner Jersey Theatres

The operation of the loge is probably the most complicated part of the theatre to master. The usher in charge of the loge must know at all times how many people are in his section. He must know how to ask people for their stubs. If they have only orchestra or balcony stubs, he must tell them politely that there is an extra charge for that section and that they can make the exchange elsewhere or can move to the section where the stub is valid.

The loge becomes more complicated when it is completely filled. Accordingly, when the loge has only about a dozen seats left, the usher signals to have the cashier stop selling, "to cut loge." This allows the usher to make his exchanges. Inside the loge ramp or runway, there are ushers stationed, usually two, to seat people and keep a constant check on the number of empty seats. There is an usher on the outside of the loge in the mezzanine, to make exchanges for patrons. He carries a pouch to hold tickets and a change carrier.

At night, ushers should be stationed at the foot of orchestra, loge and balcony before the final break, with flashlights ready to help patrons who have lost anything. Ushers should make sure that all patrons have left the rest rooms and are off of the premises before the all-clear signal for each section.

Fire Drills a "Must"

Every theatre should conduct a fire drill regularly to keep the service staff reminded of such occurrences. At this drill the boys are instructed how to act in case of a panic, riot, fire, etc.

The best way in training a boy to handle tapes is to give him practical experience at it. The man training the boys can talk to them for hours telling them just what to do; but once on the floor under standing room pressure, they are bewildered. This is the situation where the usher learns to talk to people. How to sell seats and make the patrons satisfied with standing. He must continually speak to standees—reassuring them and telling them just when seats will be available.

In handling the tapes, the boy must be able to release only as many people as called for. He must know how to keep the crowd in check; so that they won't break out of the tapes and cause disorder. The proper way to do this is to ask, "The first two, please," etc.

Tips Never to Be Accepted

On a large break, he must continually talk to the crowd and let them pass through the tapes in single file only in order to avoid a jam in the aisle. If there are tapes on both sides of an aisle, the boy must alternate with patrons on each side.

Following the first article, published in the Round Table of May 20, here is set down the second taken from the comprehensive manual on training the service staff, compiled by Rudy Kuehn, and commented upon editorially in a previous issue.

In response to the many requests for copies of the manual, it was decided to reproduce in slightly abridged form the subject matter for the information of interested members. A third article follows soon.

No usher, doorman or porter must ever accept a tip. Courtesy is the watchword of service and to take a tip lowers the patron's estimation of the service in the theatre. Boys must be told before donning the uniform that to be seen taking a tip means instant dismissal. This is the only way in which to curb the tipping evil. Every boy is offered a tip at some time during his ushering days and it is hard to turn it down. The proper answer in rejecting a tip is, "Thank you, but that was a service of the theatre." It makes the patron much more pleased with the theatre when a tip is politely rejected.

The usher should learn the schedule each day. He must know what feature is on at any given moment, when it will come off, and when the next feature goes on. He should know the complete length of the show. This is an important phase of service. People want to know when a feature goes on or off. If the feature is about to end within ten minutes or so, the usher can suggest that the patron wait in the lounge or on the mezzanine until the end. Often patrons want to know when they will get out of the show, making the knowledge of the length of the show an important item to service.

Very often, and especially during standing room conditions, an usher must take a great deal of abuse from irate patrons. He may be called anything under the sun; he may be ridiculed, scorned and have the management and the theatre owner abused. Under these conditions, no usher is to talk back to patrons. Trite as it may seem, the patron is always right, whether he's right or not. It is not an usher's place to talk back to a patron. He must have a complacent nature and be tolerant at all times. To all complaints which he cannot answer he must call his superior to handle the situation.

An usher at all times should be able to use common sense. He must realize that something different happens every day. Some situation develops each day which has never before occurred. He must learn that common sense and self-reliance are important factors in being an usher. Every rule is subject to conditions and alterations some time during operation. At these times, judgment must be used. If a situation cannot be handled by an usher, his superior must be informed immediately.

In most theatres professional men and women have to be called out during the performance. It is a good point in service to have cards made indicating the aisle, row and seat number. Each usher can carry a supply. It is a good idea to have the usher call in this data either to the switchboard operator or the cashier. Then when a call is received, the girl can give the location to any usher available at that moment.

"Lost and Found" Procedure

The chief of service is usually in charge of the lost and found situation. When a patron loses an article it is usually reported to the first usher seen. This usher should make an immediate effort to locate the missing article with the least amount of disturbance to seated patrons. Should the article not be immediately located, the chief of service is informed. Mimeographed forms can be made which will provide blanks for the description of the article and for the name, address and telephone number of the patron.

If the lost article is later found, a form letter should be sent to the patron asking him to come to the theatre to identify and claim the article. After a certain period, if the article is not found, it is customary to send a form letter "of regret" informing the patron that the article has not been located.

A filing system makes it easy to refer to all forms pertaining to the missing articles. Also it is well to have a cabinet consisting of eight compartments. One is marked for each day in the week, where all lost articles picked up in the theatres are placed. After a week, all the articles are placed in the eighth compartment where they are held for an additional period. If no claims are made on unidentified articles after a certain period, the articles may be disposed of.

Handling of Annoying Patrons

When over-enthusiastic patrons make too much noise and try to annoy the patrons around them, the proper thing is for the usher to ask them to be more quiet. Should they continue their noisemaking after more than one warning, a member of the management should be called to take care of the matter.

Certain young couples have a tendency to arrange themselves in quite peculiar positions during a performance. If these positions seem to be distasteful to other patrons seated nearby, it is best at all times to have the chief or some one of the management do all the warnings, as they may resent being called down by an usher.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Col.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as offically given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

CALLING!
LISTEN AMERICA!

CHIPPER "MR. CHIPS"!

Cincinnati joins the ranks of Dayton, Columbus and Cleveland to establish "Goodbye Mr. Chips" (Robert Donat, Greer Garson; directed by Sam Wood) as a sure-fire sensation everywhere! Watch the new openings nationwide! Imagine! The 5th week at the Astor, N.Y. tops the previous week!

"MAISIE" IS A DAISY!

This exploitation natural is a hot-weather box-office tonic! "MAISIE", the Explosive Blonde (Robert Young, Ann Sothern; directed by Edwin L. Marin) is delighting audiences and exhibitors everywhere.

THAT "TARZAN" YELL!

From coast to coast showmen are doing their stuff and "TARZAN FINDS A SON" (Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan; directed by Richard Thorpe) is topping all previous Tarzan hits.

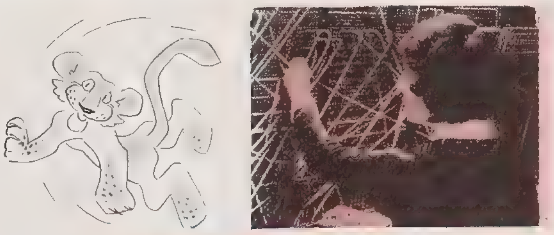
LUCKY 7th HARDY HIT!

Flash from Huntington Park, Cal.: "Sensational preview of 'ANDY HARDY GETS SPRING FEVER', the lucky 7th Hardy hit. Ecstatic audience almost tore the house down." (Directed by W. S. Van Dyke, II).

THE PLAYBILL
ON BORROWED TIME

"ON BORROWED TIME" GREAT!

"ON BORROWED TIME" (Lionel Barrymore and big cast; directed by Harold Bucquet) is the talk of the West Coast. The stage hit has become a screen triumph, one of the best produced by any studio this year!



LEAPING LEO!

He's in full stride and you ain't seen nothin' yet! "LADY OF THE TROPICS" (Robert Taylor, Hedy Lamarr; directed by Jack Conway); "THE WOMEN" (Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell and All-Star Cast; directed by George Cukor); "BLACKMAIL" (Edward G. Robinson; directed by Henry C. Potter) and other BIG ONES on the way for June, July and August. Hold tight to that Lion's tail, friends!

TYRONE POWER in Hollywood will make love to SONJA HENIE in Norway
Monday night, June 26

A night of thrills . . . when the Magic Key of RCA turns over its whole hour on the entire Blue Network to broadcast highlights from Irving Berlin's SECOND FIDDLE!

Buenos Aires . . . Oslo . . . Hollywood . . . New York . . . London . . . all join in a continent-and-ocean-spanning hook-up! Famed personalities . . . Sonja and Tyrone, Rudy Vallee, Mary Healy...Irving Berlin, Darryl F. Zanuck . . . in New York, Los Angeles and Oslo, Norway . . . all talk together. Big-time orchestras . . . Tommy Dorsey's, Frank Black's, Jack Harris' (of London), Osvaldo Fresdo's (of Buenos Aires) . . . playing the Irving Berlin hits! Songs from SECOND FIDDLE started in New York will be picked up on the beat in London, played back from Buenos Aires!

THE INEVITABLE

IN his remarks before the national sales convention of Paramount in Hollywood, Mr. Barney Balaban made the most candid expression that has been had from a major executive of the majors when he forecast inevitable changes in the distribution of pictures.

Surveying the array of issues represented by government suits, trade practise controversies, the foreign market situations and problems of the domestic market, he observed: "It is my belief that we face an entirely new method of selling—not this year perhaps, but it is not too early to plan."

From the scene of that utterance, your editor has come to the Allied States Association convention in Detroit, where all of the concrete planning of the organized industry as a unit is being presented in a still debated code of trade practise proposals.

Despite the sparring fronts, there is tacit admission, off the stage, that the current program is one of appeasement, that the hope is quite as much for appeasement of the forces of the Government suit as for militant Allied.

NOWHERE is there evidence of a conviction that movements taking place now are more than the early approaches to a re-stabilized, but entirely new, pattern of distribution operation.

In sequel to Mr. Balaban's Hollywood expression opportunity has been had to sound parallel reactions among other personages of major position. They unofficially express an equal conviction of the inevitability of sweeping change, and tend to add: "I'm not at all sure that it will not be a very good thing for all of us."

Conspicuously, but with great diplomatic caution, it is executive opinion that changes to come, involving new elements of competition, are to spur Hollywood's production machinery to a greater efficiency and competency.

That, to be sure, is a wish born of the now softly expressed thought that the goldfish bowl life of the whole motion picture industry has permitted its state of internal stresses and woes to become so obvious to a large public that the box office is feeling apathies born of fading confidence in the magic of the movies.

Certainly the abundantly disseminated public expressions of the Department of Justice, declaring the motion picture industry on trial and promising more, varied, and other trials personal and institutional, have been large recent contributions to a public questioning.

So much of the news has been for so long about trouble—which is not merchandise, and confuses the customers no little. They would like some entertainment and less law and lawing.

THE KING COMES

THE wild acclaim of the King and Queen of England has been a pleasant and puzzling surprise overseas, beyond both the hope and understanding of the observers, if one is to accept the news cables of comment. Among them is the expression from Mr. David Darrah of the Chicago Tribune service in London: "Europeans . . . regard it as a somewhat crazy triumph which shows that everything the movies have taught them about America must be true."

Remarkably enough, what "the movies have taught them" about America is true—but it happens that it is only a part of the story of this extensive America.

Meanwhile if the overseas commentators and observers are surprised at this demonstration, let them promote a visit and tour for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and see what happens!

While New York was cheering George of England, out in Hollywood a wondering and puzzled little minister, the Reverend R. Anderson Jardine, regarding a waning purse, observed that he was thinking of "doing something desperate like going into the cinema." He married Edward to Wallis Simpson. Edward lost an empire, and the little minister his parish.

RECORDING the American visit of the King and Queen of England has been the biggest job of the newsreels in all of their hectic history. Many a newsreel undertaking has been more difficult, vastly more laden with adventure, none has been quite so extensively intensive, and none so significant in the affairs of the contemporary and confused world.

The newsreels dispatched on speeding wings of the Yankee Clipper will be, before this page is in type, telling Europe yet another story about this America that the screen has made seem so astonishing.

A considerable part, maybe the most important part, of the errand on which the King came in the cause of Britain, will be performed by these same newsreel pictures. It was the newsreel which made his brother a figure of glamour and romance in American eyes. Now the homeland's screen is to show that America cheers the King.

DESERT MILES

ON the homebound loop of the transcontinental expedition to Paramount's Hollywood sales conclave, as your correspondent surveys the sunburned sage and sand of what is sometimes called "the Harry Sherman country," reflections arise on the coming of showmanship to the venerable institution of the railroad. It was certain to happen, in that process by which all industry is today decorated with showmanship.

On the other side of that double window the temperature is 110, on the inside 75. And it was the motion picture theatre which made air conditioning a national necessity.

Then to be noted is the discovery that the dynamic appeal of the sleek and puissant "streamliners" has brought back that old ritual pleasure of the mid-American small town Sunday when everyone has to go "down to the depot to see the train go through." That's the application of what the picture world knows as "production value."

Probably, too, it was motion picture influence, through the uniformed usherettes, that inspired the airlines to hostesses trim and pictorial, a bit of showmanship duplicated today on the Los Angeles Limited by "registered nurse stewardess service,"

This Week

Hopkins' Position

A further end toward which present conferences between the Department of Commerce and the motion picture industry are not directed was announced this week by Harry L. Hopkins, head of the department, in a letter to Senator Matthew M. Neely, author and sponsor of the anti-block booking bill now before the Senate. Mr. Hopkins said that in spite of rumors to the contrary the conferees were not considering the bringing of possible administration pressure to defeat the bill. He previously said they were not discussing the possibility of a consent decree settlement of the Government anti-suit or any other subject presently in the public eye.

A story reporting the conferences which this week are between the Secretary and exhibitor leaders, and the news that the Senate probably will not reach consideration of the Neely bill before next week, is on pages 13 and 14.

Despite Rejection

Plans of distributors for placing the proposed code of fair trade practices in effect immediately will not be affected by rejection of the document by Allied States Association at its national convention last week, it was indicated by representatives of the distributors. In New York the Independent Theatre Owners' Association attacked Allied's policy as exhibited in its rejection of the code and announced plans for the formation of a new national independent exhibitors' group.

Stories on pages 28 and 29 review the troubled trade practice field.

in poilu blue with jaunty cap, and streamlined, too. As a member of the train crew she contrasts a bit with the grim visaged veterans of the rails bedecked with service stripes.

With lounges, club cars, soda fountains, bars and radios the transcontinental train would lure the traffic back from the planes above and the motor highway below. Also the most impressive attentiveness is ever at the traveler's elbow. At any moment one expects to hear that silken phrase, "Roxy service, sir."

There seems to be at least as much showmanship in business as there is business in showmanship.

Short Waves

Taking advantage of an offer from the National and Columbia broadcasting networks, foreign distribution executives of the film companies have formed a committee to supervise the preparation of plans and scripts for a series of 15-minute programs to be used in short wave broadcasts to Europe and South America. Charles E. McCarthy of 20th Century-Fox was named chairman of the committee at a meeting at the MPPDA office in New York Tuesday. Others in the group which will handle scripts and coordinate the programs so that the news will coincide with the release of pictures in foreign countries, are Dave Blum, MGM; Al Deane, Paramount, and Lester Thompson and Kenneth Clark of the MPPDA office.

That the program will be acceptable under the recent Federal Communications Commission order requiring short wave foreign broadcasts to promote "good-will, understanding and cooperation" was assured.

A story tracing the Commission's reaction to wide criticism of that order appears on page 18.

Oklahoma Meeting

With television, trade practices, and matters of legislation, regulation and block booking set as topics of discussion, and Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; Governor Leon Phillips, and Robert O'Donnell, Interstate Circuit head, listed among the speakers, the annual convention of the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma opens Monday at the Biltmore Hotel in Oklahoma City.

Morris Loewenstein, president, will preside at the convention. Other officers are O. E. Enlow, secretary-treasurer; L. C. Griffith, L. A. White, Ralph Talbot, Homer Jones, Harry Loewenstein, Max Brock, and F. B. Pickrel.

To Pay Tax Claims

At week-end the Associated Press carried a dispatch reporting that "Attorney General Murphy has disclosed that an income tax controversy has arisen between the government and three officials of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Company, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, and Darryl Zanuck and William Goetz, vice-presidents." Representatives were said recently to have told Mr. Murphy that the controversy involved a legal difference of opinion in consequence of the merger of two companies and that their actions had been on the advice of counsel. Meanwhile Mr. Murphy was quoted as saying that the persons concerned had indicated that "they will pay whatever money they may be found to owe."

No Confidence Vote

A meeting of tired and hot entertainers, members of the American Federation of Actors, gathered to debate a vote of confidence in their leaders, Sophie Tucker and Ralph Whitehead, who will stand trial on charges of maladministration next month, erupted into a near riot early Tuesday morning after a tumultuous session. The biting, kicking and slapping was stopped by police. There was no vote, of confidence or otherwise.

New Radio Guild

The Los Angeles Radio Writers Guild, to be an affiliate of the Authors League of America, was organized Tuesday night as temporary officers were elected and a constitution adopted by some 60 writers, including members of the American Federation of Radio Artists.

Following talks by Marc Connelly, president of the Authors' League, and Charles Brackett and Dudley Nichols of the Screen Writers' Guild, the lines of organization for the new Guild were drawn and Forrest Barnes was named temporary president. Twenty-five members of AFRA signed a petition asking to resign as writer members of that organization provided approval is given by the national board.

"Nazi" Sequel

Treatment of international politics, specifically the nature and activities of the Nazi Government, will continue as part of the Warner 1939-40 program, Jack L. Warner said in Hollywood Tuesday. To follow the present "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" the company will produce "The Bishop Who Walked with God," a story about the Rev. Martin Neimoeller, Lutheran minister now in "protective custody" in Germany. A second picture will depict the activities of the underground opposition to the Nazi regime. Mr. Warner said that in spite of rumors to the contrary, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" would be one of the company's most successful pictures.

In New York this week a federal court denied the application of Fritz Kuhn, German bund leader, for a temporary injunction against showing of "Confessions" pending disposition of his libel suit claiming $5,000,000 damages.

Americanism

A "great patriotic demonstration," cosponsored by patriotic organizations and theatre men is proposed by Alexander Manta, president of Indiana-Illinois Theatres. Some of the theatres operated by Mr. Manta have recently concluded "Americanism" showings, consisting of patriotic short subjects run off for school children of the vicinity.

Mr. Manta's statement and an account of some of the showings will be found on page 62.

British Government Drops Excise Tax; French Modify Import Regulations

Foreign department executives, scanning the lowering shadows over the export market, were cheered this week by two bright developments. In England the Government abandoned its proposed new film excise tax and announced probable modification of new customs duties. Concurrently, a new film decree published in France carried hopeful modifications of previous regulations.

Complete abolition of the excise tax and adjustment of the customs duties proposed in the new British budget was announced by Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the House of Commons on Wednesday. The surprise decision immediately followed launching of a nation wide campaign by the nation wide press and screen industry to arouse public protest through screen trailers and newspaper advertising. It is generally believed that the Government awaited trade action before its decision, and interpreted the campaign as a determination to fight politically.

Sir John said that on close examination the operation of the proposed tax on cinematograph film and, especially, the different circumstances in which excise duty would have to be applied, caused him to conclude that a portion of his proposal should be dropped. The proposed excise tax is eliminated entirely and the need for modification of the customs duties was acknowledged.

The new taxes, proposed in April, as part of an "emergency budget," dictated by the necessity of more arms expenditures, and which executives of the British trade and American film importers protested would make it uneconomic for them to continue in business, provided for a tax of one penny per linear foot for imported film, instead of the one-third of a penny formerly imposed, and a half penny per foot tax on films made in England.

A new decree regulating importation and exhibition of foreign films in France for the year starting next July 1, published Wednesday in the "Journal Officiel," modifies previous regulations so as to favor importers of foreign product. Important changes include:

The text was the same as last year's decree, except for three important new points.

Issuance of 188 dubbing visas per year, instead of 94 per half year;

A maximum of 12 extra dubbing visas to be granted on recommendation of an international film commission.

Since January 1, of this year, original versions of dubbed films must have had their first public presentation, whatever the country, less than two years before, but the new decree stipulates that calculation of the two years will be counted from the time of their first public presentation until the time the respective films, completely dubbed, are deposited at the censor's office for registration.

The decree again includes the provision allowing an inter-ministerial commission to make an eventual allotment of dubbing visas between importing countries, a practice which American interests have always opposed.

Paramount Policy

Paramount does not intend to rid itself voluntarily of its affiliated theatres, Barney Balaban, president of the company, said on Tuesday in New York at the annual stockholders' meeting. The statement was made in response to questions by stockholders. All corporate directors were reelected.

Further news of the meeting is on page 63.

Actors' Lobby

Actors and actresses and their colleagues in the allied fields of music and radio, organized and singly, voiced loud and public protest this week over the elimination of the Federal Theatre Project in the appropriations bill approved last week by the House of Representatives.

HOPKINS SAYS HIS FILM MEETINGS SHOULD NOT INFLUENCE CONGRESS

Senate Vote on Neely Bill to Bar Block Booking and Blind Selling Is Delayed by Gold and Relief Measures

United States Secretary of Commerce Harry Lloyd Hopkins told Congress on Tuesday that the conferences he is holding with ranking motion picture executives from all branches on "broad problems affecting the industry in its relation to the general economic struncture" are not intended to "influence" Congress in its consideration of block booking or other legislation affecting the film business.

On the contrary, he declared, Congress should not be swayed by the fact that the Department of Commerce has recently undertaken a study of the industry's problems.

Explains to Neely

Secretary Hopkins made known his Department's position in a letter to Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely (Dem., W. Va.), because of his "great concern" over the "rumors, speculations and inaccurate reports" appearing as a result of the conferences he has been holding with industry officials, which rumors and reports had the conferences resulting in everything from a consent decree in the Government's New York anti-trust suit against the majors, to interference by the Department with Senator Neely's bill to abolish block and blind motion picture selling.

The declaration of policy by Secretary Hopkins came on the eve of a scheduled Senate vote on the Neely bill, which had been set a week ago after a three-man Senate Interstate Commerce minority committee submitted to the Senate an 18-page analysis of "unworkable" and "unfair" reasons why the measure should not be enacted.

Senate Vote Delayed

Failure of the Senate to dispose of legislation already before it prevented Senator Neely from calling up his block booking bill Wednesday, as he had planned.

As the day's session opened, an hour earlier than usual, it became apparent the Senate would not be able to dispose of the bill to extend the President's authority over the gold content of the dollar in time for any legislation which would require more than passing attention.

As the gold bill is due to be followed by the tax revision measure passed by the House earlier in the week and that, in turn, by the relief appropriation bill, there were indications that the block booking measure could not be brought up until next week.

Confer with MPTOA Leaders

Elsewhere in Washington on Wednesday afternoon, in private chambers in the Department of Commerce Office Building, Mr. Hopkins' economists and statisticians were conferring with officials of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in the first of a series of discussions with exhibitor leaders on industry problems. Allied States Association will confer next.

Declaring that the film industry is only one of several which have come to the Department of Commerce in recent months with requests for aid in solving their problems, Secretary Hopkins explained in his statement of policy that he has undertaken this task of conferring with industry leaders, "convinced that our system will function best when Government has full understanding of the motives, the practices and the requirements of business and business has an adequate conception of the responsibility of Government."

Trade Practices

Motion picture trade practice developments this week reached far beyond Secretary of Commerce Hopkins' conferences with leaders on "broad industry problems" and Secretary Hopkins' "statement of policy" that these conferences should in no wise interfere with Congressional film legislation, as witness:

Department of Commerce Wednesday opened conferences with exhibitor leaders on their problems, as noted elsewhere on this page.

William F. Rodgers, official motion picture code spokesman for the majors, declared Wednesday that the distributors will stand on the code as now drafted, despite complete rejection of the document last week by Allied States Association; Allied's official reasons for rejecting. See page 28.

Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York Monday called on independent exhibitors to set up a new national exhibitor group because of Allied's code rejection. See page 28.

Distributors were ordered to file answers to Government's supplementary bill of particulars by next Thursday. See page 14.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD starts a series of articles by Louis Nizer analyzing the new trade practice code. See page 31.

It was disclosed that the motion picture conferences, which started with the producer-distributors two weeks ago, and were this week broadened to include the exhibitors, will be further expanded to bring in "other interested groups" which the Secretary did not identify.

His statement, however, corroborated the growing impression in Washington that the Department's efforts would not be as ambitious as was originally believed when, upon refusal of Department officials to clarify their aims, Washington newspaper men had Secretary Hopkins seeking to arrange consent decrees for oil, fertilizer and motion picture companies involved in Department of Justice anti-trust suits, and acting as "mediator" between business groups and other Government agencies with which they were engaged in controversies.

In writing to Senator Neely, the Secretary admitted that he is "greatly concerned" over these stories.

Another in the series of conferences Secretary Hopkins is holding with industry groups will take place July 18 in Washington with Harry Brandt, president of the New York ITOA, Milton C. Weisman, counsel for the organization, and a committee of three. Brandt yesterday accepted Hopkins' invitation to confer with him and other Department officials. The delegation will present the independent exhibitors' viewpoint.

Recalls Meeting with Producers

"I am even more concerned," he added, "to learn that some groups of exhibitors and organizations interested in the problems of the industry are convinced that these conferences may interfere with the consideration of the Neely bill by Congress. I therefore wish to make the position of the Department of Commerce so clear that there can be absolutely no misunderstanding regarding their objectives and motives.

"Several weeks ago representatives of the producing branch of the industry conferred with me about the possibility of the Department of Commerce making a study of the problems of the motion picture industry. It was their thought that through such a study the Department of Commerce could reach a considered judgment regarding the performance of the industry in the public interest and might be able to evolve definite suggestions for improving existing relationships between the producers, exhibitors and the public.

"This industry is only one of several whose representatives have come to the Department in recent months with the request that we examine their problems and practices with a view toward helping them.

"I have urged business men to bring their problems to the Department of Commerce for I am firmly convinced that our system will function best when Government has full understanding of the motives, the practices and the requirements of business and business has an adequate conception of the responsibility of Government.

Will Meet Other Film Groups

"I want the Department of Commerce to be of maximum assistance to business, in no narrow, shallow sense but in the broadest possible manner. That is to say that an individual business or industry functions best and is most successful when it gives adequate consideration to its relationships with suppliers and customers and to the general public interest.

"We have just started our study of the motion picture industry. We plan to confer not only with the producers but with the exhibitors and other interested groups. It will be some time before we can complete the examination of essential facts and reach sound conclusions.

"Congress, after the long months of consideration it has given to this subject should not be influenced in its legislative program by the fact that we have so recently undertaken to give special attention to the problems of the motion picture industry."

Kuykendall Confers

Meanwhile, as Senator Neely prepared to call his block booking bill up in the Senate, Commerce Department officials held their first meeting with exhibitors, receiving the views of the MPTOA through Ed Kuykendall, its president, Wednesday.

Invited to come to Washington a day after Allied leaders were to be met, Mr. Kuykendall discussed with the same Department of Commerce group that met the producers two weeks ago the problems of the industry as seen from the standpoint of his exhibitor group.

Allied leaders, however, will not meet with Department officials until early next month, probably July 3rd or 5th, the date of June 26 suggested by Colonel H. A. Cole, Allied president, as the earliest on which he could come to Washington being unsatisfactory to the department officials whose week already had been solidly booked.

A second conference was held this week between Ernest Tupper, chief Department statistician, and J. H. Hazen, Warner Brothers vice-president, regarding the progress made in gathering the statistical material on which the Department will base its studies of the majors. The two met in Washington Friday and went over the data, but Mr. Tupper said that no further meeting could be arranged with the producer group until after July 6th.

Meets Statisticians

Department officials Wednesday had their first opportunity in their series of film conferences, to discuss problems of the motion picture industry with a representative of the exhibition branch. Mr. Kuykendall conferred with Dr. Willard L. Thorp, special assistant to Secretary Hopkins; Ernest Tupper, chief statistician of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce; and Nathan Golden, chief of the Department's motion picture division.

Going to Washington alone, Mr. Kuykendall conferred with Department officials for several hours, the discussion, it being explained later, being along general lines.

Asked again Wednesday about the conferences which are being held with the motion picture and other industries, Secretary Hopkins said, "I think there is nothing to be said beyond what we have stated.

"We had a meeting this morning with independent exhibitors and will meet with more of them within a few days, discussing the whole field of the motion picture business in America."

Chadwick Invited

It was disclosed at the Department that an invitation has been extended to I. E. Chadwick, president of the Independent Motion Picture Producers Association, Hollywood, either to confer personally with officials in Washington or, in the event of his inability to go to the capital, to submit his views in writing.

In a letter to Mr. Chadwick Tuesday, Dr. Thorp declared: "Secretary Hopkins is exceedingly anxious to make sure all interests and points of view receive consideration, and would find it exceedingly helpful to learn at first hand the problems of smaller producers."

It was made known also that news of the Department's new interest in the motion picture industry has resulted in a large number of communications regarding various phases of the film business, and requests for conferences, from individuals and groups interested in motion picture "reform." It was not divulged, however, what action the Department will take regarding the "public interest" thus represented.

John W. Hicks, Jr., head of the Paramount foreign department, plans to leave New York for the coast June 28th, from where he will sail for Australia July 5th. Adolph Zukor, Paramount board chairman, is scheduled to sail from Los Angeles June 29th on the first leg of his Australian trip. Mr. Zukor and Mr. Hicks will meet in Honolulu July 12th and continue from there to Sydney.

Majors Ordered to Answer Government's New Bill of Particulars in Ten Days

The United States Department of Justice on Monday filed supplementary bills of particulars in federal district court, New York, in its anti-trust suit against the majors, which supplementations must be answered by the defendants by June 29th.

The Government's additional bill declares that Universal Pictures Corporation is the only one of the majors which it does not charge with "coercion".

The Government apparently has no written evidence, yet, that the major companies have conspired, according to remarks made Tuesday in New York federal court, before Judge Conger, by Paul Williams, special assistant attorney general. The remarks were made at argument on the application by United Artists, on affidavit by Edward C. Raftery, attorney, for a further bill of particulars from the Government.

Mr. Williams conceded that United Artists' "exact status" is unknown to the Government, but said that complaints were being received and that, therefore, the Government must include the company in all charges made against the other companies.

Benjamin Pepper, defense attorney, said the Government wrote its bill "deceitfully", and that the answers to pleas for names of exhibitor complainants have been evasive.

That the Government will subpoena the books and records of all defendants for examination before trial was indicated by Mr. Williams on Friday, before Judge Clancy, who reserved decision on an application by Columbia for a further bill of particulars and an extension of time to answer.

Momand Defendants Lose Move to Dismiss Case

A. B. Momand's eight-year $4,958,000 anti-trust suit against the Griffith Amusement Company and the major companies in the Oklahoma territory gained headway Saturday when A. P. Murrah, federal judge in Oklahoma City, denied a motion of dismissal by the defendants and ordered them to answer Mr. Momand's bill of particulars by September 1st.

Mr. Momand, who formerly operated 18 theatres and now has only the Odeon, in Shawnee, charges that the majors and the large circuit conspired to fix prices and monopolize the industry.

The United States Department of Justice is seeking a trial this autumn of its anti-trust action against the Griffith circuit and subsidiaries and against the majors, according to Charles E. Dierker, United States attorney for the western district of Oklahoma.

Government Chicago Case Starts; Others Delayed

The United States Government's criminal contempt case against Balaban & Katz and the major companies in the Chicago area was scheduled to begin trial this Thursday, despite last-minute attempts by RKO and Universal attorneys to have the case put over because Judge Edmund Adcock, a chief counsel for defendants, was engaged elsewhere.

It was decided to hold the trial anyway, before Special Master Eldredge.

Expected to make the opening statement was Robert L. Wright, special assistant attorney general. All leaders in the industry in Chicago, including exchange managers of all majors, have been subpoenaed, Seymour Simon, a Government attorney, said. Among them are Joe Rosenberg, counsel for Illinois Allied; Robert Farrell, of the Oriental theatre; L. R. Armholt, counsel for the Board of Education; Emil Stern and Eddie Silverman, owners of the Essaness circuit. Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, had not been included, it appeared this week.

In addressing the University of Chicago Law Conference last week, in that city, Thurman S. Arnold, assistant United States attorney general and head of the Department of Justice anti-trust division, cited the New York anti-trust action by the Department as an example of the procedure.

Hearing in the anti-trust action by the Adelphi theatre and other Chicago independents against B. & K. and distributors was set for June 29th.

In the Ford Stadium theatre anti-trust action, in Chicago, before Judge James Wilkerson, on Tuesday, Lewis Jacobson, for the plaintiff, filed a 31-page brief denying that defense contentions were valid and asserting that recent court decisions give the plaintiff latitude in defining conspiracy.

HOUSE GROUP REFUSES FUND FOR U.S. FILMS, BELIEVING THEM PROPAGANDA

Committee, Petitioned for $335,840 for U. S. Film Service, Refuses to Provide Any Money Beyond June 30th

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Intimate details of the motion picture activities of the Federal Government were laid before members of the House Appropriations Committee at hearings on the 1940 relief appropriation bill, when officials of the National Emergency Council asked for a fund of $335,840 for the United States Film Service which, on July 1st, will be transferred to the newly created Federal Security Agency as part of the Office of Education, now a division of the Interior Department.

Refuse Funds Beyond June 30

That the Committee had little taste for the vast film propaganda machine which those plans would make possible was evidenced by its refusal to provide any funds in the bill to carry the film work beyond the close of the current fiscal year, June 30th.

Although the report on the bill contained no discussion of the motion picture activities, other than a curt announcement that no funds had been provided, the questioning of Council officials by committee members during the hearings definitely carried the thought that they felt it was propaganda, rather than "education" as claimed by Lowell Mellett, executive director.

While only $335,840 was asked for the division directly, it was disclosed that it planned to spend $572,340 in the coming year, foreseeing the use of $176,500 for the film phases of the President's program to improve relations with Latin America, and $60,000 for productions which it is to produce for other Government agencies.

In fact, expenditures would be even greater than this sum, if negotiations now underway or foreseen were consummated and film productions undertaken for various interested agencies.

Cost of Documentaries

The two documentary films most popular to date, "The River" and "The Plough That Broke the Plains," cost, respectively, $20,000 and $60,000 to produce, Mr. Mellett told the committee. But the film service now has in production two other pictures, one of which, dealing with health, will cost from $50,000 to $75,000, and the other, an industrial film, to cost $165,000. The last-named, he said, is being financed with funds contributed by the Public Works Administration, the Works Progress Administration and the Farm Security Administration; it is 75 per cent completed and will probably be released this fall.

The service also has commitments for production activities under the Latin American goodwill program, including the re-scoring, reediting and narration in Spanish and Portuguese of six films at a cost of $30,000; production of a picture on the American republics, $45,000; production of a film on the United States, $45,000, and preparation of films for the Coast Guard, $10,000.

Production has been undertaken of a picture for the Rural Electrification Administration at a cost of $20,000, and negotiations are being completed for the making of a picture for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration at a cost of $40,000.

Tentative proposals have been initiated for the making of a feature-length film on American maritime history and a shorter film on the training ship "Joseph Conrad," for the United States Maritime Commission, at a cost of $100,000 and $25,000, respectively.

The Public Health Service is interested in a series of six or more films showing how various public agencies attack major problems of health and welfare, and inquiries have been received from the Forest Service on films on forest fire prevention and timber salvage in New England; Census Bureau, on census taking operations; Office of Indian Affairs, on the general work of the office; United States Housing Authority, on the general work of that organization; Department of Justice, on general prison problems; Treasury, on operations of printing and coining money in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and in the Mint; Civil Aeronautics Authority, on general aeronautics problems; National Archives, on work of the Archives and of the Federal Register; The Panama Canal, on the canal and its operation; Pan American Union, on the 50th anniversary of the organization; Social Security Board, on its general work; Tennessee Valley Authority, on rehabilitation in the Tennessee Valley, Veterans Administration, on cancer research. Additional government agencies are interested in films.

As a result of its efforts, Arch Mercey, assistant director of the service, told the committee, "The River" has been played in 4,859 theatres for a total of 10,398 days and at 2,027 educational showings to an audience in excess of 415,000. "The Plough" has had 4,591 educational showings with an attendance of 1,037,000, which does not include previous commercial showings. "Good Neighbors," produced for the Maritime Commission and released last March, has had 269 showings to more than 43,000 people.

The film service, set up in August, 1938, has operated during the current fiscal year on a budget of $265,000 contributed by the Farm Security Administration, the WPA and PWA. Pare Lorentz, director, and other workers were employed on a per diem basis. With the proposed transfer of the work to the new Security Agency, however, it was planned to put it on a permanent basis, and of the $335,840 asked for the coming year, $211,140 was to be spent for personal services in Washington and in the field.

And the Salaries

Under the proposed set-up, the top man in the organization would be Pare Lorentz, director, at $10,000 a year, assisted by a chief of production, not yet named; a motion picture director, Lloyd Nosler, and a director of photography, Floyd Crosby, twice granted an Academy award, each to receive $9,000 a year.

Mr. Mercey, now assistant director at $6,000 a year, would retain that position at $7,500. There would be a chief of distribution, George Gercke, at $5,600 instead of his present $5,200; two regional advisers at $4,600; a chief of photographic research, to get $4,600 instead of $4,000; a script adviser at $4,500; an art director at $4,200; a film technician, to get $3,800 instead of $3,200; senior information specialist at $3,800; an assistant film technician at $3,200, and a number of positions at less than $3,000.

Also provided for were positions of general counsel; business manager at $5,600 instead of $4,500, and an assistant business manager at $4,500.

All told, the service would have a staff of 77 persons, 47 of them in Washington, as against a total of 45 at present.

Films Get New Assistance in Filming Of Navy, But Censorship Still Holds

Newsreel and newspaper photographers and broadcasters are given widely expanded assistance by the U. S. Navy Department in covering news developments, under new orders issued to all ships by Admiral C. C. Bloch, Commander-in-Chief of the United States Fleet.

But in the case of pictures, the Navy will relinquish none of the rights of censorship which it has always claimed, and is exacting from newsreel companies an agreement that they will submit all pictures taken under Navy auspices for censorship. Details of the new agreement are being closely guarded by the Navy Department in Washington.

If any footage is condemned, all prints, "lavenders" and negatives of such footage is to be turned over to the censoring authority. Retention of any condemned material may render companies liable to prosecution under the Espionage Act.

As in the case of feature pictures made with Navy aid, news pictures will be censored by the Commandant of the Third Naval District, at New York

Navy Department officials explained that there is nothing new in the censorship provisions. The only purpose is to prevent the dissemination of pictures of plants and operations which are Navy secrets—a purpose, it was emphasized, in which the Government has always had the cooperation of the motion picture industry. The censorship, it is provided in the agreement, is to apply only to pictures for which facilities and assistance are provided by the Navy and without which the pictures could not be made.

The new agreement, it was said, was necessitated by the adoption of a policy of assigning an officer on every vessel to handle public relations work, including that involving newsreels.

WEBER HALTS AFM SHOWDOWN AT MAJOR CIRCUITS AND THE IATSE

Convention Demand That Theatres Reemploy Musicians at $5,000,000 Annual Salary Outlay Referred to Committee

by KENNETH L. FORCE
in Kansas City

In a convention that opened Monday noon and did not close until Saturday midnight, at Kansas City's Municipal Auditorium, the American Federation of Musicians considered a variety of vital problems affecting the 200 delegates and other members. While there were several attempts to commit the AFM to a radical course of action, in almost every instance Joseph N. Weber, reelected president for his 40th term, prevailed in his insistence that he not wish to be bound to a position or a policy that he knew from experience was predetermined to failure.

This was the case in connection with the Federation's efforts to force motion picture producers and circuits to arrange to reemploy musicians in theatres on the wholesale at annual wages estimated at $5,000,000; it was also true of the resolution asking that the IATSE-AFM trade agreement be confined to theatres and show business only in view of the IATSE's assumption of jurisdiction in a much wider field, to the detriment of Federation members.

Special Sessions Held

Two special executive sessions, one Friday afternoon, the other Saturday night till 11 p.m., were needed to dispose of the issue with motion picture producers.

The original resolution said in part that "unless satisfactory arrangements are made which will provide for increased expenditures for the employment of musicians in theatres in a sum of not less than $5,000,000 per annum, the president and the international executive board are hereby instructed to notify said motion picture producers that after the fourth day of September, 1939, no member of the AF of M shall be permitted to render service to any motion picture producer or producers."

A substitute offered by the law committee, headed by J. W. Gillette, provides that unless producers had taken some definite action on the issue by Oct. 31, 1939, the AFM would call a special convention within thirty days.

Theatrical Agreement

The committee substitute was turned down, and the entire matter was referred to the executive board, where it has been. In his official report to the convention, President Weber reviewed the negotiations with producers. The third of three conferences this spring had to be postponed because of the illness of one of the producer representatives, and the negotiations remain uncertain. The Federation's position is that producers profited and profit enormously from the mechanical reproduction of music on the sound track, and that they have a moral obligation to the thousands of musicians thrown out of employment. The producers point out that with the coming of sound they hired hundreds of additional employees, that costs have risen steadily, that the companies are not profiting enormously but on the contrary some of them are finding it difficult or impossible to maintain solvency.

The IATSE-AFM trade agreement was primarily a theatrical agreement intended to protect mutual interests of the two organizations "in theatres as they then existed and in connection with actual show business," the resolution dealing with the agreement pointed out. However, "upon the advent of talking pictures and the decline of show business, the IATSE broadened the scope of their jurisdiction to apply to all amusements," claiming jurisdiction over operation of public address systems in connection with all forms of amusement.

Charging resultant loss of employment to members of the Federation, it was resolved that negotiations be launched "to the end that the IATSE-AFM national agreement be worded and interpreted as applying to theatres and actual show business only."

The resolution was recommitted, and the committee offered a substitute, that the agreement be referred to the board with the recommendation to take whatever action possible.

Television Inquiry Voted

The convention authorized Mr. Weber to investigate the operation and methods of television to determine ways and means of protecting musicians in connection with recordings for television.

Mr. Weber opposed a resolution calling on the AFL to grant to AFM jurisdiction over operation of record playing machines in radio stations, just as he had opposed the original resolution on the IATSE agreement.

The executive board was empowered to "investigate the feasibility of the Federation going into the recording business," and, if it were found practical, "to appropriate the necessary funds to go into the manufacturing of records."

ASCAP has established certain fees on employers who use living musicians playing certain copyrighted music. "In many instances said fees seem exorbitant and appear unnecessary in the eyes of the employer," said a resolution, "that the executive board . . . take such action with the ASCAP as is necessary to eliminate said penalty either by a reduction in fees by ASCAP or the levying of higher fees than ASCAP by the American Federation of Musicians on the use of mechanical music."

The resolution was passed.

The convention passed a resolution dealing with coin operated phonographs. One of the inducements offered establishments in obtaining locations for use of such machines is the exemption in the copyright law which frees the machine from payment of performing fees. The convention favored a change in the law to remove the exemption.

Referred to the executive board with the approval of the convention were two resolutions dealing with assignment of performing rights on recordings to the AFM by Federation members.

The AFM rejected a resolution giving a local the right to demand that "for every network sustaining remote control program played by a traveling band and emanating within its jurisdiction a local band shall be broadcast under the same conditions, and if the broadcasting station is unwilling to broadcast a local band under these circumstances, the local shall have the right to prohibit all remote control broadcasting by such station."

But it passed a resolution "that every remote control broadcast made by members of the AFM must include a suitable statement that the broadcast is made with the consent of the AFM."

Non-Unionism Policy Attacked

The convention "morally condemned" the Paramount Saenger circuit for continuing its policy of non-unionism. It also called on the American Federation of Actors, the IATSE and "other factors available" to make common cause toward re-employment of AFM musicians.

Every member of the convention Saturday wired his senators to remove the amendment in the relief appropriation bill which changes the WPA musical projects setup.

Only incumbent officers were nominated, so that election was automatic: Joseph N. Weber, president; C. L. Bagley, vice-president; Fred W. Birnbach, secretary; Harry E. Brenton, financial secretary-treasurer. Members of the executive committee: James C. Petrillo, A. C. Hayden, Chauncy A. Weaver, and J. W. Parks, from the United States, and Walter M. Murdoch, Canada.

GRIFFITH RETURNS AS HAL ROACH ASSOCIATE

David Wark Griffith, early motion picture producer who retired in 1936, when he re-produced "Broken Blossoms", for Twickenham in England, last week announced his return as an associate in the Hal Roach organization.

By joining Hal Roach, Mr. Griffith, in effect, rejoins United Artists, which he helped organize in 1919, inasmuch as the Hal Roach product is distributed through United Artists.

Mr. Griffith last week declared that "technical work in films has developed enormously since I was last on a set" and that he was happy to see that "sound and color have not detracted from the excitement of the old type of picture work.

"And good acting, I notice, is still good acting."

Music Publishers Limit "Free List"

Ending its two day convention in New York's Hotel Roosevelt last week, the Standard Music Publishers Association of the United States adopted a resolution modifying the "free list," of schools, music contests and the like, which have received free sheet music of standard and classical composition for years.

The resolution provides that from now on, organizations will receive only one copy with the melody parts and abridged scores, and will have to buy full orchestrations.

The National Association of Sheet Music Dealers also concluded a convention last week. Charles H. Homeyer was elected president, C. Guy Hoover, vice-president; Frank F. Homeyer, secretary-treasurer.

Troubles of Song Writers and Publishers Being Adjusted

The troubles between the music publishers, particularly members of the Music Publishers' Protective Association, and members of the Song Writers' Protective Association are seen as being settled shortly, according to Walter Douglass, head of the Publishers Association. The main difficulty has been in trying to find a satisfactory method of accounting between the writers and the publishers.

MAJORS AND STAGE NEAR AGREEMENT TO RETURN FILM BACKING TO PLAYS

Settlement Calls for Individual Agreements by Author, Manager and Motion Picture Company Seeking Rights

Motion picture producers and the Dramatists Guild of the Broadway stage are about to "bury the hatchet" in the long fight which caused the film producers to withdraw their financial support from legitimate plays in the spring of 1936.

A plan of "armistice" has finally been agreed to in principle by both sides. There remains now only formal ratification by the Guild membership, the New York Theatre Managers and the film companies to return Hollywood money to the Broadway stage.

Individual Agreements

Basically, the settlement provides for individual agreements among the author of the play, the manager and the film company backer, countersigned by the Dramatists Guild.

The author will continue to get 60 per cent on the sales of the play for films and the film company backer of the play still will get 40 per cent. But the film company backing the play will receive its right to film the play as soon as the agreement has been concluded. Formerly, the author retained the right to dispose of his work in the open market if his price were not met by the film company backer; now the backer pays an advance against the rights in return for them, and a percentage of the weekly gross receipts.

Dramatists' Approval Seen

With the Dramatist Guild council's approval generally expected, the plan would then go to Guild membership for ratification, on 30 days' notice; receive a two-thirds approval of the League of New York Theatres and all other signatory managers (approximately 400) on 10 days' written notice, and be formally accepted by the film companies.

Under consideration almost since the breach between the two interests, the plan has been worked out largely by John Wharton, theatrical attorney; Sidney Fleisher, attorney for the Dramatists Guild; Luise Sillcox Guild secretary; J. Robert Rubin, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vice-president and general counsel, and Jake Wilk, Warner Brothers' eastern story editor.

Motion picture companies had financed stage productions on Broadway prior to the 1937-38 theatrical season. But in the spring of 1936 the Dramatists, through their Guild, instituted a new minimum basic agreement, departing in two main instances from the previous agreement. The division of the proceeds of the film rights was changed from 50-50 between author and film producer backing the play, to 60-40. More important, the control of the disposition of the film rights was kept by the author, subject to the supervision of the Guild.

At this point, the motion picture companies withdrew their support, feeling that it was not worth while to finance a play, run the risk of possible loss, and then find that another film company might outbid it for the rights.

Some of the larger film companies are said to have had a "gentlemen's agreement" not to bid on plays which had been financed by one of their member companies, but this was not enough to counteract the effects of the 1936 agreement.

The new agreement makes an effort to recognize the viewpoints of the three parties most concerned: the dramatists, the stage producers and the film companies. The dramatists felt, prior to the 1936 agreement, that they were much the weaker members in any bargaining which was to be done, save in the case of a few top-notch "name" playwrights. The producers, under the 1936 plan, felt that they were not being recompensed properly for the work which goes into the making of a completed stage play, especially in being deprived of a voice in the final disposition of the film rights. The film companies saw no equity at all for them in the plan.

If the play manager is a corporation or a partnership, an independent manager would be appointed to have complete control of the production of the play.

The 60-40 division between author and producer remains the same; with, also as previously, it remaining a necessary condition that the play remain three weeks on Broadway, or play for 75 performances elsewhere, before the producer receives any interest in the film proceeds.

The backer is to agree to pay all expenses for the production of the play, while the manager has the right within the first 10 weeks of the run of the play in New York to decide upon making a road tour of the play. If the manager does not arrange for a road tour, the author has the right to do so, and in such a case can take over the physical properties of the play at the conclusion of the New York run, either renting or buying the properties.

If the backer has the right to direct that the play be closed, either the manager or the author can continue the run of the play, but the backer would not be liable for the expenses of the continued run.

Budget To Be Estimated

This is in line with a recent statement by George Middleton, past president of the Guild, that the Guild wants a play honestly to be allowed to have its full legitimate life in New York and on the road. It does not want it withdrawn by the enforced release of a picture version of itself, thereby killing it as stage material. The new agreement provides that the motion picture made from a stage play backed by film interests cannot be released until the expiration of one complete theatrical season following the theatrical season in which the play closed in New York, unless the play is closed without any intention of the play being re-opened.

The parties to the new agreement are to arrive at an estimated budget with regard to the weekly operating costs of the play, which cannot be closed unless the boxoffice receipts do not equal a certain percentage of the required operating budget. The author must be given one week's notice of closing.

The backer is to pay to the motion picture negotiator (Mr. Fleisher) a certain sum as an advance against the motion picture rights, the minimum sum to be between $15,000 and $25,000. After the opening of the play in New York, the backer shall pay to the motion picture negotiator a sum each week equal to approximately 10 per cent of the gross weekly boxoffice receipts. If there is a road tour of the play, the percentage sharing shall also apply. These payments from the backer are to be suspended if the income from the play for two consecutive weeks does not come to an individually set minimum figure, but will be resumed when the income rises to the minimum set figure.

Mr. Middleton had pointed out that the sum earned by dramatists through picture sales since 1926 totaled $11,199,456.

New York Censors Ban Two Pictures

New York's censors have refused a permit for the exhibition of "Polygamy," and their banning of "Science of Mankind" has been upheld by the courts. Meanwhile, "The Birth of a Baby" banning continues its course through the courts.

The New York State Board of Regents meeting last Friday in New York City sustained the action of the State Department of Education's motion picture division denying a license for the distribution of the picture, "Polygamy." It was the first time in five years that the regents had banned a film previously approved by the Hays organization in Hollywood. The industry's Code Administration is said to have recognized that the characters in the plural marriages in the picture were eventually punished.

In denying the license to Continental Pictures, Inc., producers of the picture, the regents upheld the opinion of Irwin Esmond, director of the motion picture division, that "Polygamy," based on the story of a group in Arizona that practised plural marriage, constituted "a licentious perversion of Christian teachings."

A jury in the United States district court in New York which deliberated less than an hour decided this week that the Viennese motion picture, "Science of Mankind" or "The Mysteries of Sex," was indecent and unfit to be shown to American audiences. As a result of the verdict the film, imported two years ago by Jewel Productions, Inc., was impounded.

Appeal of Eureka Productions to get "Ecstasy" passed over the Pennsylvania censor board's rejection was postponed to Monday.

Prosecutor John J. Breslin of Bergen County, N. J., on Wednesday banned showing of "Ecstasy" in Bogota.

Lift "Oppenheim" Ban

Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago has reversed Police Lieutenant Costello, Chicago censor, on his ban of "The Oppenheim Family," Russian film of Nazi persecutions, according to word received by Amkino, Russian film distributor. Lieutenant Costello has declared that the picture might incite disturbances and that "a foreign power" had protested its showing.

Ohio Report

Six reels were rejected by the Ohio censors the week ending June 16th, during which 114 reels were reviewed.

City authorities of Buenos Aires have issued an edict barring the showing of the Warner Brothers film "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" in all theatres in the city's metropolitan area.

Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, has received the Department Commanders Gold Medal of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The medal was awarded for "distinguished patriotic services during a perilous period" at the organization's war dead memorial service in Hollywood Bowl.

Directors of Pathe Film Corporation this week declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 per share on the $7 convertible preferred stock, payable July 1st to stockholders of record June 23rd.

STARS OPPOSE PLAN TO DROP FEDERAL THEATRE

Hallie Flanagan Protests to Congress Aim and Support Are Not Communistic

From stage, screen, radio, music and other fields protests mounted this week against the overwhelming vote by the House of Representatives, on Saturday last, cutting the nation's relief bill $45,000,000 under the sum asked by President Roosevelt, "revamping" the relief administration and, in the process, abolishing the Federal Theatre Project of the Works Progress Administration.

Communism Charge a Factor

Called a factor in the decision by the House Appropriations Committee, headed by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, Dem., Va., was the charge of Communism among the members of the Federal Theatre project and in its productions. The charge had been made, publicly, by various House members, since the project's inception, and denied by its champions.

This week, New York dramatic critics sent letters of protest to their Congressmen. Eddie Cantor, former president of the American Federation of Actors, telephoned the White House directly. The following stage luminaries sent a joint telegram: Katharine Cornell, Tallulah Bankhead, Katharine Hepburn, Donald Ogden Stewart, Douglas Montgomery, Bela Blau, Laurette Taylor, Florence Reed, William Gaxton, and Victor Moore. The telegram, sent to Congressman Clarence Gannon, of the Appropriations Committee, read:

"As professional theatre people, we are shocked at the proposal of the Woodrum Committee, eliminating the Federal Theatre Project. A fair study of the record would reveal its accomplishments. Prominent critics have given high praise to it.

"Its productions have given entertainment and education to millions of Americans and moral regeneration to thousands of theatre workers who faced destitution.

"How grossly unfair it would be now to exclude from the benefits of the new WPA appropriation a section of our citizenry who have always distinguished themselves in helping others when they were called upon in times of stress.

"We ask Congress to be just, and to keep alive what is a source of pride to every real American, who cannot be indifferent to the creative activities and welfare of his fellow Americans."

Gillmore Heads Delegation

This week, a delegation from New York, headed by Frank Gillmore, president of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent actors' union, presented its appeals before the Senate Finance Committee. In the delegation were Tallulah Bankhead, actress and daughter of William Bankhead, Speaker of the House; Blanche Yurka, Philip Loeb, Herman Shumlin, Donald Ogden Stewart, and James J. Brennan, vice-president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands and Employees. The three first-named are members of the Actors' Equity Council.

Before leaving for Washington, Mr. Gillmore charged that the House committee never called persons employed by the government theatre project.

Music Guild Protests

The American Guild of Musical Artists, Inc., also protested to Washington officials. Lawrence Tibbett, the organization's president, announced on Monday that a telegram had been sent, signed by the following:

The Federation of Arts Union, claiming to represent 14 American Federation of Labor and Committee for Industrial Organization unions, this week also protested, and asked Will H. Hays, MPPDA president, whether the film industry had any interest in the House action.

An advertisement, in the New York newspapers Tuesday and paid for by a committee of stage and screen stars, was addressed "To the Theatregoing Public," and read in part:

"If the theatre has brought you joy, join with us in this action: wire or write your Senator now, demanding the continuation of the Federal Theatre and other Arts Projects."

Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, national director of the Federal Theatre Project, last week made public a protest letter written by her to Congressman Woodrum. The letter denied "absolutely" that the project was designed to spread Communism; that it was administered by persons without previous theatre experience; that the support given to the project by the public was Communistic.

Mrs. Flanagan declared 95 per cent of those employed by the theatre project came from relief rolls, that 2,650 project workers were re-absorbed by private industry, so skilled were they; that the project has produced more than 1,200 plays; that 65 per cent were given free for underprivileged groups in institutions.

The American Federation of Musicians, in convention in Kansas City last week, wired Congressmen to oppose changes in the WPA music set-up which would affect the jobs of 8,000 musicians.

FCC Agrees to Hold Hearings on Air 'Censorship'

Bowing to the inevitable, the Federal Communications Commission last week ordered a hearing held July 12 on its much-criticized rule that international broadcasting stations must confine their programs to the promotion of "goodwill, understanding and cooperation," called censorship by many.

Betraying the resentment which it felt over the charges of censorship which were leveled against it following announcement of its rules for the 14 short-wave international stations May 23, the commission complained that its regulation has been "misunderstood."

The bitterness that has been engendered by the episode was revealed in a formal announcement of the hearing in which, ignoring the requests of broadcasters and of the National Association of Broadcasters, which had bluntly challenged it to show a legal basis for the rule, it said its action had been based on a petition filed by the American Civil Liberties Union.

The commission's announcement, confining the hearing to consideration exclusively of this phase of its regulations, followed unmistakable threats from the Capitol of legislative action if it failed to reconsider a rule which, according to Senator Wheeler of Montana, could be used to prevent a member of the Senate from making an address over an international station.

As it now stands, no extensive probe of the commission will be made until next year, Senator Wheeler having announced that legislation for reorganization will not be considered this year.

Nevertheless, the commission still has to hurdle a Congressional inquiry which may be launched when steps are taken to provide funds for its operations during the coming fiscal year.

Radio Men Studying Proposed New Code

The radio industry started studying this week a proposed new code of minimum standards for broadcasting. Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, submitted it to members in advance of the organization's convention in Atlantic City, July 9th.

The proposed code provides, among other things: That radio may not be used to convey attacks on race or religion. That member stations shall hold facilities ready, consistent with proper program balancing, for discussion of public questions. That stations shall extend fair and equal treatment to opposing candidates for the same office.

ITOA Plans Action If Screen Stars Stay on Air

The Independent Theatre Owners Association, New York, is planning to take action if the new radio season in the fall finds motion picture stars still remain on the air. The ITOA said that various stars refuse to act in certain pictures because of weak roles, refuse to act for certain directors and demand certain cameramen but are "silly" enough to act in "shoddy radio scripts."

The ITOA also spoke out against stars appearing on radio programs for 40 weeks in the year and said that star names are important in the business and business suffers when their names depreciate in value because of continued appearances on the air.

MAJORS GOING AHEAD WITH CODE IN SPITE OF REJECTION BY ALLIED

Distributors' Meetings Will Continue until Arbitration Agreement Is in Final Form Desired, Says Rodgers

"The distributors, most definitely will stand on the trade practice program as now drafted," William F. Rodgers, MGM, official code spokesman for the majors, said on Wednesday in final answer to last Thursday's rejection of the code by Allied States Association, at its convention in Minneapolis.

"The arbitration agreement is definitely left open for recommendations and suggestions; the rest of the code, comprising the trade practices, is closed," he declared.

Meetings Resumed

Mr. Rodgers explained that meetings within the majors' group of sales managers and lawyers will continue until the arbitration agreement is set up as desired. Not having returned until Tuesday from last week's convention, and a subsequent stopover at Chicago, Mr. Rodgers had not had the opportunity to arrange either for the continuing meetings or for an analysis of the arbitration suggestions made by exhibitor groups.

The principal objection of independents and independent groups to the arbitration agreement seems to be in their demand for greater representation for independents on the arbitration boards.

It is expected that the majors' code committee, through Mr. Rodgers, will make a statement of policy further clarifying its position early next week.

Code Availability Subject

"We are going right ahead with the program," Mr. Rodgers declared, meaning that the majors will sign the trade agreement with any and all desiring it, individuals and organizations. There is nothing legally to prevent individual Allied members from signing the pact, regardless of its rejection by their leaders.

The first of the continuing meetings among majors' sales managers and lawyers is expected to decide upon the manner and method of making the code available to those who want it.

Exhibitor Acceptances Sought

The majors' committee plans to obtain acceptance from exhibitor groups other than Allied and individual exhibitors. The committee feels that a majority of independent exhibitors favor the concessions and is proceeding on that premise in the hope that arbitration boards may be set up in the 32 exchange centers by the start of the 1939-'40 exhibition season, no later than September 1.

Many leaders of some 22 state and city organizations expressing opinions on the new document held favorably for the code, in one form or another, in a consensus in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week (June 17th, pages 13-15). Southeast Theatre Owners Association voted "yes"; Chicago Exhibitors Association favored arbitration; Arkansas MPTO expected more concessions; Louisiana of New Jersey wanted a federal arbitration system; MPTO of the Carolinas would rather have conciliation than arbitration; Allied of Michigan was "optimistic"; Northern California ITO was to vote this week;

Southern California ITO endorsed arbitration boards provided they consisted of only film men; Greater Cincinnati MPTO liked the trade code idea; Ohio ITO backed national Allied's opinion; Oklahoma Theatre Owners were said to favor conciliation, but will act next week; Oklahoma Allied was said to oppose arbitration; MPTO of St. Louis and Eastern Missouri prepared to vote; Virginia MPTO reserved its decision, for another three weeks; New Jersey Allied criticized the arbitration agreement; New York's ITOA accepted the document; subject to some changes in arbitration;

MPTO of New York said the code is "helpful"; Allied of New York declined to give an opinion; Northwest MPTO was impressed by the code; West Virginia Managers Association said the plan "goes a long way"; Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association commended the majors for evolving the code but withheld official approval of the pact; ITO of Kansas City, Mo., likewise called it "a commendable attempt."

Pennsylvania Follows Allied

This week, the MPTO of Western Pennsylvania, an Allied unit, endorsed national Allied's rejection, and Independent Exhibtors of New Haven called a meeting for Tuesday to act on the program.

Following national Allied's flat rejection of the trade practice program proffered it at the national convention last week at the Hotel Nicollet, Minneapolis, the distributor delegation walked out of the convention, in a body, on Thursday afternoon, last day of the convention. The delegation consisted of William F. Rodgers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales manager, who had delivered a plea for acceptance of the code, earlier in the convention; Gradwell Sears, Warner Brothers sales manager; Neil F. Agnew, Paramount sales manager, and Abe Montague, Columbia sales manager.

Mr. Rodgers, after the walkout, declared that several of the reasons given by Allied for its rejection were "factually incorrect" and asserted that the statement "that we failed to get in touch with Allied on the code after January 16 is disproved by the fact that Myers (Abram F. Myers, general counsel to National Allied) was in negotiation with our attorneys during February."

Approves Committee Report

The virtual rejection by Allied came with the action of the convention the closing day, with about half the delegates present, passing a resolution approving the negotiating committee's report and recommendations. This report had been approved by the Allied board of directors on Tuesday, the opening day of the convention. Both the board and the committee had concurred in rejection of the code, on the following grounds:

That "the code does not provide an effective remedy for major abuses complained of by Allied"; that the final draft "does not fully and accurately" reflect the substance of the negotiations and representations of the distributors; and that "reports had been received (by Allied) that "distributors already are taking steps to circumvent and nullify the moderate concessions offered."

The code also was rejected by the negotiating committee, the board, and the convention

ITOA Bids for Third National Exhibitor Group Following Allied Code Rejection

Criticizing Allied States Association's leaders for their manner and method of rejecting the majors' trade practice code at Allied's convention in Minneapolis last week, the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York on Monday made a bid to establish a third national exhibitors' organization.

"Since the ITOA will sign the pact; since the MPTOA can hardly be classified as a proper organization to represent independent exhibitors; since Allied's officers have shown a disposition to reject anything offered—the ITOA offers its counsel and its offices to the exhibitors of America until the time comes when a truly national independent exhibitor organization is formed that will represent its members faithfully and not merely reflect the views of a handful of its members," said a statement issued to independents Monday by Harry Brandt, the ITOA's president. Mr. Brandt variously down through the years has sounded for a new national exhibitor group.

Mr. Brandt said that while in Minneapolis attending Allied's convention he spoke to "any number of Allied men, and did not find one who did not want to sign the code, that being in direct contrast to the attitude adopted by Allied leaders". The ITO, he continued, "will act for and aid any independent exhibitor who wants to accept the code as the best this industry has to offer at the moment for working out the problems besetting theatre operation".

The ITO president charged that, although exhibitors were invited to the convention to vote on the trade program, "Allied leaders, in a 'star chamber' session, rejected the code even before the convention was opened". He declared that his suggestion that secret ballots be sent to every independent exhibitor in the country to vote on the code "was entirely dispensed with".

ALLIED STAYS ON LEGISLATIVE ROAD

because it was thought its acceptance would hamper exhibitors in seeeking other forms of relief; would help the distributors to combat the Neely Bill, which a majority of Allied members apparently favor; and would possibly hamper the Government in its anti-trust prosecutions.

Allied also charged the majors are guilty of the following:

Requiring exhibitors to negotiate for and license shorts before they will even discuss selling the features.

Forcing short subjects.

Forcing foreign films.

Raising the price of flat rental pictures despite general business conditions and increasing the number of percentage films to offset possible loss through exercise of the cancellation privilege.

Offering special inducements in price and terms for waiver of the cancellation privilege.

Waiving guarantees and selling on straight percentage in order to get preferred playing time.

Adding score charges to all flat rentals for 1939-40. In addition, they charged, distributors are increasing film rentals to equal the amount of the score charge formely paid on percentage pictures.

Discontinuing national allocations, thus retarding free use of cancellation and restricting it to the lowest price bracket.

Negotiations Terminated

Upon learning of the board's action, taken even before the convention really got under way and before the widely heralded "open forum" which took place on Thursday, Mr. Rodgers announced withdrawal of the trade practice proposals, insofar as further negotiations with Allied were concerned. He said that the distributors would not again negotiate with Allied, as an organization.

After the convention, several Allied members were reported to be disappointed by their organization's summary rejection of the code, "without a fair trial," as some put it.

Among those who spoke for acceptance, besides Mr. Rodgers, were Mr. Keough, Mr. Agnew, H. M. Richey, special exhibitor contact for RKO; and Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Mr. Keough defended the work of the distributor lawyers. He denied that the code as finished differed from the suggestions offered by the Allied negotiating committee.

Mr. Agnew, noting that Allied had been "prating" about unity in the motion picture industry, declared that the code offered unity.

Mr. Richey called the code "a start" and asked for a fair trial. He said that in his contacts with exhibitors he had noted a desire for some regulatory procedure.

Mr. Kuykendall declared the code would help "90 per cent" of the exhibitors and certainly would not stop the Government suits. He said "nothing" would stop the suits. He also warned the convention of the "terrible mistake" made in indorsing the Neely Bill which, he was sure, would lead to Governmental regulation.

William Sussman and William C. Gehring, of Twentieth Century-Fox, also asked acceptance of the code.

Analyzes Principles

Mr. Rodgers' plea for the code mentioned the reluctance of the distributors to go as far as they did. He said that some of them feared they would not be able, under the plan, to operate profitably.

He put the adoption of the code up to the convention, thus: "Although I do not believe that the plan of voting here on the code would be of any material benefit, either for or against, because you do not have the number of people here qualified to register a national choice, the fact remains that it is in your hands whether or not you want to adopt it."

SEEK TO BROADEN TRADE AGREEMENTS

Trade agreements with six nations, involving over $800,000,000 in United States foreign trade, will be reopened shortly for the purpose of negotiating new and expanded pacts as Secretary of State Cordell Hull begins the sixth year of his trade program. The nations are France, Belgium, the Netherlands (including the Dutch East and West Indies), Switzerland, Sweden, and Finland. They all have trade agreements, several years old, with the United States.

They and the Administration, it is said, desire to follow the example recently set in the case of Canada. A new agreement was negotiated with that country expanding the reciprocal tariff reductions contained in an old accord. Cuba likewise has reopened her agreement and negotiations for a new and broader one are underway.

He then went on to an analysis of the code principles, and declared, anent distribution-exhibition tieups, that such procedure was adopted by the distributors only as a matter of "protection." He defended their action as "the only course left," outside of "certain isolated instances."

He admitted the code was "not perfect" but said it was a "great improvement" and would contributes more to progress of the industry than "any move contemplated since the inception of films."

Mr. Rodgers attacked the Neely Bill as a deterrent to the business of "the small fellow."

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of New York, and Milton G. Weisman, its attorney, defended the code. Mr. Brandt said it was the best that could be obtained at present; that the industry was in a chaotic status and faced government control.

Abe Montague, of Colmbia, called the code the greatest step forward in 30 years.

Allied Leaders Object

Spokesmen for the code on Thursday last were followed by a number of Allied executives who attacked the proposals. Jack Kirsch, head of the Illinois Allied unit, put it this way:

"If distributors are sincere, they shouldn't object to making further changes in the code. In the meantime, exhibitors shouldn't disarm by relinquishing legislative and court efforts to achieve reforms."

Mr. Myers defended the Neely Bill, denying that it would lead to governmental regulation. He noted the present conferences of distributor leaders with Department of Commerce officials and declared that was an example of inviting Government intervention.

Al Steffes, on Wednesday, declared that the code he and other Allied leaders had worked on in Chicago was not the one presented to the Allied convention.

He asserted that the distributors' negotiating committee might have been sincere, but that their sincerity was not in the finished document. He criticized the distributor attorneys for legal language, and declared that an arbitration plan in words a layman would understand could have been formulated in 15 minutes.

Mr. Steffes further charged that "chiseling had already started" and cited reported requests by exchange men of higher rentals in order to offset the 20 per cent cancellation privilege.

As the convention adjourned, it passed resolutions condemning the use of 35 mm for 16 mm adaptation, and the appearance of screen stars on the radio.

Hungary to Establish National Film Industry

The Hungarian Film Commission is planning to establish a national film industry which eventually is expected to affect imports. However, the time when the Budapest studios will be able to supply sufficient product to Hungarian theatres appears to be remote. Despite some agitation and a link with Germany, American films still lead there.

Of 15 films which received first runs in Budapest in April, eight were American, three were French, while Hungary and Germany supplied two each. There has been some production in Budapest by German and French companies as a means of absorbing currency which they cannot take out of the country.

Agents Win in TMAT Elections

Press agents succeeded in choosing two independent candidates in four contests in elections held Tuesday by the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union. Joseph Grossman defeated Hal Olver for business agent, Morrie Seamon was reelected the other business agent, William Fields defeated the incumbent, Dan Melnick, for vice-president, Saul Abraham was reelected president, as was James Murphy for secretary-treasurer.

Abrams Honored

Leo Abrams, recently appointed Universal short subjects sales manager, was given a farewell dinner Friday night at the Hickory House in New York by associates at the big U exchange where he was branch manager for the last 10 years. David A. Levy succeeds Mr. Abrams at the New York exchange.

Warner Outing Held

The Warner Club, composed of home office employes, held its annual outing and boat ride Wednesday to Bear Mountain.

Oklahoma City has won first place in the Ross Federal ninth anniversary President's Month testimonial drive, honoring Harry A. Ross, president. New Orleans finished second and Washington third.

MOTION PICTURE CODE "DE-CODED" IN LANGUAGE OF THE EXHIBITOR

Louis Nizer, Attorney, Takes Up Cancellation and Trade Announcement Clauses in First Article for The Herald

The new motion picture code as drafted by the major companies for the self-regulation of distribution and exhibition, and consisting of a set of trade practices and a system of arbitration, is being analyzed and interpreted in lay language for MOTION PICTURE HERALD by Louis Nizer, motion picture lawyer in New York.

In this first installment Clauses I and II are interpreted: "Exclusion Privileges" (Cancellation) and "Trade Announcement." There also appear some general observations on the code itself.

by LOUIS NIZER

General

Before anyone can pass judgment on the code, he must know what is in it.

The code provides that an exhibitor's policy shall not be considered destructive or such as will reduce the revenue if it is established under methods of competition normal and fair in such a situation. The questions as to whether an exhibitor's theatre is of an obsolete character, is in good condition, and whether the exhibitor is of good reputation or financial responsibility, are all subject to arbitration. The question as to whether the exhibitor and distributor can agree upon terms of the contract is not subject to arbitration.

Every clause of the code makes it possible to submit certain questions to arbitration in order that the purpose of the clause may not be evaded in practice. The code also submits breaches of contract to arbitration and the question as to whether clearance is reasonable.

Clause I: Cancellation Privilege

(1) Cancellation As A Matter of Right.

If an exhibitor has entered into a contract for all of the features offered at one time by the distributor for a run in any situation, he has the right to cancel without any payment

(a) 20% if the average license fee of pictures is not more than $100 per picture;

(b) 15% if the average is not more than $250;

(c) 10% if the average is more than $250.

Fractions. Fractions of one-half or more are counted as one. Fractions of less than one-half are not counted.

Computing Averages. To compute the average price where it is based on percentage, take the average license fee of distributor's features of the preceding season which were exhibited on a percentage basis for the same run. If none of the distributor's features was so exhibited in the preceding season, then the distributor and exhibitor must agree in advance in the contract as to what the average license fee is even though the pictures are later to be played on a percentage basis.

Westerns, Reissues and Foreign Pictures. Westerns, reissues and foreign pictures shall not be included in the number of pictures for the purpose of computing cancellation rights. This is so even if they are part of one feature contract. Westerns do not include expensively produced features which deal with Western plots. Only Westerns of the usual character and type, inexpensively produced, are eliminated in computing cancellation rights. Foreign pictures do not include those produced by an American producer outside of the United States in the English language. Such foreign pictures must be included in computing cancellation rights.

Louis Nizer, in his 11 years in motion pictures, has achieved wide recognition in the practice of motion picture law, in motion picture practice, and in the workings of the New York Film Board of Trade, of which he is both secretary and counsel. The New York board is one of but three still operating out of the 32 which functioned up to their abandonment by distributors a few years ago.

London born, 37 years ago, Mr. Nizer won honors early at Columbia University in New York both as an orator and law student.

He has served variously for producers, distributors and exhibitors, presenting cases before the Film Boards Arbitration Boards, before the courts of New York and the Clearance and Zoning Boards of the old Blue Eagle of the NRA.

He is the author of "Analysis of Standard Exhibition Contract", "Analysis of Motion Picture Code", "New Concepts of the Law of Radio", "An Analysis of the Wagner Act", "Recent Developments in the Law of Plagiarism", "The Law of Proprietary Interests", "New Courts of Industry" and other works.

Offering Portion of Features: If the distributor offers only a portion of its feature product to the exhibitor and the exhibitor contracts for that portion, he is entitled to the cancellation privilege. It is only where the exhibitor contracts for a lesser number than is offered to him that he loses his cancellation rights.

Cancellation Subject To Following Conditions: The right of the exhibitor to cancel, is subject to the following terms:

(A) Notice: A first run exhibitor must give the distributor notice of the cancellation of each feature within fourteen (14) days after the mailing by the distributor of the first notice of availability.

A second or subsequent run exhibitor must give such notice within fourteen (14) days after the close of the first run exhibition or the mailing of the notice of availability, whichever is later.

If the feature is not exhibited by the prior run, the second run exhibitor need not notify the distributor of cancellation within fourteen (14) days after notice of availability previously sent. In such a case, the distributor must mail a new notice of availability and the exhibitor must notify of his cancellation within fourteen (14) days after the mailing of the new notice.

(B) Default: The exhibitor must not, at the time of giving notice of cancellation, be in material default under his contract. Although other things may be a material default, the code specifically provides that the failure to pay for a feature which has been exhibited, or the failure to exhibit a reasonable number of features which have been made available, constitutes a material default.

(C) Proportionate Cancellation: Cancellations must be made proportionately amongst the various price brackets. The exhibitor may, however, make all his cancellations from the lowest price bracket.

Example: Suppose that the contract licenses 48 features and the exhibitor is entitled to cancel 5 of them. Eight of the features are in the highest price bracket, 12 are in the second highest bracket, 16 are in the third highest bracket and 12 are in the lowest bracket. In such a case, the exhibitor may not cancel more than one feature from the highest bracket, nor more than one from the second highest bracket, nor more than two from the third highest bracket and one from the lowest bracket. He may, however, cancel all five or any lesser number from the lowest bracket.

(D) Substituted Cancellation: If the exhibitor does not cancel one or more features from the higher brackets when he has the right to do so, he may, for each such feature, cancel another feature from the lowest bracket. If there are no unplayed available features in the lowest bracket at the time, then he may cancel a feature from the next to the lowest bracket.

Rights Concerning Cancelled Pictures: When a feature has been cancelled as a matter of right under this section, then all rights revert to the distributor. Even if the exhibitor later enters into a contract for the same feature, it is nevertheless counted as one of his cancellations.

Disputes Arbitrable: All disputes growing out of cancellation or attempted cancellations as a matter of right under this section, are subject to arbitration.

(2) Exclusion for Cause:

In addition to the cancellation privilege which is a matter of right under Section (1), the exhibitor may cancel any feature which may be locally offensive on moral, religious or racial grounds.

Notice: To cancel a feature on such grounds, the exhibitor must give written notice to the distributor not later than fourteen (14) days after the end of the first exhibition of the feature in the exchange territory. He must specify the reasons for the cancellation. The rights to the cancelled feature revert to the distributor.

Dispute Arbitrable: A dispute as to whether or not a feature is locally offensive, shall be subject to arbitration. The arbitrators must not consider the decision of any arbitrators concerning the same feature unless the decision refers to the same local area in which the exhibitor's theatre is located.

Clause II: Trade Announcement

Time of Announcement: Each distributor shall make a general trade announcement at or before the beginning of each of its seasons.

Contents of Announcement: The announcement shall present such information as it may be practicable to give of all features completed or actually in production, which it is intended to release during that season.

Uncertainty Contemplated: It is understood that the completion of the features which are in production and the making of other features are subject to the hazards and uncertainties of the business and they may not be completed or produced as planned.

Organize Jewish Appeal Members

Members of the motion picture industry are being solicited in the present nationwide campaign of the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees. The national quota is $20,000,000. Local committees have been set up, with amusement divisions in a number of cities.

The New York amusement division is seeking $250,000. Its drive will continue another month, and the intention is to solicit everyone in the film, theatrical, radio, music and allied fields.

David Bernstein, vice-president and treasurer of Loew's, is chairman of the amusement division. Albert Warner, vice-president of Warners, is co-chairman. Vice-chairmen are Barney Balaban, Paramount president; N. J. Blumberg, president of Universal, and Jack Cohn, Columbia vice-president.

Committee representation follows:

Columbia—Abe Schneider, Max Seligman, Nathan D. Spingold.

Educational Pictures—Jack Skirball.

Loew's-M-G-M—Oscar Doob, Leopold Friedman, Arthur M. Loew, Charles C. Moskowitz, Joseph R. Vogel.

Edouart Farciot Appointed

Edouard Farciot of Paramount Studios has been appointed to represent the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences on the "Sectional Committee on Motion Pictures" of the American Standards Association.

The Southern Poster Exchange and the Rex Poster exchange, in New Orleans, have merged.

Beckett Sees Industry Healthy in New Zealand

Wilf Beckett, Columbia special representative in New Zealand, handling publicity, exploitation and sales with Bert Vinsen, Columbia's manager in the territory, said in New York this week that the present government of New Zealand, under Prime Minister Joseph Savage, has for the most part been very fair to American films.

There have, however, been slight restrictions on the exporting of money from New Zealand, and there is a quota requiring theatre men to give 25 per cent of their playing time to British films. Under this quota come such films as Columbia's "Clouds Over Europe," made in England.

Mr. Beckett sees the present labor government in New Zealand tending toward a moderate socialism.

Intermountain Circuit Undergoes Rebuilding

Fox Intermountain Theatres in the Denver area have built or reconstructed 37 theatres in the last few years, Rick Ricketson, division head, said in New York recently. He said it is the circuit's plan to build or rebuild two theatres each year.

The circuit is completing plans for a house in Longmont, Col., to seat 900, which will mean two theatres for Fox Intermountain in the town. A theatre in Laramie, Wyo., is being rebuilt and modernized. A major reconstruction job is the Broadway in Denver, which is one of the city's landmarks. Seats 50 years old are being replaced, and modernization includes the building of loges. Originally seating 1,400, the theatre will have 800 seats when completed, with the galleries closed off.

Form Booking Pool

Nine of the country's largest arenas have organized in Pittsburgh to establish group booking policies, distribute information about their field and develop means of stimulating business. The combine, incorporated as the Arena Managers' Association, have a New York office. Officers are John H. Harris of the Harris Amusement Company, president; Walter Brown, Boston, vice-president and treasurer, and Louis Pierie of Providence, secretary. Charter members are the Rhode Island Auditorium in Providence; Springfield, Mass., Auditorium; Duquesne Garden in Pittsburgh, and the arenas of Boston, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Syracuse, New Haven and Hershay estates.

Bracker Joins Paramount

Murray Bracker, who has been associated with the Kay Kamen Enterprises, Ltd., for the last four years, has joined the licensee department of Paramount in connection with the company's merchandising plan on Max Fleischer's feature length color cartoon "Gulliver's Travels." He will be associated with Harry Royster, who continues as assistant to Lou Diamond.

Bibliography in the Autumn

The first volume of a bibliography of film literature prepared by the Federal Writer's Project of the Works Progress Administration in New York is about to go to press and will be published jointly by the Museum of Modern Art Film Library and H. W. Wilson Company in the autumn.

Regulate German "Culture" Films

New price and distribution regulations have been put into effect in Germany for "cultural" films, according to the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce in Washington.

The first regulation defines as a "cultural" film any "short" produced by a registered "culture" film company. It may be financed by

(a) the company itself, a distributor, or

(b) any other person or persons.

The authorities retain the right to inquire at any time as to the name of the financier and the extent of his investment.

Paragraph 2 states that the price paid by film distributors for the rights to a "cultural" film must not be less than RM 8000. Films falling under paragraph 1b must be given to distributors free of charge.

According to paragraph 3, film distributors must purchase cultural "shorts" of the category 1a for two-thirds of the long feature films they buy and are permitted to show "shorts" of the category 1b for only one-third of the feature films.

Paragraph 4 stipulates that "cultural" films produced before July 1, 1937, may not be bought by distributors.

Paragraph 5 requires all distributors to announce at least half of their "cultural" films when they publish their distribution program, together with names of producers and, if possible, directors.

According to paragraph 6 cultured film companies must report to the Reich Film Chamber their intentions of producing a film, in the case under paragraph 1a, before beginning production and in the case of films under paragraph 1b, after the signing of the production contract.

Set Cleveland Tourney

The Cleveland Variety Club will hold its annual golf tournament July 21st at the Beechmont Country Club. "Duke" Clark, M. B. Horwitz and Jack Shulman are in charge of arrangements.

Jennings Gets Degree

Talbot Jennings, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer writer, has received an honorary degree from the University of Idaho, at Moscow, Idaho, from which he graduated in 1924. He was commencement speaker.

Rhoden on Committee

Elmer C. Rhoden, head of Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., has been named a member of the executive committee of the Forward Kansas City committee, formed to cleanup the Kansas City political situation.

Fair Short Prepared

"The World of Tomorrow," a one reel film on the New York World's Fair, will be number 11 on RKO Pathe's Reelism topics.

McFadden Signed

Twentieth Century-Fox has signed Hamilton McFadden as director. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has renewed Leslie Fenton's contract as director.

By J. D. Elsom, © Chicago Journal of Commerce Syndicate.

Thirty-five of some 100 federal, state and local taxes listed in the chart above by the Chicago Journal of Commerce Syndicate apply directly or indirectly to the business of the motion picture theatre owner. Personally, the exhibitor himself also is subject to most of the other 65 taxes. These 100 taxes, of course, do not represent a complete list of all taxes, but only the more important ones, including the admissions tax.

On November 26, 1938, MOTION PICTURE HERALD listed some 61 taxes which eventually affect theatre tickets, as compiled by the National Consumers Tax Commission. Twelve of these taxes it was said, are paid by the film manufacturer, 15 by the film producer, 10 by the express companies or other transporters of film, another 13 by the film distributor and another 11 by the exhibitor directly.

The "astounding increase" in taxation in recent years was pointed to this week by Lamont du Pont, president of E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, which besides its vast Wilmington interests, owns Du Pont Film Manufacturing Co., and who, in a letter to stockholders and employees, points out that since 1932 the national debt has increased some $25,000,000,000, to $41,000,000,000, and annual expenditures are running about $9,592,000,000.

Ermolieff Plans Two in France

Joseph Ermolieff, who has produced pictures in Russia and France, arrived in New York this week from Hollywood enroute to France on the Normandie. Mr. Ermolieff plans early production of an adventure film, "I Solemnly Swear" and a mystery story, "Three Times Thirteen," based on a world war to come, with transatlantic and submarine background.

He claims to have devised a new production idea which through novel script construction permits fitting of American studio shot scenes into colorful atmospheric shots made abroad and in that wav reducing the cost of making American versions and at the same time offering greater scope in shooting the original continental production, according to Joe Weil, press agent for Mr. Ermolieff.

Martin Quigley Sails

Martin Quigley, accompanied by Mrs. Quigley, daughters Mary Ellen and Martha Marie, and son Martin Schofield Quigley, sailed Saturday for a motor tour of Italy, France, England and Ireland. They are expected to return on August 18th.

Production Increase In Siam Is Reported

Siamese motion pictures are being produced with greater regularity and in increasing numbers, according to a report from the American Consulate in Siam. In the current year four Siamese producers and one Chinese producer are planning to release from 13 to 17 films. These productions will include at least nine sound films with Siamese dialogue and several short news films. Six Chinese language productions in 1939 are contemplated, the report said.

FEDERAL SEAT LEVY TO BE RETAINED; NEW STATE TAXES AND TAX FIGHTS

Admission Assessment Stays, House Votes; Pennsylvania Supreme Court Kills Chain Store and Circuit Tax

Taxation of motion picture theatre owners and of the ticket sales accruing to them at their box office windows figured prominently this week in Congress, in state legislatures, in municipalities and in the courts, where new taxes enacted are being fought.

Outstanding taxation development of the week was the vote of the House of Representatives at Washington to continue the admission tax for another two years, as expected, after defeating, 83 to 57, a motion by Congressman Harter of Ohio to limit the extension to one year. Representative Knutson of Minnesota pointed out that the condition of the Treasury was such that more assurance of continued income should be given than would be comprised in a one year extension.

Chain Store Tax Invalidated

Another important taxation development was the decision by the Pennsylvania supreme court, on Monday, upholding a decision of the Dauphin county court which had invalidated the graduated chain store and theatre circuit tax enacted by the legislature in 1937.

In conjunction with the American Stores Company, the Stanley Theatres had contested the ruling, and the Warner Brothers theatre affiliate had obtained an injunction. The tax had ranged from one dollar to $500 a year, depending upon the number of stores or theatres operated by one corporation within the state.

The State supreme court, in a unanimous decision, held that the tax, progressively graduated, lacks uniformity and is therefore unconstitutional.

The Franklin County court of appeals, in Columbus, Ohio, granted an extension until July 1st, for filing answers, previously scheduled for June 15th, in the suit of John V. Bostwick, a taxpayer, against the Tax Commission of Ohio. The suit challenges the Commission's authority in exempting film rentals from the state sales tax, and seeks to enforce collection of the tax as of the time it became effective several years ago. Indications are that the suit will not come to trial until the fall.

Milwaukee Exhibitors Act

Milwaukee exhibitors are urging patrons, through handbills and trailers, to voice their objections to any additional taxes on theatres to their Senators or Assemblymen. There is a new state bill providing for a three per cent theatre admission tax.

The theatre men are telling their patrons that if the bill passes it will necessitate an increase in admission price in every theatre in the state, and will force many theatres to close, thus adding to unemployment. The proposed tax is a modification of a plan previously presented by the governor, which called for an occupational tax on theatres.

The city council of Fort Myers, Fla., has passed an amusement tax to obtain money for welfare purposes, adding five cents to all motion picture, boxing and circus tickets costing between 16 and 51 cents, and a 10 cent tax on tickets costing more than 50 cents.

The city council of Marshfield, Wis., has raised the annual theatre license fee from $10 to $50. The town has three houses, all operated by J. P. Adler.

A Congressional move to increase old-age pensions may raise admission taxes in Ohio theatres. In the event of the necessity of new taxes, it has been indicated that theatre admissions would be affected.

FATHER HUBBARD TO RECORD ESKIMO MUSIC

The native music and chants of the primitive Eskimo race are to be preserved on phonograph records and motion picture film by Father Bernard R. Hubbard, "Glacier Priest," who will record them for RCA Victor this summer on his eleventh Alaskan Expedition. They will be released to the public as soon as possible.

Utilizing an RCA Victor portable recording unit and 100 12-inch RCA recording discs, Father Hubbard will make the recordings in the isolated settlements of the Eskimo tribes. A portable power unit will be used to operate the recorder.

Resolutions protesting the 10 per cent additional tax on Quebec's 11 theatres, which has caused them all to close, have been signed by 25,000 people. It has been reported that the signatures would be submitted to the city council.

With only one week remaining of the current session of the Illinois general assembly, little chance is given for final enactment of any of a series of bills bearing on the moving picture industry.

Two bills have been approved by the house, another is pending on passage stage in the same chamber and three others are on passage stage in the senate.

One of those passed by the house prohibits compulsory blind selling and compulsory block booking. The bill would give an exhibitor the right to select pictures from a synopsis provided in advance by the distributor.

The second would make it unlawful for an exhibitor to show one or more single film for a longer period than two consecutive hours, provided, however, that a performance may be shown for upwards of two hours, if, at the beginning of each hour in excess of the limit there be a period of intermission of fifteen minutes.

The measure pending on third reading in the house would prohibit the showing of a picture in which appeared any character who has been divorced two or more times. The sponsor of this bill plans to amend it to exempt those who have received divorces up to the time of the enactment of the legislation.

The three bills pending on third reading in the senate would make it unlawful for any exhibitor to permit any child under fourteen years of age to enter his theatre after 9 p.m., or to permit any child to remain after 10 p.m.; prohibit the operation of theatres in which a producer and distributor has an interest; and create a state board to censor all films before permitting their exhibition in the state.

New York State and City

New York's Governor Herbert Lehman has vetoed the Ostertag bill regulating fee charging employment agencies. The bill also provided for strict regulation of theatrical employment agencies and artists representatives.

In New York City, the Spellman bill to regulate and limit price advances by theatre brokers to 75 cents per ticket was virtually assured last Friday when the general welfare committee of the city council voted unanimously to report the bill favorably on September 1st.

Supporting the bill were representatives of the League of New York Theatres, Actors' Equity, Musicians' Union, Local 802, Stagehands' Union, Local One, Electrical Workers' Union, Local Three, and the American Federation of Actors.

New Haven exhibitors have found a little publicized bill, awaiting the signature of the Governor, which provides that the theatre operator shall pay for the amount of police protection necessary at any exhibition or public amusement. The Police Chief is to determine the necessary amount of protection.

The Ohio supreme court has upheld the right of municipalities to forbid Sunday shows in refusing to consider the appeal of Joseph Elliot, Cambridge, Ohio, exhibitor, who recently was fined $50 for violating a city ordinance against Sunday performances.

In Cumberland, Sunday shows have been legalized after a long fight by exhibitors. Films may now be shown between 2 and 11:30 p.m.

Fleischer Studios Expanding

Max Fleischer, president of Fleischer Studios, Inc., has expanded his organization in Miami, with the rental of two bungalows for the scenario and story departments. He employs 400, with weekly salaries of $18,000. Mr. Fleischer is also building a cafeteria which will seat 200.

Earl Collins Named Manager

Earl Collins, salesman, has been named manager of the United Artists Denver exchange, where he succeeds Al Hoffman, manager for several years. Mr. Hoffman goes on the road for the company.

Form Companies

Film companies chartered in Albany, N. Y., recently include Banner Pictures, by Irving B-J Levine, Irving Klein and Paul P. Geyer; Sillbar Productions, Inc., by Leonard Sillman, Hyman I. Bucher and John L. Horgan, Jr., and Cinespano Corporation, by Don Avlon, E. Louis Gotheft and Beatrice Singer.

Plan New Building

Plans for construction of a two-story building for the Charlotte branch of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to cost about $50,000 were announced this week by Ben H. Rosenwald, branch manager. He said the building is to be completed by the end of the year.

Oulahan Quits Club Post

Joseph John Oulahan, Cincinnati Paramount manager, has resigned as chief barker of the Cincinnati Variety Club, due to pressure of other duties. Arthur M. Frudenfeld, RKO midwest division manager, first assistant chief barker, becomes chief barker.

John Harris, chief barker of the Variety Clubs of America, has set the 12th annual Variety Club banquet for October 29th in Pittsburgh.

Daughters Courageous

(Warner-First National)

The Great American Family at Home

The sustained popularity of the family-picture series, and the spectacular success of such single offerings in the same field of interest as "Four Daughters," teach, if anything teaches anybody in this industry anything, that the great American family is the best of all subjects, year in year out, for motion picture treatment.

"Daughters Courageous," produced with the "Four Daughters" cast and in the stylistic channel of that film without being in any sense a sequel to it, is in many respects the best picture of this kind that has come from the cameras this year, in all respects an honest, sincere and compelling production, an ornament to the screen and a delight to the customer.

The family dealt with in "Daughters Courageous" is six in number, five of them resident in Oakland, Cal., or thereabouts, and the sixth transiently resident there after an absence of some twenty years.

This sixth is the father, absent without notice and on vagabond errands during two decades in which the mother has managed to bring his four daughters to young womanhood. The five of them are getting along quite well without him, and the wife seems to have negotiated a divorce somewhere along the way, when he walks in upon them most inopportunely, although it turns out not so inopportunely at that, shortly after the picture opens. He remains on the premises throughout the action and leaves again, taking with him a young scalawag of similar bent who has had in mind marrying one of the daughters, as the picture closes.

There are complications. Each of the daughters has had her plans worked out before the father returns. Each of these plans involves substantial expense. Most of them involve young men. By way of bringing each daughter's plan to happy fruition, the mother has arranged to marry a very patient gentleman.

One by one the four daughters, after vowing mutual resistance, give the wayward father their confidence. The wife has never withdrawn her affection. Ultimately the stepfather-to-be, in a splendidly underplayed sequence, appeals to the father to go away before his daughters sacrifice their futures in their reawakened love for him. The father and the mother talk it over in another superbly understated scene and he goes, taking with him the suitor whose vagabond tendencies has been the single visible threat to the future happiness of the family.

There is nothing theatrical about all this. Claude Rains as the father, Fay Bainter as the mother, and Donald Crisp as the would-be stepfather might be three plain persons who live down the block from you. John Garfield has the single out-of-routine character to play and he slips through it so smoothly as to make it seem plain. May Robson's small part as the family servant is principally for comic relief, as are the parts played by Frank McHugh and Dick Foran. Jeffrey Lynn, as the fourth sister's boy friend, is about as noticeable as a fourth sister's boy friend would be.

Priscilla Lane plays the most important sister—the one in love with the wrong fellow—naturally and effectively. Rosemary and Lola Lane and Gale Page pace their performances by hers. George Humbert and Berton Churchill contribute two characteristic portrayals to the sum total of as fine a group performance as any customer could ask for.

Michael Curtiz, who directed "Four Daughters" and more Warner successes than memory readily summons, is at his best in command of this many-sided story, a screen play by Julius J. and Phillip G. Epstein suggested by a play by Dorothy Bennett and Irving White. One or two or three or four of these writing folk are entitled to a great amount of credit for some of the most compelling dialogue ever caught on a sound track. Henry Blanke, associate producer, and Hal B. Wallis, executive producer, have turned out many a fine picture in their time, many a big picture and many a successful picture. This rates with the best of these on any and every basis of comparison.

Previewed at Warners' Hollywood theatre in Hollywood, "Daughters Courageous" came to the screen under the inevitable handicap of a distinguished predecessor. To the professional audience in attendance and, after the credits had been flashed, to the laity as well, it had to be as good as "Four Daughters," or better, to be any good at all. Hollywood, and probably the world, is like that. When the screening was over everybody was busy telling everybody else that it was a better picture, a more plausible picture, more natural, more realistic, more this and more that. As a matter of fact, it is.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. A First National picture. Executive producer, Hal B. Wallis. Associate producer, Henry Blanke. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Screen play by Julius J. and Phillip G. Epstein. Suggested by a play by Dorothy Bennett and Irving White. Dialogue director, Irving Rapper. Photographed by James Wong Howe. Film editor, Ralph Dawson. P. C. A. certificate No. 5223. Release date, July 21, 1939. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 100 minutes. General audience classification.

Susannah of the Mounties

(20th Century-Fox)

Shirley Temple Vehicle

Shirley Temple is just a little girl again in this picture, as she was in those simple stories that took her to leadership in MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S exhibitor poll of Money Making Stars in 1934 and has kept her in that position since. She is, specifically, a little girl whom hostile Indians overlooked when they destroyed a wagon train, shortly before the picture opens, a very frightened child found and taken in care by the Northwest Mounted Police.

Randolph Scott plays the Mountie who finds the child and J. Farrell MacDonald, orderly, looks after her while the younger officers are out chasing Indians. Martin Good Rider is a young Indian held hostage by the Mounties, a solemn youngster whose scenes with Shirley are the most entertaining in the film. Margaret Lockwood is the young woman the handsome officer falls in love with, and Victor Jory is the bad Indian who gets the good Indians into trouble.

Although there is considerable killing and quite a lot of plotting, scheming, fighting, shooting, and so on, having to do, not too seriously, with the building of the Canadian Pacific railroad, all that goes on is treated with the juvenile audience primarily in mind. None of the heavily emotional effects and tear-jerkings attempted in recent Temple pictures are present in this one.

The picture is handsomely staged by associate producer Kenneth Macgowan and the print is tinted, not colored. Miss Temple doesn't sing and her dancing consists of teaching tall Mr. Scott the waltz, a quietly amusing episode. She smokes an Indian pipe of peace twice and it makes her ill both times. For the rest, her performance is of the simple sort that made her famous in the first place.

William A. Seiter's direction is plain and direct. The several writers have kept their story elementary with manifest intention of satisfying the children. The locale is at all times Canada.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal., where a Friday night audience seemed pleased.—W. R. W.

Produced and distributed by 20th Century-Fox. Associate producer, Kenneth Macgowan. Directed by William A. Seiter. Screen play by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan. (MGM)

Melodrama

Showmen and customers who memorize their melodramas will recognize this one as "Evelyn Prentice," produced by the same studio in 1934 as a vehicle for William Powell and Myrna Loy. This time Walter Pidgeon, currently doing the lawyering for MGM, and Virginia Bruce, recently seen opposite him in "Society Lawyer," play the Lady and Gentleman, who drift a little apart, become snarled in a messy murder, and get together again when the last shoddy thread of the case has been washed in open court.

Now, as in 1934, the film is for adults. It was produced this time by John W. Considine from a screen play by David Hertz and William Ludwig, based on the W. E. Woodward novel. It was directed by Leslie Fenton, who learned about directing pictures by acting in them and learned a great deal, indeed. His handling of the several difficult sequences and uncommon characterizations is promiseful of distinguished works to come.

The story, you may recall, is about a famous lawyer whose wife prevails upon him to defend a penniless wife charged with murdering her worthless husband. He doesn't discover until the case is about lost that his own wife believes she murdered the man in a scuffle for possession of letters she had written him. She tells the court as much, finally, but the lawyer notes a discrepancy in her story, proves her innocent, extracts a confession from the woman originally charged with the crime, and then prevails upon the jury to acquit her, anyway. He then forgives his wife, who in turn forgives him a bit of more or less involuntary philandering, and everything comes out even.

As the synopsis suggests, materials dealt with are of an adult nature. A number of incidents are treated in a manner to suggest it was a foregone conclusion that audiences would be composed of grownups.

Missing Daughters

(Columbia)

Sociological

What happens to some girls who run away from home to become actresses and career women, is the theme for a time, then it develops into a detective story, with a columnist, who is also a radio reporter, doing the detecting with the aid of the Police Department's "Bureau of Missing Persons."

The film was directed by C. C. Coleman, Jr., from a screen play by Michael L. Simmons and George Bricker. In the cast, headed by Richard Arlen, are Rochelle Hudson, Marian Marsh, Isabel Jewell and Edward Raquello.

"Josie Lamonte," a girl who has left home for a career as an actress, applies for a job at an agency controlled by "Lucky Rogers," night club owner and racketeer. She gets a job as hostess at "Lucky's" night club. When she tries to quit, saying she intends to tell all she knows—whatever that might be—"Lucky" has his boys take care of her.

When "Josie" is fished out of the river "Wally King," the columnist, chides the police on their ineffectual handling of the case. "Wally" is given carte blanche to find the murderer. Through the aid of "Josie's" sister, "Kay," and chorus girls who had been given a "break" at one time or another by "Wally," the columnist solves the case and breaks up the racket.

There Ain't No Justice

(CAPAD-ABFD)

Pugilistic Melodrama

Designed for the London primitives, this exhibit misses its own target.

Producer Michael Balcon, ex-Gaumont-British, ex-MGM British, set out to make a movie of "real" folk. It developed into a hotchpotch of synthetic Cockneyisms and "Golden Boy" burlesques. The familiar story concerns the ingenuous Cockney youth who can beat the neighborhood fighters but disdains the Ring as a profession. Love makes him change his mind and sign up with a fifth-rate fight promoter. In extraordinary, unprofessional fashion he wins the three fights in which he is promoted, only to discover that his manager is a crook. There is a "Leather Pusher's" finale of joy on the screen, but the joy did not communicate itself to the preview audience.

Photography was average, direction mediocre, and only Edward Chapman, noted British feature player, exhibited marked acting ability.

Trade shown at the Cambridge Theatre, London. The ring sequences were derided in the knowledgeable sections of the audience.—P. B.

She Married a Cop

(Republic)

Farce

Packing a multitude of laughs into a seemingly short 64-minute period, Republic's "She Married a Cop" is high caliber entertainment, of a widely acceptable nature. Farcical in content, the story is of a singing policeman who marries a producer of animated cartoons and whose marital life is temporarily shattered when he discovers that "picture work" into which she tricked him is being the voice of the pig character in the cartoon.

Phil Regan and Jean Parker play the principal roles and are supported by Jerome Cowan, Dorothea Kent, Benny Baker, Barnett Parker, Horace MacMahon, Oscar O'Shea, Mary Gordon, Muriel Campbell, Peggy Ryan and Richard Keene.

Sidney Salkow, director, paced the comedy action and love scenes well, turning in a highly acceptable performance in bringing the well rounded scenario of Oliver Cooper to the screen. The producer of the film is Sol C. Siegel, who with Salkow previously turned out several popular Republic productions.

Regan sings four songs, "I Can't Imagine," "I'll Remember" and "Here's to Love," by Ralph Freed and Burton Lane, and "My Wild Irish Rose." Of the new numbers, "I Can't Imagine," judging from the preview audience's reaction, seems to be a good popularity bet.

Good Girls Go To Paris

(Columbia)

Comedy-Romance

When the only thing interrupting continuous audience chuckles is a lot of wholehearted laughter, it can be accepted as certain that the picture is worthy. That was the audience reaction to Columbia's "Good Girls Go to Paris."

All this mirth was provoked by the clever manner in which William Perlberg produced the show and the expertly showmanlike way in which Alexander Hall, who always does well with light comedy material, directed it. The fun was generated in the gay and frothy original story created by Lenore Coffee and William Joyce Cowan. The crisp dialogue and engaging situations contained in the Gladys Lehman and Ken Englund screen play gave it impetus. But the real credit for putting over the creative work in a style that rarely permits a lag of interest goes to Joan Blondell, Melvyn Douglas and Walter Connolly who had the capable assistance of Alan Curtis, Joan Perry, Isabel Jeans, Stanley Brown, Alexander D'Arcy, Henry Hunter, Clarence Kolb and Howard Hickman.

Looking at "Good Girls Go to Paris" is pretty much a case of having a jolly time. As far as anyone sees, nobody actually gets to Paris, inasmuch as everything happens in a midwest college town and in New York City. However, no one should be unduly concerned as to the show's geography, as the humor is spontaneous, and farcical nonsense is the actual result of surprise theme twists that may build expectations of something spicy. Showmen won't encounter much difficulty in sifting out the production's exploitation potentialities. Word-of-mouth publicity is sure to become a valuable adjunct, and so the initial marketing plan is obviously important.

"Brooke," English exchange professor, amazed by the antics of the college boys, really mutters "My word!" when he encounters waitress "Jenny," whose ambition is to golddig her way to Paris. Yet her first experiments with blundering blackmail win her his friendship. These sequences are fun and fury, but the amusement pinwheel starts whirling when, after attaching herself to "Tom Brand," "Jenny," still Paris bound, lands in old "Olaf Brand's" New York mansion. While curing irascible "Olaf" of all his imagined mental and physical ills, "Jenny" gets "Tom" out of a mess that might prove him a 100 per cent scamp, blasts the plan of fortune-hunting "Kingston" to affix himself to the "Brand" bankroll by marrying "Caroline," demonstrates how it is possible for daughter "Sylvia," who was supposed to marry "Brooke" to be honestly in love with the butler's doctor son, puts the skids under "Olaf's business rival, "Dayton," and finally pledges her troth to "Brooke," who promises to take her to Paris for the honeymoon.

The manner in which the picture was received at its Hollywood preview and the applause at the end was a tribute to an amusing story amusingly presented.—Gus McCarthy.

Down the Wyoming Trail

(Monogram)

Western

Tex Ritter's handy heroism and his companionable delivery of cowboy songs to guitar accompaniment are the standard assets of this number in this western series. In themselves superior items of interest are exteriors shot in the Wyoming snow country with a stampede of elk a highlight among many actionful outdoor sequences, including posse chases, rustlings, pursuits, fights and captures. In its outdoor footage, which predominates, this is probably the best Ritter western to date.

Outdoors and in, this story, and screen play, by Peter Dixon avoids the worn groove of western melodramas a good part of the way. Superstition is among the implements of justice employed by the handsome cowhand in bringing retribution to a criminal the rough prairie law can't seem to catch up with. So plain a vehicle as a bobsled pointed downhill serves him instead of a horse when he escapes a frigid death in a mountain cabin and sets off in pursuit of the rustlers headed for his sweetheart's ranch. In these and other incidents the plot, which is at bottom the one about the honest cowboy framed by outlaws and forced to bring them in as proof of his innocence, escapes formula.

The Four Just Men

(CAPAD-ABFD)

Detective Melodrama

Here the showman has something with which he can play.

Producer Michael Balcon bought the late Edgar Wallace's Robin Hood idea of the Four Just Men of Britain who set aright the Cabinet, Scotland Yard, and the very secret Secret Service. Wallace made a fortune in the idea and in a succession of books. Balcon bought the title, and with a cohort of script writers has hit Britain's current mood of defensive-defiance in one crack. Wallace never wrote a line of this script. They have taken his title and made a movie which moves.

There is spying and counter-spying, the last named being provided in the person of Anna Lee, said to be a newspaper reporter who may just get by in Britain but who wouldn't last a day in New York. Hugh Sinclair, Griffith Jones, Francis L. Sullivan and Frank Lawton, four very just actors, carry the thing to an easy, logical and exciting conclusion. There has not been finer or more moving acting on the native screen.

"The Four Just Men" has every ingredient of success. It should be a handsome money maker in Britain and, suitably handled, a big success in the United States. There is surprising suspense, sufficient logic in development and a grand climax of Britain's self-appointed characterization of Defyer of Dictators.

Walter Forde directed. He comes back to his old form.

This is a well-acted, well-directed picture, which is the exhibitor's dream.

Previewed to a press and trade audience at the Cambridge Theatre, London. Newspapermen were inclined to carp at the solecisms, but the general audience was extremely enthusiastic.—P. B.

Timber Stampede

(RKO Radio)

Action Adventure

"Timber Stampede" is one of the most entertaining George O'Brien pictures in months. While it makes good use of the standby elements which in 63 pictures have elevated the star to high rank in the list of outdoor action players, it also possesses several new ideas that set the show apart from routine. As is usually the case with an O'Brien picture, "Timber Stampede" can be depended upon to prove a worthwhile attraction for juvenile audiences. At the same time it is not lacking in those essentials to draw adult interest.

Fast moving, with plenty of exciting shooting and riding, a part of almost every sequence, the plot details the fight waged against invading railroad and lumber barons by a community of cattle raisers. Naturally all of this material assumes a melodramatic aspect; yet, as counterparts, the picture also details a natural love story, in which Marjorie Reynolds is featured with O'Brien, and a line of comedy, mainly provided by Chill Wills and Earl Dwire, that makes for laughable amusement.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood. The Saturday evening audience, which included a sprinkling of youngsters, seemed to be of the opinion that "Timber Stampede" was worthwhile entertainment.—G. M.

Death Valley Thrills

(Paramount)

Sportlight

Although one of the Sportlight series, this highly amusing subject could very easily have been listed with the comedies. Made in Death Valley National Park in California, it concerns the adventures of two brothers and their indestructible and dependable automobile. The car carries them roughly but surely over mountain and desert. When the boys reach the dry salt lakes they try their skill at snowless skiing, tobogganing and aquaplaning. Part of the aquaplaning act consists in shooting arrows at a target on the car. To show its durability the car is sent over a steep cliff and then driven away under its own steam. Ted Husing is the narrator. Running time, 10 minutes.

Rural Hungary

(MGM)

Travelogue

This is another of the excellent FitzPatrick series of travelogues. The scene is rural Hungary and as such has to do with farmers and landscape. The FitzPatrick camera, augmented by color, films the farmers at work in the fields and at play. On Sundays folk in gaily colored native costumes attend church services. The subject ends with a festival marking the end of the harvest season. Running time, nine minutes.

Pictorial P8-11

(Paramount)

Water

Three stories about water make up this issue of the Pictorial series. First there is a trip on the Thames River in England, from its source to its outlet. Seen en route are Eton, Oxford, Windsor Castle, Runnymede and London. The second sequence concerns fish farming in the Philippines. The third shows a beach in Miami and demonstrates the importance of the lifeguard. A rescue scene is staged for the camera with two beach visitors and the lifeguards as participants. Running time, 10 minutes.

Haunted House

(Vitaphone)

True Adventure

Floyd Gibbons, the headline hunter, relates an experience of two young girls seeking shelter from the rain in a supposedly haunted house. Inside they are locked in and tied by an escaped convict. In a night of terror they manage to free themselves only to meet more difficulty when one of the two girls falls through the rotted floor and is seriously hurt. The next morning state troopers searching for the convict hear their cries for help.—Running time, 12 minutes.

"Time" Workers May Get Profits

A plan to allow employees to share in the profits of the company under a socalled "incentive system" was studied at a meeting last week in New York of the shareholders of Time, Inc., parent organization of Time magazine, Life magazine, the March of Time, Architectural Forum, and Fortune.

For employees earning up to $5,200 per year, there would be established a savings and profit sharing trust. This would not apply to those employees in foreign or Chicago offices. Employees would pay five per cent of their salaries, and the company would make additional payments, according to net profits. Should those profits be between $500,000 and $1,000,000, these payments would be 50 cents for every dollar paid by the employee. For profits in excess of $2,500,000, the company rate would be $1.50 per every dollar paid by employee.

Those employees earning more than $5,200, but not in the "senior" group, would have established for them a second trust. With profits between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000, the company would pay 50 cents to every employee dollar; from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000, this would be one dollar to every employee 50 cents; for profits above these figures the company rate would rise 25 cents for every million dollars, becoming two dollars for profits above $4,500,000.

The "senior" group, whose salaries average $19,000 yearly, would receive bonuses, amounting to 20 per cent of the profits, after all charges, when the profits were between $2,500,000 and $2,000,000; and would rise one per cent with each increase of $500,000 in profits.

Half of the bonus would be paid immediately; the other half would be placed in a trust fund for distribution pro-rata in five annual installments, starting in 1944.

Sees Bright Field for Spanish Films

"The Spanish picture is here to stay, but it is no longer a question of more footage," according to Mel Shauer, Hollywood producer, who left New York for Argentina, last Friday to produce a series of six pictures for United Artists release.

Mr. Shauer, with William Gordon, head of Victoria Films, is of the opinion that Spanish language pictures, instead of competing with Hollywood product, will tend to increase theatre attendance, especially in those countries where the majority of the population is unable to read superimposed titles. The industry in Latin America is going through an experimental period, according to Mr. Shauer, who said that the market has been swamped with poor pictures, with first run exhibitors reluctant to give any playing time to this type of product.

A number of the producers have acted blindly in their rush to be the first to meet the demand for Spanish language films, according to Mr. Shauer. No attempt has been made as yet to produce pictures which will carry an appeal outside of individual Latin American countries; there have been technical problems to overcome, and distribution has been handled on a hit-or-miss basis.

However, Mr. Shauer sees the obstacles as being overcome. In Mexico and Argentina, particularly, serious efforts are being made to establish native production on a firm foundation, well-equipped studios are now available, and the producers are paying more attention to the importance of the international value of their films.

Mr. Shauer plans to make a thorough survey of conditions in Argentina before starting production, as he wants to get the "feel" of the market and acquaint himself with local requirements in order to profit by the experience of others in the field.

Profit Sharing Set for Merger Of Hoyts, Union

Sharing of profits in the Hoyts-Greater Union combine in Australia will be about 75 per cent for Hoyts and 25 per cent for Greater Union, it is understood. The understanding reached by principals in New York to merge the two dominant Australian circuits is subject to ratification by the respective boards.

The consolidation will include all theatre interests of the two, Hoyts accounting for about 120 theatres and Greater Union about 60, including affiliates. The consolidation will solve the problem of product-sharing between the two circuits, which is believed to have been a factor in the film legislation passed in New South Wales.

The combine will be formed as General Theatres Corporation. This company was an active operating unit during the Hoyts-Greater Union pool. When the pool was dissolved at the end of 1937, General Theatres Corporation was continued as a corporation, with Norman Bede Rydge, managing director for Greater Union, and Charles E. Munro, managing director for Hoyts, as joint managing directors, but has been almost completely inactive as an operating company.

The revived General Theatres will be a management and buying organization. The merger will run for 20 theatres. It will combine approximately 10 per cent of the wired houses in Australia.

Product from all companies will be available to the combine. Hoyts heretofore has had most of the major companies' pictures under franchise. Mr. Rydge sailed Wednesday from Los Angeles for Sydney. Mr. Munro will remain in New York for a few weeks.

Williams Resigns From Educational

T. R. Williams, treasurer and a member of the board of directors of Educational Pictures since 1932, and also treasurer of Grand National, has resigned.

Mr. Williams plans to stay in the film industry and will announce his plans soon.

See Film on Langmuir

Members of the American Chemical Society, on visit to the New York World's Fair last week, saw a film about Dr. Irving Langmuir, the first of a series of educational films on Nobel Prize winners, being produced by the American Institute of Motion Pictures. The film on Langmuir was made at the General Electric plant in Schenectady.

The Gregory Theatre Circuit, operating about 30 theatres in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, has been acquired by Hub Stern and affiliates. The Stern group, interested in Balaban and Katz when that circuit started, has headquarters in Chicago.

MERCHANDISING FROM THE FIELD NEXT FROM WAUKEGAN, DES MOINES

And There Will Be International Broadcast and Testimonial Banquet as New Turns to "One-Shot" Campaigns

The new publicity technique of making the introduction of a motion picture into a national event, from the inlands, synchronized with national advertising campaigns and exploitation programs, is being applied soon to three more productions. Paramount is about to apply it to its Jack Benny comedy of "Man About Town," Twentieth Century-Fox to its Irving Berlin musical of "Second Fiddle," RKO to its production of "Career," Paramount to its "Star Maker."

One is going to Waukegan, Illinois, to make news of its picture for press and radio; another is going to Des Moines; a third is counting on a thorough coverage by radio broadcasting; the fourth on an oldtime get-together of stars of yesteryear.

This plan of "one-shot" coverage, which aims to garner for a picture attention across the map at a single stroke, started a few weeks ago when Warners ran a press and publicity expedition out to Dodge City, Kansas, for its "Dodge City," and Paramount followed with a similar expedition to Omaha for "Union Pacific," Twentieth Century-Fox coming right along with a visit to Springfield, Ill., for "Young Mr. Lincoln."

Paramount's Expedition

The Paramount expedition to Waukegan, on Sunday, June 25, envisions the following.

Possible premiere of the Benny picture, "Man About Town" at all four of the town's theatres, the Great States, the Academy, the Rialto, and the Genesee, on Sunday evening. If done, and it was being planned at mid-week, this would mark the first time a world premiere ever was held day and date in all of one city's theatres.

Combination opening of the picture, and broadcast of Jack Benny's regular Sunday evening radio broadcast, "the Jello program," from the stage of the Genesee, with the radio program fed by wire to the other houses.

Also expected are Dorothy Lamour, who is in the picture; producer Murray Boland; Don English, Paramount still photographer.

Cooperation of local officials has resulted in following helpful exploitation by them: Mayor Talcott of Waukegan has served warrants on Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago, and other of that city's officials, commanding their presence at the premiere at Waukegan. Penalty, Mayor Talcott said, was "contempt of court."

Mayor Talcott and the North Shore Railroad have allowed the posting of 6,000 one sheet billboards announcing the five day Waukegan celebration, entitled, "Celebrity Days."

Mr. Benny and his entourage will arrive in Waukegan in a special train of de luxe coaches.

General Foods Corporation, manufacturers of Jello, will be the hosts to the premiere crowd on the opening night, having purchased all of the tickets to the theatre, from the Great States Circuit.

Mr. Benny's broadcast from the stage of the Genesee theatre, before the premiere of the picture, will be his last for the season.

Twentieth Century-Fox Broadcast

Twentieth Century-Fox is staging an international broadcast on Monday night, over the NBC "Blue Network," as the start of its exploitation for Irving Berlin's "Second Fiddle." It will be, as the company's publicity men point out, the first time that a broadcast of such scope has been used to exploit a picture; that two movie stars, Tyrone Power and Sonja Henie, have played a love scene some 7,000 miles apart; that a theme song for a picture has been played by orchestras located on three continents.

The plans call for a broadcast of Irving Berlin tunes by Rudy Vallee, Dr. Frank Harris, and Tommy Dorsey in New York; by Jack Harris, in London; and by Osvaldo Fresca, from Buenos Aires, and by Louis Silvers, in Hollywood; for a broadcast by various of the pictures' principals in Hollywood; for a love scene from the picture, by Tyrone Power in Hollywood, and Miss Henie, in Oslo, Norway.

Mr. Zanuck, the producer, Sidney Lanfield, the director, Mary Healy, one of the picture's principals, will be heard from Hollywood; Mr. Berlin and others from New York.

RKO's Des Moines Premiere

RKO will hold the world premiere of "Career" in Des Moines, Iowa, on July 2. Phil Stong, the picture's author, is a former Iowan, and the locale of the picture is Iowa.

RKO and other film executives, and film stars such as Jean Hersholt, Anne Shirley, Edward Ellis, Leon Errol, Janet Beecher, Raymond Hatton, Alice Eden, and John Archer will be in town for the celebration. The last two named, are "starlets," discoveries of Jesse L. Lasky's "Gateway to Hollywood" talent quest, who make their debut in the picture.

Mr. Lasky is expected there; also Leigh Jason, director of "Career", and Mr. Stong.

The "festivities" begin on July 1, when the Hollywood party will be greeted at their special streamlined train by G. Ralph Branton, general manager of the Tri-State Theatres, and Gardiner Cowles, Jr., publisher of the Des Moines Register Tribune, who is "cooperating" in the exploitation.

Two new "starlets," the results of the second Lasky talent hunt, will be revealed to the radio public on Sunday afternoon, within one hour before the picture, "Career" begins on the screens of the Paramount and the Orpheum theatres, by Mr. Lasky, at a "wind-up" broadcast from the Des Moines Shrine auditorium.

There will be a "Movie Ball" at the city's two largest dance pavilions on Saturday night.

Testimonial Banquet

World premiere of Paramount's "The Star Maker," starring Bing Crosby, will be made the occasion of the "biggest testimonial in the history of the show business" ever accorded to a personality; that to Gus Edwards, vaudeville star and master of ceremonies in whose revues have appeared many present day stars.

Present plans are to hold the testimonial banquet in New York, immediately prior to the picture premiere, with Eddie Cantor, one of Mr. Edward's "discoveries," as master of ceremonies.

Many stars are expected at the testimonial dinner and premiere. Among Mr. Edward's "discoveries" were the Duncan Sisters, Helen and Grace Menken, the Lane Sisters, George Jessel, Lila Lee, Groucho Marx, Walter Winchell, Jack Pearl, Bert Wheeler, Eddie Buzzell, Jeanie MacPherson, Mae Murray, Lou Silvers, Johnny Hines, Ona Munson, Mitzi Mayfair, Ray Bolger, Paul Haakon.

WAR CRISES' EFFECTS NOTED IN FRENCH PRODUCTION AND THEATRES

Parliament Reconvenes and May Consider Cinema Bill; French Court Holds Producers Are Authors; Awards by Academy

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

The present international situation has had a depressing effect on the film industry in France. Theatre receipts have fallen off and this is especially true of the first run houses, while the instability of business has caused almost complete stoppage of production plans. The period can be best described as one of waiting. People hardly want to risk money in the present uncertain times.

No Action on Zay Bill

No action has yet been taken on the Jean Zay cinema bill which, if passed as proposed, would cut in half the number of American films to be shown yearly in France. It is possible that the bill may be considered at this session of Parliament, but it is likelier that hearings on the bill will be postponed to next October.

According to a recent decision of the first chamber of the court of appeals of Paris, the producer of a film is to be considered the author. This is an innovation and, if upheld by the cour de cassation of Paris, would mean a complete change in the positions of film authors and film producers under the French law.

The decision would give the producers, if grouped as a body, the power granted to the authors' society by a law dating back to the French Revolution in 1793.

Therefore, there is at present a project by which a group of French producers would organize, in collaboration with a number of German and Austrian refugee film producers, an association of producers of French films which would be administered on the lines of the present existing Societe des Auteurs et Compositeurs Dramatiques (Society of Dramatic Authors and Composers), and by which it is planned to obtain complete control over French exhibitors.

Exhibitors would be asked to sign with this society for the exclusive showing of the films belonging to the producer-members. Exhibitors refusing to sign would be denied the films of any of the producer-members.

Importers and distributors of foreign films in France would be asked to join the society as representatives of the producers of foreign motion pictures.

The main advantage of the formation of the society would be that it would obligate French exhibitors to keep an exact account of their receipts on special books controlled by the society, and also to eliminate the power over the film theatres of the Societe des Auteurs et Compositeurs, which at present collects from 2.20 to 3.30 per cent on the net receipts of the cinema for the music played in the film.

Music Fee Elimination

The new producers' society by supplanting the authors' society would eliminate the fee on musical copyrights, a saving of 25 million francs a year ($625,000) for the industry.

Musical copyrights would only be paid on gramophone records played during the intermission, which would amount to around $1 a day.

It is expected that all French producers will join the society which at the time of writing is only planned. The founders of the project hope that there will be no obstacle in the cooperation of the American companies. In some American film circles in Paris is has been reported that this plan was made to eliminate American films, as the association would force exhibitors to show only films of its members.

SEEK COOPERATION OF BROADWAY AND FAIR

An attempt to bring about a closer rapprochment between merchants and the theatrical interests along Broadway to recruit a more lively interest on the part of each in the New York World's Fair is reported to be underway.

For some time there has been grumbling among theatrical folk at the failure of the Fair to bring to Broadway the crowds that were expected, and a lack of ardor in the Fair has been observed in displays on Broadway as compared with other business centers.

However, there has been a pickup in business along Broadway in the past week and a further increase is expected in July and August.

It is also reported in American film circles in Paris that French exhibitors are worried about the plans of the proposed society, for none want to give up control of programming their theatres. By being limited to the films of the members of the society, which practically would act as a monopoly, but not falling under the French anti-trust laws because it would also be an authors' society, the exhibitors say that they would be forced to pay whatever price the producers chose to ask with little possibility of bargaining on equal terms with the producers.

Form French Academy

On the instigation of a French cinema journalist, Miss Simone Dubreuil, "L'Academie du Film" (The Film Academy) has been founded in France. It was inspired by the American Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, and already has 150 members composed of journalists, technicians, artists, directors and others associated with the film industry with the exception of producers.

The academy, which was founded early this year, recently announced the awards for 1938 productions, the first of an annual activity of the group. The academy had limited to 14 the number of awards, five for French production, seven for foreign production and two special awards common to both.

The awards for foreign films were chosen and voted by all the members of the academy among a list selection of 44 foreign films shown in France in 1938, including 37 American films, two British, two German, two Russian, and one Czechoslovakian. "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" was not included in this choice as it was "beyond competition."

Names of the awards were chosen from the names of famous French and foreign actors and directors, most of them now dead or retired. The awards for the best foreign films were won exclusively by the American industry. They are as follows: Charles Chaplin Award (for general technique and acting excellence), "Dead End"; Maurice Stiller Award (for the best drama), "Night Must Fall"; Comedy Drama (for the best comedy), "You Can't Take It with You"; Mack Sennett Award (for the best "burlesque" film), not granted; Marie Dressler Award (for the best actress), Bette Davis in "Jezebel"; Warner Oland Award (for the best actor), Robert Montgomery in "Night Must Fall"; Emile Cohl Award (for the best cartoon), not granted.

The French awards were voted only by the "guest members," not belonging to the Cinema Production. "La Bete Humaine" and "Le Quai des Brumes" shared the Prix Georges Melies for the best French film produced in 1938. For her work in "Hotel Du Nord," Arletty won the Prix Janie Marese for the best actress award. Michel Simon for his work in "Le Quai Des Brumes" and "Les Disparus de St. Agil" won the Prix Pierre Batcheff for the best actor award. The Prix Jean Vigo for the most courageous picture went to "Les Disparus de St. Agil." The Prix Max Linder for the best French comical film was not granted.

No single French or foreign film was considered worthy of the Prix International David W. Griffith (for the film having the best lasting qualities and technical superiority). An award for the best "forbidden film" of all films banned by the censor, is also to be made by the Academie du Film.

Best Money Makers

The yearly referendum organized by the French trade journal La Cinematographie Francaise to name the best money makers, films and stars, recently was completed. The following lists have been established according to the votes of 600 leading exhibitors of Paris and the Provinces.

Best Money Making Pictures: "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" (French speaking version), "Le Quai des Brumes" (French), "The Baker's Wife" (French), "Alerte en Mediterranee" (French) "The Adventures of Robin Hood" (American), "Barnabe" (French), "La Maison du Maltais" (French), "Three Waltzes" (French), "Prison Without Bars" (original French film). The films are listed in the order of their standing.

Best Box Office Stars, in order named: Jean Gabin, Viviane Romance, Fernandel, Danielle Darrieux, Louis Jouvet, Raimu, Pierre Fresnay, Yvonne Printemps, Charles Boyer, Michele Morgan. American stars in the list are in the order named: Greta Garbo, Gary Cooper, William Powell, Errol Flynn, Shirley Temple and James Cagney.

For the first time since the poll has been conducted, a foreign film leads the list of 10 best films. "Snow White" received 3,750 marks. The second picture had only 2,498. "Robin Hood," in sixth place, had 1,700 marks.

SMPE Meeting Held

The Atlantic Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers was held Wednesday in New York. The subject of the meeting was "Safeguarding Theatre Sound Reproduction with Modern Test Instruments." Four RCA Photophone engineers addressed the meeting.

Standard Expanding

Standard Pictures, which has exchanges franchised throughout the country, is negotiating the purchase of several productions for release as a supplement to Standard's own program, the first picture of which is to go before the cameras early in the fall.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

The Magnificent Fraud

(Paramount)

Political Melodrama

Among the midsummer films that will treat topical or serio-topical subjects is Paramount's "The Magnificent Fraud," built on a story of an amazing deception. While it is, of course, fiction, the manner in which events that have international significance break, unexpectedly, shrouds it in an aura of possibility.

The president of a mythical South American country is assassinated. An American political wire-puller whose job it is to put over a gigantic loan dares to substitute an actor for the murdered dictator. Only three persons know the secret, but the complications that ensue provoke tense melodrama, whimsical comedy and lively love interest.

The basis of the production is the story "Caviar for His Excellency," written by Charles G. Booth. A Booth novel was the premise of "The General Died at Dawn." The screen play is credited to Gilbert Gabriel, recently a collaborator on "Hotel Imperial," and Walter Ferris. Responsibility for direction was assigned Robert Florey, whose latest pictures are "Hotel Imperial," "Disbarred" and "King of Alcatraz."

For name exploitation purposes, which in view of the topical character of the story, probably will take second place in showmanship campaigns, the film will make available Akim Tamiroff, playing a dual role which in turn calls for him to be both melodramatic and comic, Lloyd Nolan, Mary Boland, Patricia Morrison, Ralph Forbes, Steffi Duna, Ernest Cossart, George Zucco, Robert Warwick, Frank Reicher and Robert Middlemass.

Release date: July 21, 1939.

Isle of Destiny

(Fine Arts)

Adventure

Action and adventure in the South Sea Islands is the substance of "Isle of Destiny." A 'round-the-world girl flier, a renegade gun runner and smuggler, a Marine Corps officer and the U. S. Marines are the principal characters. The production is being photographed in color and is proceeding under the direction of Elmer Clifton, who made several thrill action Coronet pictures which Columbia has distributed the past season. The original screen play used was written by Arthur Hoerl, whose credits include "Cipher Bureau," Warners, and several of the stories which Clifton directed for Coronet.

Although no definite releasing arrangement has been made as yet, Franklyn Warner has allotted the picture the largest budget ever carried by a Fine Arts attraction. Background production detail is in full keeping with the exotic character of the locale.

The principal players are William Gargan, lately seen in several important MGM and Universal pictures: Wallace Ford who is now featured in "Backdoor to Heaven," Paramount; June Lang, who was the love interest in Hal Roach's "Captain Fury," Gilbert Roland, Katherine DeMille and Etienne Girardot. Additionally the film will offer Ted Osborne, Grant Richards, Tom Duggan and Harry Woods.

Release date: To be determined.

They All Come Out

(MGM)

Prison Study

The fact that "They All Come Out" will tell a fictional melodramatic crime story in which kindliness and love effect the moral regeneration of a convict and a woman prisoner on parole, and that it will present Rita Johnson, Tom Neal, Bernard Nedell, Edward Gargan, John Gallaudet, Paul Fix, Fay Helm, Anne Shoemaker, Fuzzy Bradley, Joe Yule and James Flavin undoubtedly will become a matter of secondary exploitation consequence when the story behind the picture is known.

To begin with, it will be the first detailed and authentic explanation of the federal prison system on the screen. Filmed in cooperation with the Department of Justice, it starts with the premise that all federal prisoners do come out. It will show case histories from the time the prisoner is first committed, is transferred to another institution to learn a trade, or can be more properly cared for until the time of release.

Actual scenes were photographed at Atlanta, the Women's Reformatory at Alderton, W. Va., Chillicothe (Ohio) Reformatory, the U. S. Hospital for Defective Delinquents at Springfield, Mo., and for the first time actual views of the interior of Alcatraz. The various steps for rehabilitation will be pictured. Among the Alcatraz scenes are the electric-eye-guarded gates, the guards in the gun-galleries and the convicts marching to work shops.

Release date: July 14, 1939.

Kid Nightingale

(Warner)

Prizefighting and Music

Of the earlier fighting "Kid" pictures, from the Warners, "Kid Galahad" was a melodrama and "Kid from Kokomo" a comedy. "Kid Nightingale" will combine the entertainment and showmanship elements of its predecessors with the appeal of John Payne's singing. The story is about a young fellow who lets himself be trained to be a fighter by a wily manager who convinces him that such exercise is a proper way to develop the breathing and chest muscles that will make him an opera star. He wades through a horde of setups, singing after every win. A girl who falls in love with him sees through the ruse, but not until she brings a real opera star to see him knocked out by the champion does the "Kid" get it all straight.

Payne, who has come up through the route of "Garden of the Moon," "Wings of the Navy" and "The Devil on Wheels," will play the title role. Jane Wyman will be the girl. The two comedians, Ed Brophy and Walter Catlett, have active supporting roles. Others who will participate are Charles D. Brown, Max Hoffman, John Ridgely, Harry Burns, William Haade, who started in "Kid Galahad," and Winifred Harris.

The story basis is an original screen play by Lee Katz, Charles Belden and Ray Schrock. The picture is being directed by George Amy, long assistant to many of Warners' topnotch directors.

Release date: To be determined.

The Forgotten Woman

(Universal)

Personal Melodrama

Three standby theatrical themes, a woman jailed unjustly, political piracy and motherly sacrifice, are being blended into "The Forgotten Woman."

The heroine, jailed unjustly after her husband has been killed, is forced to place her child in an orphanage. Evidence of her innocence is squelched by a racketeering political boss, yet upon her parole she is unable to provide a home for the baby, and disappears. Meanwhile, the prosecuting attorney, breaking with the boss on learning the true story, adopts the youngster. This situation is the first of several unusual incidents which eventually bring the terrorized and persecuted mother and the prosecutor together in marriage.

Announced as Edmund Grainger's first production since "The House of Fear," this picture is based on a story by John Kobler, for which Lionel Houser and Harold Buckman did the screen play. It is being directed by Harold Young, whose recent credits are "The Storm," "Newsboys' Home" and "Hero for a Day."

Sigrid Gurie, seen in "The Adventures of Marco Polo" and "Algiers," will play the title role, with Donald Briggs as the attorney and Paul Harvey the politician. Other personalities carrying important roles are Eve Arden, William Lundigan, Elisabeth Risdon, Donnie Dunagan (the boy), Joseph Downing, Norman Willis, Ray Walker, George Walcott and Charles Wilson.

Release date: To be determined.

Heaven on a Shoestring

(Tentative)

(Paramount)

Sentimental Whimsey

Two elements which many times have proved their entertainment and commercial value are being used as the bases of this moving story. While the picture will not be exactly what is known as a tear-jerker it will be directed at the emotions.

The story concerns a once great actor, who couldn't resist the bottle, and so lost his wife, blasted his career, did not know who his child was or where she was and wound up in the gutter. Years pass. He learns that his grown daughter is searching for him. He stages a grand bluff to convince her that he is still a Broadway big shot. He even convinces his old producer, as broke as he is, to restage the play, in which he and his wife won great fame, this time with the daughter in the mother's role. When creditors close down on the pair, the girl learns the truth, but the opening night audience permits the show to go on. But as the old star, who found the road back too tough, dies, his daughter is acclaimed a great new star.

The leading roles will be played by Pat O'Brien and Olympe Bradna. For support the leads will have the talents of Roland Young, Reginald Gardiner, George E. Stone, Frank Sully, Russ Powell and D'Arcy Corrigan.

The picture, a George Arthur production, is being directed by Lewis Milestone.

Release date: October 20, 1939 (tentative).

Mr. N. J. Blumberg, President
Universal Pictures
RCA Building, New York City

Dear Mr. Blumberg:

Playing THE MIKADO at the Keith Theatre, Washington, has given us one of the most delightful and profitable dates of the season. With business reaching top figures, THE MIKADO turned Washington's hot summer into cool fall, as far as we are concerned.

Not only did we hold the picture over for a third week, but the eighth day of the run exceeded the opening day's business.

On the strength of this engagement and other successful engagements we are booking THE MIKADO over our entire New York Metropolitan circuit.

With kind regards.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Ezell:

Nothing gives me greater pleasure than to report to you the success of "THE MIKADO" played yesterday.

This film grossed 3½ times the average receipts. Nothing but praise for the picture was heard. It will be a pleasure to anticipate its return in August.

Many thanks to you for letting me have it and thanks to Universal for releasing it. Any house which fails to exhibit this film does an injustice to its clientele.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Production

Although Paramount surrounded its "Dr. Cyclops" with a great deal of mystery, not a new trick for publicity space, "Intermezzo" and "Frontier Marshal" undoubtedly are the most consequential of the seven pictures started in the week. In addition to "Dr. Cyclops," in which Albert Dekker, Janice Logan and Tom Coley will be the principals, Paramount started another mystery, "Death of a Champion," story of weird goings-on at a dog show, during which a prize pup is killed. It will present Lynne Overman, Virginia Dale, Joseph Allen Jr., Susan Paley, Robert Paige, Harry Davenport, Irene Franklin and John Sheehan.

"Frontier Marshal," 20th Century-Fox, which will detail exploits in the lively career of Wyatt Earp, will feature Randolph Scott, Nancy Kelly, Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero, Edward Norris and John Carradine.

The cast for Selznick-International's "Intermezzo" will star Leslie Howard, who also is associate producer, with Ingrid Bergman, a new importation from Scandinavia, Edna Best, Cecil Kellaway, Ann Todd, Donald Scott, John Halliday and Enid Bennett, who is returning to the screen after an absence of several years.

Universal started "Fury of the Tropics," second in a series of productions featuring Richard Arlen and Andy Devine. The leading feminine role was assigned to Beverly Roberts.

Under the production guidance of Edward Finney, Monogram began "The Man from Texas." Tex Ritter is the star; Ruth Rogers and Hal Price head the support.

"Full Confession" went into work at RKO-Radio. The cast includes Victor McLaglen, Sally Eilers, Joseph Calleia, Adele Pearce, J. Farrell MacDonald and Joseph Crehan.

Nine Features Completed

While the new work was proceeding, nine pictures were removed from the active shooting list.

Universal accounted for two. Jackie Cooper and Freddie Bartholomew are teamed again in "Bright Victory," which also will have Alan Dinehart, Melville Cooper, Dorothy Peterson, J. M. Kerrigan, Joseph Whithead and Fred Santley. The second film, "Desperate Trails," offers Johnny Mack Brown, Bob Baker, Fuzzy Knight, Frances Robinson, Russell Simpson, Clarence Wilson, Ed Cassiday and Fern Emmett.

Paramount matched the Universal pace with a completed pair. Both promise to be of unusual interest. "Our Leading Citizen" concerns a modern domestic social-political-economic problem. It will feature Bob Burns with Susan Hayward, Joseph Allen, Elizabeth Patterson, Gene Lockhart, Otto Hoffman, Charles Bickford, Kathleen Lockhart, Paul Guilfoyle, Clarence Kolb and Fay Helm. "The Star Maker," Charles R. Rogers production, will picture episodes in the life of Gus Edwards. Bing Crosby, Walter Damrosch, Louise Campbell, Linda Ware, Ned Sparks and Laura Hope Crews are the principals.

Republic Completes Two

Two pictures also came off the line at Republic. James Lucile and Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport, Marie Wilson, Tommy Ryan, Mary Hart, Henry Kolker and Berton Churchill will be seen in "Should Husbands Work?" The star of "Colorado Sunset" is Gene Autry, with the support of Smiley Burnette, June Storey, Barbara Pepper, Larry Crabbe, Robert Barrat, Kermit Maynard, Jack Ingram and Al Taylor.

COMPOSE YOUR OWN COMMENT

> Says a Principal Productions press statement, "Sol Lesser today signed Paul Winchell, 18-year-old ventriloquist, for featured roles in Irene Dare's new starring picture, 'Everything's on Ice.' Unusual angle in Winchell deal is that voice thrower won't appear in film, but his dummy, 'Jerry,' does the acting chores. Winchell merely supplies the voice and never gets in front of the camera."

For Columbia, Larry Darmour finished "Criminal at Large." It will have Jack Holt, Patricia Ellis, Stanley Fields, Arthur Hohl, Weldon Heyburn, Guinn Williams and Leon Ames.

"Dust Be My Destiny" was finished at Warners. John Garfield and Priscilla Lane are the first names on the cast credits, but the support, among others, includes Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Charley Grapewin, Henry Armetta, John Litel, Victor Killian, Marc Lawrence, Arthur Aylesworth, Billy Halop and Bobby Jordan.

At MGM "They All Come Out," a melodramatic romance which will make use of authentic scenes taken at several federal penal institutions, including Alcatraz, was finished. Rita Johnson, Tom Neal, Bernard Nedell, Edward Gargan, John Gallaudet and Paul Fix are the screen personalities who will be seen.

Elastic Programs

Many years of experience have taught exhibitors that annual product announcements, like railroad time tables, are subject to change without notice. The changing—eliminations, substitutions and additions—already has begun.

In the news story covering the MGM 1939-40 product plans, released in Chicago, March 20, it was announced that "It Can't Happen Here," Sinclair Lewis' novel of what might happen to the United States under a dictatorship, would be one of the company's new season productions. Last week came word that the production of the story had been "shelved." Now Paramount announces that production of the Sidney Skolsky story "Heil, America!" concerning the experiences of a German-American family, resident in the Yorkville section of New York City, has been abandoned. This picture was not listed among those scheduled in the company's new season product announcement, however. Inquiry at both studios as to why these pictures had been crossed off the list evoked the same answer, "Your guess is as good as anyone's."

Word also comes from 20th Century-Fox that "Steinmetz the Great," listed in the schedule, has been deferred for the reason that it is believed too many biographies are projected for the new season. Meanwhile, in New York, Darryl F. Zanuck has made known that preparations are being rushed for early production of "Father Duffy of the Fighting 69th," an item not mentioned in the announcement.

Four More Years

The signing of director William Wyler by Samuel Goldwyn to a new four year contract continues an association that began in 1936. Including the three pictures, "These Three," "Dodsworth" and "Come and Get It," which Mr. Wyler directed that year, he also handled "Dead End" and "Wuthering Heights" for Goldwyn. Additionally he directed "Jezebel," the Warner picture for which Bette Davis won the 1938 Academy best actress award.

Mr. Wyler's first production under his new contract will be "Strangers at Home," based on the life of Hans Christian Andersen. Gary Cooper will be starred.

Grainger Leaves U

Edmund Grainger, producer for Universal, has completed his contract and checked off the lot. Mr. Grainger joined Universal about six years ago under Carl Laemmle, Sr., after having been a producer for Fox for three years. During his service at Universal he produced some fifty pictures, including "Diamond Jim Brady," "Sutter's Gold," "The Road Back," "The Magnificent Brute" and "Love Before Breakfast." His last production was "Forgotten Women."

News in Brief

Don Brown, son of Joe E., will make his screen debut with his father in Paramount's "$1,000 a Touchdown," which William A. Thomas is producing.

Eddie Quillan has been set by Universal for a featured comedy role in "Hawaiian Nights," a Max Golden production.

Warners has closed with George Raft to play the title role in "The Patent Leather Kid," which, when first made about 12 years ago, lifted Richard Barthelmess to star heights.

Paramount has signed Walter Huston to the role of "Torpenhow" in "The Light That Failed." The role was originally assigned Thomas Mitchell, who was prevented from playing it by commitments to Columbia.

The first picture planned by Cecil B. DeMille under his new Paramount contract will be a story of the Canadian scarlet-coated police force, temporarily titled "Royal Canadian Mounted Police." Following his custom, Mr. DeMille will devote several months to research prior to actual shooting. The film will stress friendly relations between Canada and the United States.

Walter A. Futter and Paul Hoefler, explorer, who produced "Africa Speaks," a few years back, are assembling another African film using footage filmed by Mr. Hoefler on a recent trip to the Dark Continent.

Henry King will direct "Swanee River," the story basis of which is the life of Stephen Foster, for 20th Century-Fox.

SEE 'COOPERATIVISM' AS MEXICO'S SOLUTION

Technicians' Company Making First Picture; Exhibitors Appeal from Strikers' Hoodlumism

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Employees of the Mexican motion picture industry believe that cooperativism, a movement that is strong in Mexican general industry and farming, is the solution to the film production problem. The national motion picture studio workers' union is formulating a program for organization of a cooperative society to make at least two films a month. The National Workers and Industrial Bank, a government institution, is looked to to finance this production which is expected to get going this summer.

Mexico City Co. picture technicians are off to a good start with their producing cooperative society, managing director of which is Jose Bohr, Argentine state and screen actor and producer. They are making their first picture "Lujuria" ("Lust"), at Acapulco, a Pacific port resort. Bohr is the director.

Government Financing

Some relief for Mexican motion picture producers from one of their most acute problems, that of proper financing, is in the offing with aid of the federal government in the form of arrangements made by the Ministry of Finance with the Mexican Picture Producers' Association. The deal calls for government financing of selected producers. A committee representing the government, the Association and Mexico's two biggest film labor organizations, the Federation of Cinematographic Industry Workers and the Studio Attaches Union, has been appointed to complete details of the plan and to regulate the financing.

This financing is to be provided by the Mexican government's National Workers' and Industrial Bank, which has a capital of $4,000,000 and has financed many government-sponsored but privately run propositions in the four years it has been in business.

Money for pictures, however, is to be allowed only those producers who are endorsed by the Association and the labor organizations. This proposition is expected to make its debut in a short time. It is generally pleasing to the producers.

Subsidy Already Granted

Previously the government granted Roberto Soto, stage and screen comedian, recently turned producer, $60,000 to finance the production of "La Marcha de Zacatecas" (The Zacatecas March), which has a historical theme based upon one of the liveliest Mexican marches. This is the largest subsidy the government has ever granted to motion picture producers and is also the first money the government has put up for private production in several years. The film is to be released this summer and will, it is planned, be exhibited in foreign countries.

HUNGARY TO FORM OWN FILM INDUSTRY

The Hungarian Film Commission is planning to establish a national film industry which eventually is expected to affect imports. However, the time when the Budapest studios will be able to supply sufficient product to Hungarian theatres appears to be remote. Despite some agitation and a link with Germany, American films still lead there.

Of 15 films which received first runs in Budapest in April, eight were American, three were French, while Hungary and Germany supplied two each. There has been some production in Budapest by German and French companies as a means of absorbing currency which they cannot take out of the country.

The Mexican government has also lent the film industry a hand in the way of distribution in Central and South America. The Producers Association has named two delegates to use the $10,000 the government has provided for the establishment of exchanges in those countries. These exchanges, it is expected, will facilitate distribution of Mexican pictures in many parts of Latin America.

More government assistance has loomed for the industry. President Lazaro Cardenas, recently on tour of the northern states, promised a committee of producers and distributors that interviewed him at one of his stopping places that he would look into their plea that taxes on all pictures in Spanish be reduced when he returned to Mexico City before summer starts. The petitioners think that this tax paring, the extent of which is to be left up to the government, will give Mexican pictures particularly a break over foreign products.

President Cardenas also assured the committee that he will endeavor to persuade the Confederation of Mexican Workers to call off the boycott it has announced for all pictures made in Spain during the Franco regime. The Mexican government continues to refuse to recognize the Franco administration. The Confederation advanced as its reason for this ban that it considers the Franco government Fascist, so therefore all pictures made while it is in power must be Fascist, too.

A Weird Strike

Labor has handed the industry yet another headache in the form of a wierd strike. This tieup is against the Cine Club, a large cinema of Irapuato, an important middle western railroad-industrial town. The strike was called without warning. During a performance, delegates of the Guanajuato state film workers' union, which claims jurisdiction of Irapuato, swooped down upon the theatre, drove out the audience, beat the protesting exhibitor, and put up the red-black banner of organized Mexican labor, simply because the house's employees do not belong to this union.

The action has all exhibitors worried. They have appealed to the national picture workers' union and the state and federal governments.

Mexico's cinema construction boom, as far as Mexico City is concerned, has inspired opposition. A group of exhibitors has petitioned congress to pass a law forbidding the building of more cinemas in the national capital. The petitioners assert that this action is imperative as there are already too many theatres and business has taken a nose dive, thanks to the acute economic depression. But it is certain that nothing will be done on the petition until the fall, for congress has gone into recess until Sept. 1.

Backers of the four large cinemas being constructed in the capital are going ahead. It is certain that these houses will be running before congress can act on the petition.

It seems that the Mexican government is out $40,000 of badly needed money as a result of the failure to sell to motion picture producers the plot of "Upa y Apa," the pretentious stage revue that fizzled in New York under the name, "Mexicana." The government had high hopes of salvaging at least something of this stage wreck by making of the best of it a motion picture.

Fire Rules Enforced

Fire and safety regulations are being strictly enforced in Mexico City cinemas as a result of the blaze in the Workers' Cinema at Zacatepec, a government-backed sugar central, which cost 44 lives and injured 60 others. Exhibitors have been ordered to keep exit doors clear at all times. An automobile was parked before the main exit door of the Zacatepec theatre, so as, the exhibitor explained, to keep out chisellers.

Mexico City exhibitors are benefitting from frequent boosts in the form of reviews and critiques that have become a feature of radio stations XEB, XEXX and XEQ.

The Mexican government's publicity department is so pleased with success that attended its experiment, The Air Theatre, weekly broadcasts of the work of the best foreign and Mexican dramatists, from its radio station, Mexico City, that it will repeat the service in the fall. Twenty-three works, of which but six were by Mexicans, were broadcast during the first season. They prompted 6,000 persons to write praising the experiment. Many of the letters came from the United States and elsewhere abroad.

All motion picture theatres in Mexico City and throughout most of Mexico were closed a week ago Monday at matinee time in respect to Francisco Sarabia, "Lindbergh of Mexico," who was killed while taking off at Washington for a return flight to Mexico City. The funeral was held Monday.

Studio Prospects Brighten

Though two studios in Mexico City are in business difficulties—one of them dropped $4,000 in a month, the other had its electric services cut off—studio trade has some signs of looking up. The Rodriguez Family, who are in nearly all branches of the industry, from sound engineering to general work, have turned producers and have rented George Stahl's studios for eight weeks for the making of their first picture which is to be released in the late summer.

The boycott of American films in Mexico resulting from the dispute between the Confederation of Mexican Workers and the Rodriguez Brothers cinema circuit has been lifted.

Carlos Amador and Jose Alcalde, noted stage comedians, have teamed up as producers. They are to make a series of comedy shorts at the rate of one every two months. Alcalde will play the lead in most of them. The first short is to go into production late this month.

The Directors Union has elected these new officers: President, Fernando de Funetes; secretary, Armando Vargas de la Maza, and treasurer, Arcady Boytler.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

THOSE skeptics who are skeptical about the motion picture industry and the Department of Justice getting together on a consent decree and settling the Government's anti-trust suit against the large film companies, needn't be so skeptical, for in Federal Court in New York the other day the big Department of Justice trust-busters worked out a consent decree with the "lollypop trust," the companies which make the little handles for all-day suckers.

The business in wood sticks, as they are called in the trade, is only a splinter in the lumber industry. Nevertheless, Government figures showed that lollypop consumption in the nation causes a $5,000,000 yearly turnover in sticks alone. A group of six companies was accused by the U. S. of cornering 70 per cent of the trade.

Some movie press agents take liberties, as witness, for instance, the big blurb sent to Quincy, Illinois newspapers, on Henry Kolker, for and in behalf of "Let Us Live." It described Henry as coming from London, and as the son of a big British Army officer. Quincyans got quite a chuckle out of that, for Kolker for years and years has been Quincy's strongest link with the legitimate theatre and motion pictures. They know well that Henry Kolker is the son of William Kolker, a grocer for years on Quincy's own Hampshire Street.

When Alexander Woollcott was in Callander, Ontario, the other week, with an RKO Radio camera crew to film "Five Times Five," a short film on the Quintuplets, he told a reporter from the local newspaper that he really loves to be libelled. The reporter took him at his word all right, and the interview was printed calling Woollcott everything from a big, untidy beetle to a tub of butter, referring to him as "Moon-puss" Woollcott with jowls that would shame a bulldog with the mumps, carrying a head as wide as a broodmare's rump.

Warners has its newly created service department to help "visiting firemen" in New York for the World's Fair, enjoy their stay all the more. And RKO has its "reception lounge" to rest the weary tootsies of the same visitors. And Mike Vogel and Gert Merriam in MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S "Manager's Round Table Club" stand ever ready to welcome and guide showmen arriving from the inlands. But Columbia Pictures has an "Exhibitors' Service Department" which will buy for exhibitors, for wholesale, anything from electric irons to vacuum cleaners, automobile tires, door checks, overstuffed chairs for the front parlor, always-flowing fountain pens, suits with two pairs of pants, goldfish bowls and whatnot.

Frank Steffy, of the State theatre, Minneapolis, is mortified. Playing MGM's "Lucky Night," the other night, Frank, by way of gaining a little extra attention, let it be known that he would admit free those persons reaching the theatre with a genuine four-leaf clover. By actual count he had to admit 6,500 persons, turned away about 9,000. The profits for that day—weren't.

They say there's a doorman who stands in front of a theatre down Dade County, Florida, who is just the grandest friend of the countryside's moviegoers. He always makes it a point to get a peek at the first showing of a new picture. Then, when the cash customers come along later, he gives them the tipoff on the picture in well understood pantomime. If it is a so-so picture, he just puckers up his lips. If he spreads his hands palms upward, that means he is not quite decided in his own mind. If it is an out-and-out bad one, he makes a gesture as if holding his nose.

Hollywood hears that old William S. Hart, of "Pinto Ben" western-film riding days in the movies, might be considering a "comeback" to the screen. He hasn't made a picture in a decade and more. Customers at the General Electric show at New York's World's Fair were tuned in on television sets the other day when a Mrs. Russell Macgregor, of Morristown, New Jersey, was being interviewed for a telecast. "Where do you live, Mrs. Macgregor?" the General Electric interviewer wanted to know. Mrs. Macgregor said she didn't know because her home had been burned down the night before. "Too bad," the General Electric interviewer murmured. "What started the fire?" Mrs. Macgregor said she thought she'd better not answer that right out in the General Electric Building. The interviewer, however, assured her it would be all right. "Very well," said Mrs. Macgregor in her best you-asked-for-it-tone, "The fire was caused by a short circuit in my electric refrigerator."

Walt Disney's Ferdinand the Bull is being libeled over at New York's World's Fair, but grossly libeled. "When I settle down," says Elsie, in the printed legend, "it won't be with anybody who spends his time smelling flowers."

UP FROM THE DEEP, dark bat caverns of western Texas there came this week to our desk in Rockefeller Center, for a bit of a chat, that genial, robust old film row pioneer, Arthur James, newspaperman of the old New York World and New York Mail days, one of the motion picture's first advertising directors, with Mutual, in 1914, and Metro, in 1915, AMPA's first president, old Army man and writer.

Some four months ago, Arthur James took leave of his old Broadway haunts, left no forwarding address. On Monday he returned, engaged in a brand new business, that of retrieving Mexican-bat guano from the 100-foot-deep bat caverns of west Texas.

Arthur tells us that the bats down that way travel around in little groups of 700,000 to 1,000,000, and that only recently it was found that the fertilizer is a most unusually good promoter for citrus. Sells at $42 the ton, requires only $2 the ton to "mine," $18 to transport. He has three Pennsylvanians with him in the project, rents a whole square mile from the State of Texas for only $320 a year.

DOCUMENTARY MAKERS FORM NATIONAL UNIT

Joris Ivens Is President of the Association Organized After World's Fair Meetings

The Association of Documentary Film Producers formally appeared over the weekend as the first organization of its kind in this country and one of the first in the world. It is intended, primarily, to develop the field of documentary film, artistically and technically, and to publicize it. A constitution was adopted, officers were elected and headquarters established in the old Mecca film building at 1600 Broadway, New York.

Joris Ivens President

Joris Ivens, president, Paul Strand and Willard Van Dyke, first and second vice-presidents respectively, head the organization. Others elected for one year were William Osgood Field, treasurer; Mary Losey, secretary; Lionel Berman, chairman of the membership committee; Joseph Losey, chairman of the education committee, and Irving A. Jacoby, chairman of the finance committee. These, together with a third vice-president, to be elected by West Coast members as their representative, constitute an executive committee of nine.

A membership committee to pass on qualifications of applicants was also elected, consisting of Jay Leyda, Helen Van Dongen, John Bradford and Willard Van Dyke.

The purposes of the organization, as stated in the constitution, are:

1) "To develop the artistic and technical standards of independent, creative films.

2) "To publicize such films.

3) "To promote wider production and distribution of such films.

4) "To provide a means of communication and cooperation among independent, creative film makers.

5) "To act as a source of information on such films and to cooperate with other agencies in the compilation and dissemination and exchange of such information."

Follows World's Fair Sessions

"The Association of Documentary Film Producers is the result of a need felt for such an organization by a group who originally came together to assist Philip McConnell of the World's Fair Education Committee in the selecting, procuring, and publicizing of a program of independent films to be shown in the Education and Science Building at the Fair," said the announcement. "At the first meeting held in April a permanent relationship was proposed. It was felt that an enormously rich field was being neglected, and that no organization existed to meet the common needs of the producers in this field."

Regular membership is open to all persons "substantially interested" and "active" in the production of "independent, creative films." Associate membership is open "to those not eligible to regular membership, but who have proved their sympathy to the aims of this organization." At present there are 39 regular members.

The Association will begin to function immediately with various projects including film surveys, programs and critical discussions. Regular monthly meetings will be held. Hollywood members participated in the voting by wire and telephone. They will hold regular meetings also.

The complete membership follows:

Regular Members, New York

Roger Barlow; Elaine Basil, WPA Film Project; Lionel Berman, Frontier Films; John P. Bradford, March of Time; Julien Bryan; J. V. D. NOW PARAMOUNT HAS A "FAIR" BUREAU

Paramount Pictures is the latest to open a World's Fair service bureau for exhibitors and other film folk visiting New York, setting aside special quarters starting Wednesday on the 9th floor of the home office building at Times Square, where Miss Evelyn O'Connell will be chief hostess. She had been serving as secretary to Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president in charge of studio operations.

RKO has its World's Fair service bureau, at its home office, in charge of Henderson M. Richey. Warners opened similar quarters at its headquarters, in charge of Isabel Turner. Quigley Publications has had such a service for some time.

Tracing History of Cartoon, Puppet Films

A survey of the development of the animated cartoon and puppet film was given at the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, New York, when 22 short films tracing this phase of motion pictures from 1907 to the present day were shown Tuesday before an invited audience.

The program was arranged by Joseph Losey, and was chiefly composed of films selected from the Museum's archives, through John E. Abbott, director of the Library.

Included in the program are many short subjects never seen in this country, or out of circulation in recent years. The program follows:

French

"Happy Microbes"—a cartoon by Emil Cohl, the French film pioneer, in 1907.

"Drama Chez Les Fantoches"—an early experimental cartoon with white lines on a black background. (1908)

"Joie de Vivro"—a surrealistic cartoon by Hopping and Gross. (1934)

"Night on the Bare Mountain" — etching-on-film cartoon by the Russian artist, Alexeyeff. (1936)

American

"Gertie the Dinosaur"—cartoon by Winsor McCay, patterned after his comic-strip creation. (1909)

"Story of Old Glory"—a serious, animated cartoon tracing the history of the American flag by Lutz, author of the only authoritative book on the animated cartoon. (1918)

"R. F. D. 10,000 B. C."—a film with plastic wood figures animated by the stop-motion camera. By W. H. O'Brien. (1917)

"Big Swim"—cartoon by Bud Fisher. (1918)

"Mutt and Jeff"—cartoon by Bud Fisher. (1918)

"Dinkey Doodle and the Bad Man"—an early cartoon by Walter Lantz.

"Four Musicians of Bremen"—Walt Disney's first professional cartoon. (1922)

"The Mad Dog"—by Walt Disney. (1932)

Several cartoons by Chariey Bowers.

One reel from "Pete-Roleum and His Cousins"—Joseph Losey. (1939)

German

"Rhythms 21"—an abstract film of animated patterns by Richter. (1921)

"Was die Eiche Rauscht"—a color cartoon for the German state railways by Kruse. (1936)

English

"Carmen"—cut-out silhouette film by Lotte Reiniger. (1933)

"Colour Box"—a commercial cartoon by Len Lye. (1935)

"Kaleidoscope"—by Len Lye. (1935)

"Birth of the Robot"—by Len Lye. (1936)

Several commercial cartoons by George Pal.

Russian

"Revenge of the Kinematography Cameraman"—by Starevitch. (1912)

New Documentary Film

"School," a documentary film on progressive education, produced by Lee Dick, Inc., New York, in cooperation with the American Film Center and the Progressive Education Association, was previewed by the press Wednesday at the Museum of Modern Art.

Its sponsors say it is the first documentary production in full sound and dialogue to be done on 16 mm. film. It is to be shown throughout the summer in the special theatre of the Science and Education Building at the New York World's Fair. "School" was produced under the supervision of Mrs. Lee Dick and Edward Anhalt. The film is two reels in length and was made entirely at the Hessian Hills School at Croton-on-the-Hudson, New York.

"School" was made without the use of any professional actors. Children of the fifth grade in the Hessian Hills School, without training, and teachers from the school faculty were photographed during their actual study and play and in the execution of the project which are a part of progressive education.

"Democracy in education is the real theme of 'School'," it is explained. There is no commentator, the sound track of the film being entirely devoted to the voices of the children themselves and to a musical accompaniment.

Leon Abraham Joins RKO

Leon Abraham, for four years head booker at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Kansas City exchange, has joined the RKO Radio branch there as office manager, succeeding John Wangberg, who has become a home office representative in the south for RKO. Al Adler succeeds Mr. Abraham as head booker for MGM in Kansas City.

ROCKEFELLER CENTER NEW YORK

RKO ENDS CONVENTION SEASON, ANNOUNCING 58 IN NEW PROGRAM

Schaefer Tells Field Men They Have Helped Lay Cornerstone of New Policies; Sales Increases Noted

The 1939-40 sales convention season is at an end, now that RKO Radio Pictures, last of the companies to meet on new product and policy, this week has had its annual meeting at the Westchester Country Club at Rye, N. Y., where its executives announced to the 250 sales, foreign, home office and producing executives a new season program of 58 features, Pathe Newsreel, 198 short subjects, March of Time and Walt Disney's second cartoon feature.

The Talent Roster

The management said that five producer-directors, two producer writers, seven associate producers, 18 directors, 30 stars and featured players and 21 writers already are on the talent roster to be associated with the production of the new pictures.

RKO will spend a minimum of $21,000,000 on 39-'40 product or $6,000,000 more than this year, it was announced Wednesday.

One of the largest congregations of RKO executives ever to gather at one place sat at the Country Club dais Monday morning as George J. Schaefer, president, sounded the opening gavel. Mr. Schaefer was flanked by Ned E. Depinet, vice-president; Jules Levy, general sales manager; Phil Reisman, foreign sales manager; William Mallard, general counsel; John J. O'Connor, vice-president and general manager of the theatre division; S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity; Howard S. Benedict, studio publicity director; Fred Ullman, vice-president of Pathe News; Cresson E. Smith, western division manager; Ed McAvoy, eastern division manager and Harry Michalson, short subject sales manager.

On Tuesday Mr. Schaefer announced an increase in production budgets to give RKO a greater number of big pictures. He estimated the increase at 40 per cent.

Mr. Schaefer called the gathering the most important he ever had conducted or attended. He thanked the men for their loyalty during his six months in office and predicted that the organization would move forward rapidly.

Mr. Schaefer scoffed at reports that he would establish his headquarters at the studio.

New Policies Analyzed

S. Barret McCormick, advertising and publicity director, discussed plans for campaigns on the company's more important new season product.

Phil Reisman, general manager of the foreign department, said that a series of RKO sales conventions in leading foreign territories throughout the world would be started in the near future. Meetings have been scheduled for Central America, Australia, India, France, England and South America.

Mr. Levy and A. A. Schubart, head of exchange operations, closed Tuesday's session, Mr. Levy explaining new sales policies and predicting that while the field force is late in getting a start in selling, it would establish a record in closing possibilities.

Mr. Levy added that a general increase in short subject quality will cut down double bills and open the way for more playdates for shorts.

The new trade practice program was analyzed by Mr. Schubart for the salesmen.

With the windup of business meetings Wednesday, the convention was turned over to Mr. McEvoy and Mr. Smith, each of whom presided over division meetings which later broke up into meetings for the seven districts.

Louis de Rochemont, producer of March of Time, described new subjects, noting one story on the development and history of the motion picture, for release in July, and a second release, "The Truth About Devil's Island." March of Time presented product manuals to all delegates. All future advertising and exploitation material will be issued in a form suitable for inclusion in the loose-leaf book.

Announcement was made that Harold Lloyd will make his bow for RKO next season as a producer, starting with "Chasing Rainbows."

Charles Laughton appeared at the meeting, having arrived Monday from London. Then came Max Gordon and Harry Goetz, who will produce for RKO, and W. G. Van Schmus, director of Radio City Music Hall, and Charles Casanave, of National Screen Accessories.

Roy Disney, for Walt Disney, explained the workings of his organization and new cartoon plans. He said that Walt Disney has increased personnel to 1,100, from the 200 he had at the start.

Gunther Lessing, legal counsel for Disney, said that Mr. Schaefer had accomplished much in his short span with the company.

Hal Horne, of Disney Enterprises, told the delegates that the tieups already made for "Pinocchio" would enable exhibitors to become partners with virtually every store in the country. A new phase of Disney selling, he said, will be the sale and exhibition of original Disney drawings to museums and schools.

Kay Kamen, of Disney Enterprises, reported that Disney character merchandise is showing an annual gross of $35,000,000.

Frank Donovan, RKO Pathe newsreel official, said that pictures of news events could now be brought from Europe in 48 hours, and sent there from here in the same time, presumably by the new Trans-Atlantic clipper service.

William B. Levy, of Disney, London, and Louis Hyman, Sol Lesser Productions, addressed the delegates.

The entire convention on Thursday was transplanted from Westchester to the World's Fair.

In introducing Mr. Schaefer Ned E. Depinet said the company's president had come up from the ranks and that his long background and

RKO Foreign Delegates Report on Motion Picture Conditions Abroad

A cross section of conditions in foreign lands was drawn by the RKO foreign delegates as they arrived in New York for the convention this week.

RKO soon will open three new offices in Brazil, Bruno Cheli, RKO manager for Brazil, said. Six branches have been established.

Mr. Cheli deprecated rumors of a Brazilian government monopoly. He said the Lima conference had helped the position of American film companies, that American films led all competitors in Brazil, that proposed short wave broadcasts to South America from North America might help but should be in conjunction with film release dates in South America.

The native industry, producing pictures at about $50,000, should be regarded as a "healthy sign," Nat Liebeskind, South American supervisor for RKO and manager of the Argentine area, told the trade.

Ralph Hanbury, United Kingdom manager, discussed tax problems.

Distribution in China, already hampered by the war, may be further restricted by new customs duties, Leon Britton, Far Eastern and China manager, asserted.

Mr. Britton added that approximately 40 per cent of the area formerly serviced had been ruined, but that business in the coastal cities was fair.

Reginald Armour, Continental manager, predicted the Spanish market soon would return to pre-civil war conditions. Ten regional offices have already been set up, with Antonio Blanco in charge at Barcelona. Currency difficulties are virtually all that hold up shipment of new films, he intimated.

Max Gomez, manager for Mexico, said renewal of wage contracts in the Mexican studios was expected "without trouble" and that all union difficulties in that country had been settled. He added that high costs had limited Mexican production, but he pointed to new theatre construction.

Pedro Saenz, Cuban manager, declared local production in Cuba had merely created new audiences, had not affected attendance at American pictures.

Gordon New, manager for Trinidad and surrounding territory, noted new theatre construction, three houses.

F. S. Gulbransen, manager for Panama, said the "novelty" of Spanish language pictures was declining, and that American pictures were doing better than before.

HIGHLIGHTS OF NEW RKO PRODUCT

experience extended into every phase of the business.

Mr. Depinet described the remaining pictures on the current season's program.

Mr. Levy introduced new members of the sales organization and told the delegates that the company during the past year had sold 87 per cent of possibilities in the United States and Canada, an increase over last season. There also had been an increase in sales in dollars over the previous year, he stated.

Mr. Levy said that figures had not been completed on the recent "George Schaefer Drive," but that the film shipments in the drive were greater than for any previous similar period.

Phil Reisman extended thanks to home office executives on behalf of delegates from abroad.

Schaefer, Depinet and Levy extended thanks to March of Time, host at a cocktail party, and complimented the Disney organization for its extensive merchandising display at the convention hall.

Four members of the sales force who sold 100 per cent of their sales possibilities for 1938-39 were honored. They are Jack Ellis, New York; F. G. Ross, Boston; W. Canelli, New Haven, and Harry Kahn, Washington.

The 1940 announcement book, prepared under the guidance of Mr. McCormick, was distributed following Mr. Depinet's outline of 1940 production.

The New Product

"Popularity-tested properties, Broadway hits and best-seller books will dominate the program of 58 features," said Mr. Depinet.

Production will continue to be centralized at the RKO Radio Studios in Hollywood. Studio facilities near RKO will also be utilized, and several pictures will be made in England.

Highlights for 1939-40 will include "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "The American Way," "Passport to Life," "Vigil in the Night," "Ivanhoe," and a dozen others.

"The Saint" series will be continued.

James Fenimore Cooper's "The Deerslayer" will be added to the list, as will Johann David Wyss' "Swiss Family Robinson."

There will be six westerns.

The complete feature program follows:

THE HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME, by Victor Hugo, will star Charles Laughton. Pandro S. Berman will produce and the script will be by Bruno Frank. William Dieterle has been borrowed from Warner Brothers to direct.

ABE LINCOLN IN ILLINOIS, Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize play, will be adapted by its author and Raymond Massey will re-create his stage role. John Cromwell will direct. Max Gordon and Harry Goetz will produce.

THE AMERICAN WAY, another Gordon-Goetz production, being adapted from the Broadway stage play by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart with Mr. Kaufman to direct.

VIGIL IN THE NIGHT, authored by Dr. A. J. Cronin, and now running serially in Good Housekeeping, will star Carole Lombard with George Stevens as producer-director. Norman Krasna is writing the screenplay.

ALLEGHENY FRONTIER, based on Neil Swanson's novel, "The First Rebel," will have P. J. Wolfson as producer-writer and William Seiter as director. The cast includes John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Bob Burns and Sir Cedric Hardwicke.

"Ivanhoe" To Be Made

IVANHOE, Sir Walter Scott's novel.

THE DEERSLAYER, from the James Fenimore Cooper classic; "Swiss Family Robinson," by Johann David Wyss; "African Intrigue," adventure story by Alfred Batson; and "Tom Brown's School Days" will be produced by Gene Towne and Graham Baker, president and vice-president of "The Play's the Thing Productions." Towne will act as producer on all productions and with Baker will write the screen play for at least two.

NURSE EDITH CAVELL, Anna Neagle starring, to be produced and directed by Herbert Wilcox, Screen play by Michael Hogan. Cast includes Edna May Oliver, May Robson, George Sanders, Zasu Pitts, H. B. Warner and Sophie Stewart.

Also scheduled for production by Mr. Wilcox are two features to be made in England, one based on the life of Lord Kitchener, British Army Officer, and the other the story of Marie

Seated in front of the group of delegates above are Jules Levy, W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall; Ned E. Depinet and George Schaefer.

NEW SEASON FILMS FROM RKO RADIO

Lloyd, British music hall favorite of a decade ago.

The Man Who Lost Himself, by H. De Vere Stackpoole, will be made in England with Leslie Howard as star, co-producer and co-director.

Mr. Howard will also function in the same capacities on a second film for RKO Radio release during 1939-40.

From Frances Keyes' Novel

Parts Unknown, from the novel by Frances Parkinson Keyes, with a screenplay by P. J. Wolfson, will have George Stevens as producer-director.

Chasing Rainbows, produced by Harold Lloyd.

The Flying Deuces, a Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy comedy, produced by Boris Morros and directed by Edward Sutherland.

Meet Dr. Christian, the first of a series of three films starring Jean Hersholt produced by Stephens-Lang Productions. Based on Hersholt's popular radio character they will have "Nurse Judy" and "Roy Davis" in the supporting cast.

Passport to Life, will star Gary Grant with Garson Kanin directing.

Gregory LaCava will produce and direct one production.

Leo McCarey will act as producer-director on two films one of which will be written by Maxwell Anderson.

Ginger Rogers will star in two pictures.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is to be starred on the new season's schedule.

Father Damien will be produced by Robert Sisk from a biography of the martyred priest written by John Farrow. Mr. Farrow will direct from a screenplay by John Twist.

Anne of Windy Poplars, by L. M. Montgomery, will star Anne Shirley under the direction of George Nichols, Jr. Michael Kanin will write the screenplay and Cliff Reid will handle production.

Village Scandal will star Edward Ellis and feature Barbara Read. The story originally written by George Allen England and adapted by A. C. Edington will be produced by Robert Sisk.

Three Sons, another Robert Sisk production, will also star Edward Ellis and feature the girl and boy finalists in the second "Gateway to Hollywood" radio talent search.

The Day the Bookies Wept, from the Collier's Magazine story by Daniel Fuchs, will star Joe Penner. Les Goodwins will direct from a screenplay by Bert Granet, with Robert Sisk as the producer.

Cross Country Romance has Lucille Ball and James Ellison in the top spots. Cliff Reid will produce.

Child of Divorce, based on a Broadway stage success by Leopold L. Atlas, will have Anne Shirley in the title role and Robert Sisk as producer.

Distant Fields, the S. K. Laurens stage play, will have Barbara Read and John Archer in the leads and Robert Sisk as producer.

Discussing plans for handling the publicity barrage are Rutgers Neilson of the home office; Howard Benedict, studio publicty director; S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity, and Charles Leonard, studio publicity representative.

Men Against the Sky will be produced by Robert Sisk.

Others on the schedule are:

Ask No Returns, by Fanya Foss, with Cliff Reid producing.

Silver City to be produced by Robert Sisk;

Sued for Libel, a Cliff Reid production, written by Wolfe Kaufman with screenplay by Jerry Cady;

Little Orvie, from Booth Tarkington's novel with screenplay by Adele Comandini;

Sunset, to star Tim Holt under the production guidance of Cliff Reid.

A series of three pictures based on Clarence Budington Kelland's Scattergood Baines, to star Guy Kibbee.

George O'Brien will again star in six westerns and David Howard and D. Ross Lederman have been signed as directors.

Feature by March of Time

The March of Time for the first time will produce a feature length picture. This will be titled "The Ramparts We Watch," and will be based on a screenplay suggested by Major George Fielding Eliot's book of the same name.

Pinocchio, Walt Disney's second full-length feature production, will be released by RKO Radio. At the opening day's session, signatures to the contract were affixed by President George J. Schaefer for RKO Radio, and Roy Disney.

"Pinocchio, in the making for two years, will be completed simultaneously with the formal opening of the new Walt Disney studio in Hollywood. It probably will be released, like its predecessor, "Snow White," around Christmas.

Fifty-six manufacturers already are preparing to promote merchandise based on "Pinocchio," Kay Kamen, merchandise representative for Disney, stated today at the convention.

"Pinocchio" articles will include:

Store jewelry, pottery figures, dishes, tableware, party favors, wooden toys, music, clothes, games, jewelry, framed pictures, booklets, dolls and banks, pencils, masquerade costumes and masks, hair ornaments, books, handkerchiefs, children's knives, forks and spoons, tumblers, modeled soap figures, candles, boys' neckwear, mufflers and belts, sweat shirts, woven labels, balloons, chewing gum, lolly-pops, metal containers, glassware, valentines, records, gasoline, oil, umbrellas, and raincoats.

EXHIBITOR ASKS OTHERS TO SET 'PATRIOTIC WEEK'

Alexander Manta Finds Project in His Circuit Draws Community's General Support

Alexander Manta, president of Indiana-Illinois Theatres, this week proposed a "great patriotic demonstration" throughout the country, sponsored at theatres, circuits and independents, by exhibitors, national patriotic leaders, distributors, circuit heads and others, to "wield a powerful influence and bring about a greater admiration and loyalty to our flag and country."

Circuit Wins Support

Mr. Manta's theatres in Whiting, East Chicago, Indiana Harbor, LaPorte, Michigan City, Goshen and Elkhart, all "A" houses, staged such demonstrations, and, he said, they were responsible for bringing out and engaging the active support of thousands of school children, teachers, civic and other groups and leaders.

"If you could have witnessed any one of these Americanization Programs," he continued, "you could readily understand our enthusiasm and no doubt would be imbued with the same spirit and feeling of wanting to see this type of effort in every theatre in the land."

He suggested that contacts be made immediately by industry leaders and circuit heads with the national commanders of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and similar organizations in every community boasting of even a single theatre, reminding that "our industry particularly has evinced a great interest in Americanism as witness the flood of patriotic subjects, both in feature length as well as shorts.

No Charge for Admission

"No one," he said, "can charge commercialism to the theatres in the community putting on this program, as there is no admission charged, and of course, the theatre goes to some expense in providing the service staff necessary to handle the crowds, electricity, and, of course, the film itself. In every case with us, the operator's overtime was paid by the organizations sponsoring the affair. In almost every case, the sponsors were the Service Mens' organizations, plus the Lions, Kiwanis, and of coarse, the Board of Education, as well as the local civil authorities."

At the Roxy and Fox theatres, in LaPorte, Ind., Arthur Wartha, manager, held an "Americanism" program for high school and junior high school students. Mr. Wartha said that "the success of our program could not have been possible without the cooperation received from our Chicago film exchanges."

Included in the showings were "The Refugees," a March of Time reel; "Brave Little Tailor," a Disney short; Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer's "Servant of the People," Warner Brothers' "Declaration of Independence," "Columbia's "Community Sing" reel featuring "The Star Spangled Banner," and Paramount News' "Youth of America." Representatives of the American Legion, the Elks Lodge and the Lions Club addressed the students after the showings, which took place in the morning and afternoon.

Organizations Cooperate

Chick Tompkins, manager of the Vogue theatre in East Chicago, Ind., and Jack Albertson, manager of the Indiana theatre in Indiana Harbor, put on "Americanism" programs with the cooperation of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Kiwanis Club, the Elks Club, the Lions Club, the East Chicago Bar Association and a committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

At the Vogue theatre, 1,900 students from Roosevelt and Harrison Schools saw the program of selected patriotic shorts on a morning, while the same program was seen by students of Garfield, Holy Trinity Croatian, St. Mary, St. Joseph, Holy Trinity Hungarian, McKinley and St. Stanislaus schools in the afternoon.

In Indiana Harbor, 1,200 students from Riley, Lincoln, Columbus, Franklin and Washington elementary schools attended the showings. Mayor Frank Migas of East Chicago set aside one day as Americanism Day, in cooperation with the showings.

Five Showings

Credited by Mr. Manta with having originated the programs of this type, Rex Williams, manager of the Hoosier theatre in Whiting, Ind., staged one with five showings for the school children, sponsored by the Lions Club, the American Legion and the Boy and Girl Scouts. Speakers at the shows included Oscar Ahlgren, state chairman of the American Citizenship Committee of the Indiana Bar Association; James T. McNamara, the mayor of Whiting, and Joseph McAdams, head of the department of social studies of the Whiting Public Schools.

The program included "The Declaration of Independence," "Servant of the People," March of Time number five, Paramount News number 42 and Community Sing number 10.

Two showings, at 8:30 and 10 A.M., of the "Americanism" program were presented to local students by manager Roy Hanson of the Jefferson theatre, Goshen, Ind. Judge Aldo J. Simpson addressed the first group, while Trevor V. D. Dillon, minister of the First Presbyterian Church, spoke to the second group of students. Cooperating with the theatre were the American Legion, the Lions Club, the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Rotary Club.

Sid Holland, manager of the Elco theatre, Elkhart, Ind., held an "Americanization" program, witnessed by approximately 4,500 school children, in two separate showings. Walter Darling, Concord township trustee, served as master of ceremonies for both programs.

The Tivoli, Michigan City, Ind., managed by Harry Rubin, put on two "Americanism" shows. As in most other cases, operators and films were free for the performances. A speaker from the American Legion gave a short address on "Americanism" before each show.

MGM Signs College Writers

Ten junior writers from college classes graduating this June have been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to be trained by Kenneth MacKenna, head of the story department. Those signed are: Joy Davidman, Hunter; Ethel Frank, Vassar; Virginia Rooks, Manhattanville; Walter Doniger, Alfred Eisner and Stanford Hunter Hendee, Harvard; Thomas Seller, Yale; John T. Southwell, Grinnell; Bernard Straub, Washington, and Robert Metzler, University of Southern California.

Film Bookers Frolic

The Film Bookers Club of America will hold its first outing at the Alger Farm near La Salle, Ill., June 24th. The group plans to hold a "true or false" contest with the Filmrow Girls' Club of Chicago at the Crillon Hotel there this week.

Judell Names Company; Sets 60 Pictures

Producers Distributing Corporation is the title of the new independent producing company formed by Ben Judell, pioneer producer, and the announced program calls for 24 westerns and 36 melodramas. July 6 has been set as the date on which first production will begin.

Sixteen exchanges have already been organized, and 11 more are expected to complete what amounts to a national distribution organization.

Lon Young Opens Own Office

Lon Young has dissolved his association with Roland Reed and Hollywood Industrial Pictures and opened his own offices at the Grand National studios for the production of public relations, sales training, documentary and industrial pictures. Under the name of Lon Young Productions, the firm is now preparing several experimental subjects designed primarily for television. Associated with Mr. Young will be Freeman Lusk, public relations counselor.

Named Exploitation Director

Charles Leonard has been named special exploitation director for the two forthcoming Harry Goetz-Max Gordon pictures, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "The American Way," which are to be distributed by RKO. Meanwhile, Mr. Leonard will handle the exploitation for Herbert Wilcox's picture based on the life of Edith Cavell.

PARAMOUNT DIRECTORS REELECTED; INTEREST CUT TO $1,700,000 YEARLY

Balaban Emphasizes $4,106,000 Earnings in 1938 and Improvement of Financial Structure in Last Three Years

Stockholders of Paramount Pictures, Inc., on Tuesday afternoon unanimously reelected all of the 16 corporate directors, and from a report by Barney Balaban, president, learned that interest-bearing indebtedness has been reduced $10,000,000 in three years, that par value of senior stocks has been cut by another $12,000,000, and that interest on outstanding obligations has been lowered to the rate of $1,700,000 per year.

The 16 directors who were reelected are as follows: Barney Balaban, Neil F. Agnew, Hon. Stephen Callaghan, Harvey D. Gibson, A. Conger Goodyear, Stanton Griffis, Duncan G. Harris, John Hicks, Jr., Edwin L. Weisl, John D. Hertz, Austin C. Keough, Earl L. McClintock, Maurice Newton, E. V. Richards, Adolph Zukor and Y. Frank Freeman.

All officers were expected to be reelected at the board of directors meeting following on Thursday. The officers: Barney Balaban, president; Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee; Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board; Austin Keough, vice president and secretary; Fred Mohrhardt, treasurer, and vice presidents Neil Agnew, Y. Frank Freeman and John Hicks, Jr.

Operations in "Black"

Disclosure that Paramount studio operations are currently in the black highlighted a favorable report on the company's financial position given to stockholders.

There were 2,295,870 shares of all classes of stock, representing about 67 per cent, voting at the meeting. The holders' session progressed with Mr. Balaban presiding, Mr. Keough acting as secretary, and Mr. Griffis and Mr. Weisel, the only other company directors, sharing the platform. Individual stockholders complimented Mr. Balaban individually and the management as a group on the financial conditions of the company and its prospects of continued improvement.

Mr. Balaban said in answer to a stockholder's question that consolidated income is derived about equally from film rentals and theatre admissions. He said that 25 to 30 per cent of the film rentals paid by Paramount theatres is paid for Paramount pictures. No Paramount theatre division is losing money, he said.

In answer to another question, Mr. Balaban said that Paramount had no intention of voluntarily divesting itself of its affiliated, theatres and pointed out that the company was fighting the Government anti-trust suit.

$4,106,000 Earned in 1938

In addressing the stockholders President Balaban said:

"Your company earned in 1938 $4,106,000. This includes the earnings of the parent and its consolidated subsidiaries as well as its share of the earnings of the non-consolidated subsidiaries. It also includes earnings of $624,000 arising from the purchase of your company's bonds and other capital transactions. The current position of your company is good.

"During the past three years the financial structure of your company has improved very materially. Since reorganization your company and its consolidated subsidiaries have reduced their interest-bearing indebtedness by over $10,000,000. Some 11,000 shares of first preferred stock and 89,000 shares of second preferred stock have been converted into common stock, showing a total reduction of approximately $12,000,000 in the par value of senior stocks. All accrued dividend arrearages and all current preferred stock dividends amounting in all to approximately $7,000,000 have been paid. Thus it will be seen that the senior securities and debt ahead of the common stockholders has been reduced by approximately $22,000,000.

SHOWMAN HELPS DEFEAT ANTI-FREE-SHOW MOVE

When Senator Richard Johnson tried to tie an amendment to the Fair Trade Act in the Nebraska Legislature saying that it is unfair for merchants to use free film shows to bait business if within 25 miles of a bonafide theatre, the amendment was defeated by a vote of 19 to nothing.

One of the principal objectors to the bill was Senator William Diers, who operates a theatre in Gresham, Nebraska. Aiding him in the defeat of the bill was Senator Mekota, whose home town, Crete, has three competing theatres.

"At the same time there has been a substantial reduction in interest rates on outstanding obligations. In June, 1936, interest of consolidated companies was at the rate of $3,000,000 per year. Currently, this has been reduced to approximately $1,700,000 per year. Your company's credit position is such that in the opinion of leading banking and financial interests its credit rating is extremely high.

"Of the six per cent bonds originally outstanding, only $1,939,000 remain. Arrangements are being made through a term loan of three and one-half per cent to call these remaining sixes. Thus your company will be completely relieved of its entire six percent debenture issue.

No Bonuses, Commissions, Fees

"It will be noted that in connection with this huge capital debt and interest reduction program no bonuses, commissions or fees were paid to any broker, banker or other person.

"During the first quarter of 1939 earnings of consolidated and Paramount's share of non-consolidated companies amounted to $1,300,000, as against $838,000 for the same quarter last year. Thus far for the second quarter earnings are running substantially ahead of the same quarter last year.

"While your company's policy has been to reduce debt and the senior security position as rapidly as possible, it was felt by your board of directors that the common stockholders should receive a dividend, and accordingly a dividend was declared, payable July 15, 1939.

"It is to be noted that the business of your company is worldwide. For the past nine months everyone's attention has been directed to the increasing nationalistic and aggressive attitude of certain important countries. As a result of this dislocation and general unsettlement increased taxes and restrictions on the import of American films have been imposed and the export of currencies in these and in other countries has been upset. Because of the conservative basis on which our foreign business has been conducted your company, in spite of the unsettling factors all over the world, has been substantially able to maintain its foreign income in United States dollars. It is to be noted that only 15 per cent of the cost of each negative is allocated to the foreign market and this amount is written off in a period of 15 months after the pictures are released in the United States.

From Foreign Operations

"It must be borne in mind that of revenues from subsidiaries operating in foreign countries where currency cannot be exchanged into American dollars, no credit is given to the earnings of this company unless the American dollars are actually received. In order to have a book record of uncollected revenue from abroad, we pick up on our books each unreceived unit of foreign currency at 1/10 of a cent.

"Overhead and administrative and sales costs have been maintained at the same comparative low level which has characterized your company's operations for the past few years.

"Your management has devoted every effort in its power to improve the results from studio operation. Marked improvement has been shown both in the quality of pictures produced and in the operating results therefrom.

"As you have no doubt read, the board of directors have approved the purchase of land at a moderate price with a view of eventually erecting a new studio in Hollywood over a period of the next few years. The program of development of this property is to be so planned as to minimize the capital outlay for the next few years, and at the same time reduce the ultimate operating overhead of the studio. No new financing is presently planned."

AFA REFUSES CONFIDENCE VOTE FOR ITS OFFICERS

Near - Riot Attends Meeting Critical of Sophie Tucker and Ralph Whitehead

Sophie Tucker, president of the American Federation of Actors, and Ralph Whitehead, its executive secretary, failed, in the early morning hours Tuesday, to win a vote of confidence from their organization, with which to face charges, at trial on July 10, of maladministration, leveled against Mr. Whitehead's office by the investigating committee of the parent actors' association, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America.

A Near-Riot

The meeting, in the Sun Room of the Hotel Edison, New York City, erupted into a near riot, at 4:30 A. M. Miss Tucker, Mr. Whitehead, Rudy Vallee, Bill Robinson, and other members of the AFA had finished speaking for or against the administration, when a girl member interrupted with a shout and a dash towards the dais. Stopped by Ernie Mack, a rank and file member, and a mimic, she hit him in the eye, and bit his neck. The meeting then broke up. Miss Tucker, who had been reduced to tears during the session by protracted heckling, left the hall with members of the executive council. The police arrived, but no arrests were made.

Newspaper reporters and photographers, forewarned that the feeling against the Tucker-Whitehead administration might bring a fighting climax, were there and a flood of front page pictures and stories followed Tuesday afternoon.

The meeting was the result of charges preferred against Mr. Whitehead's office by the AAAA, which must be answered by Saturday.

AFA Charter at Stake

The charges, if upheld, may result in the revocation or suspension of the AFA charter, Frank Gillmore, AAAA president, has declared. The AFA is charged with obstructing the work of the investigating committee, paying organizers on a percentage basis; failing to use democratic methods; failing to organize presentation houses; organizing circus people who are not eligible for AAAA membership; failure to use moneys received from benefit performances for relief purposes; failure to cooperate in the organization drive of the 4-A's in unorganized fields; becoming involved in jurisdictional disputes; using "ungentlemanly tactics" in organizing in specified cases; poor administration of coast branches; procuring an AFL representative to assist improperly in internal affairs.

Miss Tucker insisted that the charges were a personal attack upon her, and declared:

"I called this meeting because for the first time in my life my character has been attacked."

Miss Tucker, in her prepared address, asserted that the AFA had bettered the lot of its members, but the audience disagreed. Mike Lewis, a performer in the Billy Rose Aquacade at the World's Fair, charged that the AFA had done nothing to help its members there, who, he charged, were forced to perform on slippery platforms, in polluted water, and during rain.

Eddie Cantor, a past president, resigned as honorary president last week, in disapproval of the "present policies."

The organization has within it a unit known as "The Ferrets," an anti-Whitehead group, led by Peter Wells, a night club performer. The large part of the membership which met Tuesday morning seemed to favor the stand of Mr. Wells and his group. At mid-week rebellious AFA members were considering another meeting to voice complaints.

Last week, in answering the charge of the investigating committee of the AAAA, Miss Tucker asserted that the investigation had been sought by the AFA but that the AAAA report was not "constructive"; that full cooperation was given to the committee but that the AFA refused to underwrite the expense; that the acts of Mr. Whitehead were fully authorized by a democratically controlled council; that the AFA was refused loans for organizing while other branches were receiving aid; that benefit funds were being transferred to a hospitalization fund; that commissions were paid to organizers because no other funds were available; that presentation houses are being organized with a present membership of 1,700 chorus folk that the AFA now has 15,000 members, of whom 8,850 are members in good standing; that the AFA organized circus folk without objection from the AAAA until January, and that they since have been made a part of a separate division.

On the AAAA investigating committee were Florence Marston, chairman, Paul Dullzell, George Heller, Paul Turner, Frank Gillmore, and Henry Jaffe, of counsel to the committee. It has been decided that an alternate committee will conduct the trial of the AFA leadership on July 10th.

At the beginning of this week, it was denied that the AFA could withdraw from the AAAA. Observers pointed out that no agreement with the CIO existed, and that withdrawal from the actors' body affiliated with the American Federation of Labor automatically would bar AFA members virtually everywhere.

The National Variety Artists, an organization of vaudeville performers, has voted against giving Miss Tucker or Mr. Whitehead any vote of confidence until after the July 10 trial, Louis Handin, NVA president, announced.

SAYS SCHENCK SOUGHT UNION PEACE

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox and president of the Associated Motion Picture Producers, caused Buron Fitts, Los Angeles district attorney, to attempt settlement of the dispute between the "rebel" group in Local 37, technicians' union, and the International officers of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands and Employees, according to testimony Monday in Los Angeles superior court by Joseph Carpenter, the local's deposed president. The move failed, Mr. Carpenter said, when he and the other local officers refused to relinquish their posts and stand for new election.

The suit has been instituted by the "rebel" Local 37 officers, for control of the union. They have been deposed by the International management, which has also attempted to set up five new "substitute" unions.

Three Object to Plan for RKO

Judges Hand and Patterson in the United States circuit court of appeals, New York City, last Friday reserved decision upon the appeals by three objectors to the plan of reorganization for RKO, proposed by the Atlas Corporation, and confirmed recently by William Bondy, federal judge. The appeals were that the new plan was unfair.

From the tenor of their remarks, the two circuit judges were favorably impressed only by the appeal of Nathan Rosenberg, attorney for H. Cassel & Company, holder of $217,000 in RKO debentures. Mr. Rosenberg argued that the plan deprived debenture holders of their liens on substituted preferred stock.

The court asked Colonel Hamilton R. Rickaby, attorney for Atlas, whether equivalent dividends and security had been substituted. Colonel Rickaby assured the court that the plan was "fair," and pointed to the vote in its favor by 80 per cent of the debenture holders.

The other appellants were C. Frank Reavin, attorney for the Copia Realty Corporation and the Fabian Operating Corporation, asking for protection of their claim of $133,000 by placing funds in escrow; and John S. Stover, attorney for Ernest W. Stirn, holding 1,284 shares of "Class A" stock, asking for special consideration because it was claimed that Mr. Stirn was the only party who filed his claim at the proper time.

Judge Hand asserted he did not understand Mr. Stover's grievance. He added that Mr. Stover would scuttle the entire reorganization plan.

Two Hundred at Golf Tourney

Film golfers throughout the east, to the number of some 200, attended the Eastern Film Golf Tournament, Thursday, at Rye Country Club, in Westchester, where Jack Alicoate, of The Film Daily, presided.

In addition, Si Seadler, of MGM; Jack Levin, Copyright Protection Bureau, and Louis Nizer, New York film lawyer, headed a tennis tournament on the side.

Golf teams were captained by Jack Cohn, Columbia, leading the "Old Timers"; Paul Lazarus, for AMPA; Mort Blumenstock and Bob Williams, for Warners; James Cron, for Quigley Publications and the trade publication team; Billy Brandt, heading the exhibitors; Bill Ferguson and Tom Gerety, for Metro; Ted Curtis, for Eastman, and others, competing for the E. F. Albee match play trophy.

National Signs RCA Contract

Renewal of the contract whereby RCA engineers will service the sound reproducing equipment in the more than 300 houses operated by National Theatres Amusement Company, headed by Spyros Skouras, was announced this week by Edward C. Cahill, RCA Photophone division manager.

GB SHOWS 'LARGE' TELEVISION, GE HAS NEW RECEIVERS, PHILCO NEW TUBES

Radio Manufacturers Urge Industry to "Go Slow", but NBC Is Doubling Its Television Program Hours

Television developments this week came for the most part from the technical sector. Gaumont-British presented large-screen British-Baird television in New York.

Philco engineers showed developments in television tubes.

General Electric demonstrated a new line of telecast receivers.

"Go Slow," Say Radio Makers

An ominous note, however, was struck by the Radio Manufacturers Association, in convention in Chicago, where a "go slow" sign was urged for television "because of the many problems involved," which, it was said, will mark a long time before this latest development can be made available to the whole country.

Regardless, National Broadcasting Company, the most active telecaster of the day, is going right ahead, deciding this week to double its television program hours. The company will increase evening studio telecasts from Radio City to three a week instead of the two at present. Outdoor telecasts, relayed by the NBC mobile television station from World's Fair and other points in and about New York City, will likewise be stepped up to three hours weekly.

An innovation will be four noonday transmissions a week from the television studios at Radio City. Comprising a wide variety of interview, educational and entertainment material, they will be telecast at noon on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday. Each will be one hour and will include a half hour of selected film subjects.

Films' Role Minor

Films, however, will play a very minor role under the new schedule, Alfred H. Morton, NBC vice-president in charge of television, said. No motion pictures will be telecast in the evening studio programs, he said.

NBC presented a full hour telecast Tuesday of "The Piradtes of Penzance," the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, with Margaret Daum and Ray Heatherton in the leading roles.

Theatre television on a screen 12 by 9 feet as against the usual home screen of 10 by 7½ inches, was displayed Friday night by the Baird Television Corporation in an especially built theatre in the Gaumont British offices in New York. A variety television program presented by NBC provided Baird the entertainment. Ian C. Javal, Baird commercial director, was in charge of the showing.

It was the first time that large screen television has been seen in open public demonstration in this country. The apparatus demonstrated Friday is said to be capable of projecting a picture 20 by 15 feet, although due to limitations in size of the demonstration theatre the picture was restricted to 12 by 9.

The television projector was located in the center of the floor of the demonstration theatre approximately 30 feet away from the screen.

Meanwhile Baird in London was preparing for the televising in three Gaumont British theatres of the arrival home of the King and Queen, scheduled for Thursday.

Philco Demonstration

Engineers of the Philco Radio and Television Corporation this week staged a press demonstration of two new television inventions developed in the Philco laboratories. The demonstration was held in the Women's clubhouse on 59th Street in New York. The inventions are a flat cathode ray tube, and a tube that removes the ion blemish usually found on most television screens. The Philco screen is 6 by 10 inches.

EQUITY TO ORGANIZE TELEVISION FIELD

With the passage of the deadline set by Actors Equity for the Associated Actors and Artistes of America to determine jurisdiction over the television field, Equity said this week that it will proceed to organize the field.

"When the AAAA raised the question and failed to follow it through with a decision, they clearly left the next move up to us," Paul Dulzell, executive secretary, said, adding that "we cannot at this time disclose the methods or starting date for this drive but we wish it to be known that Equity had jurisdiction and intends to exercise it."

Equity originally set June 7th as the last day for a 4-A decision, but waited an additional week before reasserting its claim.

Television receivers were demonstrated this week by General Electric at a special dealer show at the Park Central Hotel in New York. Only one of the five models shown employs a mirror to reflect the picture. Other sets are of the direct-viewing type.

The Stewart Warner Company held its sales convention in Chicago the first of this week. The 26-tube Stewart Warner television set was demonstrated via the facilities of the Chicago Zenith experimental station.

Only a lack of "logical thinking and coordinated planning" can cause television to have an adverse effect upon the radio manufacturing and broadcasting industries, T. A. M. Craven, of the Federal Communications Commission, said this week in Chicago.

In an address to the Radio Manufacturers Association in convention there, Mr. Craven said that television "is here in the early stages of practical technical development," but is several years away from the standpoint of "stabilized operation of a real service on a nationwide scale."

Calls Overstatements Handicaps

Although crediting the television industry for the strides in technical development thus far achieved, Mr. Craven said "it would be foolhardy for the industry to lead the public into the belief that television is here as a practical reality as a stable service to the public on a national or even on a regional scale."

The association hung up a "go slow" sign for television enthusiasts warning that "because of the many problems involved, it will be a long time" before this latest development can be made available to the whole country.

In a statement authorized by the board of directors, A. S. Wells, president of the association, pointed out that the warning was "necessary because of the nationwide interest; because television has suffered from overstatements, and because the inauguration of television in New York may involve false and ungrounded hopes."

"As a matter of fact," Mr. Wells continued, "television is something that those in New York may now have in a limited way and a few additional stations are in prrospect at the present time. Others will probably develop when a solution to the financial side of broadcasting can be found.

"In all probability, however, over 90 per cent of the geographical area will not be served for some time to come, for the economic questions are serious ones and will have to be solved by broadcasters in the future."

Frank Mullen, RCA vice-president, said that motion pictures, newspapers, radio and television must cooperate to forestall any complications that may arise in speaking of television as an important industry with "$1,000,000,000 to put to work and jobs for a million persons."

He said "television is ready to meet any attempt on the part of pictures to hinder it. Television will provide what it needs to meet film competition."

More Theatres Add Television

The Midwood and Patio theatres, operated by Century Circuit in Brooklyn, have been added to the list of theatres which have installed television sets as added box office stimulants. At the Century's Grove theatre in Freeport, Long Island, a television set will be included in the premiums offered to patrons.

National Decency Legion Classifies Eight Films

Of eight pictures reviewed by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week four were approved for general patronage, three were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Adventures of the Masked Phantom," "Bulldog Drummond's Bride," "Inside Information," "Susannah of the Mounties." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Girl and the Gambler," "Should a Girl Marry," "SOS Tidal Wave." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Daughters Courageous."

Chicago Girls Form Club

More than 100 girls on Chicago's film row have banded together to form a club for the purpose of social and charitable activities. Selma Hackman, Beth Morganstern and Emma Abplanalp are active in the preparatory plans for the establishment of a permanent club. They plan to meet every two weeks.

Western Electric Dividend

A dividend of 35 cents a share on Western Electric Company common stock was declared at a directors' meeting held Tuesday. The dividend is payable on June 30th to stockholders of record at the close of business on June 23rd.

Manning Silverman succeeds Harlan Croy as Milwaukee representative for the Filmack Trailer Company.

IN COURTS

Backs Offer of All-Continental

Acceptance of a settlement offer in the suit brought by Hiram W. Steelman, trustee of the bankrupt estate of William Fox, to recover claimed Fox assets from the All-Continental Corporation, was ordered this week by Bankruptcy Referee Allen B. Endicott, Jr., in Atlantic City.

The compromise which was offered by Mrs. Fox and her two daughters, owners of All-Continental, involved the payment of $600,000 cash and cancellation of $41,000,000 in claims against the estate.

Included in the settlement was the dropping of all claims against All-Continental and Fox Film Corporation. Fox Films abandoned $10,000,000 in claims against the estate, which is included in the $41,000,000 figure, and received in return release from $2,000,000 in claims against it.

Mr. Endicott's order is subject to the approval of John Boyd Avis, federal judge. Creditors may oppose the settlement. A total of $13,000,000 in claims would still be outstanding if the settlement is finally approved. These claims have not yet been adjudicated and may be reduced or disallowed entirely.

The question of discharge in bankruptcy of Mr. Fox was not involved in the settlement and the motion for discharge is not expected to be heard for several months.

The $600,00 is to be paid in three parts—$350,000 in cash upon approval of the settlement, $150,000 in contingent upon the outcome of claims by the trustee against the Capital Company and the balance of $100,000 will be paid over a three-year period.

Goldwyn Files Brief In Dismissal Motion

Attorneys for Samuel Goldwyn and Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., in Wilmington, Del., on Monday filed briefs in opposition to United Artists' motion to dismiss the breach of contract suit. John P. Nields, federal judge, had reserved decision last Wednesday on the dismissal motion.

The plaintiffs pointed out in the briefs that the defendant had moved to dismiss the action because of a failure to join as defendants Alexander Korda, London Film Productions, Ltd., Douglas Fairbanks and the Elton Corporation. The plaintiff said that under any test propounded by the authorities, none of the said Korda, London Films, Douglas Fairbanks or the Elton Corporation is an indispensable party to this action and asks that the United Artist motion to dismiss be denied in all respects.

Tippett Plea Denial Is Upheld by Court

The appellate division of the New York supreme court on Monday upheld a ruling of Philip J. McCook, supreme court justice, which denied an application of John D. Tippett, Inc., to add two causes of action in his $600,000 damage suit against Carl Laemmle, Maurice Fleckels and Print Stock Corporation.

The court also denied a request of the plaintiff to drop as defendant Universal Pictures Corporation, Eastman Kodak Company, Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., and J. E. Brulatour, Inc., and Jules Brulatour.

The suit claims conspiracy of all defendants to induce breach of a contract made by Universal with Tippett in June, 1932, for the sale of raw film stock.

Eddie Healey Dead

Eddie Healy, 44, formerly of the vaudeville team of Healy and Cross, plunged to his death June 18th in Providence, R. I., in an effort to escape from a fire-swept building. Two others died in the blaze.

Chick Webb

Chick Webb, 30, Negro orchestra leader, died at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore June 16th after an urological operation.

P. H. Sullivan

Patrick H. Sullivan, Sr., 72, only surviving brother of Timothy (Big Tim) Sullivan, the colorful Tammany politician who died in 1913, and at one time a member of the theatrical company of Sullivan, Harris and Woods (Al Woods and Sam H. Harris) died June 16th in New York.

Reserve "Lynton" Decision

Decision was reserved this week by the United States circuit court of appeals on cross-appeals of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes, authors, who were awarded $532,000 for claimed plagiarism of "Dishonored Lady" in the MGM film, "Letty Lynton."

OBITUARIES

Isidor Frey of Loew's Is Dead

Isidor Frey, 61, assistant general counsel of Loew's, Inc., died June 18th at Mt. Sinai Hospital, New York, following an illness of three weeks. "Judge" Frey, as he was known, although he never held judicial office, was an assistant secretary and a director of the company, with which he was associated for 20 years.

Born in New York, the son of Joseph and Babette Frey, Judge Frey attended schools there and received a law degree from New York University. He was admitted to the Bar in 1899 and began the practiec of law in the office of the late Alfred Steckler, former supreme court justice.

His nearest surviving relatives are a nephew, Alexander Frey, manager of Loew's Hollywood on Avenue A, Manhattan, and two nieces, Ethel and Ruth Frey, both of New York.

Funeral services were held Tuesday at Riverside Memorial Chapel in New York. Directors and officers of Loew's attended.

William McCartney Dies; Warner Theatre Manager

William Penn McCartney, 54, manager of Warner Brothers' Jefferson theatre in Punxsutawney, Pa., died June 13th. Mr. McCartney in partnership with the late Peter Johnson purchased the Jefferson many years ago and they continued to increase their holdings to include St. Marys, Ridgway, Johnsonburg and Indiana theatres. They later disposed of their holdings to Roland and Clark of Pittsburgh, who in turn sold to Warner Brothers. He had been manager of the Jefferson from the time he purchased it until his death.

Mr. McCartney was a leader of community life in Punxsutawney. The Punxsutawney Spirit in a two column obituary on the front page said of him: "No death in the history of this city has caused the general sorrow and regret as has that of this genial, kindly, lovable man."

Sam Pokrass Dies; Composer for Films

Samuel Pokrass, 45, composer and lyricist, died of a heart ailment June 15th at Roosevelt Hospital in New York. Before coming to this country he composed many famous compositions in Russia, the land of his birth. The best known of them was "Tchto Mnie Gore" (What Do I Care).

For the last two years Mr. Pokrass was under contract to Twentieth Century-Fox and was responsible for the music in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Happy Landing," "Three Musketeers," "The Little Princess" and "Wife, Husband and Friend." He recently completed an operetta, "Cyrano de Bergerac," on which he worked seven years, and plans were being made to produce it on Broadway.

H. A. Saintsbury, 69, actor and playwright, died in London June 19th. He had appeared on the stage as "Sherlock Holmes" at least 1,404 times.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN SAHARA: Paul Kelly, Lorna Gray—Say, here is a picture. I had a hunch that I was going to miss something if I didn't go back and pick it up. If this picture had been advertised as it deserved, Motion Picture Herald would have had to run an extra. If that picture had been produced by another company with a star I have in mind, what a buildup it would have received! Just sorry that I wasn't in a large town where it could have been sold. Played June 2-3.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

BLONDIE MEETS THE BOSS: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—This picture grossed fourth place since March 14th, which was poorer than I expected. Outdid the first of the series and promises to make the "Hardys" and "Jones" move over, as predicted in Motion Picture Herald.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

FLIGHT TO FAME: Jacqueline Wells, Charles Farrell—Nothing exceptional, but furnishing interest to those scientifically minded, which, of course, included yours truly. Interesting to find such a portable ray machine as the one depicted in the house trailer, while the original in the laboratory required a large array of accessories in fact, a large roomful. Someone obviously slipped here. It would have been avoided if the laboratory original had been depicted on a smaller scale. Played May 30-June 1.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

MY SON IS A CRIMINAL: Alan Baxter, Jacqueline Wells—If you are one of those who rejected this picture, you have my sympathy. While the profit gained was almost nil, I have the satisfaction that I played a real picture and one that was appreciated by all who saw it. Played June 6-8.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE REDWOODS: Jean Parker, Charles Bickford—Heard favorable comment on this one. Personally, I thought it was a good picture in every respect, excepting a few of the fire scenes. I stepped back into the years and brought forth an old experiment on the fire scenes, namely, I used a color wheel. A small piece of red cellophane placed in front of the lens worked wonders with those fire scenes. How about it, Columbia? Why not use tints on such scenes? It appeared as if that forest blaze was inside the theatre. Played May 23-25.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU: Lionel Barrymore, James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Mischa Auer—This one has received so many favorable reports that additional ones are hardly necessary. Our patrons were well pleased and it did nicely at the box office, even though we ran it very late. Running time, 127 minutes. Played May 20-21.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

First National

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald—A very heavy drama that drew exceptionally well in our small town. Most exhibitors have been afraid of this one but it is a picture that will long be remembered. Miss Davis is her usual self with top acting and is ably supported by the entire cast. Watch this Fitzgerald girl because she is a find. Excellent in all respects. Running time, 100 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NANCY DREW, REPORTER: Bonita Granville, John Litel, Frank Thomas, Jr.—Just a second run for duals. Was entertaining, but hardly enough to hold up alone, and we are still fighting double bill programs. When will the industry waken to the facts? Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 7-8.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Grand National

PANAMA PATROL: Leon Ames, Charlotte Wynters—Second of the Cipher Bureau series and this one is much better than the first. Will please mystery lovers and a good one for weekends. Running time, 68 minutes. Played June 2-3.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

SPIRIT OF YOUTH: Joe Louis—Was in a spot for a picture so we picked up "Spirit of Youth." What a surprise we had with this one. Pleased everyone and business very good. Joe Louis is a bomber at the box office as well as in the ring. We have 100 per cent white patronage and this one pleased 100 per cent better than we can say for a lot of major product. Take a tip and book it and go after it and you will be pleased with the results.—James Ruddy, Riviera Theatre, Los Angeles, Calif.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BURN 'EM UP O'CONNOR: Dennis O'Keefe, Cecilia Parker—Very good. I got away with this nicely on a single bill for weekend.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

CALLING DR. KILDARE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres—Good picture, but only average business. Pleased all who saw it. Played June 7-8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Kent Taylor, Ann Rutherford—I would call this a fairly good program picture. It gave us a good first night but was distinctly weak the second night. Running time, 73 minutes. Played June 3-4.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres, Original Ice Follies Cast—I have read reports both good and bad, but I think this is a very good show. The skating scenes are very good as well as the acting. Don't be afraid to play it any day; it will do business. Running time, 82 minutes. Played June 7-8.—Lester Booth, Star Theatre, Toulon, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Norma Shearer, Clark Gable—I feel like passing up reviewing this one. Certainly it has been cussed quite sufficiently in this department. Personally, I did not think it was too bad, but nearly all reports we received from patrons rated it as the poorest show ever seen or some such thing. One intelligent elderly lady was very enthusiastic in its praise. Wonder why Metro wants to kid our patrons with a flock of airplanes flying at 3 miles per hour. Running time, 100 minutes. Played May 13-14.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker—This series is very good, and is well taken by the public. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 2-4.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SERGEANT MADDEN: Wallace Beery, Tom Brown, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day—An excellent picture but it failed to draw up to the usual Beery gross. Miss Day is truly a find and will go places with proper pictures. Beery never lets you down in a picture and this is no exception, but for some reason or other it failed to click. Too many of this sordid stuff this season for the good of the box office. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SOCIETY LAWYER: Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce, Leo Carrillo—An excellent drama with Carrillo stealing all honors. Miss Bruce sings one song which would have better been left unsung. All in all, an excellent picture. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Robert Taylor, Wallace Beery—No luck on this picture. Had a tieup with a shoe merchant. Beery and Taylor not so popular.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—A wonderful picture that is no good for small towns. Lost plenty on this one. Running time, 114 minutes. Played May 26-28.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—This one is another one-night picture. They came out all right for the first night's showing, to see the stars. The second night they didn't come to see anyone. Running time, 114 minutes. Played May 27-28.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

TELL NO TALES: Melvyn Douglas, Louise Platt—It will please if you can get them into see it. But there wasn't enough customers that came to see it to tell anyone. Business was terrible. We ran this picture on Sunday. Should be run on Giveaway Nights. Played June 4.—Bud Davis, Ritz Theatre, Roanoke, Ala. Small town patronage.

Monogram

MYSTERY PLANE: John Trent—Well, the kids liked it. Running time, 60 minutes. Played June 3-6.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

WOLF CALL: Movita, John Carroll—Pleasing entertainment of the North Woods. Good for "B" houses and not a bad co-feature for "A's." Running time, 60 minutes. Played May 21.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

Paramount

BACK DOOR TO HEAVEN: Wallace Ford, Aline MacMahon, Patricia Ellis—Never have we run a picture worse than this one. It is an exhibitor's taste of what is to come in Dante's "Inferno." In fact, I think it would be a pleasanter place than having to meet your customers on their exit. It is incredible that they released such a picture. The public are not going to take these pictures hook, line and sinker indefinitely, and the sooner the producers wake up to this fact, the better it will be for all.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S SECRET POLICE: John Howard, Heather Angel—Ran this picture on Giveaway Night, but it should have been run on some other day. Very pleasing from start to finish. Played June 7.—Bud Davis, Ritz Theatre, Roanoke, Ala. Small town patronage.

DOCTOR RHYTHM: Bing Crosby, Mary Carlisle, Beatrice Lillie, Andy Devine—Bing croons again in a fairly funny film. Played May 30-June 2.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

HOTEL IMPERIAL: Isa Miranda, Ray Milland—Poor picture; poor business. I pulled it out and shipped it back on Sunday night. Played June 4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOTEL IMPERIAL: Isa Miranda, Ray Milland—This picture introduces a new screen personality (Isa Miranda), who was received very favorably by our customers. With the aid of Ray Milland and other cast names, a good top feature for "B" houses and also good as a co-feature in "A" houses. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 26-27.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

NEVER SAY DIE: Bob Hope, Martha Raye—A good comedy but will not drag them in. Bob Hope is coming along nicely. More pictures such as this will be a fine build-up. Running time, 82 minutes. Played June 11-12.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

SILVER ON THE SAGE: William Boyd, George Hayes—Cassidy series never misses for us. This is no exception. Played Memorial Day to excellent business. Played May 30-June 2.—W. C. Lewellen. Uptown Theatre. Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Republic

HEROES OF THE HILLS: The Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune)—Average business. Good western but this is one of the smallest towns in the state still surviving the "obsession." 457 population. Running time, 56 minutes. Played May 26-27.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

HOME ON THE PRAIRIE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Autry well liked here. It seems that Autry formerly lived near here (Snyder) and, therefore, people seem to take more of a personal interest in him. Republic should put a little more into Gene's productions. This one moved along nicely, though. Played June 9-10.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SHINE ON HARVEST MOON: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart—Well liked by all. Grossed a little above average. Rogers is a good singer and actor, and we are looking forward to his next picture. Running time, 57 minutes. Played May 12-13.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

FISHERMAN'S WHARF: Bobby Breen, Leo Carrillo—Bobby, well liked here, drags them in if we don't hit unseasonable weather as we did with this one, 90 in the shade. Picture not his best, but pleasing. Running time, 71 minutes. Played May 30-31.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

MAN TO REMEMBER, A: Edward Ellis, Anne Shirley—The best from RKO for two years. An outstanding feature for a small town audience. Do not pass this one up. Story just fits the small community doctor. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 3.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

ROOKIE COP, THE: Tim Holt, Virginia Weidler, Ace, the Dog—Good weekend material. Tim Holt displays talent possibilities. Honors should be given to Ace, the Dog. Running time, 60 minutes. Played May 28.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALWAYS GOODBYE: Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall—A very fine picture. Glad we played it. Although old, fine entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BOY FRIEND: Jane Withers—Pleasing family entertainment a la Withers. As good as any of Jane's previous efforts. Business swell, as they like her here. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 10-13.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

BOY FRIEND: Jane Withers—Good picture; good business. This little gal pleases the small town folks. Fox should give her Grade "A" production, like Shirley Temple, and watch her go. Played June 9-10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CHASING DANGER: Preston Foster, Lynn Bari—It's OK for action-loving audiences. Did above average business for us on repeat run "Kentucky" and fight picture program. No wonder! Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 7-9.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pubelo, Col. General patronage.

EVERYBODY'S BABY: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington—Average Jones Family fare which is usually a little better received than the general run of program pictures. Running time, 62 minutes. Played May 19-20.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GORILLA, THE: Ritz Brothers, Patsy Kelly—A happy selection of players and good comedy takeoff of a swell mystery. Although our business could have been better, the picture couldn't have been funnier. It's really a scream! Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 3-6.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

INSIDE STORY: Michael Whalen, Jean Rogers—Fair little "B" picture. Pleased our double-feature business. Played with "Boy Friend" to swell business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played June 10-13.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise—Very good picture, good supporting cast, beautiful color, but this charming little star is not so popular here now. I am quite sure Mr. Zanuck does not want any advice from me but I still think if they would give her a good American story she would be as good as ever at the box office. It certainly is not Shirley's fault for she is a grand little star. Running time, 93 minutes. Played May 24-25.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—Simply great. They don't appreciate fine pictures if they have any complaints about "Kentucky." Running time, 85 minutes. Played June 7-9.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Ritz Brothers, Don Ameche, Binnie Barnes—Our patrons just don't go for the Ritz Brothers, probably due to the fact they are either very good or very bad; too inconsistent. Running time, 75 minutes. Played May 21-22.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

United Artists

DUKE OF WEST POINT: Louis Hayward, Joan Fontaine, Tom Brown—Not as good as the usual West Point pictures. Too long, not enough action. Tom Brown is very good, Louis Hayward very, very poor. Joan Fontaine is not good enough for the lead. The highlight, of course, was the hockey game, but we do not know much about hockey so that did not click. Rather disappointing. Running time, 109 minutes. Played May 26-27.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Universal

FAMILY NEXT DOOR, THE: Hugh Herbert, Joy Hodges, Eddie Quillan, Juanita Quigley—Went down rather bad on this one. However, I believe there will be quite a few folks waiting to see the next of the series.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

GAMBLING SHIP: Robert Wilcox, Helen Mack—Not sure, but I think I missed this one in the last report. Did average Friday-Saturday business.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SWING THAT CHEER: Tom Brown, Andy Devine, Constance Moore—A very ordinary program picture that failed to do business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN: W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—It is just an ordinary program picture. Business was just fair. Played June 8-9.—Bud Davis, Ritz Theatre, Roanoke, Ala. Small town patronage.

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN: W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—I don't know why but they stayed away in bunches. Running time, 78 minutes. Played June 2-3.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan—Just what the doctor ordered. Plenty of action. Just enough romance to make it pleasing. In color. Some patrons said it was as good as "Jesse James." Business held up good for two days. You'll be glad you ran it. Played June 5-6.—Bud Davis, Ritz Theatre, Roanoke, Ala. Small town patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne—Better than average program and was very entertaining, although a majority of our patrons would prefer not so much flying. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 4-5.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WOMEN IN THE WIND: Kay Francis, William Gargan, Victor Jory—Pretty good airplane picture on style of "Tail Spin." It did average business and pleased all. Played June 5-6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WOMEN IN THE WIND: Kay Francis, William Gargan, Victor Jory—An aviation action picture that was very good. Good shots of speedy planes that the audience liked a great deal. No good for extended runs. Running time, 65 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Shorts

Columbia

ANKLES AWAY: Andy Clyde—A small town exhibitor's answer. Play it if you can use a good comedy. You'll thank us for the tip. Best I've seen in some time; they ate it up here.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BOOM GOES THE GROOM: Andy Clyde—Just a fair comedy. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

KRAZY'S BEAR TALE: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Not a rib-tickling side splitter but plenty amusing. Good enough. Running time, 1 reel.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

ODD SPORTS: Special Sport Thrills—No comments, no complaints. Running time, 1 reel.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC: Columbia Tours—Interesting panorama of Canadian province. Timely, too, due to the visit of the royal couple to Canada and the United States. Running time, 11 minutes.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

STAR IS SHORN, A: Broadway Comedies—Very poor. Skip it. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WE WANT OUR MUMMY: 3 Stooges—One of their funniest. Running time, 17 minutes.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CLOWN PRINCES: Our Gang—Very good one-reel comedy in which Our Gang puts on a home talent circus. Alfalfa as "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" is a scream. Play it.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GLIMPSES OF AUSTRIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Another grand Travel Talk from Mr. FitzPatrick. They are always good. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

HAPPILY BURIED: Musical Comedies Series—Metro certainly does not click with this series. The entire bunch has been poor and this one is no exception. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HEROES AT LEISURE: Pete Smith Specialties—Very, very good with plenty of undersea photography. A very good Pete Smith. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LOVE ON TAP: Mary Howard—Good reel on tap dancing.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MONEY TO LOAN: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—We still have one "Crime" Series picture to pass poor judgment upon. They are tops in the shorts field. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

Paramount

JAMAICA: Color Cruises—Average travel talk in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BUCKAROO BROADCAST, A: Smart Set Series—Very good cowboy reel. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

FERDINAND THE BULL: Walt Disney Cartoons—Very, very good. In fact, every time you see it something before unseen arises. It is swell entertainment.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

POLAR TRAPPERS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Mickey is the finest dessert for any program. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

PRAIRIE PAPPAS: Ray Whitley Comedies—A good two-reeler featuring the singing cowboy and his musicians.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RANCH HOUSE ROMEO: Ray Whitley Comedies—Very good two-reeler featuring cowboy songs and musicians. I booked in two of these to run before the personal appearance of Ray Whitley in this house June 12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

NUTTY NETWORK, THE: Terry-Toons—Excellent colored cartoon. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

THEIR LAST BEAN: Terry-Toons—Good cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

FOX HUNTING: World Windows—Just fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Universal

PHARMACY FROLICS: Mentone Musical Comedies—A very good musical as are the majority of this series. Plenty of variety and laughs. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION SERIES: No. 58—This series is very good as a whole and this issue is not too bad. Just fair. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CRAWFORDS "AT HOME," THE: Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Crawford—By far the best short I have ever run to date. You just can't beat it for good music. Running time, 10 minutes.—Lester Booth, Stark Theatre, Toulon, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

PORKY'S TIRE TROUBLE: Looney Tunes—Just a filler-inner. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

SOPHOMORE SWING: Harvest Moon Dancers—The dance routines are very good, particularly the jitterbug dances. Will please all.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Serials

Republic

HAWK OF THE WILDERNESS: Herman Brix, Mala, Jill Martin—Seems to bring back a certain small group of folks, mostly kids. Now playing Chapter Nine. "Tarzan" acts by "Kioga" (Brix) rather poor material. Could beat it myself when I was a kid.—Elmer A. Slaybaugh, Park Theatre, Mountain Park, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

Plagiarism Ruling Reversed

The United States Circuit Court, in New York, last week reversed an order of Federal Judge Woolsey which had dismissed a plagiarism suit of Clara Dellar and Robert Louis Shayon against Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., United Artists Corporation, Eddie Cantor and Samuel Goldwyn. The court ordered that the suit proceed to trial. The plaintiffs charge piracy of their play, "Oh Shah."

Patent Suit Dropped

A stipulation was filed last week in U. S. District Court, New York, discontinuing the suit of Nakken Patents Corporation against Electrical Research Products, Inc., and the Western Electric Company. The suit had been brought for patent infringements.

Edward Smith Opening Office

Edward Smith has severed his connections with Imperial Pictures and Imperial Distributing Corporation as general sales manager to open an office of his own at 723 Seventh Avenue, New York, to distribute films.

Feinberg Elected

William Feinberg, of the Musicians Union, Local 802, was elected on Friday to succeed Arthur Byron, of Actors' Equity, as chairman of the Federation of Arts Unions, in New York City. Byron was made honorary chairman. Other officers elected were John Lorenz, first vice-chairman; John F. Casey, second vice-chairman; Edward Everett Hale, secretary; and Robert Stern, treasurer.

History of Films By Pettijohn, Jr.

Charles Clyde Pettijohn, Jr., son of the general counsel of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, won his Bachelor of Science degree at Georgetown University by submitting, in partial fulfillment of the requirements, a history of the motion picture industry, tracing the invention and early development of camera, film and projector, and giving an insight into production, distribution and exhibition, concluding with a predicton of the screen's future, pointing up its position in national and international affairs.

Upholds Sign Litigation

Attraction board and changeable letter patents submitted in litigation between the Wagner Sign Service, Inc., and the Adler Sign Letter Company, both of Chicago, have been upheld by Judge Barnes in United States district court in Chicago. At the same time Judge Barnes, in a decision which indicated he expected appeal, held that Adler infringed certain patents covering the silhouette letter design, and that Wagner infringed the Adler patent relating to frame construction. The Patio Theatre, Chicago, was also defendant in one of the suits brought by Wagner.

Film Outing Set

The annual film district outing is tentatively scheduled for August 3rd at the Rustic Inn, Lake Quanapaug, with Homer Downey of RKO in charge.

Russian Film Chief Resigns

Semyen Dukelsky has resigned as chairman of the motion picture section of the Council of People's Commissars. Ivan Grigorivich will succeed him.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

RKO Production

The screen rights of "Archer Plus Twenty," best-selling novel by Hugh Clevely, have been purchased by RKO Radio for production in Britain by William Sistrom, currently here, after his production of "The Saint in London."

"Archer Plus Twenty" is the second of Clevely's novels to feature Maxwell Archer, apprehender in this case of a gang of dangerous criminals. The script is at present being arranged.

New Star

Designed for stardom under the banner of Alexander Korda, is twenty-one-year-old John Justin chosen to play the role of Ahmad, Prince and beggar in "The Thief of Baghdad." It is Mr. Korda's claim that he has the greatest screen find since Robert Donat.

The youthful star has had much repertory experience on the British stage, is six foot and has netted a seven-year contract.

Whit-Monday Fair

Whilst crowds of holidaymakers swarmed over Ealing Common revelling in its annual Whit-Monday fair, the Ealing Studio nearby, had its own fairground where extras—for the dramatic purposes of "Come on George"—took shies at cocoanuts, rode on runabouts and turned the handles on nickelodeon peepshows in the fairground, which was equipped even down to a flea circus. Dave Burnaby barked in front of a booth, whilst George Formby and Patricia Kirkwood performed their routine in and out of the crowd.

Levis Joins GN

Carroll Levis, star of British radio and producer of "Carroll Levis' Discoveries," British parallel to "Major Bowes Amateurs," has been signed up by Grand National Pictures as a talent scout.

Meanwhile, Levis is to make a film for Grand National under the appropriate title of "Carroll Levis and His Discoveries." It goes into production at the end of June.

Levis will star in the picture and will use in it some of the personalities he has discovered in his variety and radio presentations. No director has yet been assigned.

For Asher

Sir Patrick Hastings, famous K. C. and playwright, has written a film story, untitled as yet, for Irving Asher, which will be produced immediately following "Ten Days in Paris" at Denham. Emlyn Williams will play the lead.

Irving Asher also has purchased James Curtis' new novel, "By What Immortal Hand." This story, by the young author of "They Drive by Night" and "There Ain't No Justice," both of which have already been filmed, is of five British slum children.

PUBLICITY BUREAU FORMED BY BRITAIN

The establishment of a "Foreign Publicity Department" at the British Foreign Office to serve in peace years as the equivalent of a propaganda ministry was announced this week by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain. The Earl of Perth, once Secretary General of the League of Nations and recently British Ambassador at Rome, will supervise the work of the department directly under Richard Austen Butler, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs. In the event of a major war Lord Perth would become Minister of Information.

The department "will be concerned entirely with overseas publicity" and is a long step forward toward competing with the mass propaganda machine of Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, German Minister of Propaganda, in supplying the German people with interpretations of British foreign policy.

Whether the department's activities will include films is not yet known. Other governments, notably the totalitarian states, which have propaganda bureaus exercise supervision over films.

Active Actor

Michael Redgrave is one of the busiest actors in London. Immediately after finishing "A Window in London," his fourth film in 12 months, which is being produced by Josef Somlo and Capt. Richard Norton at Denham, he will play in "The Stars Look Down," the Dr. Cronin story of the mining districts, which will be produced by Grafton Films for Grand National release. Margaret Lockwood and Emlyn Williams play two of the three principal roles.

Neill's Original

Roy William Neill, director and author, has written an original "Dressed to Kill," which is now in production at Warner-First National Teddington Studios.

Another member of the famous Lupino family, Antoinette, is making her film debut in this picture. She plays second lead opposite Peter Glenville, who is also making his first film.

At Tyneside

Diana Wynard, Ralph Richardson, Romney Brent and Mary Clare spent Whitsun filming location scenes on Tyneside, nerve centre of Britain's shipbuilding. They were there at work on preliminary scenes for "On the Night of the Fire."

Newcastle was the general headquarters of the G & S film unit, which was composed of seven cars, a generator and camera equipment.

Imports Drop

Imports of exposed cinematograph film for April this year was 1,029,329 feet against 1,253,991 feet in 1938 and 1,649,063 feet in 1937. Values were: £9,685 ($48,425) in 1939; £12,014 ($60,070) in 1938; £13,982 ($69,910) in 1937.

RCA Licensees

Three producers in the British Isles, including a government department, have been signed as sound film recording licensees by RCA Photophone, Ltd., in London. The new contracts bring to 14 the number of Photophone licensees operating in Great Britain.

Welwyn Studios, a subsidiary of Associated British, has signed a long-term recording agreement. The third of the new licensees is Spectator Short Films, Ltd., operators of a compact studio in the heart of Mayfair, London.

Ray Johnston Sails

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, sailed Wednesday on the Queen Mary for London to confer with the company's English distributor, William J. Gell. He will also visit with Ernest Wettstein, representative in Paris.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

JES' VISITIN' AROUND

These be good days for getting around and you'd be surprised, or would you, to know how many boxoffice promotions are started by casual visits to the newspapers, the stores, City Hall and other fertile spots. The kind of visit we mean has no particular purpose at the moment. It's just the idea of dropping around for a few hours, here and there, at those intervals when things are under control on the theatre front.

One member we know calls it "prospecting." He saunters into the city room to gab a little bit, perhaps to lift a bit of an elbow or knock off a cupa cawfee with ye editor and other helpful contacts. He makes a few of the stores to say "how" to the advertising or promotion manager. The mayor, chiefs of police and fire, district attorney, and similar prominents are also on the calling list, if for nothing more than to pass the time of day.

No business is mentioned. Just a lot of the usual man-talk. And more times than not, reports the Round Tabler, something is said or done that leads right to a smackeroo of a tiein to the mutual satisfaction of all concerned.

No theatre is so demanding that the manager can't get out, if he wants to get out, to see what there is to see for the good of the grosses. The theatreman who circulates around now and then without anything particular to sell often winds up by doing a selling job that tops a lot of strenuous effort directed to the cause of one particular engagement.

GET AWAY FROM THAT MOVIE

The purpose of a vacation, as the best authorities agree, is to get completely away from the grind of a 50-week year and do something completely opposite in different surroundings. That's supposed to break the rhythm of week-after-week attention to the job and bring the vacationer back refreshed and revitalized. Evidently, no one ever tipped off a lot of theatremen to the advantages of such procedure, else why is it that so many of the boys spend their vacation periods mostly in visiting theatres in other parts.

The desire to add to one's knowledge is wholely commendable, and it's nice to know that there are many of the members who regard their profession with such intensity. But not during vacation-time, sez we. That's the time to get away from the merry-go-round; to get that screen-dust out of the smeller.

A ball player may go to a ball game on his day off. But the theatreman with two precious weeks to be entirely on his own, should close his eyes, ears and mind to any part of the job for the good of his boxoffice, if not for the good of his soul.

THE JUDGES WILL CONSIDER

For the information of those entrants in the Quigley Awards who are not yet entirely familiar with the judging procedure, let's say again:

Theatremen who win more than one "Fortnight Appointment" in any one Quarter will receive greater consideration from the Quarter Judging Committees for the Quarter-Master Plaques, and Medals. The best way of assuring this greater consideration is to enter material regularly in the two-week preliminary periods which make up the "Fortnights" of each Quarter. (See Awards Rulings on another page.)

It has been known that lone entries of exceptional merit have been awarded high Quarter-Master honors. But these are exceptions. With five to seven Fortnight periods in each Quarter, ambitious theatremen have ample time and opportunity to be sufficiently represented before the Judges who may be influenced somewhat by the consistency of sparkling boxoffice endeavor over a period of time.

Events in the News: For frontal decoration on "Devil's Island," at the Point, Powhatan, Ohio, Manager George Pappas constructed a guillotine, persuaded the high school history professor to act the "condemned man" and demonstrate the machine to the students in the interests of the box office and of higher knowledge.

On behalf of "I'm from Missouri," down in Athens, Ga., L&J-man P. E. McCoy sponsored a beautiful legs contest among the most popular local mules. Co-eds from the university acted as judges.

Round Table Pictures

Striking lobby display that attracted attention was the miniature western town reproduced at right and set up by H. P. Midgely of the Palace Theatre, Netcong, N. J., for his engagement of "Dodge City". Theatreman constructed a miniature model of Dodge City complete with train, saloon, trading post, stagecoach and other landmarks.

Prizes were promoted from local merchants for winners, stunt covered by newspapers. . . . Main setpiece created by Artie Cohn, Roosevelt, in Philadelphia for "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" measured 10 feet in height, and was indirectly lighted. When the Paramount boys in Calcutta recently desired to pre-release "Morocco" at the Regal Theatre and discovered there was no paper available, they turned their hands to painting a 24-sheet poster which is reproduced above. Distinctly atmospheric in effect, display which was created by S. Ganguli, Paramount manager of the Calcutta office, is reported to have attracted considerable favorable comment.

To publicize the showing of "Young Mr. Lincoln" at the Kansan Theatre, in Parsons, Kan., Round Tabler David Dallas arranged for special window display with local Federal Loan Co., which furnished the materials for the display. One sheet mat boards as shown were used to plug the picture. To further create interest, Dallas held a special screening to which civic leaders and prominent citizens were invited. Among the guests was business man who had as a boy heard Lincoln's Gettysburg address; newspapers ran special story and photo.

Smalley Books Baseball Short in Cooperstown for Celebration

Anticipating a record crowd in Cooperstown, N. Y., for the celebration of the centennial of baseball, a few weeks back, Bill Smalley, head of the circuit that bears his name, arranged for the showing of the baseball short, "Diamond Dust," to open on the big day at the local Smalley, next door to the Stadium where the ceremonies were held. The booking was especially appropriate since the short included many of the big names in town among the thousands of baseball-minded fans. Cognizant that the special trains would allow movie time after the big doings, Smalley loudspeakered his announcements just as the fans were leaving the park which brought immediate capacity and waiting lines.

Smalley is also booking the picture into nearby theatres and will bring the newsreel pictures into his circuit, capitalizing on the summer-long celebration of baseball's centennial year in his territory.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Wallace Dresses His Staff

Five days ahead of "Woman Doctor," Maddry Wallace, Forsyth Theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C. dressed his entire staff as doctors and nurses with imprinted breast ribbons carrying title and playdates. Local radio station plugged the picture at intervals, cashier called telephone subscribers announcing playdates and numerous window displays were promoted from local merchants, all of which tied in with the picture.

Many Tieins by Davis Win Prize on "Honolulu"

Four and a half pages of free publicity for "Honolulu" helped get Louis Davis of the Vernon, Mt. Vernon, Ind., first prize in an MGM-sponsored exploitation campaign in the St. Louis territory. A serialization in each of the Mt. Vernon's two papers; a co-op page which tied in which a jig-saw puzzle contest of a halftone on Miss Powell and a rope skipping contest suggested by the dance the star does in the picture, helped grab space.

In merchant tieups, Davis got 100 per cent coverage on fashions in the town's three department stores, taverns featured a "Honolulu" drink, etc. 24-sheet cutouts of Miss Powell were planted, entire staff wore leis and grass skirts and a special display was planted in the negro public school of Miss Powell in blackface doing a staircase dance as a tribute to Bojangles Robinson.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Reward Posters Planted By Simon on "Jesse James"

Post office officials, police and firemen cooperated with Al Simon, Inwood Theatre, Forest Hills, L. I., granting permission for the posting in their stations of reward offers in connection with opening of "Jesse James."

In addition, contest to determine what the title of the picture means to patrons was planted, guest tickets going to winners. Schools, libraries, social and athletic clubs were also contacted through distribution of heralds and special programs.

Loewmen Arrange "Chips" Screening for Donat Family

Hearing that, due to illness, the father of Robert Donat, who with his family lives nearby, would not be able to see "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," at Loew's Palace, in New Haven, Harry Shaw, New England division manager, and Matt Saunders, division publicity head, offered to screen the picture for the star's parents and brothers on the premises of the Donat home. The offer, immediately accepted, allowed the Loew men to execute a campaign which secured wide advance publicity for the date all over the division and resulted in one of the outstanding tieins of the year.

To start the ball rolling, newspaper men from the different cities in the division were invited to a dinner at the Hotel Taft with representation from every city. A large bus was promoted, bannered with title and after dinner driven to the Donat home. Two portable projectors were secured through Mr. Lester Isaacs, of the Loew home office. Folding chairs were spread on the lawn and the screen was erected on the back of the house. As soon as the newspapermen were seated, Mr. Donat was carried to the lawn and placed in an invalid chair, immediately after which the picture was screened.

Donat Family Expresses Appreciation

Shaw says in all his experience in show business, he never saw people more thrilled. At the finish, the newspapermen stood up and applauded the picture and were unanimous in their praise. The Donat family was no end grateful for everything. As a result, the promotion received terrific breaks in all the papers in the different cities.

For an extra buildup for the event, at the dinner preceding the screening, a 40 by 60, containing the names of the picture editors of all participating papers and the names of each of the dailies was placed at the doorway of the banquet room. Shaw reports that this was especially pleasing to the newspapermen since names of all papers were reproduced in facsimiles of their individual mastheads.

40-and-8 Build Street Bally For Bowman's "Dodge" Date

What he chose to call "The Iron Horse" was the street bally made by the Ridgway, Pa., 40 and 8 club for Robert Bowman's date of "Dodge City" at the Strand Theatre. Equipped with large bell and whistle that could be heard blocks distant, the engine which was obtained gratis, was driven through all towns within a radius of 17 miles, banners on either side heralding the picture's opening.

Promoting about 50 colored proofs of the national ad appearing in the American Weekly on the picture, Bowman used these to good advantage in a main street empty store window where they created quite a flash. Costless heralds were distributed, pluggers inserted in bread and all newspaper ads in nearby towns were underlined with title.

FOURTH PERIOD "FORTNIGHTERS" REPORT TOP-GRADE PROMOTIONS

Subsequent-run Situations and Neighborhoods Vie With "A" Houses in Campaigns to Win Preliminary "Appointments"

by A-MIKE VOGEL

NOW that the ending of the Second Quarter of the 1939 Quigley Awards is well within sight, it appears that the competition for the Fortnight designations which will decide the winners of the Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations, has become even keener. Details of some of the selected entries on this page and next indicate the calibre of the individual promotions and projects put on by theatremen in various situations as they cross the finish line.

On a following page, are again set down the rulings of the Quigley Awards for the information of those not entirely familiar even now with procedure of the Competitions to guide them in the final preliminary periods of the Second Quarter, the deadline date to be announced.

Lafferty Uses Naval Program For "Submarine Patrol" Advance

To get the reactions of local citizens to the administration's increased armament program, ballot box was stationed in lobby of the Liberty Theatre, Tacony, Pa., by Manager Bill Lafferty as an advance for "Submarine Patrol." Cards were distributed carrying the question "Do you think the United States should have the largest navy in the world?", space supplied for answers, best of which were used for advertising purposes in the lobby. Girl in attendance also distributed these ballots at busy intersections at different intervals each day, tying in with the Navy Day broadcast for local Veterans Library, which took place in theatre lobby, Lafferty secured additional publicity by presenting star autographed copies of "Splinter Fleet," on which the picture was based, to the library officials. An amateur naval shipbuilding contest was held, representatives of the battleship Annapolis acting as judges, promoted prizes going to winners. This, too, brought newspaper coverage.

For his front Bill used 40 by 60 special displays of critic comments, war poster boards, life savers and special valance heralding the opening. Lobby broadcast was held opening night in which Lafferty interviewed war babies on war, preparedness, armament, etc., closing program with interview of patrons entering theatre. Through cooperation of the American Legion Junior Bugle and Drum Corps a parade was held, winding up in front of theatre where selections were played out front and then on stage.

Lafferty's campaign at his third run theatre is to be further noted for winning the local and national prize offered by Warner Brothers in their recent contest for that picture.

"Fight 'Em, Tooth and Toenail", Is Limerick War-Cry for Summer

The most important part of our program will be to fight each form of free or paid competition "tooth and toenail," never letting them forget for one moment after all is said and done that "Motion Pictures Are the Best and Cheapest Form of Recreation." Fighting these various forms of free recreation offered by the city is easy to describe on paper, but to actually do require a lot of thought, and hard work. Some of these functions can not be fought, but the bulk of them, such as swimming pools, baseball games, golf, tennis, fishing and picnicking, can be if gone about in the right manner. Here is what we intend to do:

We shall haul in some of our bill boards from less conspicuous locations and plant them for the summer at the various picnic grounds. We shall spot two or three boards at the most popular lakes on good locations. Window cards will be used on tees at the most popular golf courses, as will one sheets and special displays inside the club houses. We intend doing this by awarding free comps for certain scores made. At Champlin Stadium, where the Refiners play all home games of baseball, we shall use banners and bill boards just outside the entrance. Free swimming pools will be hand-billed and bannered with walking ballyhoos on special attractions.

Any event that we might consider opposition to us we will try to squeeze into by some means and make the most of it.—George Limerick, Griffiths City Manager, Enid, Okla.

Pilots Fly Far for Breakfast On "Angels" Tieup by Sidney

Fliers from Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Long Island were invited to attend a breakfast at the Hotel Stratford and then a special screening of "Only Angels Have Wings" as part of a stunt arranged by Jack Sidney for that picture's opening at Loew's Poli in Bridgeport. As the planes landed, the pilots and their guests were each given a breakfast and preview ticket and then taken by bannered cars to the hotel. Local dailies came through with abundant coverage in stories and art work.

Also promoted by Sidney was a ballyhoo stunt for which four light Taylorcraft planes were used, on the under side of the wings each lettered with one of the four words of the title. As the planes flew over the city and surrounding country in formation, the words were clearly visible. Following them was another plane towing a 150-foot banner with full title and theatre name.

Scholer Ties Western Union For Bridge Hook-in on "Victory"

Winners of local bridge tournaments may look forward to see picture shows as guests of the management according to the increasing number of members who use this device to attract attention. Currently in line is Jerry Scholer at the Ohio in Sandusky, who made this stunt on "Dark Victory" stand up even stronger by tying up with the Western Union. Jumbo wires were delivered to all bridge clubs stressing the picture's opening and inviting winners to be guests of the management.

Another woman angle was letters sent over the signature of Bette Davis which were distributed to patrons leaving the theatre, personal endorsement letter was also mailed by the theatreman to a special list and numerous attractive window displays were planted in leading windows. Under the heading "We offer magnificent values—the Ohio offers a magnificent picture" Scholer promoted full co-op page from leading merchant, featuring a large cut of Bette Davis, ad included cast, playdates and picture copy. Special guest program was printed for the occasion, merchant's ad on reverse covering entire cost of distribution, and titled heralds were inserted in out-of-town papers and stuffed in laundry bags week ahead.

Unique Announcement by England Sells Drama of "Dark Victory"

In order for his patrons to thoroughly enjoy the dramatic finale of "Dark Victory," Manager R. E. England at the Virginian, Charlestown, W. Va., advertised that no one would be seated in the theatre during the last 15 minutes of the picture. Through tieup with leading beauty salons, beauty hint folders carrying cuts of Bette Davis and Geraldine Fitzgerald and picture copy were distributed week ahead. Florist also cooperated, theatreman promoting roses which were attached to imprinted cards and distributed to women patrons four days in advance.

Doctors and nurses were circularized, telegrams sent to state capitol department heads, etc., and for his lobby, England featured Academy Award winner posters together with tiein copy.

Burhorn Summer Policy Is Follow-Up Of Theatre's Year-Round Operation

We are ready here at the Gayety for summer. Our campaign about "Healthful Air Conditioning" has been under way for some time. Through screen program and newspaper advertising we expect to keep the public informed throughout the season.

Since this is a situation where we exploit, plug and ballyhoo the year around, the summer season means merely a constant enthusiastic follow-thru of this policy. If anything, we shall do more of it during the next two months.

Also, instead of confining our efforts to the business and residence district, we shall pay particular attention to outdoor crowds at the lake, soft ball games, etc., where any publicity activity may do us some good. Our main summer attraction will be a local Bathing Beauty Contest, sponsored by merchants, etc.—"Who will be Miss South Chicago for 1939-40."—John Burhorn, Manager, Gayety, Chicago, Ill.

Soriero Gives Males Opportunity To Be Millionaires-for-a-Day

The five local radio stations in Los Angeles were tied in on a "Millionaire for a Day" contest held in connection with Tom Soriero's "The Hardys Ride High" opening at the United Artists Theatre. Contest was open to any boy or girl up to 18 years of age, entrants required to write a letter of 100 words after seeing the picture, telling how they would spend a million dollars if it were left to them. The first winner was permitted to live like a millionaire for a day, the theatreman having promoted suite at leading hotel, luncheons, dinners, chauffeur driven car, spending money, trip through the MGM studio and two trips to the Fair in San Francisco. Second winner was also given two free trips to the Fair.

Since the picture lends itself to aviation, local factories were tied up so as to reach hundreds of people, each factory selecting the man with the largest family to be the guest of the theatre, together with his family to see the show. Tieup was also made with the Examiner to have their newsboys photographed at the MGM Studio with Mickey Rooney, photographs timed to break in paper opening day of picture at the United Artists. Boys were guested at the theatre by Soriero.

Klinger Wangles Unscheduled Stop For "U.P." Special in Lewistown

Having been invited as a luncheon guest aboard the Union Pacific train during its Philadelphia stopover, Paul O. Klingler was enterprising enough to succeed in arranging for a 30-minute stopover when the all-star special passed through Lewistown, where the theatreman is at the helm of the Rialto Theatre. Permission was secured from division superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad to make full use of the interior and exterior of the local depot for advertising on the picture. Besides distribution of souvenirs, posters and giant standees, were prominently displayed in and around main platforms and entrances.

Local Montgomery-Ward store cooperated by giving theatre an entire main window for display purposes. Radio department inside store also featured a display. School cooperation included distribution of historic charts showing the development of the Union Pacific, passes going to a member of each class writing the best 150-word essay on why entrant was anxious to see the picture. All schools within a radius of 40 miles dismissed classes early to permit pupils to see the all-star special train on its stopover.

Sanders Ties in Hollywood Special To Campaign for "Dodge City"

Few days in advance of the "Dodge City" special train going through Gallup, New Mexico, Johnny Sanders at the Chief distributed handbills in camps and surrounding towns calling attention to the stopover. Local paper ran stories about the train and the stars which included playdate mention at the Chief. Station KAWM put on a program at the depot over which the stars greeted the townsfolk.

Five days ahead a combination bar and dance hall was set up out front, scene stills were spotted on the bar and gag cards tied in the whole with the picture. Also stationed in front was an old stage coach, in addition to a covered wagon, both covered with banners carrying title, cast and playdates. Entire staff was dressed in cowboy outfits with 10-gallon hats, boots, loud shirts, etc., and for his lobby display, Sanders promoted collection of old rifles and other relics of that period.

Shaffer Works with Local Clubs On Benefit Show for "Dark Victory"

Leading women's organization in Staunton, Va., was approached by Frank Shaffer for a benefit performance of "Dark Victory" at the Dixie, wherein members sold tickets two weeks in advance. Ten days ahead, a special screening was held for 25 of the city's leading women at which comments were requested for advertising purposes.

Copies of the issue of Life, containing special story on Bette Davis were secured, front page overprinted and planted in doctors' offices, beauty salons and hotel lobbies. Imprinted heralds, distributed in surrounding towns, mailed to teachers, doctors, nurses, etc., were also stuffed in copies of the Washington Post and Richmond Times Dispatch at local newsdealers. Cashier called telephone subscribers giving time of start of feature, and newspaper coverage included series of ads on the society page of each paper, copy consisting of comments of patrons who had seen the picture at the private screening.

Round Tablers Are Hosts to Mothers On That Big Day

Among the boys in the field to put on Mother's Day campaigns was John Burhorn at the Gayety in South Chicago, who with the cooperation of the Daily Calumet invited all mothers over 70 years of age who were residents of Chicago 25 years or more, to be guests of the management. Also promoted by the theatremen was tieup with local taxi company which transported the mothers to and from the show. Florist presented bouquets, and dinner was arranged at cooperating hotel before the party attended the show. Paper used extensive publicity including list of those attending together with their reactions.

Women from local Home for Dependents were invited to observe Mother's Day at the Fargo, in Sycamore, Ill., by Manager Stuart Tomber, who also arranged for busses to transport his guests to the theatre where they were presented with candy and flowers from cooperating merchants. Another stunt which netted Tomber additional publicity was received when a local artist was persuaded to paint an air-brush copy of Whistler's Mother. This was displayed in the Fargo lobby in a floral setting which was also promoted. Tomber reports himself set for a similar campaign for Father's Day.

Holland Promotes Photographer

In addition to an attractive and appropriate setpiece as part of his lobby promotion Sid Holland, city manager at the Elco Theatre, Elkhart, Ind., arranged for local photographer to take gratis pictures of mothers with their children during the peak hours of the day. Booth was set up in lobby, photographer angle being straight advertising plus the possibility of mothers purchasing additional prints. Stunt was advertised in newspapers by both Holland and the photographer.

Mothers over 60 years were invited to attend the show at the Prince, in Ambridge, Pa., by Lige Brien, who also advertised the special show heavily. Invitation announcement was made from stage and plugged on displays around the theatre. Flowers and other gifts were promoted by the Round Tabler, papers covering the event with human interest stories and theatre plug.

Best Candid Shots of "U.P." Train Rate Prizes on Grimes Campaign

Additional interest in the arrival of the "Union Pacific" train in Erie, Pa., was built up by Ken Grimes at the Warner Theatre through the medium of a newspaper contest featuring a candid camera tiein. Entrants were invited to take shots of the train and from the photos entered Grimes was able to make up a very interesting attraction board which was of much interest locally. Promoted prizes and guest tickets went to winners, cooperating paper running stories and pictures. Art work of the various stars was run in addition to photo and story of Mayor Charles R. Barber receiving a "golden spike" from Patricia Morrison and Bill Pine.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

Musical groups and clubs, PTA's, Federation of Women's Clubs, Theatre Guild list, etc., were circularized by Wally Caldwell in advance of his "Broadway Serenade" date at Loew's Valentine, in Toledo. Special announcements were also made at these clubs with ample picture, playdate and theatre credits. "Good Morning" cards were distributed in leading hotels, bookmarks distributed through circulating libraries, department stores and stuffed in customers bundles leaving cleaner and laundry service. Numerous radio contests were engaged in including a "Name the Song" stunt on WTOL, in addition to commercial announcements and plugs on the "Man on the Street" broadcast.

A beard-growing contest for all male employees of the Lyceum Theatre, in Clovis, New Mexico, was the stunt engaged in by Barnes Perdue, assistant to George Limerick for the opening of "Dodge City." Started two weeks ahead of opening, newspaper stories were run to the effect that there would be a heavy penalty inflicted on any employee not dressed in costume during entire run. Cashiers were also dressed in pioneer costumes and sun bonnets. Prizes were offered to the general public, with all invited to get in on the fun fest.

Through tieup effected with the Bond Bread Company, Martin Wurtzburg, Granada Theatre, New York City, promoted them for a plug on the opening of his "Lone Ranger Rides Again" serial. Numerous promoted gifts were secured for giveaway to the kids, giant window displays secured in addition to 8,000 copies of the Ranger Comics which were handed out to the juveniles.

Mel Blieden at the Capitol, Whiting, Ind., for "Burn 'Em Up O'Conner" succeeded in promoting a driver from the Armory in nearby Chicago where they race cars every week to bring his machine over to Whiting for a street bally. Car properly bannered was driven around town week ahead both under its own power and on a trailer. Promoted heralds were also distributed by the driver.

Covering the surrounding territory for a radius of about 30 miles was the sound truck sent out in advance of "Honolulu" at the Badger, Merrill, Wis. by Manager Herbert Graefe. Equipped with public address system, Hawaiian music was played while girl in Island costume on the back end of the truck danced.

Open to boys and girls under 16 years of age was the contest run by Harland Rankin, Plaza, Tilbury, Ontario, for "Blondie." Promoted prizes were awarded by the theatreman to those submitting the best pencil or crayon drawings of Blondie. Heralds plugging the contest were distributed.

Young Dresses Staff In "Finn" Costumes

Typical "Huckleberry Finn" costumes similar to that worn by Mickey Rooney in the picture, were donned by the entire staff of the Temple Theatre, in Mangum, Okla. as part of Manager Clyde Young's campaign on that picture. On Saturday night preceding preview, the local drum and bugle corps wearing these same costumes paraded on main street, stopping in front of theatre where they held half hour concert. Leaders carried torches which helped create an effective spectacle.

For "Dawn Patrol," stationed in front of theatre were parts of wrecked plane which were covered with inexpensive muslin. For a pilot, Young secured a store dummy and dressed it accordingly. Sandbags and machine gun further enhanced the effect. For advance display inner lobby was filled with old propellers and other equipment. The walls were partly covered with scraps of muslin on which were painted German and Allied plane markings. Assistant John Moore aided on the campaigns.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Charninsky Promotes Gifts for "Lone Ranger"

Highlight of Louis Charninsky's "Lone Ranger" serial at the Capitol, in Dallas was a tieup with local ice cream company which gave a small radio each week in connection with a contest run for the kids. Also promoted from the same source for runners-up were bats, watches, base balls, pocket knives and ball gloves. At no cost to the theatreman was tieup effected with local five and ten, management furnishing theatre with 125 free Lone Ranger gifts for opening day.

Packages of Lone Ranger matches were distributed to adults opening day, promoted ice cream cones given to kids attending first show, 15,000 heralds distributed to every Dallas elementary school and for street bally masked rider covered entire city while theatre staff was dressed in full cowboy regalia with mask for week ahead.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Newhall Presents Gifts From Powell on "Honolulu"

Night ahead of his preview of "Honolulu" at the Majestic, Hornell, N. Y., Manager Al Newhall aided by his assistant John Callahan, presented each patron with a ticket and dropped the corresponding numbered ticket into a drum that was used on stage for a drawing of 15 gifts from Eleanor Powell in Honolulu. Folks were not told what the gifts would be, but night of drawing, lucky ticket holders were invited to step up to the stage as their numbers were called. Theatremen kept plugging the picture and cast during the drawings.

When the 15 lucky patrons were lined across the stage, ushers brought in as many large pineapples from back stage, from each of which was tied a three inch wide red satin bow with two passes attached to each pineapple. These were presented with due ceremony and Newhall reports the audience well amused with the gag. For his street bally, Santa Claus covered business section of city with back banner calling attention to the fact that he had been waiting since Christmas to see the picture.

Rules for the Quigley Awards

Awards are now voted on single exploitations and not on complete campaigns as formerly. This includes goodwill and institutional ideas as well as those on pictures.

Each Quarter is divided into two-week preliminary contests.

Winners in each preliminary are appointed Fortnighters.

Entries of Fortnighters in each Quarter are judged for Quigley Quarterly Plaques, Medals, Citations.

Quarterly Plaque, Medal and Citation Winners are appointed Quartermasters.

Entrants registering the best records of Quigley Plaques, Medals and Citations in the four Quarters will be eligible for the Grand Awards judging.

There are no classifications of population or situation. Everyone starts from scratch.

Every theatreman everywhere is eligible to compete.

All product is eligible — features, shorts, serials. Also stage shows, amateur presentations, etc.

More than one idea may be included in one entry but Preliminary Awards will be voted for best individual idea.

No fancy entries are necessary. With the usual "evidence", submit brief description and "reasons why" an entry should be considered.

Theatremen who win more than one Fortnight Appointment in any one Quarter will receive greater consideration in voting for the Quarter-Master Plaques and Medals. The best way of securing this consideration is to enter material regularly in the two-week preliminary periods which make up the "Fortnights" of each Quarter.

HARRY W. FLINCHUM
manages the Park Theatre in Roanoke, Va., which belongs to National Theatres circuit. Five years ago he obtained an usher's job at the Roanoke house in the same city and then was promoted to assistant manager there. Not long after Harry was able to take down a managerial post and is doing a fine bit of work at his present spot.

ROBERT PARKER
is in the theatrical business for a long time now. He began during his school days, working as an usher at the local theatre and years later found him playing in vaudeville. In 1927 he was an assistant publicity director at the Newman Theatre in Kansas City and in a couple of years was transferred to the Metropolitan, Houston, Texas, in like capacity. Returning to Kansas City he worked at the Colonial Theatre, as manager, but had to quit there due to ill-health and went out to California. He managed some publicity work for Fox while out there and then came back to Kansas, where he obtained a skipper's job at the Dickinson in Olathe.

JOHN R. SCHULTZ
started as usher at the Warner Theatre in Erie, Pa., and in one year was promoted to chief of service. His next job was that of assistant manager at Warner's Columbia, also in Erie. Returning to the Warner house he acted as assistant there. He was then promoted to manage the Liberty Theatre in Sharon, Pa., from where he now communicates.

RAY W. BOWMAN is the assistant manager of Schine's Ritz and Tiffin Theatres in Tiffin, Ohio. He started his work in theatres by acting as a doorman at the Ritz in 1937 and the following year was promoted to chief of service. In 1939 he secured his present position and it is obvious that Ray will go places from the strides he has been making.

FRANK SLAVIK
began as an usher in 1928 at the Ideal Theatre in Mingo Junction, Ohio. When the theatre burned down three years later he went on to work at the Auditorium, in the same sector, as doorman. In 1935 he was promoted to manage the Brilliant Theatre in Ohio, being employed there for three years. The next spot for Frank was the Palace in Salineville, in the same state, being transferred from that house to the Alpine in Hundred, W. Va.

NELSON D. McCOLLOM
dates the beginning of his theatre experience as 1928, his first job being that of an usher in the Palace Theatre, Gary, Ind. Two years later, upon being graduated from high school he left the house to follow a musical career, only to return to act as assistant manager of the Gary, in the same city. Shortly after he was transferred, in the same capacity, to the Palace. In 1936 he attained the position of manager at the Tivoli and is doing a grand job of work there.

BILLY PRATT
is manager of the Paramount Theatre in Atlanta, Georgia, one of the houses of Lucas and Jenkins circuit. He started as page boy at the Fox Theatre in 1929 working there until 1934, at which time he went to usher at the Paramount house. He returned to the Fox in 1935 as chief of service and the next year acted as treasurer, then as assistant manager under our good friend "Whit" Whitaker. Once more he came on to the Paramount, this time as manager of the house. We have had the pleasure of meeting up with Billy at Round Table headquarters a couple of years back and anticipate his next visit.

RANDOLPH LEE HALL
entered showbusiness as an assistant manager at the Aztec Theatre in Van Alstyne, Texas, remaining for but a period of six months. However, he was away for only a short while and upon his return secured the skipper's post at the same house. Randolph likes his job and aims to "stick."

JOHN A. SCHWALM
has been actively engaged in the moving picture business for over thirty-two years. In 1906 he opened the Electric Theatre, Dayton, Ohio, and a year later went on to Reading, Penna., to open the Victor house there. The Bijou and Dreamland, at South Bethlehem, Penna., were his next ventures, followed by the Jewel in Easton, in the same state. Returning to Dayton, John was at the Jewel then moved to the Theatorium at Richmond, Indiana. Subsequently his duties were enacted at the Jewel, Hamilton, Ohio, Imperial Feature Film Co., Pittsburgh, Penna., Jefferson and Grand Theatres in Hamilton, Ohio. At present, we find John at the Rialto in Hamilton, where he is holding down a managerial post.

A. J. KALBERER
manages both the Indiana and the Liberty Theatres in Washington, Indiana. Back in 1916 Kal started as candy butcher at the Family Theatre, Lafayette, Indiana and two years later became a manager. He did exploitation work for Fox Film Corporation from 1919 to 1921, thereafter, until 1929 acting as manager for Fort Wayne theatres. Going to Indianapolis he secured the Lyric Theatre, staying on for a couple of years. His following circuit was Skouras and he was employed at the Fox, San Diego, Calif. Just before he came on to his present situation he was at the Strand in Louisville from 1936 to 1938.

LEROY J. BOUDREAU
manages the Grant Theatre in Eveleth, Minn. Over ten years ago he entered showbusiness, when he secured an usher's post at Keith's Theatre in Washington, D. C. Moving to the Belasco, also in Washington, he again acted as usher, rising to chief usher a while later. Leroy then went on to Aitkin, Minn., and served at the Rialto Theatre, there, as usher, doorman and assistant manager.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Col.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as offically given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

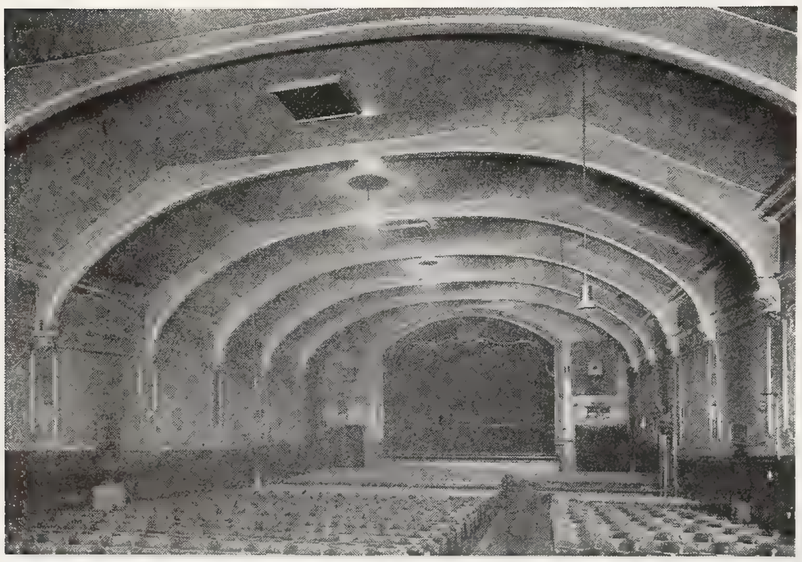
SALVAGING an OLD BRITISH THEATRE



Auditorium of the original theatre, called Smart's.

■ A suggestive example of effective remodeling from England. Above is pictured the modern auditorium of the new Rex in Bethnal Green Road, London, fashioned ingeniously from an antiquated theatre, called Smart's, which long had been in the service of the motion picture. The ceiling beams of the old construction, reinforced by order of the municipal authorities, suggested a full arch treatment, with the walls drawn by the design into the ceiling, first by form, as in the stepped cornices, and also by ornamentation. Incidentally, the full arch form, by reducing the total cubage and by eliminating high areas at the sides, substantially simplifies ventilation. Through the effect of angular recesses, the ceiling attains continuity with cornices, and the arch form is given full decorative value. Walls and ceiling are entirely of plaster, with a background of dove grey spattered with peach and gold. The wall panels are stencilled in an abstract pattern in venetian red, emerald green and brown. Fluted pilaster features are gold and peach. Grilles are decorated in blue, green, gold and russet. The dado is speckled brown, made of linoleum for durability. Illumination is provided by downlighting concealed within the ceiling grille and by a large, centrally located ceiling fixture, as well as by footlights reflected from the proscenium curtain. . . . The 814 new chairs, arranged in a one-floor, two-aisle plan, are upholstered in wine-colored material. Aisle carpet is of a matching red background with emerald green pattern. The proscenium curtains are champagne-color . . . The Rex theatre is located in an eastern suburban area of London and is owned by H. B. N. Picture Houses, Ltd., of which Ken Nyman is manager. George Coles was the architect.

Fluorescent Carpeting Warner House Feature

CARPETING THAT glows in the dark has been added to the theatre's bag of decorative tricks. It received its official introduction with the opening June 15, of Warner Brothers' newest theatre in Washington, D. C., the Kennedy. The theatre, which was designed by John Eberson, seats 900, and is treated in a modern, colorful style.

The fluorescent carpeting, a development of Alexander Smith & Sons, is used only in the auditorium, and the "black," or ultraviolet, light sources necessary to make the carpet pattern visible in the dark, are confined to the aisles.

The end standards of the seating, which is by the Ideal Seating Company, have been designed with special light boxes, each standard having two 2½-watt General Electric argon glow lamps. These lamps have the advantage of being relatively inexpensive in both initial cost and operation, and of requiring no special transformer installation. In the Kennedy installation, however, the activating energy thus produced is regarded by some observers as being insufficient to give the carpeting its fully effective fluorescence. Inasmuch as the next size of available sources of "black light" is 100 watts, requiring transformer equipment, further development of the innovation, it is believed, will be concerned with the design of the light box.

The carpeting, which is predominantly red and green, is a Velvet weave to the pigments of which fluorescent materials have been added. The fluorescent materials are permanently impregnated in the yarn and are not affected, it is said, by dust and dirt to an extent greater than that characteristic of regular carpeting.

[The Kennedy theatre will be described and pictured in the July 22nd issue.]

Auditorium Lighting Needs Being Studied

STUDY OF auditorium lighting, including image intensity and light levels in the area surrounding the screen, has been begun by the Projection Practice Committe of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, of which Harry Rubin, supervisor of projection for Paramount, is chairman. A special subcommittee has been appointed to carry on the work.

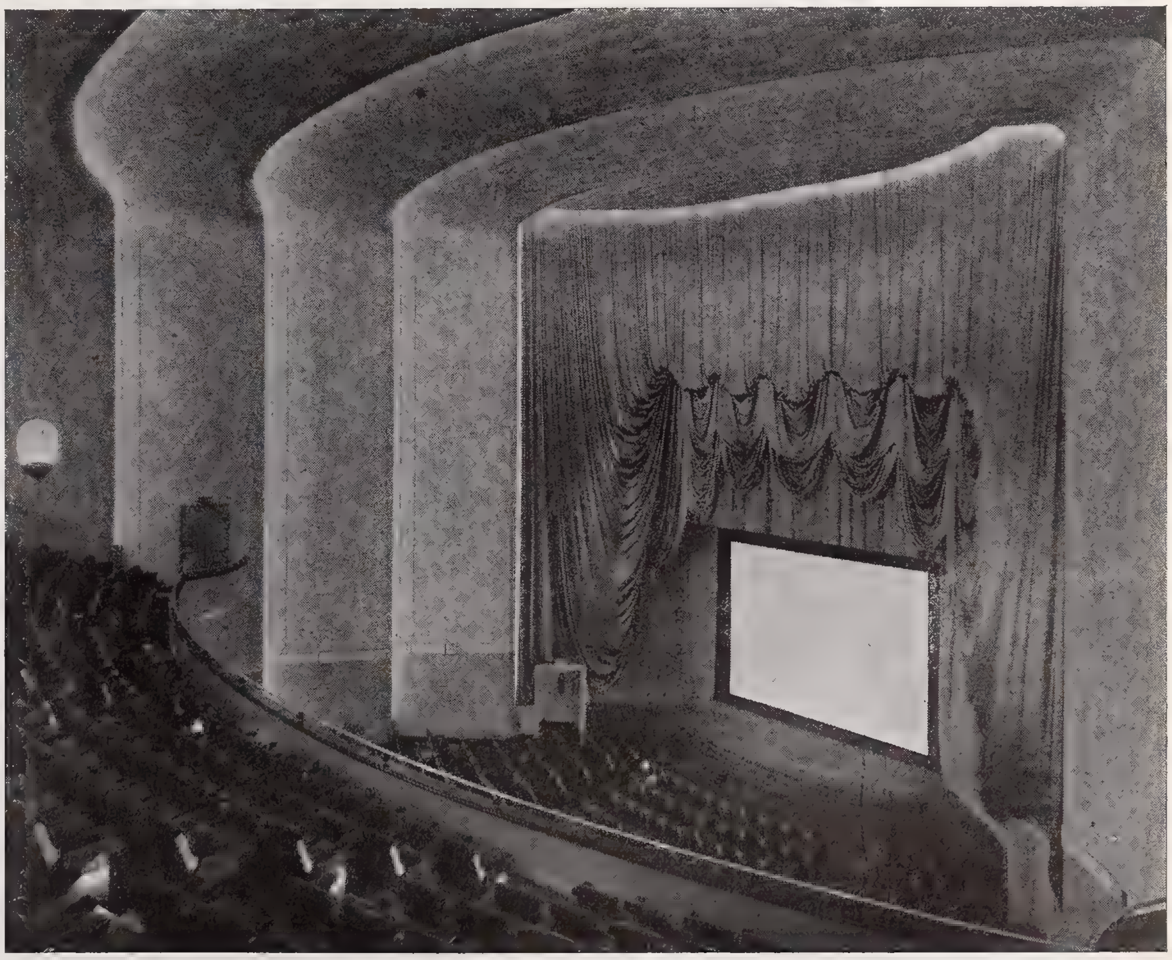
Also a part of the aggregate problem, but more directly concerned with the effectiveness of the projected image, is the treatment of the area immediately around the screen. There have been many objections to the masking of the screen and complete darkening of the surrounding area, and it is expected that the new Projection Practice Committee studies will develop data on this issue, which has bearing also upon the broader problem of general auditorium lighting.

The special subcommittee, which is continuing its sessions through the summer for the purpose of preparing a report to the fall convention of the SMPE, is composed of Charles Horstman, Earl Morin, Ben Schlanger, James Frank, Jr., Robert French and Donald Hyndman, president of the Society.

From the Greek Stadium To the Film's Esquire

THE STRUCTURE developed for the exhibition of motion pictures is given prominent recognition in the new edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica. As a part of the treatment of the history of the theatre and its arts, beginning with the Greeks; the Esquire theatre in Chicago, which was opened in 1938, is dealt with in a full page of pictures, with descriptive captions. The Esquire, which was designed by W. L. Pereira, Chicago architect, in association with Pereira & Pereira, theatre consultants, was selected as an example of modern functional planning of theatres. It is owned by a corporation of which Harry, Elmer and A. J. Balaban are the sole stockholders. It is not affiliated with Balaban & Katz, however, or any other circuit.

Seating 1,400, the Esquire is of lofty, sleek-lined modern design with a facade of brick, granite and aluminum, and an interior of modern patterns executed in mahogany veneer and plaster accentuated by light from both coves and fixtures. The Britannica pictures consist in views of the front, the main foyer (called a "music foyer"), the staircase leading to the balcony, and the auditorium.



Auditorium of H. & E. Balaban's Esquire theatre in Chicago, which is pictured in the new edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica as an example of modern functional theatre planning.

Simple Rules of Good Carpeting

Citing some do's and dont's, also a trick or two, in carpeting the theatre

By NORMAN PATTERSON

THE AMOUNT of money you wish to spend determines the quality of the flooring fabrics you put into your theatre. The pattern and color selection are entirely in your hands and it is up to you, no matter how much you invest in carpeting, to get the maximum in showmanship out of your purchase. A good showman knows his community and books his films accordingly. How about trying to book the proper carpeting effect for your theatre?

Although most people do not walk around the theatre with the eyes and nose of an interior decorator, you can be sure that they are more discriminating than ever, and remember it is the attention you pay to the details that finally determines the sum total of decorative atmosphere in the theatre. In other words you are either well dressed or sloppily dressed, regardless of the money spent. The most expensive carpeting can be sloppy-looking if it is not in scale or of a "becoming" style.

Striking patterns are not enough—the point is, do they strike the right balance? Patterns can be large or small, but it is their proper application that makes for striking effect, and that's why people prefer to see the same picture in a theatre that is attractive, but not in any way garish.

Here is an example or two:

On the other hand in the mezzanine lounge of the same theatre (Figure 1A), identical design and pattern size carpeting is used. Here the overall effect is not nearly as interesting as in the foyer downstairs. The ceiling and walls, decorated sparingly so as to give the illusion of greater height and width, are adversely affected by the size of the carpet design. Harmoniously in balance in the lobby, but now confined to the narrow width of the mezzanine floor, the large carpet pattern makes the ceiling appear still lower. Even the large furniture placed directly on the flooring fabric is insufficient to overcome the visual intrusion of the large pattern. The design in itself is well chosen and correct, but it is simply too big for the area involved, and its value is accordingly minimized.

It so happens that the mill that looms this particular fabric has a large investment in the design shown. Its use in a carpet for theatres is not the result of mere accident or convenience. Designers, interior decorators, architects and other competent specialists were consulted during its development. The problems arising from the use of identical size of pattern in the theatre were thoroughly studied. Situa-

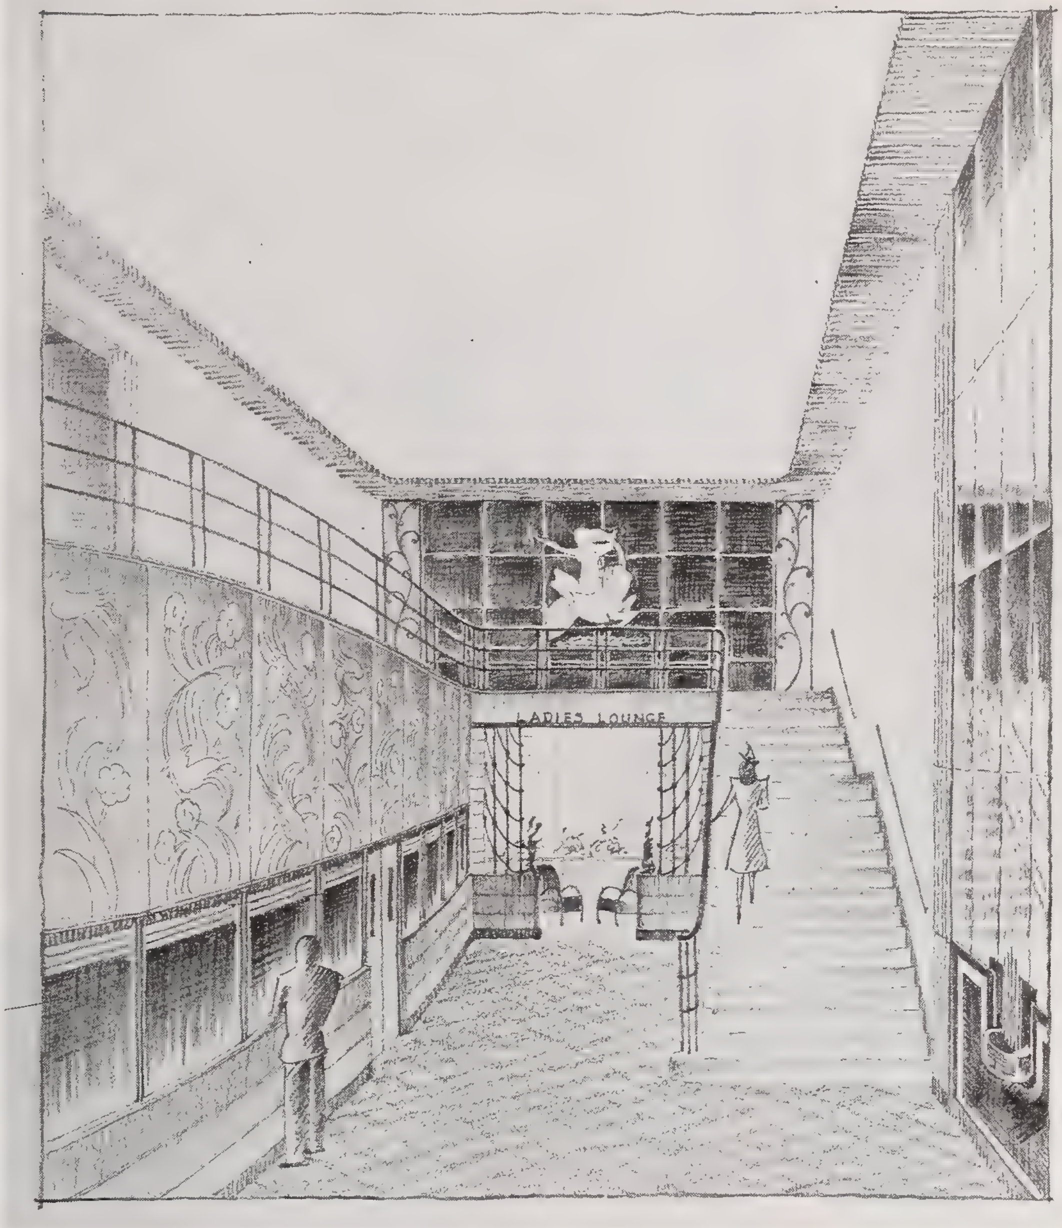
inside the theatre

❡ Modern in its very newness as an industrial development, architectural glass is widely used for theatre fronts. But newer forms, as well as the familiar types, make glass just as adaptable to the theatre interior



■ Design for a foyer which suggests the use of various types of decorative architectural glass, as well as other features of interior treatment. Mr. Burton, by way of offering an example, has suggested colored opaque glass over the standee rail, with sandblasted figures, a ceiling-high mirror and a colored opaque glass panel on the balcony. His other suggestions are blue-gray walls, a vermilion wainscot, white metal railings and grilles, wine red carpeting, and a ceiling, light blue in color, with cove lighting. Note the drinking fountain as mirror base.

PRESENTING A GROUP OF ORIGINAL DESIGNS

by Charles C. Burton

THE USE of glass architecturally is one of the most striking developments of the industrial research of our day. It is a development which theatre design already has taken advantage of, as witness the widespread and effective application of architectural glass tiles for the facing of fronts, and of glass blocks for facade trim, box office bases, and so on.

But glass is as well adapted to the interior of the theatre. New types have been produced which provide decorative qualities in themselves while serving functional purposes growing out of various possible illumination and space problems. Such use of glass inside the theatre is illustrated in the accompanying group of original designs by Charles C. Burton, architect and engineer for the Paramount Theatres Service Corporation. Following are the essential characteristics of the decorative forms of glass which have been the inspiration of these treatments.

❡ Decorative Types

Vitrolux is a heat-strengthened, polished plate glass with the added feature of vitreous color, fused into one surface, and can be either translucent or opaque. It is approximately five times as strong as ordinary plate glass and will withstand about 40 times as much sudden blunt impact. Vitrolux is highly resistant to sudden changes in temperature (molten lead can be poured upon its surface without damage while it rests on a cake of ice). It can be bent through an angle of 20° to form curved surfaces. These properties make Vitrolux applicable to uses in which durability, strength, color and diffusion of light are deisrable.

■ Design for a general lounge in which glass of various types may be used. Mr. Burton has suggested a wainscot of light red opaque glass, dark red pilasters of the same material, arranged in moulded strip formation; a center panel of translucent pattern glass to which is attached a chrome figure of a ship; and blue glass mirrors over the doors. With such a treatment, a carpet of tan and red, and furniture covered in rust with black trim, are suggested. Note also the use of artificial plants.

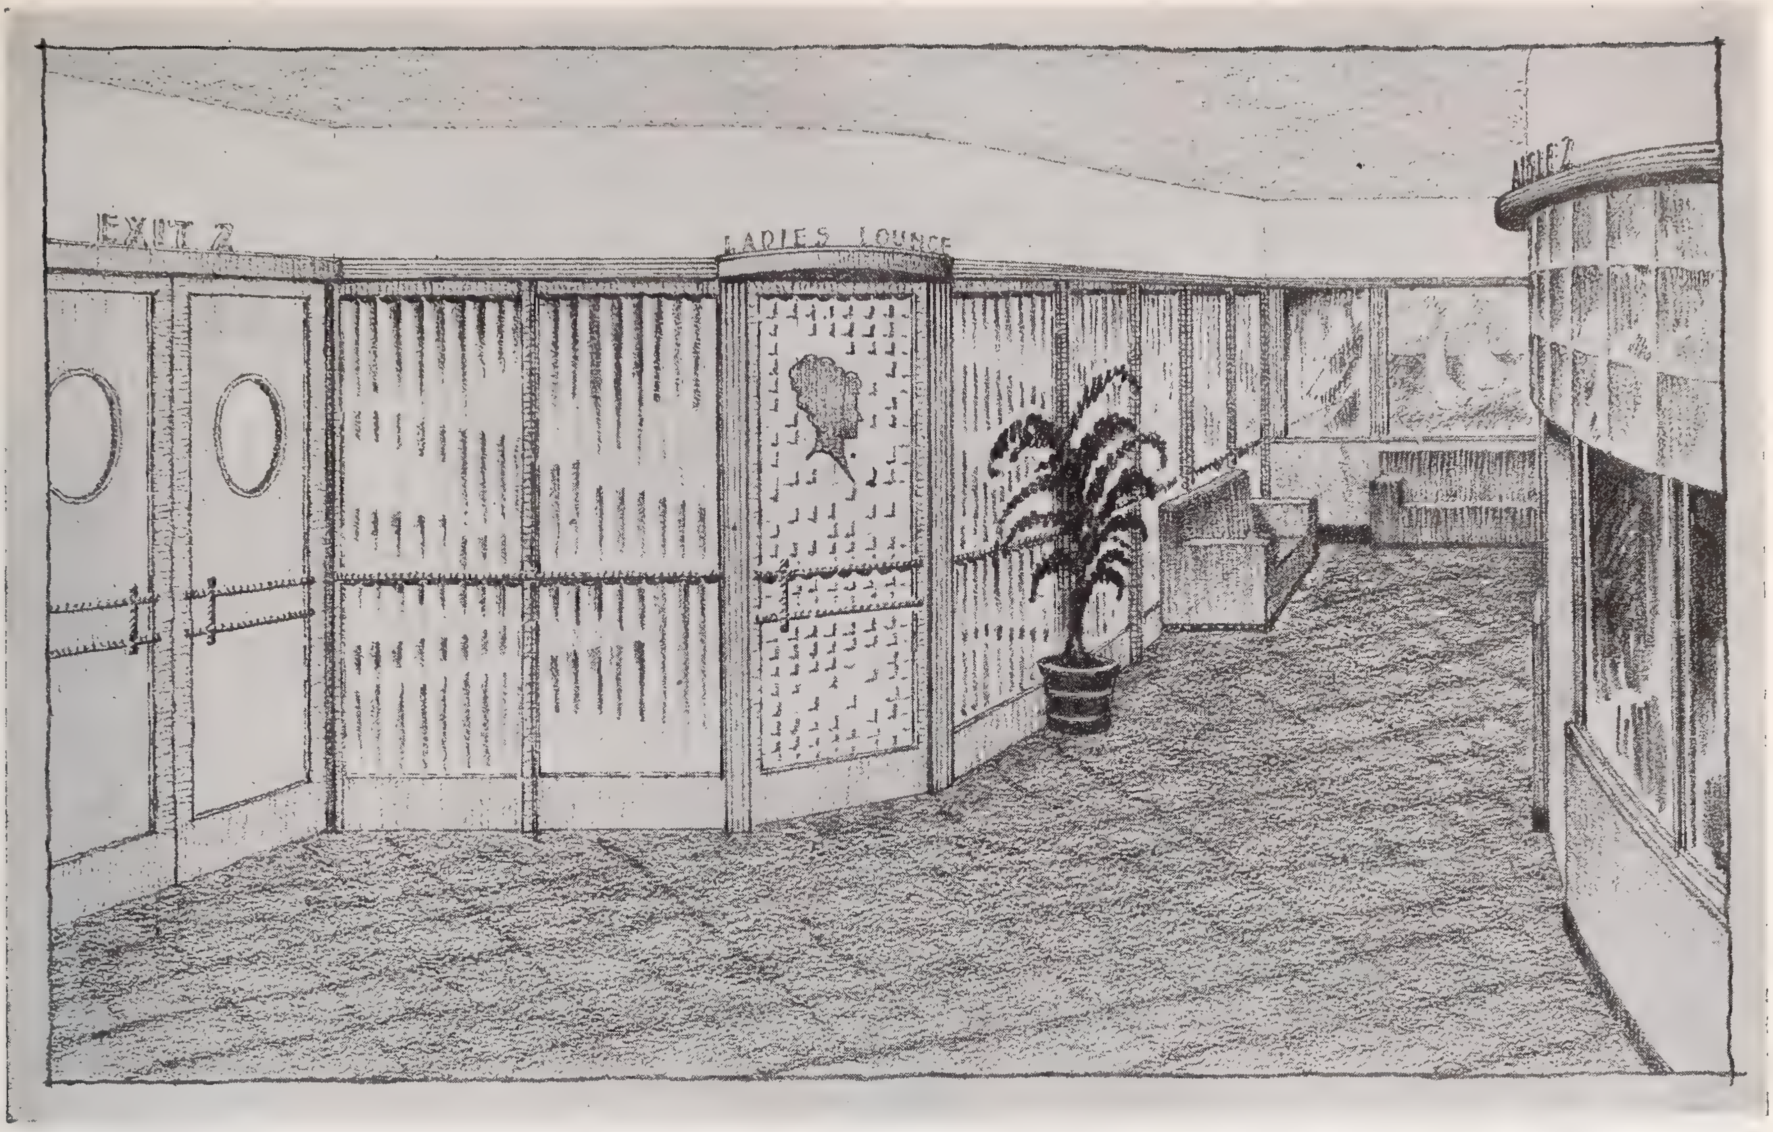
Vitrolux is available in eighteen translucent, and nine opaque (no light transmission) colors, and other colors may be obtained on special order. The coloring is produced by fusing ground glass into one surface during the tempering process, so that the color becomes an integral part of the glass and will show no change with age. Letters or designs in a different color (for example, a woman's head in an illuminated door to a women's lounge) can be fused into one surface so they will be silhouetted when light passes through the glass. Such designs can be translucent or opaque—translucent Vitrolux appears as colored opaque glass by daylight.

Fluted Pattern

Fultex is a new type of flat glass designed to produce light and line. One surface is flat, the other consists of a series of adjoining convex flutees 1 inch wide, each being in effect an elongated magnifying glass.. It is highly suitable for "privacy partitions" in the interiors of fine buildings, transmitting a high percentage of diffused light, hence is adapted to walling off lounge areas, for example, from foyers. It can be installed in large panes, single or double glazed. It weighs approximately 3½ pounds per square foot polished.

FLUTEX: Vertical



■ This design represents an attack upon the problem of providing lounge space—and a women's lounge is usually essential—when space is at a premium. By the use of a partition of translucent pattern glass, Mr. Burton has here walled over such lounge area from the remainder of the foyer. A room of sufficient privacy, yet one that is essentially a part of the foyer, is thus introduced. Mr. Burton further suggests a vermilion wainscot, beige leather doors to aisles, marine blue carpet.

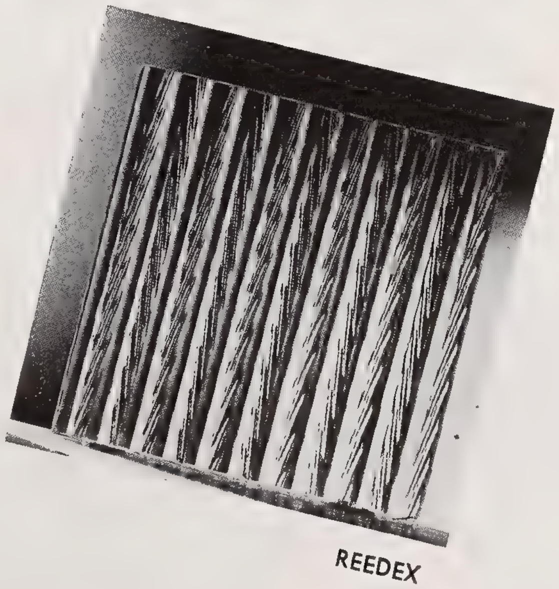
Line and Square Effects

Louvrex glass, designed with a directional pattern, resembles a series of louver strips, as in Venetian blinds. The ribs forming the pattern are one inch wide. It is made in three finishes—polished, plain and "satinol."

Single-glazed Louvrex allows sweeping expanses of horizontal or vertical lines. Double glazed Louvrex produces a checkerboard effect (or parallelograms) if one sheet is imposed at an angle. "Satinol" finish increases diffusion and affords soft, restful illumination.

Louvrex may be used to screen off a portion of a room while at the same time maintaining the effect of size for the room. It is adapted to decorative partitions, to the trimming of columns and pilasters and to windows of lounges. It weighs approximately 3½ pounds per square foot polished, and 2½ pounds in "satinol" finish. Maximum size of panes is 54 by 136 inches.

FLUTEX: Diagonal Effect

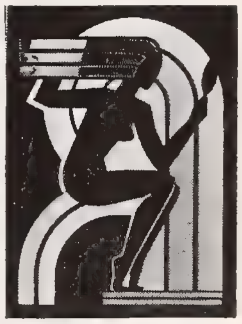


REEDEX

Reed Pattern

Reedex glass has a pattern made up of a series of half-inch corrugations, with a herringbone design on the ridges. Viewed as a whole, the pattern produces a reed-like effect. Reedex diffuses slightly more than Flutex or Louvrex and it is rated high in light transmission.

It is produced in three types—fire polished, mechanically ground and polished, and "satinol"-processed on the flat side.



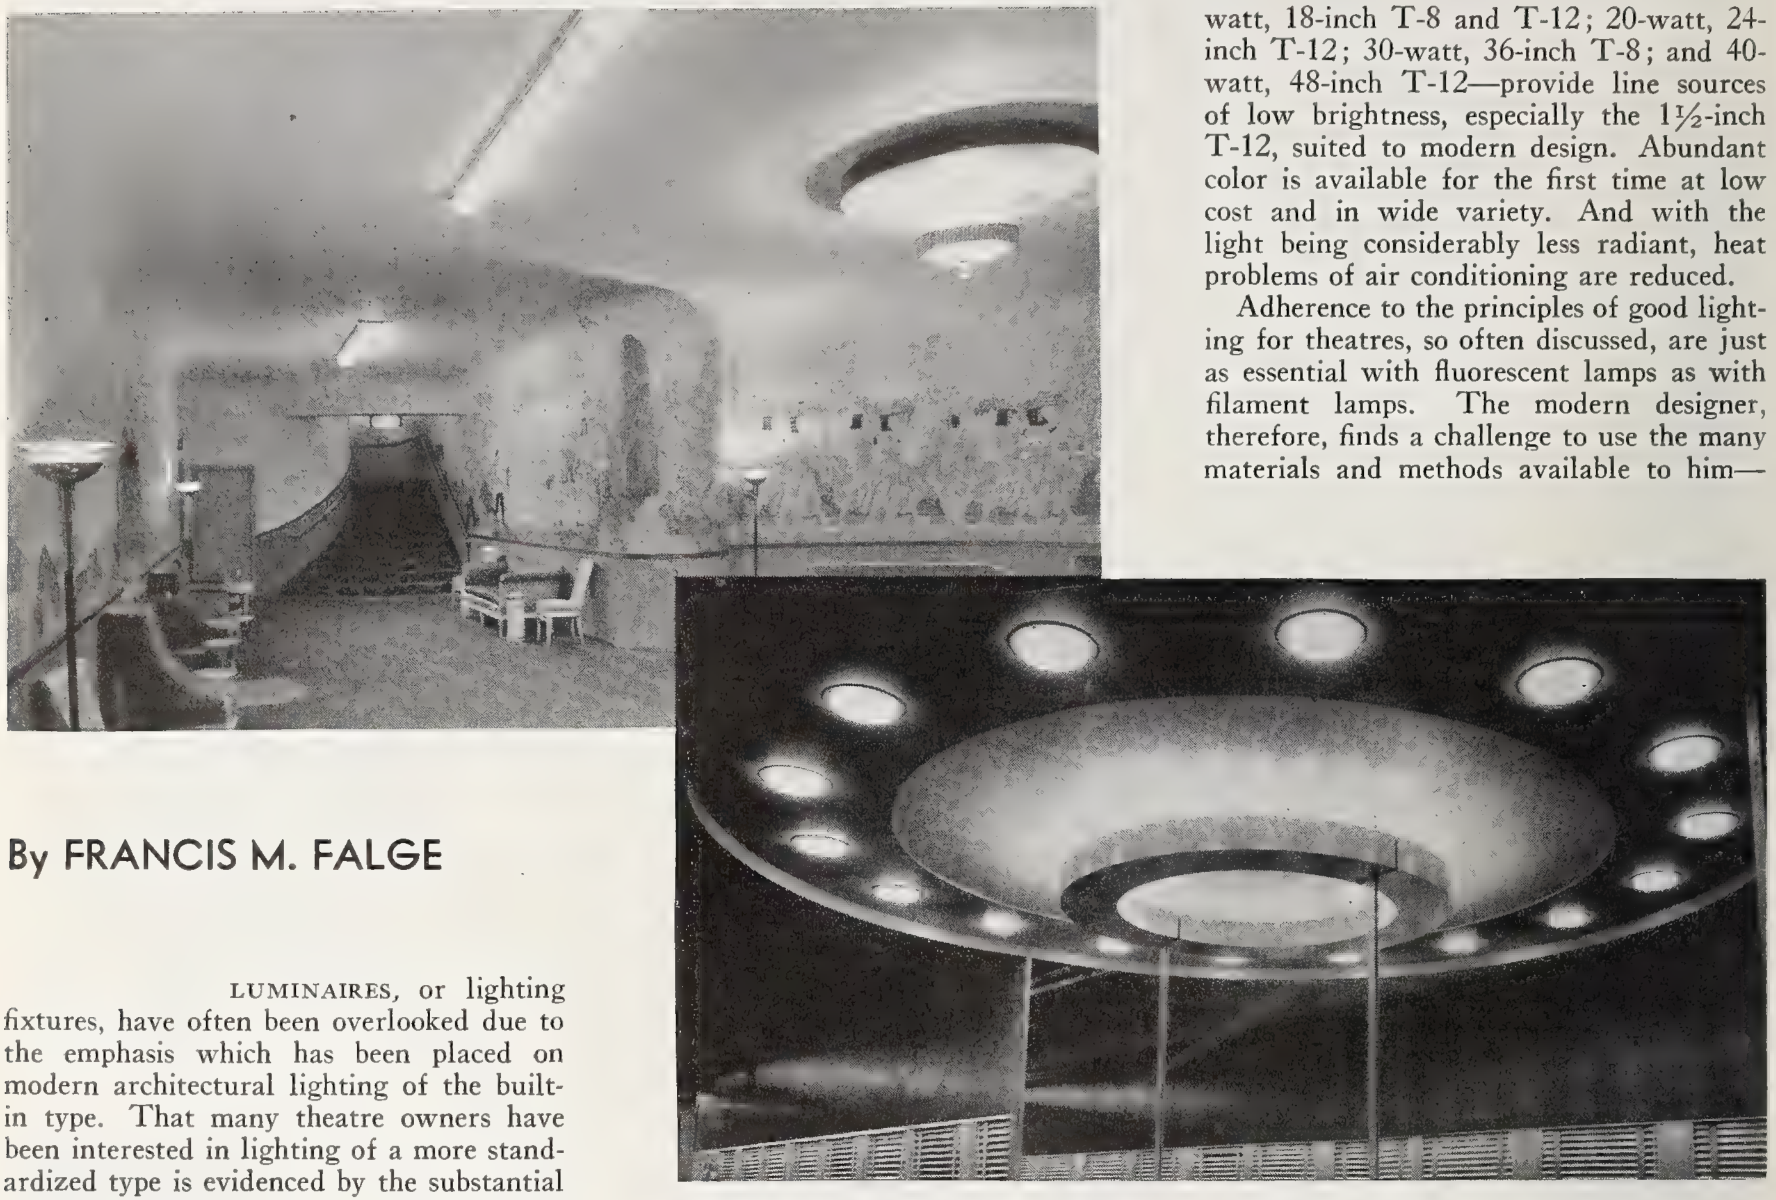
Design for sandblasted figure in opaque flat glass suitable for door to women's lounge.

Opaque Flat Glass

Also adapted to Mr. Burton's interior designs (see captions) is the structural glass used for the facing of theatre fronts (and familiar by now to many theatre operators under such trade names as Vitrolite and Carrara). This type of achitectural glass, which is opaque, is available in a great variety of colors.

Modern Lighting with Fixtures

¶ Suggestions for the effective use of luminaires in today's theatre schemes

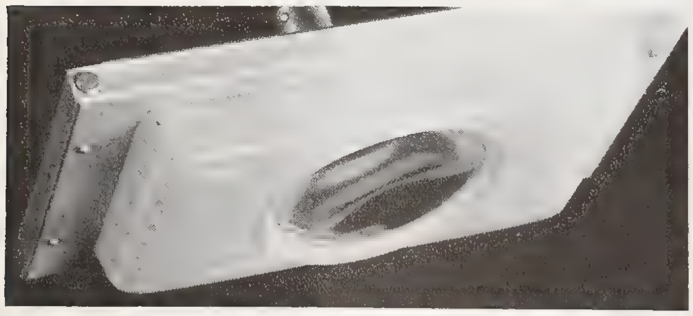


Standard-type glass bowls as employed by Henry Dreyfus to form a modern decorative effect with trough lighting over the bar of the New York Central's Mercury. The top view is of the lounge of the Colony theatre in Cleveland, showing a combination of styles of luminaires executed by the Rambusch Decorating Company from designs by John Eberson, architect of the Colony.

By FRANCIS M. FALGE

LUMINAIRES, or lighting fixtures, have often been overlooked due to the emphasis which has been placed on modern architectural lighting of the built-in type. That many theatre owners have been interested in lighting of a more standardized type is evidenced by the substantial sale of luminous element fixtures using staves of flashed-opal glass, or similar types with multiple color circuits. Many of the more pretentious theatres, too, have made excellent use of custom-made luminaires which harmonize well with the architecture of the theatre.

Custom-made luminaires are often found to be too expensive by many theatre owners. On the other hand, the familiar standardized luminous-element type luminaires have often failed to provide the quantity and quality of light for the various theatre locations. Other standard luminaires of various types should meet the needs of that large group of theatres lying in the range between the larger, more pretentious houses and the small ones.



One of the newer luminaires, used on streamlined trains, and as well adapted to theatre standee areas, stair wells, lounges.

With the wealth of new materials now available, wide possibilities lie open to us for new technique in luminaire design. In an accompanying tabulation are indicated some of the materials obtainable, with their responses to light.

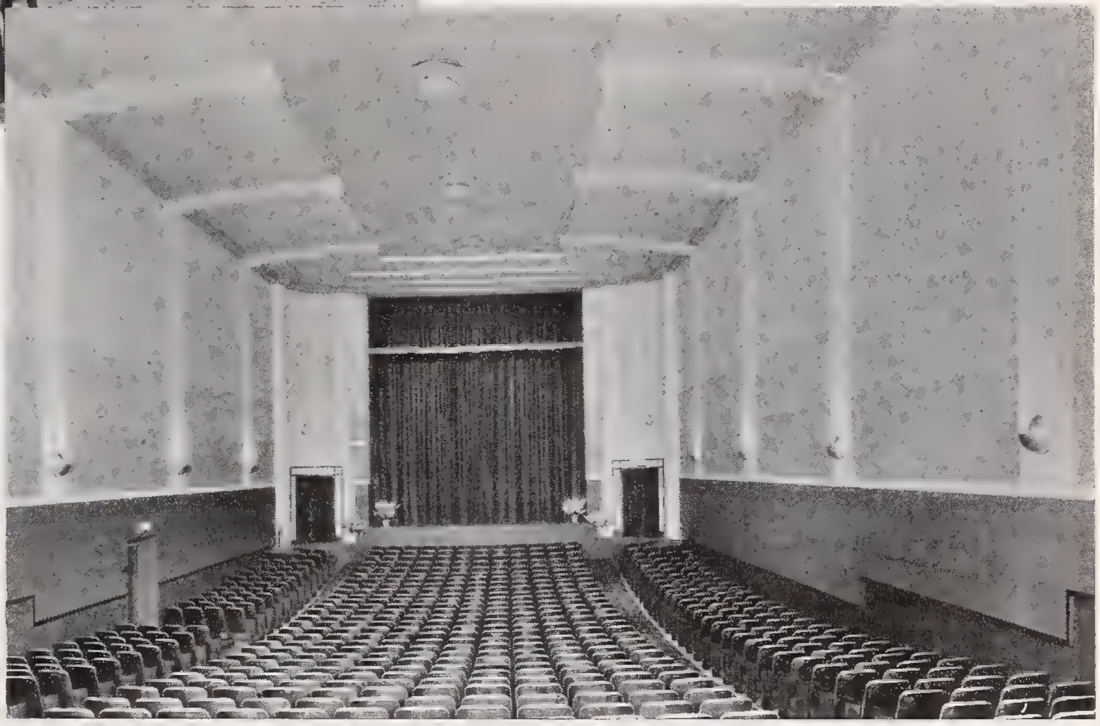
The fluorescent lamps, now available in seven colors—white, daylight, green, gold, red, pink, and blue—offer excellent possibilities in combination with filament lamps for application with these materials. The sizes—15-watt, 18-inch T-8 and T-12; 20-watt, 24-inch T-12; 30-watt, 36-inch T-8; and 40-watt, 48-inch T-12—provide line sources of low brightness, especially the 1½-inch T-12, suited to modern design. Abundant color is available for the first time at low cost and in wide variety. And with the light being considerably less radiant, heat problems of air conditioning are reduced.

Adherence to the principles of good lighting for theatres, so often discussed, are just as essential with fluorescent lamps as with filament lamps. The modern designer, therefore, finds a challenge to use the many materials and methods available to him—indirect lighting, edgelighting, luminous panels, coffers, etc. At the same time, filament lamps, reflector and projector lamps, etc., may often be combined with fluorescent lamps to produce the desired aesthetic or utilitarian effect.

Ideas from Other Fields

The theatre has had its share of ingenuity in the application of unusual lighting effects, but it can also profit by the experiences of other fields which have attracted the interest of the best modern designers. As an example, an interesting treatment by Henry Dreyfus for the New York Central's Mercury, shown in an accompanying photograph, consists in an ingenious application of simple diffusing bowls to create a modern decorative pattern. In the field of transportation much pioneering has been done in the development of standard luminaires which combine good design with efficiency. Many such examples are to be noted on our modern streamlined trains.

A luminaire suitable to a foyer or lobby, using a mirror reflector and combining an indirect bowl with a lumiline-lighted, decorative glass cylinder.



These installations illustrate several effective, yet simple, devices discussed in the text. In the upper view is shown standard luminaires combined with coffers to provide an attractive modern architectural effect, yet with low cost because only a few large, efficient lamps are used. In the above view, which is of the Uptown theatre in Kalamazoo, mirrored side-wall urns are combined with pin-hole downlights to provide the auditorium with adequate "seeing" illumination.

The use of standard luminaires, or glassware, with an architectural treatment that ties the units together into an interesting design, should solve many problems.

Illustrated in an accompanying photograph, is a technique, used here in a lounge, of placing indirect luminaries in coves or coffers designed to produce interesting highlights. Such a method provides a modern and unusual effect, and in addition has practical advantages over the use of an inexpensive standard luminaire. The single, higher-wattage lamp used in each fixture is more efficient than are many smaller lamps. Since only one lamp and one socket are used per unit, initial wiring and maintenance costs are reduced.

Many similar applications are possible with various shapes of coffers and the use, for example, of several luminaires per coffer. There are many kinds of luminaires applicable for this purpose—completely indirect ones, those with light reflected to the outside of the luminaire, with light reflected to color the luminaire, and glass and plastic decorative types which become completely luminous.

A somewhat similar but less expensive system utilizes the same luminaires, but with a flush ceiling on which are applied chrome mouldings of various types arranged in circles, lines or other forms. Such patterns can produce a more interesting result than a flat ceiling will provide.

Auditorium Side Walls

The side walls of the auditorium offer the practical advantage that the lighting equipments located there are readily serviced. From the lighting standpoint, however, it is not so favorable because the luminaires are close to the line of vision. Thus they are likely to be glaring and distracting unless provision is made for directing the illumination in such a manner as to reduce the brightness to a value below that of the screen itself (values of around 5 foot-lamberts are satisfactory—a footlambert is, in simple terms, a foot-candle multiplied by the reflection or transmission factor of the material involved). Well-spread indirect units or large diffusing-glass areas provide low brightnesses, but in this case the wattage must be so low that the luminaire becomes primarily a decorative element and contributes little to the useful "seeing" illumination in an auditorium. Similarly, indirect wall urns, for example, produce bright spots on the wall near the units. The wall surfaces are often darkened to light, but here again wattages must be kept low.

A method which permits the use of considerably more light without objectionable glare is to install a mirror immediately above the indirect cavity (see photographs on this page, of the Uptown theatre, and of the wall fixture, on page 30). All light is then directed upward, and due to reflection it is impossible for people to see the reflected light sources unless they look from above the unit—an impractical condition, of course.

Such luminaires may be simple units, as shown, or they may be combined with

Purveying Luxury to Theatregoers In a Small Rural Town

• Although Wisconsin Rapids has a population of only 9,000, Frank and Henrietta Eckhardt have opened their third theatre there, and one notable for an interior fashioned with a generous hand and good taste.

WHEN FRANK and Henrietta Eckardt planned their third theatre for Wisconsin Rapids, a small town in central Wisconsin, they were able to draw on personal experience with show business dating back to 1913. In 1923 Mr. and Mrs. Eckardt bought their first theatre in Wisconsin Rapids, the Palace, which they have since remodeled from time to time so that today it is up to date in every respect. In 1927 they bought the Rapids in the same city. That theatre likewise has been progressively remodeled. It was with this background that Mr. and Mrs. Eckardt projected plans for their new house, named the Wisconsin, and located in the business section of the city, which has a population of approximately 9,000 and is a rural trading center and shipping point.

The theatre, designed by Donn Hougen, local architect who redesigned the remodeled theatres of Mr. and Mrs. Eckardt, is built on an L-shaped plan which includes a three-story former bank building, now housing a large lobby with lounges above; and a new structure for the auditorium,

The front, formerly the facade of a bank building, now is faced with glass and porcelain enamel, with neon also contributing to the design.

The lobby (below) occupies the ground area of the existing building. A built-in seat arrangement, with a mural, is the dominant decorative feature.

foyer area, equipment rooms and office. With the theatre area having a total cubage of 285,000, and with prevailing wages 50c for common labor, $1.25 for masons, and $1 for carpenters, the aggregate construction cost was $60,000. New construction is of cinder-cement block with brick facing, steel roof trusses and 20-year bonded asbestos roof. The owners report the equipment cost at $20,000, including air-conditioning.

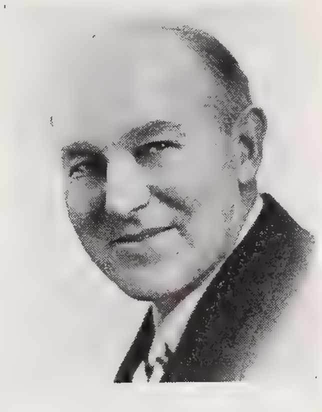
The Front

The new front has a base course, three feet high, of rainbow granite, topped by structural glass in dubonnet color and sun tan as high as the marquee. Chromium trim is used on doors, display frames, ticket booth and store show window. The ticket booth is faced with a granite base course and structural glass, including a black glass deal plate. Its less conspicuous portions are pine, painted oyster white. The ticket booth extends into the lobby, where an inner window allows patrons to buy their tickets inside during severe winter weather.

Above the marquee, across the second story, the building has been faced with tan porcelain enamel trimmed in horizontal porcelain enamel stripes of dubonnet, red and green; and similar striping, with three lines of neon between, forms a cornice effect across the front of the building parallel with cornices in the design of the original building. Illumination has been further used to meet existing architectural conditions in the placement of recessed reflector lamps in the lintels of each of the second-story windows, which thus do not appear at night as dark openings unpleasantly intruding into the front architectural treatment.

The marquee, centered on the building rather than the entrance (see plan) is surmounted by a vertical sign cylindrical in shape. Rising the height of the building, the sign is capped by a ball studded with incandescent lamps flashed to give a revolving effect. The sign carries green channel letters, outlined in red neon, on a yellow field, while down its front a line of lamps extends from the ball to the rounded and lamped edge of the marquee.

The marquee soffit is lighted by widely spaced rows of yellow incandescent lamps.



Mr. and Mrs. Eckhardt

The splayed sides of the marquee consist wholly in silhouette letter attraction boards with recessed neon trim at each end. Display frames are chromium, and the cases are lighted by concealed lumiline lamps.

The Lobby

The lobby, occupying almost all of the ground floor of the original structure (see plan) is a spacious room decoratively created in the manner of a foyer, except that the floor is entirely in asphalt tile laid on concrete. Modern in style, it has plasterd walls painted salmon color with bands of oyster white and green. From the ceiling, which is also painted salmon color, are suspended five metal lighting troughs, 4 feet wide and extending transversely from wall to wall. Each contains two parallel rows of white incandescent lamps and red neon tubes.

The lobby floor is left free for traffic, but built-in walnut seats with leather cushions are provided along one wall as part of a decorative feature dominated by a mural painting between two half-round walnut columns. This entire feature (see accompanying photograph) is surmounted by a continuous series of light boxes with louvred openings in the soffits.

There are display cases adjoining the columns and along the opposite wall.

The Foyer

The lobby opens upon one end of the foyer, where immediately to the left are stairs to a mezzanine level extending back over the lobby, on which are located a general lounge, men's and women's lounges and toilet rooms, and a "cry-room" glazed off from the auditorium. A manager's office is also located on this level, but is reached by stairs at the further end of the foyer, as is the projection room. Forming a corridor behind the auditorium, the foyer has plaster walls and ceiling in sand float finish; the walls are painted oyster white, with rust banding about half-way up from the floor; the ceiling pastel green. Midway down the foyer, opposite doors to the center aisle, is a decorative feature in connection with a wide settee; the settee sets beneath a mirror, which is flanked on either side by painted wall designs in modern fantastic patterns.

The ceiling above this feature is coffered into a rectangular panel with coves all around containing eighty 10-watt lamps spaced 6 inches on centers. Otherwise the foyer is illuminated by wall fixtures consisting in two lumiline lamps against a small mirror, spaced along the banding; and by a few ceiling drum-type fixtures which are equipped with translucent glass bottoms.

Carpeting begins here in a Velvet weave having a modern leaf pattern of gold and black flecked with dubonnet on a rust ground, which is used on all stairs, in the aisles and the lounges, excepting only the men's lounge.

The several pieces of furniture in the foyer, including the settee noted, are upholstered in soft fabrics and leatherette in terra cotta, eggshell and green, while drapes are pale green plush.

The Auditorium

Seating 800 on one floor, the auditorium has a four-bank seating plan with a maximum of only ten chairs to the row in the middle banks. The "cry-room" accommodates 22 patrons.

With walls finished in Celotex boards, the ceiling in plaster, the auditorium combines moderate ornamentation in paint with incandescent-fixture and neon lighting in a modern scheme in which the principal colors are yellow, green, rust and oyster white. Above a rust dado, the walls are painted in narrow bands, alternately yellow and green, on either side of a broader middle band of rust ornamented with a modernistically stylized leaf design in yellow and green. Painted pilaster-effects interrupt the bands, and on each of these (making a total of three to the side) is an ornamental luminaire of aluminum-finish metal and glass. At the rear wall 1-inch Celotex is laid over 2-inch Thermax; decorative treatment corresponds to that used on the side walls.

The ceiling begins at each side at plaster built-out coves, each containing two lines of neon, green and red. The proscenium arch is similarly bordered. Painted oyster white overall, the ceiling is unornamented except for green bands above and to the sides of a middle drop-panel extending from arch to rear, which acts as a light trough and also carries along its rust-painted soffit the air outlets. Alternating with these are recessed reflector light sources which are provided with diffusing glass covers.

The chairs, almost all of which are 20 inches wide, have end standards of modern pattern in jade green with ivory and silver trim; mohair backs, which are rust across and green at sides; and leatherette seats, which reverse the color-scheme of the backs, being green across and rust at the sides.

Stage curtains and drapes carry out the color scheme in jade green plush, copper-colored velvet, and eggshell damask. The curtain is a traveller controlled from the projection room.

The Lounges

The general lounge has plaster walls painted a shaded rose, and an off-white flat ceiling. Carpeted, as observed elsewhere, it has chairs and settees of walnut wood upholstered in mohair, Anvers, and leatherette, alone and in combination, in dubonnet, tan, green and eggshell. Lighting is by metal and glass fixtures.

Both the men's and women's lounges adjoining are finished in plaster. The women's lounge, or cosmetic room, is noted elsewhere [page 23]. Walls of the men's lounge are painted green with a wide gold band; the ceiling is white. The floor is covered in asphalt tile in dark brown marble effect. Lighting is by a ceiling fixture. Furniture is of metal construction with cushions covered in brown and tan leatherette.

Projection

The projection room is 19 feet wide, 12 feet deep, and 8 feet high. Walls are hard plaster painted white throughout; the ceiling Celotex acoustic tile; the floor tan linoleum. Lighting is by ceiling bowls. Motor-generators are installed in a room in the basement. The screen image is 18 feet wide, projected at an angle of 10°. (See Equipment and Furnishings below for projection equipment.)

The Wisconsin theatre is completely air-conditioned, with all parts of the theatre interior served by the general ventilating system.

The Wisconsin theatre was built under a general contract by the M. E. Greenberg Company of Minneapolis.

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

Joe C. Hewitt of Robinson, Ill., has leased his Lincoln theatre, in Robinson, Ill., to the Frisina Amusement Company of Springfield.

The Griffith Amusement Company is remodeling a building in Sepulpa, Okla., into a theatre. Jimmy Zartaludes will be manager of the house.

The Lexington theatre, formerly operated by Warner Brothers in Chicago, has been taken over by the Indiana-Illinois circuit, according to Alex Manta, president. It will be thoroughly remodeled at a cost of about $50,000.

T. A. Little and A. B. Craver, both of Charlotte, N. C., have become sole owners of the Visulite theatre, suburban house. They bought the stock belonging to the Hofheimer interests of Norfolk, Va., operators of theatres in North Carolina and Virginia.

John Wolfberg, A. N. Abrams and High B. Downey have formed the Bell Theatre Corporation, with $5,000 authorized capital, to operate theatres in Kansas City.

John L. Guidry is president of a newly organized company called Black-Gold Theatres, Inc., in New Orleans. J. H. Summersgill is secretary and treasurer.

Billy Rose, Sid Conn and Julian B. Tuthill, of Hartford, Conn., have leased the 250-seat theatre in Hartford and have renamed it Conrose's Cinema City.

Earl Hewitt, who operates a theatre at Bethel, Ohio, has taken a ten-year lease on the Arcade theatre, at Georgetown, Ohio, from Mrs. Ida Purdum. They will remodel the interior.

Wallace Martin, assistant manager of the Palmetto theatre in Columbia, S. C., has been appointed manager of the new Five Points theatre now being constructed at Five Points. Warren Irvin, district manager of the Palmetto Theatre Company, who announced Mr. Martin's appointment, said that the new house would open soon. It is modern in style, has a seating capacity of approximately 700, and will have a complete air-conditioning system by Carrier.

Matt Saunders, manager of the Loew-Poli theatre in Bridgeport, Conn., has converted his outer and inner lobbies into a summer "garden," with white lattice-work made by the house carpenter covering the lower portions of the wall, and arching display frames and entrances. Growing vines and flowers are placed at frequent intervals along the wall space, and concealed green lights give a naturalistic effect. A central rock garden with blooming plants and lighting effects is also lattice-enclosed, and summer garden furniture and umbrellas are placed in the inner lobby.

The South Side theatre, a 350-seat house and the oldest theatre in Ironton, Ohio, which has been operated but a few times since the 1937 flood, in which it was considerably damaged, has been taken over by the Hunter Theatre Company of Huntington, W. Va. They will remodel the house and reopen it under the name of the Roxy.

General Electric Fluorescent MAZDA lamps are available in 18, 24, 36, and 48-inch lengths, several wattages, and seven colors including gold, pink, blue, green, red, white and daylight.

THE Associated Theatre Circuit's new 1600-seat Shore Theatre at 225th Street and Lake Shore Drive, Euclid, Ohio, offers a good example of the effective combination of both G-E Fluorescent MAZDA lamps and regular G-E MAZDA lamps to provide greater attraction value.

Lighted from behind with 28 daylight Fluorescent MAZDA lamps, the attraction letter sign stands out by contrast with the usual surroundings. The "Shore" sign is lighted with green fluorescent tubing. In addition, Fluorescent MAZDA lamps are used to excellent advantage in the lobby and other parts of the theatre. These new lamps offer theatres a wide variety of colors never before practicable. At the same time color changes are easily made.

The borders of the attraction letter sign lighted with 600—10 watt yellow incandescent lamps provide an effective contrast. In addition, three 500 watt G-E MAZDA lamps flood the theatre exterior above the marquee and 230—25 and 60 watt incandescent lamps are used under the marquee.

Paint and Painting

AN OUTLINE OF FACTS TO MEET THEATRE NEEDS

TO THE CASUAL glance all paints look pretty much alike, except for color. The process of painting also seems not to vary under different circumstances, but to involve nothing beyond running a brush over a given surface. Actually, paints differ tremendously; so do the requirements of painting.

An inferior paint, or one not suited to a given job, wastes far more than its own cost. It wastes the labor cost of applying it, which in most cases is much the larger figure. Under some circumstances, further and still greater losses may be involved.

Paint serves two purposes—decoration and protection of a surface. It may peel or crack either because it is not the right kind of paint, or was not rightly applied. If it does this when conditions of weather, patronage or both prevent prompt re-painting, the desired decorative effect is destroyed, and the surface to be protected is exposed to more or less serious deterioration. Depending on conditions, the losses involved in this way may add up to far more than the complete cost of several painting jobs.

There are some simple procedures for the testing of paints, and some very simple rules that govern the process of painting.

TYPES OF PAINTS

Paints, or more accurately, surface coating materials, are of three general kinds, used in different ways and serving different purposes, but interchangeable to some extent. These are paints (properly so called), varnishes and lacquers.

The basis of a paint is an oil which dries (oxidizes) on exposure to air. This may be linseed oil (boiled or raw) China wood or Tung oil, soya bean oil or certain fish oils, etc. When a drying oil is given maximum exposure to air by being spread in a thin layer it hardens into a tough, horny film which clings by reason of the fact that while still liquid it penetrated into the crevices and pores of the surface, and locked itself firmly in place on hardening.

Color is added in the form of a fine powder, called the pigment, which is "suspended" in the paint by grinding very much as mud may be suspended by stirring it in water. The mud will eventually settle to the bottom; gravel would settle quicker; the finer the particles the better they will remain in suspension. Pigment particles are ground to less than 1/300th inch in diameter.

All paints are diluted with turpentine or other thinner because in pure form they would be too stiff to work with. The thinner evaporates when the paint is applied.

The proportion of oil to pigment is varied according to whether a glossy finish or a "flat" finish is desired.

Paints contain "driers"—compounds of cobalt, lead, manganese or other metals, as a rule—which speed up the oxidation of the oil.

VARNISH

Varnish may consist of paint to which resin has been added. Natural resin is the fossilized gum of certain types of trees; it is now being largely replaced by synthetic resins which are more constant in quality. Varnish may also be the resin alone, in a suitable solvent, with or without addition of transparent coloring matter, but without pigment particles that would make it opaque. The use of the term varies somewhat, in the trade. So does the use of the term enamel, which may mean a varnish to which pigment has been added, or a paint to which resin gum has been added in quantities sufficient to produce a high gloss. Shellac is a special form of natural resin (an insect product) dissolved in alcohol.

LACQUERS

The term lacquer is also used in more than one way, but now generally means cellulose nitrate dissolved in acetone or other volatile solvent—essentially dissolved motion picture film which, when the solvent evaporates, forms a tough, durable coating.

Other materials that have come into use recently include bakelite-type varnishes, and the casein paints that have water as the essential portion of their vehicle.

SIMPLE PAINT TESTS

The primary factors in a paint are covering or hiding power, working quality, "running," drying quality, gloss and durability.

Covering power is tested in ordinary practice with the help of black-and-white checker boards, obtainable on request from some paint makers, to which a thin layer of paint is applied. For highly accurate comparisons small, measured quantities of two paints are applied with a very small brush to two such boards. The hiding power depends on the quantity and nature of the pigment.

Working quality is tested by painting a few square feet of obscure wall. The paint should be thin enough to allow the brush to work easily, avoiding waste of labor time.

Running is the condition of forming streaks or tear-drops, caused by improper boiling or incorrect ratios of pigment to oil. It is not related to the thickness or thinness of the paint, except in a very general way. A thick paint may run, and a thin one may not. This condition is also tested by a sample painting on a few feet of obscure surface.

Drying quality can be checked only over a period of time. Some cheap paints are diluted with non-drying oils in such quantity that they never oxidize completely, but

Theatre PLAN & FORM

THERE IS now a material available for use in connection with lighting which will allow a greater flexibility in the design of the interior of the motion picture theatre auditorium, and at the same time make possible economical design. This material is made of cellulose acetate and it comes in thicknesses of 1/16-inch and also somewhat thicker. Within the thickness of the material there appears a continuous arrangement of slanting black louvers, or "blinds," of minute thickness (This material is further described on page 31). These louvers can control the direction in which the light placed behind the material will travel.

Lighting fixtures can be made, the face of which could be flush with the ceiling or wall surfaces, to blend with the surface so that no special attention is drawn thereto. The light does not show from the fixture to those persons seated and viewing the performance but does show to persons leaving the auditorium. Thus the lighting fixtures can be placed in almost any position or area without interfering with the desired scheme of decoration.

At the present time, the placing of lighting fixtures of available types raises two definite problems. Firstly, they force a scheme of surface decoration which must be subordinated to them because of their prominence; and secondly, they may prove annoying to the seated patron while viewing the screen. Due to these objections, some theatre designers have resorted to the use of elaborate indirect lighting schemes to obtain an even bath of light over all the surfaces and avoid the annoyance of contrasty bright spots. This latter scheme is expensive to install and makes for very large electric current bills.

Actually, if the interior surfaces are not too dark in color there is no need for any lighting during the lighter film scenes, but during the dark sequences of the picture, and in the event of a picture break, lighting fixtures or other means of secondary lighting becomes important. This lighting could be termed traffic picture light and should not be confused with surface lighting needed during the picture performance. Wall and ceiling surfaces should be tinted with a small but even amount of light during projection periods to avoid the hard contrasty feeling of a bright picture in dark surroundings.

With respect to the forward part of the auditorium, and to some extent the standee area, the synthetic material cited above may be an answer to the problem of introducing light without having the source obtrusive.

These columns are regular features of Better Theatres dealing with methods by which the theatre may be planned as efficiently as possible for the exhibition of motion pictures. Both Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Potwin are consultants on inquiries from readers seeking counsel on the planning of theatres.

Changing Floor Slope To Improve Vision

MANY inquiries from owners of small theatres indicate the existence of flat auditorium floors upon which they desire to superimpose a new raised, sloped floor to improve vision. In many instances this would cause a hardship, since the lobby floor and entrance level is affected by such a change. In one example in particular, the floor was sloped three feet to a high point at the standee rail in a depth of 30 rows of seats, yet the desired improvement was not achieved. A total slope of at least five feet would have been necessary in this case, and any compromise on this amount would not have proved sufficiently helpful.

Where flat floors exist, it is far more effective and economical to use a combination of the stagger seating arrangement and a compound upward and downward floor slope of nominal pitch. With this method, about a third of the length of the floor can be left absolutely flat at the center of the length of the floor. The amount of pitch upward toward the screen, and upward toward the standee rail, will vary with the depth of seating, but it can be controlled to stay within a maximum of a little over a foot in thirty rows of seating depth.

It is very important to use a minimum size of screen, its width being determined by dividing the distance from the screen to the last row of seats by 5.3, which will make it possible to place the screen at the highest possible level.

Sometimes delay is caused, and really helpful advice prevented, by the absence of necessary information from inquiries received by BETTER THEATRES on theatre planning problems. Such problems are so variable that the required data cannot be prescribed. In general, however, all relevant dimensions should be given, and existing conditions with respect to site or building should be described in at least their essentials. Additionally, the problem should be stated in a group of questions that are as specific as possible.

by
C. C. POTWIN
Consultant in Acoustics

DECORATION, as it relates to the use of acoustical materials, often presents a major problem in theatre planning and modernization. Either the material itself must be of a type which has, inherently, the decorative qualities desired, or it must be of such a character and composition that it can be painted or otherwise decorated successfully.

Needless to say, the sound absorbing properties of acoustical materials installed in many theatres have been markedly impaired by careless or improper decoration. Oil base paints, for example, are harmful to many materials which depend principally upon their porosity for the absorption of sound. Laboratory tests indicate that there are a number of acoustical units which are not affected by oil base paints. Nevertheless, care should be exercised in application, because in some cases the oil paint has been applied to these materials in such heavy coats that their absorbing efficiency has been greatly reduced.

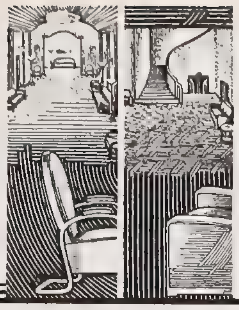
Perforated materials, or those having an outer surface drilled with symmetrically spaced holes, can usually be painted as desired. Here again, precautions must be taken to avoid heavy or thick applications which might fill or clog the holes, particularly if these holes are very small.

Water color paints and non-bridging lacquers are preferred for most materials, and are actually among the very few types of decoration that can be used successfully on acoustical plasters and pre-cast acoustical blocks. The spray method is the best solution to the problem of applying water color paints to such materials, and the application should be as uniformly light as possible over the entire surface.

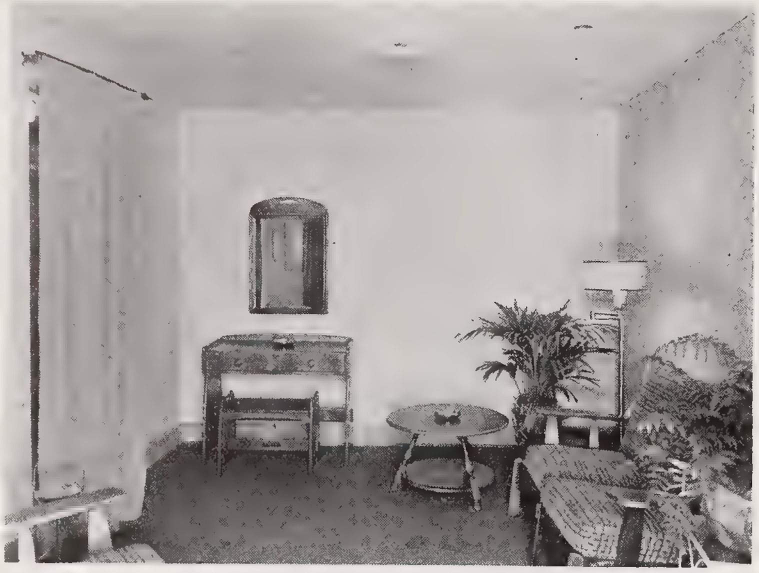
A relatively large number of pre-colored acoustical materials are available today. In many cases the use of these materials obviates the necessity for painting at the time the original installation is made.

Since the sound absorbing properties of many acoustical materials outlive their decorative appearance, consideration must be given initially to maintenance, or possible future restoration of the decorative properties of a material. The vacuum process of cleaning a number of the pre-colored materials is generally well known and is effective when the time intervals between cleaning periods are not too great. The most desirable method of redecorating materials which initially required painting for the desired decorative effect, often presents a more complex problem, particularly if the surface has been neglected and the pores of the material are filled with dust.

FURNITURE • for lounge & foyer



Luxury Lounges—Inexpensively



Women's lounge of the Illinois theatre, Jacksonville, Ill.

TIME WAS, and not so long ago, when the lounge was the boast principally of the "picture palace." Today at least the women's lounge is an essential part of the theatre plan. One may often dispense with the general lounge (using foyer area), and even restrict the men to a small entry with a couple of chairs and an ash urn; but the women expect a quiet, private, well appointed room where they can leisurely and comfortably chat while they revive fading lips, get the hat on straight.

This room must have a feeling of luxury. Not luxury, however, in the sense of spectacular splendor and over-abundance. But luxury interpreted as comfort, convenience, refinement, good taste. Space for lounges in the average theatre is usually very limited, the budget similarly restrictive. The lounges illustrated here meet both of these conditions, yet provide authentic luxury. Both of recent design, one has been selected to demonstrate a traditional, homey treatment, the other a definitely modern style.

The furniture in the women's lounge of the Illinois theatre is the type being executed today in maple and birch for use in homes; with characteristics reminiscent of Rural Colonial, it nevertheless is the product of modern designers. Here we have it in pieces by Heywood-Wakefield, arranged in quantity and kinds to fit the scene of the small room, against a plain background of textured plaster walls.

Blue and tan is the color scheme. Walls are tinted baby-blue, the ceiling cream. Of maple-finish birch (tan), the pieces have spring cushions upholstered in light and dark blue patterned tapestry. Carpeting is tan—an Alexander Smith caracul broadloom. A simple opal glass drum fixture and a modern but home-like floor lamp, provide illumination.

Modern in its very pattern, with rounded ends (avoiding "cold" corners), plaster walls painted in horizontal bands alternately white and yellow, which are interrupted by vertical strips of dubonnet (a color akin to purple), the women's lounge in the Wisconsin theatre has Royalchrome metallic pieces combined with chairs of wood construction. They are covered in leatherette of bold yellow with binding in dubonnet, both colors that appear also in the Crestwood Velvet black - gold - dubonnet leaf pattern.

Illumination is provided by lumiline brackets above chromium makeup "shelves" having brown marble-like Royaloid tops, and by a louvered metal ceiling drum.

DISTINCTIVE FURNITURE

SMART ATTRACTIVE LOBBY

It's difficult to describe what a big difference Royalchrome will make in your lounge, lobby or foyer. The sparkle of the chrome and the richness of guaranteed Tuf-Tex leatherette is a "double-feature" that patrons love. They'll find it mighty comfortable too . . . and even if they submit Royalchrome to severe use and abuse, you'll find it makes little difference in the finish. For Royalchrome looks new much longer. And once you install Royalchrome, you'll discover it costs practically nothing to maintain it — for this furniture is superbly durable. CARPET Selection & maintenance

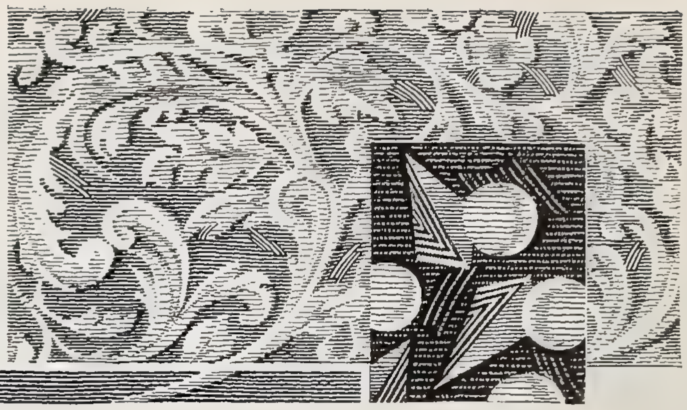
Foyer and lounge floors, and stairways, are always conspicuous—keep them well groomed.



Selecting and Laying Carpet Lining

• All padding saves carpeting — but how much real economy is effected depends upon both the kind of padding and how installed.

NO MOTION PICTURE theatre operator need be "sold" on the idea that carpet cushioning is a necessity for his theatre. Mere acceptance of the idea, however, is insufficient; some notion of what qualities and weights of carpet lining are practical and suitable is necessary if one is to effect the saving of carpeting that one is looking for.

In the fiber linings, qualities available fall into three broad classifications, the weights in nearly all cases being the same. There is on the market:

1. All-jute (or vegetable fiber) lining.
2. Hair and jute in combination lining.
3. All-hair (cattle hair) lining.

All-Jute Lining

The first all-jute, is made solely of plant fibers and can be easily identified by its lack of resiliency. Placing a match to sample of all-jute causes it to burn freely, as shown in Figure 1. Even under favorable conditions, vegetable fiber padding under carpeting in the theatre is economically unsound, as it soon packs down, with resulting lumps and wrinkles in the carpet. Moisture causes it to mat, and dryness brings about a distintegration to the point of powdering. As soon as it loses its springiness, its function as a cushion is valueless and for that reason alone all-jute, or vegetable fiber, padding has no place under carpeting subject to the abuse and heavy traffic of the average motion picture theatre.

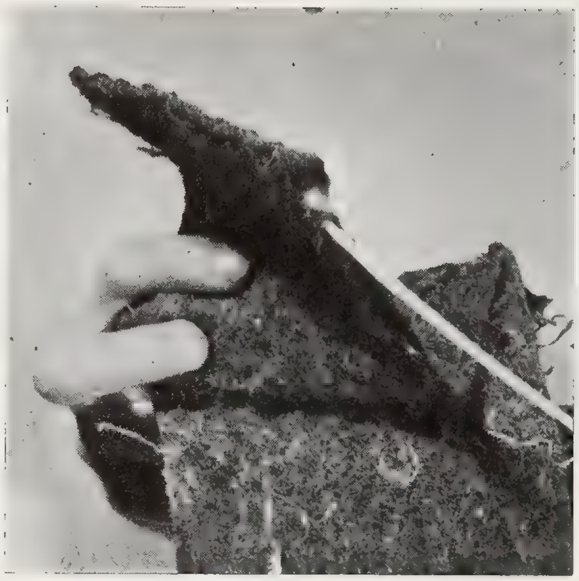

Figure 2. Hair and jute can be easily separated at the point where the two layers meet. The hair layer feels more springy when pressed between the fingers, and when held in a flame, it is only singed, giving off a definite animal odor. The jute will burn (see Figure 1).

Hair-Jute Combination

The second type, hair and jute in combination, consists, as a rule, of a top layer of all-hair, a layer of jute, the reinforcing burlap which all carpet cushions should have, and a layer of jute to complete the back. The hair and jute padding cost 25% to 35% less than animal hair cushioning of the same weight, but the difference in quality and performance ranges from 10% to 50% of the service that can be expected from all-hair construction. The hair content in hair and jute padding runs from 20% to 50% of the total amount of fiber used in construction, and this is very important to the theatre operator.

In the past there has been a tendency to represent hair and jute as all-hair cushioning, and even the term hair and jute is meaningless unless you know how much hair and how much jute you are getting in your lining. Even though the jute materials are generally dyed the same color as the hair, it is easy to tell the hair from the jute. The hair is laid in a layer on top of the vegetable fiber and can be readily separated at the meeting point by feeling the difference in texture. Flame applied to these two different fibers produces a charring only of the hair, while the jute burns up immediately (see Figure 2).

Hair and jute padding stands up much better than plain all-jute. Even then the jute layer underneath soon mats and breaks down with resulting damage to the hair. For this reason it cannot be reused. Although much more inefficient than cushioning entirely of cattle hair, hair and jute has found its way into many theatres through competitive pressure.

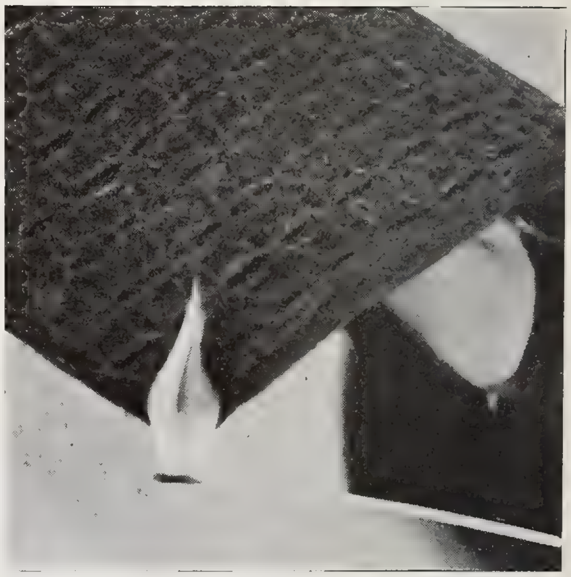

Figure 3. An all-hair lining, springy to the touch and does not burn, but merely singes, when either side is held in a flame.

All-Hair Lining

All-hair carpet cushions are manufactured solely from animal hair fibers with the best grades incorporating cattle hair in their construction. Properly made and mothproofed, they outlast the carpeting over them and can, in most cases, be reused as the padding for new carpet installations. They are of the same texture all the way through, resilient to the touch, and have a burlap webbing through the center as a binder and reinforcement. A lighted match applied to either the top or bottom of this material (see Figure 3) results in singeing only, since animal hair cannot burn.

Varying weather conditions and moisture from spillage do not affect this padding. The highest priced (in dollars and cents) of the three linings mentioned, it is the most likely to prove economical in the long run, for it retains its softness and resiliency indefinitely and extends the life of the covering carpet from two to three times.

Weights and Installation

Taking for granted that the heavier the weight of the lining, the more luxurious the underfoot feeling and the wear, for theatre purposes the weight of the cushioning in from small to medium houses should be not less than 45 ounces to the square yard—for all straightaway surfaces. All others, for best results, should use not less than 64 ounces per square yard. Steps, in most cases, require 86-ounce padding, but for light traffic 65-ounce will do in a pinch.

On level surfaces it is not necessary to cement the lining to the floor, but where there is a light slope, cementing the lining lightly with linoleum paste for a distance of from 3 to 4 inches in back of each seam will prove helpful, especially when the carpet has to be restretched at some later date after installation.

On ramps and the steeper slopes cementing all over is an advisable practice. On the steps, not only should the padding be firmly cemented all over, but careful attention should be paid to the shape of the nosing on the step proper. If it is not rounded and is sharp, the best cushion in the world will cut away on the knife-like edge, leaving the carpet unprotected. The nosing should be rounded down, or if this is not practicable, either an extra layer of lining or some other material should be firmly pasted over the step edge in order to achieve some protecting roundness.

pattern carpeting, large or irregularly shaped areas in the theatre can be effectively treated with results as shown in Figure 2. With remodeling expenditures confined to repainting and similar refurbishing, modern furniture and carpeting were incorporated into the decoration of this theatre foyer with a restraint that is admirable, considering the fact that the repainted original interior is in a traditional style. Alcoves, bays and other areas out of the way of the general theatre traffic can be given individual treatment, as shown here, by judicious inclusion of sections of carpeting in small allover patterns using the general purpose broadlooms for the main walk areas. The plain broadloom fabrics furnish direction and serve to tie in that portion of the house traversed from the entrance lobby to the auditorium proper.

By proper placement of lounge furniture around the patterned portion of carpeting, a rug effect is subtly suggested with the attendant implication that this is specifically a lounge area. The problem of achieving an intimate atmosphere in a lounge created from surplus public space is considerably lightened by this method.

An opportunity to purchase carpeting on the basis of a "good buy" may mean "goodbye" as far as decorative effect is concerned. It may seem smart at the immediate moment to save actual cash and take somebody's surplus yardage off their hands, but if the design is not in keeping with your theatre, it will be four or five years before your bargain stops staring you and the patrons in the face, with the net result that a dollar a yard saving in initial carpet investment will cost you $10 a yard in the theatre atmosphere and charm that is really the good showman's stock in trade.

will continue to present a tacky surface months after they are applied. Some paints carry an insufficient quantity of drier, and though they will dry eventually, take a long time to do it, and are inconvenient accordingly.

Gloss or flatness are matters of direct observation after a paint has dried.

Durability is very had to test, and varies with the nature of the surface and the location. Some white lead paints will darken in industrial communities where the air contains sulphur fumes. Titanium white is a very permanent pigment. Ultramarine blue is generally permanent, but somewhat subject to fading in the presence of acid conditions. The nature of the surface to be protected is also important. Red lead mixed with linseed oil provides an excellent undercoat protection for iron work, under all circumstances, but the need for painting a darker color over it makes its use more expensive. In the matter of durability it is necessary to rely somewhat on the supplier, and he should be acquainted with all the relevant conditions, including nature of surface and comparative purity of air.

APPLICATION OF PAINTS

Since the permanence of a paint job depends on the firmness of the bond between the paint layer and the underlying surface, it is obvious that no paint can hold if the surface to which it bonds itself is in turn not firmly locked down. Any paint whatever may peel if it is applied over dirt, rust or moisture (in the case of oil paints). Minor amounts of dirt or rust may be locked in place by a layer of new paint penetrating through them and bonding itself to the firm surface beneath. When they are present in large amounts, the paint contacts them only, and will chip, scale or peel at points where they are thickest. Surfaces often need washing (with mild soap and water) before painting. They must be thoroughly dry when the paint is applied, however, or the paint will not adhere to them.

Where an oil-base paint is used on a damp wall—on new plaster, for example, or on any surface during extremely humid weather—there may be no bond at all. The pores of the surface contain moisture; oil and water will not mix; the liquid paint never enters the pores and when it dries there is nothing to hold it in place.

In short, the most important part of a paint job, from the point of view of permanence, is proper preparation of the surface. This sometimes requires preliminary sealing of the surfaces with a "priming coat" of shellac, aluminum paint or specially-made primer. Priming is essential with fresh plaster, or raw wood.

Lacquers and some varnishes also may require special conditions, according to their nature and composition. When they are bought, the supplier should always be advised of the circumstances under which they are to be used, and the nature and condition of the surface.

Modern lacquers are exceptionally well suited to theatre work because they are quick-drying. They harden as quickly as the solvent can evaporate (oxidation is not involved) and the solvents used are highly volatile. They are also inflammable, making smoking or any open flame dangerous while such paints are applied or drying out. Lacquers leave a high gloss finish, and while more expensive should always be preferred to shellac, which is far less durable and turns white when exposed to moisture in the course of cleaning, or even on exposure to very moist air. The new lacquers to the contrary are highly durable.

of the editor

THE TROUBLES OF OUR TIMES—ALSO A NOTE ON COOLING AND SEAT WIDTHS

WE don't read editorials as a rule, and don't intend the outgivings in this place to be classified as such. Still, they represent editorializing, and when an editor puts paper in typewriter he ought, at least once in awhile, to view with alarm and offer remedies with vigor. Half an hour ago that was our plan. We were in the mood for it. We also thought we had some good subjects (with terrific names for certain kinds of people we don't like). But here we are, alarmed at nothing, and the only remedy we can think of is Peruna.

It appears that everything is all right. The processes of thought, as the expression goes, by which we have come to this conclusion, are pretty obscure, but we do recall having reflected upon many of the troubles of our times and our business.

The impending war in Europe came to mind (which is about as far as any war ought to get). We heard of an exhibitor the other day who wanted to remodel his theatre, had the cash to do it, but was afraid to begin because Europe was going to have a war. Well, we couldn't make any sense out of that, and finally wound up by deciding, out of sheer necessity, that there wasn't going to be any war in Europe anyway. You can't wait forever for a war! In the meantime, what?

So we tried television. What was it going to do to the motion picture? Would it sound the death knell of the cinema? (Too bad we Americans don't go for that word; we have to use two or three words to say the same thing.) If so, when? Why would it? It was in trying to answer the last question that we decided that so far as the motion picture was concerned, television was still in the chimera stage of development. Up to now, everything in status quo, with no real signs of change, and you can't make an editorial out of that.

Then came to mind the recent remarks of a manufacturer, who is developing a nice mess of gastric ulcers over the confusion that might result from the use of 16-millimeter in the theatre. But Hollywood is announcing plans for a new season without any indication of using 16-millimeter, while adaptation of it to any substantial extent would require many adjustments, both technical and financial. So we couldn't squeeze any alarm out of 16-millimeter.

Ah, but how about business! Well, for a minute we thought we had something there. Then we discerned that our ideas were the same notions we'd had in 1932. And six years later, in 1938—relatively bad year generally—the motion picture theatres of this nation grossed well over three-quarters of a billion.

We decided that what we thought was a mood to view with alarm was simply a case of good old-fashioned jitters. Probably something we ate.

In an institution so much an organism as the motion picture theatre, most elements are tied together in one way or another; therefore it was not surprising to note, in going over material on air-motion recently, the possible relationship between air-conditioning processes and auditorium chair widths.

The body cools itself by radiation and evaporation. When bodies with more heat than they want are too close together, their cooling "systems" can't work well. Air, and it should have some motion, is necessary to take up the heat being given off, and to provide a medium for the absorption of perspiration. Just a thin layer of air is better than none—if it has sufficient motion, a little is enough. Wouldn't it aid air-conditioning, and in general contribute to "breathing comfort," if auditorium chair widths were great enough to make touching the person next to you unnecessary?

We asked Mr. John R. Parson, New York physicist who has made a special study of air-conditioning from the medical point of view, and Mr. J. T. Knight, Jr., well known throughout our business as a theatre engineer. They said, emphatically, yes. And there you are, gratis.

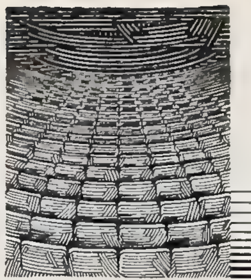
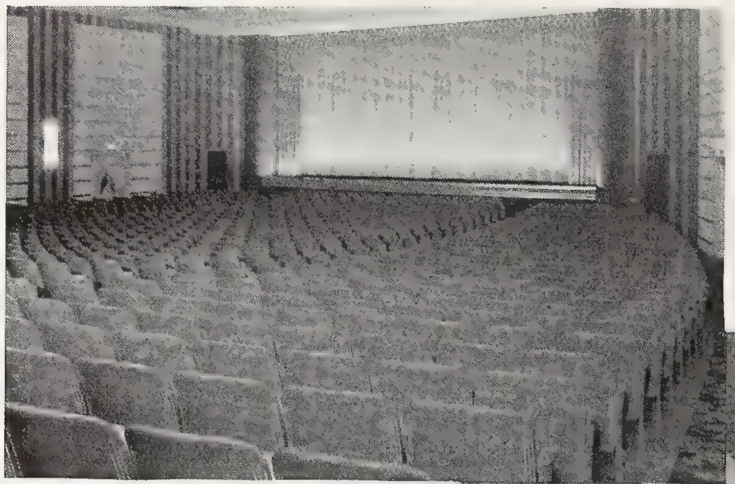
SEATING the auditorium

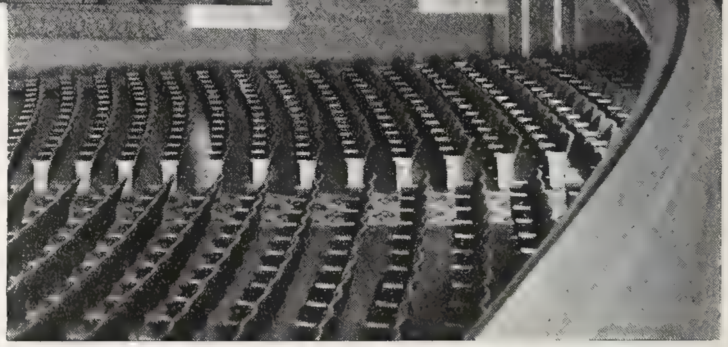


". . . no theatre can be better than its seating."

Fitting the Seating to the Auditorium Decorative Scheme

SINCE THE auditoriums of motion picture theatres are illuminated only at relatively low levels most of the time, it is natural to ask: What has the seating got to do with auditorium decoration? If the answer were "Nothing," then there would be no point in decorating the auditorium at all—the brick or tile walls of the structure itself, adequately sealed, would be at least admissible. Not only are the house lights up at intervals, but the running illumination, plus the light from the screen, provide enough visibility to make every sizeable element of the auditorium an important environmental factor. And the auditorium is mostly seating.





Illustrating the idea of "seating block rhythm" as a decorative, or environmental, factor in the auditorium. Above it is strikingly indicated in a view of the 4-Star theatre, Grand Rapids, which has the American Seating Company's latest model. It is also notably demonstrated in the Penn Theatre in Washington (shown at the right) which was designed by John Eberson and seated by the Ideal Seating Company.

Since the seating is in reality a functional grouping of furniture in a specified physical formation, the chairs probably should be regarded, so far as appearance is concerned, first of all in their aggregate effect, as a unified composition, with proper allowance for the patterning inherent in the repetition of identical forms in rows and in banks. A natural rhythmic pattern is produced by alternation of the end standards and chair backs with the dark spaces between, and with the aisles.

The end standards (in some instances, also the chrome or enameled chair back mouldings) afford the most visible design of the seating, and for that reason it is good practice to co-ordinate the decorative surface of the end standard with decorative features of the auditorium design. Because of the narrowness of the end standards, and the fact, as mentioned above, that they are part of a greater pattern, it is not advisable to use small, intricate designs, or miniature replicas of figuring in wall decoration, in an attempt to tie in the chairs with the auditorium decorative scheme. In the first place, the figuring is hardly visible even under full lighting, while, secondly, the standard can only suggest, and should not be asked to mirror on a small scale the auditorium decorative theme.

It is therefore fortunate that the modern chairs being offered by leading manufacturers today are available with end standards that are structurally "clean" in form and that have patterns which are essentially simple in themselves. Disregarding colors, the simple flutings, stripes, curves, etc., being used today, immediately become a part of the larger auditorium pattern, and if the auditorium of an outmoded style, a modernizing effect is immediately created.

Pattern Relationships

Although end standards are available with elaborate ornamentation reflecting many different period treatments in theatre interior decoration, a more effective relationship with the interior design is accomplished by the use of the newer modern chairs, since their simple decorative devices—vertical flutes or reeds, fret banding, and so on—more or less readily adapt themselves to any auditorium style. The newer designs, "streamlined" though they may be, are more akin to basic classical decorative forms than they are to the highly stylized modernistic ornamentation conspicuous a few years ago.

On those standards that have raised ornamental surfaces, it is good practice to have no greater number of colors than there are design formations in the standard. The background of the standard usually should be treated in the lightest color within the range of the decorative scheme, to provide for general visibility of the rows and to allow accentuation of the design.

Some designers and theatre operators think the ground color of the end standard should be harmonized with the colors of prominent decorative features on the walls, others prefer to have the ground color blend with the fabric of the chair back, leaving the ornamentation of the standard to tie in, from a color viewpoint, with the walls. Both methods represent good practice; the specific character of the auditorium scheme will determine which is better in any one instance, and often either will prove as effective as the other.

Fabric Coloration

The chair fabrics serve as a means of connecting the color scheme of the interior with the seating. Since fabric textures definitely contribute to the pleasurable effects of seating materials by sight and touch, their proper selection is important, considering the large area they occupy. Before seselecting the fabric, be it a soft fabric or artificial leather, it is well, when convenient, to provide the chair manufacturer with samples of the colors that appear on the walls, with some indication of the lighting. His knowledge, based on experience, of the varied light absorbing and reflecting qualities of covering materials, will increase the possibilities of achieving maximum decorating effect.

The approximate effect of colored lights on the colors of soft fabrics are as follows:

Under amber light:
  Red becomes orange of low value.
  Yellow becomes amber of high value.
  Light Blue becomes grey of low value.
  Dark Green becomes grey-green of low value.
  Light Green becomes grey-green of high value.
  Purple becomes red-violet of low value.
  Orange becomes yellow-orange.

Under a red light:
  Red becomes a more intense red.
  Yellow becomes orange.
  Light Green becomes warm grey.
  Purple becomes red-violet.
  Orange becomes reddish-orange.

Under a blue light:
  Red becomes purple.
  Yellow becomes green.
  Light Green becomes blue-green.
  Purple becomes deep blue-violet.
  Orange becomes black or brown.
  Blue becomes more intense blue.

Under a green light:
  Red becomes brownish grey.
  Yellow becomes green.
  Dark Green becomes more intense green.
  Purple becomes greyish blue-green.
  Orange becomes grey-yellow.
  Blue becomes blue-green.

Mohairs and velours tend to absorb light, artificial leathers to reflect light. For that reason, in pile fabrics, advancing colors such as the many reds, oranges, yellows and greens are most vividly effective within the darkened auditorium. Receding colors, such as blue, brown and violet, should be used in the lighter tones in these fabrics to avoid the grey, or greyish-black appearance they present at low illumination levels. The artificial leathers offer greater light reflection due to the lacquer used in manufacturing them; for this reason darker shades can be used.

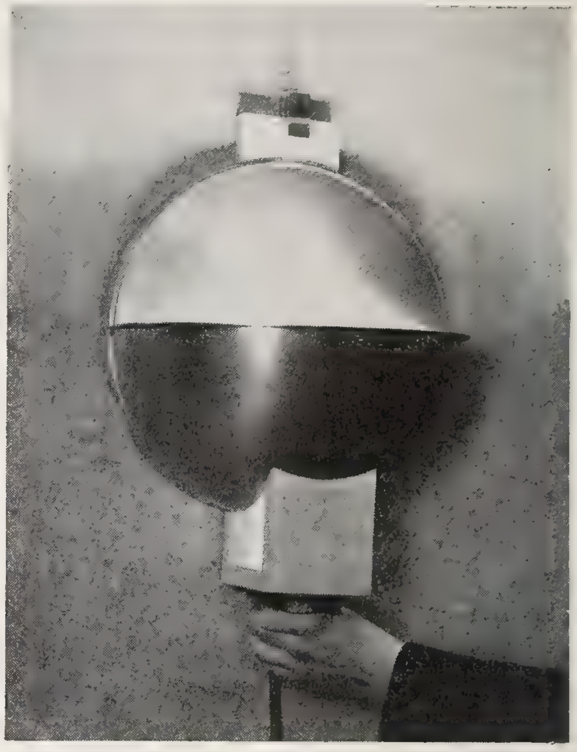
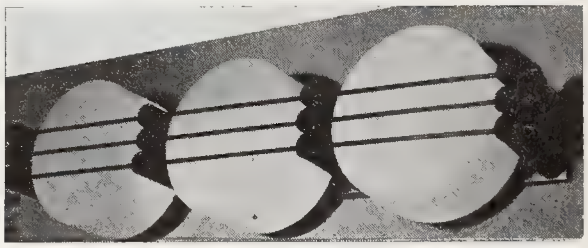
standard multi-color, luminous-element type units to aid the "seeing" illumination so vitally needed.

A lobby device is shown in the accompanying picture of a decorative luminaire which is appliqued against a full-length mirror. The fluted glass half-cylinder, with edge-lighted wings, provides a decorative effect. If desired, colored effects can be obtained with fluorescent lamps. The half-bowl at the top conceals lamps, which may be quite high in wattage and provide considerable lobby illumination.

Luminaires for trains show a number of planned-lighting applications of the type which might well be used in theatres. Combination glassware, which provides a low brightness on the wall, but with some directive characteristics, can be an important tool for theatre lighting.



An urn for side-wall auditorium lighting—a mirror at back of the lamp directs light upward, yet prevents viewing the lamp by reflection. Thus higher illumination levels are provided without causing objectionable glare spots, and at low cost.



An example of the use of standard opal globes, as by the Hoyt circuit in Australia, with decorative rods and posts to provide an inexpensive fixture.

Today there are many directional types of glassware which can be used to considerable advantage. Among these are circular Fresnel types, roundels, and squares. Standard boxes permit easy installation of these directional glasswares for lighting posters, murals or other wall surfaces. At the New York World's Fair, an interesting innovation is being extensively used—that of coloring the vertical edges of these lensed units, thus providing a touch of color and at the same time reducing the side brightness.

Another interesting example of the use of standard glassware is shown in the accompanying photograph of a type of luminaire used by Hoyt's Theatres in Australia.

[The author, a frequent contributor to Better Theatres for many years, is an illuminating engineer who has specialized in theatre lighting, for which he has originated widely used methods.]

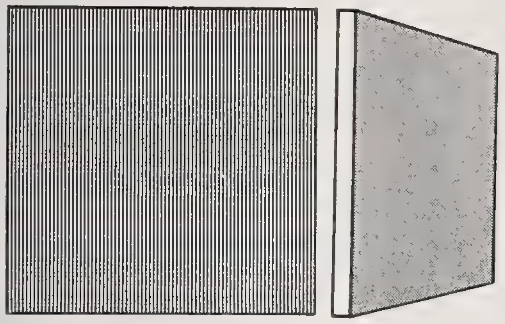
Plastic Material With Louver Effect

ONE OF THE new synthetic materials regarded as applicable to theatre lighting, especially in the auditorium, is a colorless plastic manufactured by Doane Products Corporation of Meriden, Conn., and distributed by the Ivan T. Johnson Company of New York, under the name of Louverglas.

The material consists of thin sheets of transparent cellulose acetate "ribbed" with opaque lines of pigment (colored or white) in predetermined patterns. Used as the covering panel of a recessed light box, it will transmit clear light at an efficiency rated close to 80%, but viewed from an angle it shows no glare, the "ribs" acting somewhat after the fashion of louvers. Dust-tight construction of light troughs is also readily obtained by covering them with the new material, which presents only a flat surface easy to clean.



A representation of Louverglas, the left-hand drawing indicating its transparency and the "ribs," and the other sketch indicating its "opacity" when viewed from sufficient angle.

Louverglas is available in sheets from which panels may be cut with shears, or special fixture forms pressed by application of heat. It is cleaned with water, or with kerosene or naphtha. Holes can be drilled in it with an ordinary brace and bit if care is taken to avoid excessive pressure on the drill. Two or more pieces of Louverglas can be cemented together.

Scratched surfaces can be repolished by hand, using a soft cloth and turpentine-chalk mixture. It is mounted to metal with the aid of rubber, felt or other flexible material, or by means of oversize bolt holes.

Louverglas is well suited to the use of fluorescent lamps in view of the shape and temperature of such light sources, but can also be used effectively with the regular incandescent lamps. It must not be placed very close to the larger lamp bulbs, however. Direct flame will ignite it, but it burns slowly. It deteriorates on exposure to strong ultra-violet light.

HEATING FILTERING INSULATING

[This is the third article in a series which is designed to clarify fundamental purposes and processes in comfort air-conditioning. It was to have dealt with air-motion. Discussion of some of the comfort problems involved in summer air-conditioning with Mr. John R. Parsons, New York physicist who has specialized in these matters, led to the preparation of a map charting recommended Effective Temperatures for theatres throughout the United States, and this, with Mr. Parson's own explanation of the map and the bases of his recommendations, is presented in place of the discussion of air-motion because of their present seasonal interest.—THE EDITOR.]

Providing Healthful Comfort In Summer Air-Conditioning

by JOHN R. PARSONS

IN THE FIRST article of this series, to which I have been asked to contribute the present discussion, was given, under the title of "Just What Are We After in Theatre Air-Conditioning?", what was in my opinion a very simple and direct explanation of those things which must be understood as the first step in a practical appreciation of proper comfort conditions. The point properly stressed was that the ordinary, or dry-bulb temperature was not a proper guide, and that the factors relative humidity and air-motion had to be considered also. The sum total effect of all three of these factors, mixed together as you would a cocktail, is called Effective Temperature. As in a good cocktail, no one thing should be too prominent.

Now here, right at the start, let me emphasize one important point: There is no standard for what is the proper temperature, relative humidity or air motion, taken separately.

You can't say that the people of England,

READ THE ADS—
they're news!

living in moderate summer temperature and high average humidities, are any better or worse off than the people living in Arizona and New Mexico with high summer temperature and low relative humidity; or that the inhabitants of Chicago, known as the "Windy City," can't thrive under their particular climatic conditions. It all goes to show that these factors are more or less interchangeable—that it is the sum total effect that counts. It is this which explains what has been termed "Effective Temperature."

Then one other point: Let us remember that it is a fixed body temperature that we are shooting at.

Comfort Range

The whole range for a seasonally dressed person is between 70° and 80° Effective Temperature, still air, for ideal comfort. This doesn't mean that people can't be comfortable in higher or lower Effective Temperatures; they can be, by adopting a corresponding change in (a) dress, (b) diet, and (c) activities.

This is well illustrated in controlled tests carried on the past year with male subjects from different parts of the country. Subjects born and raised in Mississippi felt cold at the same Effective Temperature level at which those born and raised in Massachusetts were perfectly comfortable. And the reverse is true in that, generally, those from the northern parts of the country suffer more than the natives do in the humid heat of some parts of the South, until they become acclimated. And yet this whole range of temperatures, taken as the average maximum high for July, is between 100° ordinary, or dry-bulb, temperature at the extreme southern Gulf section, to 70° on the Canadian border.

Let us refer now to the United States Continental map showing the average extremes we have to knock down to the proper level at which we can sell comfort. The intensity of shading shows the average maximum dry-bulb temperature zones for a period of twenty years. The continuous lines show the channels of Relative Humidity, (in percentage, as indicated by the numbers on the lines) for July noon, over a period of eighten years. Half the distance between any two borders, north and south, would be the intermediate temperatures in any zone.

For example: In the zone bordered on the south by 90, and on the north by 80, midway would be 85. Spot your locality by State lines (which is near enough provided there is not some local condition which you know to have a special and distinct bearing), then find the nearest relative Humidity line and you have a fair idea of local climatic conditions.

If the humidity in your locality averages above 50%, you must add so many degrees to the air temperature. The reverse is true if the humidity averages lower than 50%.

The key to indoor Effective Temperature is based on three levels of outside Effective Temperature, ranging from the extreme high outdoor Effective Temperature of 100° to 90° in the South, with an 80° Effective Temperature indoors; through the zone from 90° to 80 °outdoors, with 78° indoors; to the zone 80°-70° outdoor, with 76° indoor Effective Temperature.

Here it would seem proper to use a few words of caution. When outdoor air conditions attain warmth values above the point of producing comfort when that air is introduced indoors, you are forced to resort to refrigeration of some sort—in other words you are creating artificial climate. It is necessary, however, only to drop the Effective Temperature enough to bring it to the proper comfort level. Do not try to knock 'em cold!

The principal points in your favor are these:

1. When outdoor conditions are extreme, any drop in temperature is immediately acceptable no matter if it is a drop of only a few degrees in Effective Temperature.
2. No one is a good judge of what the proper condition should be until he has had from 15 to 30 minutes to readjust his physical condition to his surroundings.
3. The true reputation you build up for running a well-conditioned theatre is based on your patrons' second reaction to comfort, and how he feels coming out again into the higher temperature outdoors.

Below 85° outdoor Effective Temperature, the problem is simple and any good manager should be able to meet it with very little trouble. It is above 85° Effective Temperature outdoors and especially from 90° to 100°, that we face the real problem.

Some engineers have set a variable indoor Effective Temperature in relation to the difference between outside and inside temperatures, as changes occur. This, I feel, is neither practicable nor desirable. My judgment is based on the experiences of one of the largest and best run circuit of theatres, which has been supervised by one who is, in my opinion, the keenest theatre engineer in the business. A fixed monthly level, according to the season, is far more practicable and, in the long run, more satisfactory.

Dress-Diet Factors

For the purposes of practical operation of theatre air-conditioning equipment, we must take into consideration the change that has quite generally taken place in dress during the summer months, and also, though perhaps to a smaller degree, in diet. Many years ago men wore essentially the same type of clothes in summer as in winter while the women retained in summer at least a petticoat or two. That has been gradually changing, until today men's suits of white linen, Palm Beach cloth, tropical worsted, and so on, are common even in small towns, and the women—well, they dress very lightly indeed. In other words, people themselves are making some substantial adjustments to air conditions.

With respect to changes in diet one may point to the rapid growth in the last few years of sandwich counters and soda fountains as places to get one's noon-day lunch, and to the fashion which dictates that women keep their weight down (and men, too, are "watching their calories" these days).

In July and August they start out in the morning prepared for the worst. Now let us suppose that by 3 o'clock, the outdoor heat and humidity causes a 95° Effective Temperature and you are told not to maintain over a 10° differential. You will have an 85° temperature in the theatre which may not afford much relief from the outside air, especially if there is a breeze outside. An 85° Effective Temperature not give comfort even with the lightest clothing permissible in public, and heat radiation between closely packed people in a crowded auditorium will only make matters worse.

John R. Parsons

It has been definitely established that no real comfort can be felt under these conditions above an 82° Effective Temperature. That is your limit no matter what outside conditions may be. Now suppose that at 5 o'clock a thunderstorm changes the whole outside condition and the outdoor temperature changes 15° or 20°. Are you going to drop your indoor temperature to 75° Effective Temperature? That would be a good way to empty the house. The better way would be to maintain a straight 78° or 80° Effective Temperature. People will come from the colder air outside and find things just right for the way they are dressed.

Try these suggestions—they are made in the interest of everybody concerned. We cannot expect perfection right away, but we can eliminate as soon as possible certain justified complaints against air-conditioning.

Calibrating the Theatre

To calibrate the theatre for its different Effective Temperature levels simply means determining the differences between the principal locations in the theatre at half capacity and when it is full. For our purpose here we ignore air motion and consider only two factors, ordinary or dry-bulb temperature, and Relative Humidity. At the present stage of development in equipment and control, it is felt unnecessary to take humidity readings at more than one or two locations in the theatre. With fair circulation and constant change, a Relative Humidity reading taken at a proper representative location will come fairly close to the average all over the house.

The main point is that at some such location there should be a permanent instrument that correctly indicates relative humidity. This could be any one of the better wet and dry bulb instruments, the readings of which can be interpreted by reference to a chart (none of the cheaper direct reading devices are any good.) If you are going to accomplish anything, start with the proper tools. After making a few tests for humidity under varying conditions to find the proper permanent location for the instrument, place four or five good standard thermometers (dry-bulb) at different locations in the theatre where they can be easily read at all times. By combining the humidity as indicated on the main instrument, with the air temperature as indicated by the different thermometers, the Effective Temperature level at the different stations can be readily determined.

There should not be a greater differential than 2° Effective Temperature between any of these stations. If there is, an adjustment should be made to bring the differential within 2° or less.

[Managers and engineers who adopt or experiment with Mr. Parson's suggestions and recommended Effective Temperature levels, are invited to report on their experiences and to submit any questions. When replies are indicated, they will be made by mail.—THE EDITOR.]

Anemostat High Velocity Air Diffuser
Gives
Draftless Air Distribution

Cooling systems in theatres are now in full operation.

Theatre owners are not always aware of criticism leveled by their patrons. Patronage may be affected by cold drafts which are harmful and unpleasant and are due to faulty methods of air distribution.

We respectfully suggest that you investigate the condition in your theatre with reference to drafts. If you have a draft problem the "Anemostat" can solve it for you as it has solved the same problem in a hundred other theatres.

The Anemostat can be applied to existing systems.

The Anemostat is easily installed and it has no moving parts.

Efficiency in Vacuum Cleaning

A THEATRE VACUUM cleaner, essential for the care of carpeting, seat upholstery and many other fabrics, must be convenient to handle, avoiding waste of labor time. It must be able to work under seats and on carpeted stairs, to penetrate behind radiators and other fixtures, and to reach up to drapes and tapestries. It must stand the gaff of heavy duty, such as a domestic cleaner never encounters. It should be easy to service.

Lastly but above all it must be efficient. It is used only for the removal of loose or dry dirt. When grease from the air settles on dirt particles they become a stain which must then be submitted to the more difficult and expensive process of washing. This happens not only in difficult corners which the vacuum could not reach; it happens everywhere over a longer period of time, if the cleaner has been inefficient.

Efficiency is rated by a combination of two figures: cubic feet of air moved per minute, and degree of vacuum created. If the latter is cited in inches of mercury, it means the reduction in barometer reading created at the cleaner nozzle. The rating may be given in inches of water instead; mercury inches multiplied by 13.55 gives the water reading. Efficient theatre cleaners, in general, may move 30 cu. ft. of air per minute at 6 inches mercury vacuum, or 60 cu. ft. per minute at 3 inches vacuum, or may work at any intermediate combination. Extreme vacuum is likely to be somewhat damaging to fabrics.

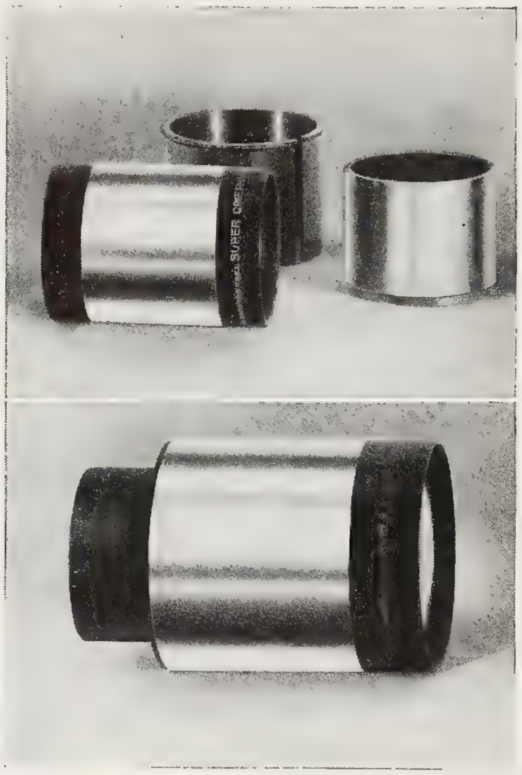
Equipment for Theatre Service

Semi-portable and stationary types of equipment predominate in theatre cleaning. One of the newer semi-portables is a light tank, moving on swiveled castors, from which air hose extends to the actual point of work. In cleaning, the porter needs to move only the light hose and cleaning tool, and hence can work rapidly. There is a full set of tools for work on out-of-the-way carpets, stairs and on seats, and for penetrating corners, as well as long tube extensions for reaching high-hung drapes. The ⅝ths h.p. motor can be detached from the tank and carried by shoulder strap to places otherwise difficult to reach effectively. Heavier rubbish—cigarette butts, hair-pins, etc.—is caused to drop into the tank and only light dust passes through the fan and into the bag. Weighing only 50 pounds, including motor, the cleaner is pushed about the theatre on its swiveled castors as the convenience of the work requires.

Stationary equipment of course provides the most convenient means of fabric cleaning. The entire plant is in the machinery room; porters merely plug hose into properly located pipe openings, and cleaning tools into the hose. In one make, dirt is separated without any bag or filter, being driven by centrifugal force against the walls of a collecting tank, thence falling to the bottom, while the air is evacuated from the center of the swirl and reaches the fan almost entirely clean. The exhausted air, carrying the finest dust particles, is vented outdoors. With stationary equipment even those fine dust particles that pass through the meshes of a porous bag are removed from the theatre.

Heavy Duty Portable Cleaners

The portable theatre cleaner resembles the domestic machine in appearance and construction, but is more sturdily built and has a heavier motor, hence more suction. It is equipped to take a full set of cleaning tools and is adequate for theatres not having much carpeted area, also as auxiliary equipment in other theatres.



Color DEMANDS
HIGH PROJECTION STANDARDS

The increasing number of color films creates a new problem for you. A B&L Super-Cinephor Projection Lens on your projector helps you solve this problem. If your audiences are to see color films exactly as they were recorded, with every color in sharp focus . . . you'll need a color-corrected projection lens.

Super-Cinephors are fully color-corrected . . . and in addition, are the first true anastigmats for projection . . . a fact which means that on even the largest screens you can be sure of critical definition right to the edge . . . in black and white or color.

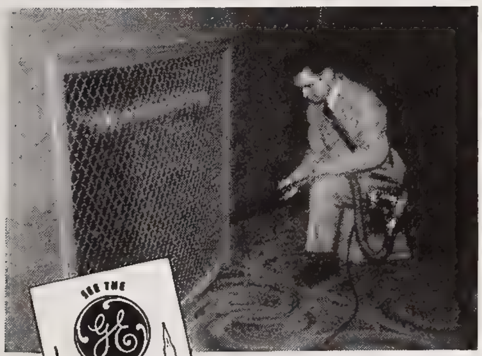
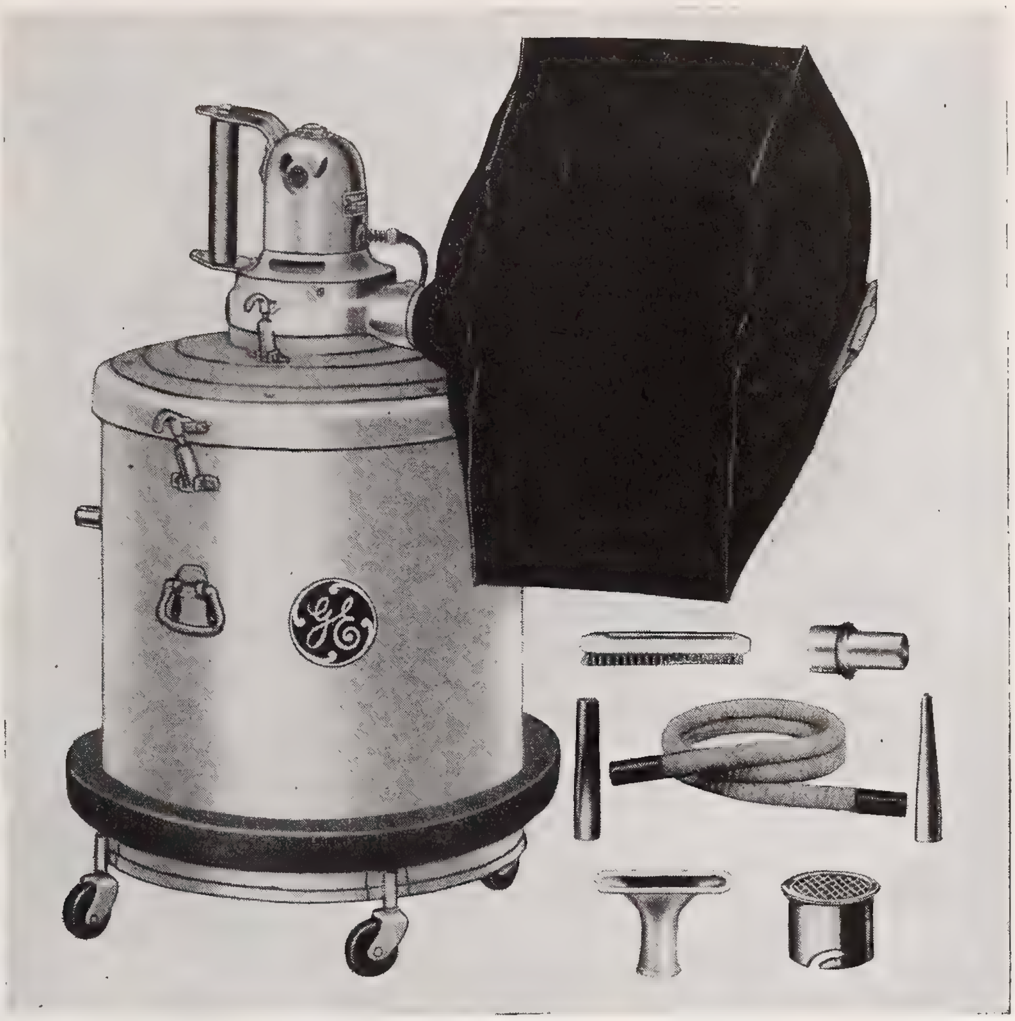
Why Buy Two Cleaners?





THE G-E MASTER-VAC WILL CLEAN YOUR THEATRE Completely

You can now buy one vacuum cleaner which will clean the entire theatre. The G-E Master-Vac will clean your floor carpets, stair carpets, seat upholstery, curtains, drapes, screen, radiator grills, etc. It will also spray cleaning fluids, disinfectants, and deodorants on your theatre seats and drapes.

HERE'S WHY YOU'LL LIKE THE G-E MASTER-VAC:

1. High-speed, full ball-bearing 5/8-hp., universal motor
2. Operates on 110 volts, A-c or D-c
3. No heavy material passes the fan blades
4. Powerful suction—Strong blowing power
5. Take the motor right off the tank and carry it about as a portable cleaner.

Theatre Television—and the Projectionist

• A non-technical examination of practical, if obscurely distant, possibilities both in the art of radioed motion pictures, and in its effect on the projection craft

By DR. ALFRED N. GOLDSMITH

THIS DISCUSSION of television may well begin with a question raised by our mutual friend, F. H. Richardson, whom many of us call "Pop." Observing that exploitation of this new art was assuming some immediacy, and with the motion picture and the welfare of the projectionist as ever on his mind, "Pop" came to me for a chat about it. And this, in effect, was his view:

"I do not believe television will ever be able adequately to illuminate a screen of theatre dimensions, basing that belief on the known fact that, in effect, television screens are illuminated by only one spot of light equal in diameter to 1/441st of the height of the screen image. In other words, only that small area of the screen image is illuminated at one time. This spot moves at high speed from one point of the screen image to the next until each point thereof has been illuminated. The observer's eye actually sees the illuminating spot at each instant, the rest of the screen image being visible because the human eye retains visibility of anything it views for a small fraction of a second (between 1/15th and 1/30th of a second, depending on the brightness of the spot); but the portion retained by this eye action or "persistence of vision" fades rapidly.

"Now, it would seem reasonable that if all the available light were concentrated in a spot of the diameter 1/441st the height of a screen image 1 foot high, that spot of light must automatically occupy a proportionately greater area, and hence be proportionately less brilliant when the image is, say, 16 feet high. And since the present acceptable screen illumination at its center is approximately 15 foot-candles, it would seem to be impossible to approach even closely that brightness by the method just described."

Forming the Image

That view, in its consideration of the formation of television pictures, is correct. A spot or dot of light of controlled brightness starts at the upper left-hand corner of the picture and moves in a horizontal line across the picture to the right-hand edge. It is then turned off briefly and starts again at the left-hand edge of the picture slightly below the first horizontal line, and is then turned on and moves again to the right, producing a second horizontal line of light. On reaching the right-hand edge it is again brought back invisibly to the left-hand edge to begin the visible tracing of the third horizontal line from left to right. This process is carried on and on in the same way until the bottom of the picture is reached at the lower right-hand corner. Thus, by turning the spot of light off on its return paths, and by controlling it in accordance with the lights and shades of the picture at each point of the picture in its active left-to-right linear paths (that is, corresponding to the brightness of the corresponding point of the picture), one single picture has been produced. Actually this whole process required to cover the entire picture area and to produce one complete frame in television takes 1/30th of a second (neglecting what is called "line interlacing").

After this one frame has been completed, the spot of light is brought invisibly (that is, extinguished) from the lower right-hand corner of the screen to the upper left-hand corner of the screen, and then is caused to go through the whole process over again to produce the second frame in the next 1/30th of a second, and so on. In this way a rapid succession of 30 frames of pictures per second is produced, and the persistence of vision does the rest by giving the impression of a motion picture produced on the screen. Actually, there is only a single dot present.

However, there are a lot of additional points that must be considered before we can decide whether theatre pictures can ever be made adequately bright, particularly by the present and known television methods. There is not much use at this time in speculating on what might occur by entirely new methods at some time in the possible future; it is better to fix our attention on methods which are well known.

The first factor which must be considered is this: The spot of light is extraordinarily bright. Actually, in the projection tubes which are used in the electronic method of producing television pictures, the spot is so bright that it dazzles the eye and cannot be viewed comfortably directly. Let us then keep in mind the fact that the tiny spot in the small projection tube is intensely bright.

It may be added that the original picture to be projected is not the size of 35-mm. film, but is considerably larger. On 35-mm. film, the picture is about 4/5ths of an inch wide; in projection tubes for television purposes the picture is between 2 and 6 inches in width.

Difference in Magnification

Supposing that we wish to produce a picture 16 feet wide on a theatre screen by television; this then is 192 inches wide. Suppose that our original bright television picture on the projection tube is 6 inches wide (the projection tube to which I refer is a vacuum tube in the television receiving set on which the signals produce this extremely bright picture which is later to be "blown up" on to the theatre screen by means of a projection lens); this original bright picture on the projection tube is in fact projected on to the theatre screen by means of an objective lens quite similar, in general, to that used for projecting film. In this typical case, you will note that the image has been enlarged or magnified 32 times (192 divided by 6), thus giving us the 16-foot screen image.

Now let us compare this with film projection. If the film is taken as being 0.8-inch wide, which is close enough for our purpose, the magnification, or enlargement, ratio is 240 times (192 divided by 0.8).

Accordingly, the magnification for the television picture was only 32 times, while the magnification for the film picture was 240 times. This is nearly 8 to 1, and accordingly a more accurate calculation shows that the drop in light caused by enlargement of the screen image is only about 1/56th as much in the television case as in the film case.

Otherwise stated, the picture on the television projection tube in this assumed case would need to be only 1/56th as bright as the film at the gate of the projector to produce the same screen brightness, assuming that equally fast objective lenses were used in each case. This point of advantage—namely, the larger size of the original picture in television—must be kept in mind in any comparison.

"Persistence of Image"

There is yet another factor which must be kept in mind. Television pictures are produced on the projection tubes by a stream of electrons (which is practically an electric current traveling through a vacuum tube), this stream being a very thin, fine beam of electrons moving very rapidly and striking the screen in the tube on which the picture is first produced.

This tube screen is made up of a substance which goes by the scientific name of "fluorescent" material. This means merely that when the electrons in the beam violently strike the tube screen, the screen glows very brightly at the point of collision. The more powerful the electron stream, the brighter the glow at that particular moment. This glow forms what we call the scanning spot in the above description. If the electron stream is reduced, we get the shadows of the picture; and if the electron stream is increased we get the highlights of the picture. This is the way the moving spot of light, properly controlled, produces the pictures as mentioned above.

The incoming signal from the television transmitting station is always made to control this electron stream that creates the scanning spot. The incoming signal, as you might guess, really contains the lights and shadows of the picture in the form of a varying electrical voltage, or current, which is applied to the television receiver tube, or projection tube, in such a way as to control

CRITICAL EYES Are On YOUR SCREEN!

Nothing less than a picture with depth and definition, one which brings out delicate details and fairly sparkles with realistic effect is acceptable today.

Exhibitors everywhere are crediting Strong Arc Lamps for giving them this improved projection.

You, too, can enjoy the economy of using these modern lamps. Their higher efficiencies result in a tremendously increased volume of light without a corresponding increase in operating costs.

the strength at each instant of the electron stream which causes the scanning spot.

And now we come to the "meat of the cocoanut" in this second factor. Fluorescent materials when they start glowing do not stop glowing immediately but have the fortunate habit of continuing to glow at least for a brief time. Thus the picture produced on the fluorescent screen of the projection tube is not present only for the briefest possible instant, but actually lasts with fairly high brightness for most of the time between successive frames. This helps a lot in reducing flicker and increasing the brightness of the projected picture.

Electronic Results to Date

Let us leave the theoretical for a moment and talk results which have been obtained up to date.

In one of the latest British demonstrations of the theatre television, a projection tube was used which operated at the rather astonishingly high voltage of 50,000 or more to produce the electron stream within the tube. The picture produced was 12x 15 feet (the 4-to-5 proportion holding in England), and the screen illumination on the opaque theatre screen was estimated at slightly over 1 foot candle. This is admittedly a low value and was satisfactory probably mainly because of its novelty.

Mechanical-Optical Method

It should be mentioned that there is another method in present commercial use for producing theatre television pictures. It is not an electronic method, but is mechanical and optical. Equipment has been installed in a 2,000-seat house in London very recently to produce a 12x15 foot picture by this second process. It is claimed that in this case the screen illumination is actually around 6 footcandles, but a translucent screen is used with the projector located backstage. Accordingly, this would give a screen brightness of about 3 foot lamberts (that is, assuming 50% transmission through the screen). Even this value of screen brightness is definitely below theatre standards, which are supposed to lie between 7 and 14 foot lamberts according to the recommendations of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

Definition and Color

The definition, or detail, of 441-line pictures is something like 1/10th that of the 35-mm. picture and compares more nearly with 16-mm. projected pictures. We can draw the conclusion, nevertheless, that even the 441-line picture will have entertainment value, particularly for close-ups and medium shots—for example, prize fights, vaudeville acts and the like.

Another element missing from television today, so far as the theatre is concerned, is color. While television pictures have been produced in color, either their size, their brightness, or definition, or their equipment fell below acceptable values.

The Projectionist's Position

So far as the projectionist is concerned, I am of the opinion that his position will be improved by the advent of television. Television equipment will certainly use many of the normal principles of the theatre film projection. The projectionist accustomed to handling projection equipment should be able to bring himself up-to-date on the construction and use of theatre television equipment as it becomes available with its instruction books and similar information.

The projectionist need lose no sleep on this score for two reasons.

In the first place, it is most unlikely that in the near future television in the theatre will be anything other than an additional service of specialized sort which, far from narrowing the projectionist's usefulness, will widen it.

In the second place, if theatre television should in the more distant future partly displace film projection, the projectionist will have had plenty of opportunity to become master of the new art and to take over his position in that field without any change or loss.

[Dr. Goldsmith, an eminent New York consulting engineer, has long interested himself in motion picture technology and the film theatre. He was for several years president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, and as a past-president, is still active in the affairs of that organization.]

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

FALSE ECONOMY THAT HURTS THE THEATRE AND THE INDUSTRY

FROM TIME to time I receive complaints from projectionists that they are unable to get their managers to supply repair or replacement parts for their equipment until the worn parts are in such shape that it becomes a case of supply-them-or-close-the-show. Here is a typical complaint, name and location not supplied for obvious reasons:

"Dear Dad: I ask your help. If you print what I shall say and it costs me my job, all right! For I am tired of projecting pictures that can't be put on the screen properly. If I can't do my job right I don't want to do it at all. I can do carpenter work and do a good job. Here are the facts:

"On both projectors the intermittent sprocket teeth are worn completely flat on the working side, but new ones are refused on the grounds that they 'still pull the film through.' The gear train is badly worn all the way through, so that to keep travel ghost out I have had to make the shutter blades so wide that flicker appears. My manager says, 'Aw, it's not bad, and gears cost money.'

"I never am able to get exciter lamps replaced until the filaments are so badly sagged that proper volume just cannot be maintained and other things are on about the same level."

There is more, but that's quite enough. Given the very finest production, perfect in photography and all as it should be, but projected by imperfect equipment (imperfect basically or because of badly worn parts or parts out of proper adjustment) and you have waste, not economy—waste in the theatre guilty of it, as the box office and ultimate repair and replacement bills will prove; and waste for an industry which has spent tens of millions of dollars to get rid of the nickelodeon and make the motion picture a full-fledged theatre art.

Competition for the motion picture is not growing any less. If we could skip over some of the faults in our theatres in the past, we cannot do so today. One would expect every manager to be more concerned about this than a projectionist—after all, "it's no skin off his teeth." Of course, in the long-run, it is everybody's concern, but most immediately it is the concern of the management.

I realize full well that there are conditions under which a manager may feel that he is making more of a hit with the boss when he keeps expenses down than when he orders repairs and replacements. But if he is really a manager he will know that he is doing the boss no good by refusing to provide repairs and replacements that are necessary to an effective performance—and I might add, an honest performance. There's no law compelling people to go to the theatre!

REELS FOR CHECKING THEATRE SOUND SYSTEM

FIFTEEN TEST films of different types to facilitate adjustment of sound reproducing equipment to the highest degree of accuracy, are described in the report of its activities presented by the Committee on Standardization of Theatre Equipment of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences, before the Spring Convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. The report has just been made available by publication in the SMPE Journal.

These films, which are sold at the cost of production, provide an extensive series of tests, through the medium of which performance of theatre apparatus and the effects produced by apparatus adjustments, can be checked far more closely than is possible by ear. In consequence, minor improvements, each too slight in itself to be detected without such means, can accurately be added to produce an overall improvement that is distinctly audible. Similarly small faults, which in their cumulative effect produce bad sound, are traced down by means of these reels. Warble frequency reels included in the series permit measurement and adjustment of auditorium acoustics.

Other reels in the series afford a general indication of sound quality as determined by listening, standard frequency reproduction for gain runs, buzz track check of lateral alignment, scanning measurement for checking the lateral uniformity of the exciting light, high-frequency reproduction for optical focusing and a 1,000-cycle constant frequency output for matching projector volume.

The complete set of films will cost the user slightly in excess of $200, but they can be bought individually as required, and no theatre will ever need them all. Replacements to be patched in from time to time will be made available as recording technique changes, and they will keep the reels purchased up to date at comparatively small cost.

Films used for ordinary projection room routine, such as the lateral alignment track, and the loops that facilitate focusing and matching of projector volumes, are inexpensive, costing roughly from 50c to $2 apiece. The more elaborate multi-frequency and warble-frequency reels for exacting tests are the most expensive, at $25 each.

Other film is sold on a footage basis to be made up into loops locally, in view of the fact that different types of equipment are best served by loops of different lengths. The cost ranges from 3½c to 5c a foot. They include 7,000-cycle and 9,000-cycle tracks for focusing. Use of the former is recommended as satisfactory for routine work; the latter has been made available for more exact adjustments than are ordinarily required.

The list of films includes a special scanning-adjustment track for rear-scanning heads, such as the Mirrophonic TA-7400, and a 1,000-cycle recording, selling at 50c, which is used in connection with the output meter for matching soundhead volume output.

NEW SOUNDHEAD USES MAGNETIC STABILIZER

A MAGNETIC device for stabilizing film motion and eliminating flutter is a very interesting feature of the new soundhead of the Weber Machine Corporation of Rochester, N. Y. The new film filter can be most simply described as a form of rotary stabilizer that uses a magnetic clutch rather than a friction clutch.

As in most of the newer soundheads, the film moves over a rotating drum driven by the film and having no other connection with driving motor. The shaft on which this drum is mounted, and which revolves with it, is extended to the drive side of the head, where two flywheels are mounted on it, one wheel inside the other. The inner flywheel turns with the shaft. The outer flywheel is also set into rotation when the film moves, but only on a clutch principle. The independent motion of the outer flywheel, acting through the clutch, stabilizes the rotation of the inner wheel, and therefore of the drum.

In the most familiar soundheads built along these lines, the clutch action is provided by friction coupling through a very thin film of oil which separates the two flywheels. In the Weber device, fourteen aluminum-alloy bar magnets, set around the rim of the inner wheel, provide the coupling. When the inner flywheel, carrying the magnets, begin to revolve, the magnetic drag sets the heavy outer flywheel into motion. The outer wheel is slower in coming up to speed, but once revolving at normal rate, its motion, acting through the magnetic drag, tends to stabilize any irregularities that may appear in the motion of the surrounding wheel.

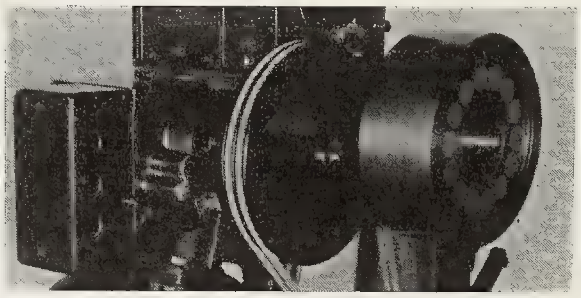
Operating side of Weber soundhead.

The application of magnetic principles to the stabilization of film motion was made possible, I am told, only by the development, in the past few years, of new magnetic alloys of great efficiency, such as have already been used in permanent magnet theatre speakers, and in the newer microphones.

The soundhead, of which the new stabilizer is a part, is driven by two tubular belts connecting to a motor located just below the stabilizer mechanism. A silent gear tooth chain, equipped with an idler for tension adjustment, drives the projector mechanism from the soundhead. Ball bearings are wholly enclosed and permanently lubricated, requiring no oil.



Drive side showing magnets in flywheel.

Exciter lamps are turret-mounted for replacement in case of burn-out. Focus is sharpened by means of a knurled knob, which is part of the optical assembly and can be locked in adjustment by a set-screw. A second knurled knob and knurled set-screw afford lateral adjustment of the sound track. The photo-electric cell is of standard caesium type, with plug-in base.

A secondary optical unit has been developed which can be used in the head, in association with a double-electrode cell, for push-pull recordings. The film path has been designed for sweeping bends to avoid damage to patches or possible flutter resulting from more abrupt changes in the direction of film motion. A pilot light has been provided for convenience in threading.
